In Europe, a somewhat anomalous creature, the Neanderthal, existed between about 100,000 and 35,000 years ago. With a robust, heavilymuscled body and heavy brow ridges and a brain that was somewhat larger than the average for Homo sapiens, he had a toolmaking culture equivalent to that of his more gracile contemporary. His origins and fate are controversial. That he arose as a variant Homo sapiens, developing his distinctive features because of his northern European habitat and then, driven south by increasing glaciation, he merged into existing populations of Homo sapiens seems the most probable scenario. This is essentially the view of Milford Wolpoff of the University of Michigan and others (5). I think we all have seen heavilybuilt individuals with prominent brow ridges and big noses who attest to the persistence of this genetic strain. Other anthropologists, however, believe Homo Neanderthalensis disappeared without a trace.

Until about 13,000 years ago, the African negro, Pithecanthropus niger, pursued undisturbed his unchanging primitive, hunterscavengergatherer life style. Until then, Africa was the home of Africans only (33). In the equatorial jungles , protected by desert to the north, high mountains and possibly hostile somewhat more advanced possibly hybrid creatures to the east, dry savannah and desert to the south and the sea they never conquered to the west, the African Negro eked out a precarious existence in primitive and violent squalor. Left to his own, it seems likely that he would by now have drifted quietly into extinction as much from his innate violence and cruelty as anything else.

But this was not to be. Slavery has existed probably as long as mankind. The presence of "Homo" erectus in Europe and Australasia some million years ago could mean that he was actively exported from Africa as a useful animal by Homo sapiens. As far back as recorded history can take us, the losers of confrontations between groups, even of Homo sapiens, were either killed or enslaved.

But Homo sapiens make poor slaves. They are rebellious and too apt to turn the tables on their masters. They do not take well to slavery even finding death preferable. The Spanish Conquistadores learned this after some fifteen million Homo sapiens indigenous to the Americas died at their hands. At the urging of Father Bartolome de las Casas and with Papal sanction, the importation of West African negroes to the Americas was begun. Already used for thousands of years elsewhere as slaves, they were manageable as long as their deficiencies were recognized, durable and, besides, they had no souls. They were not human according to the more objective Papal and social acute perceptions honesties allowable in that day.

So, sometime after about 13,000 years ago when the peripatetic culture of Homo sapiens began to settle into a more geographically stable mode, the exportation of the African negro for use as a menial slave began. This was—and is—a tragedy.

It is a tragedy, but not because the negro was used as a slave. The negroes exported were slaves in Africa rounded up and sold by negroes. Their condition as slaves away from Africa are and always have been incalculably better than their plight in Africa under negro slavemasters. The real tragedy is that the two species, so different beyond their naked bipedal status, can interbreed and produce fertile offspring. The hybrid result of such miscegenation can never be, no matter how far removed, free of the African taint. This is only too evident in the primitive squalor of the multitudes of hybridized populations that pollute the earth at an exponential rate. Miscegenation is the most egregious crime against Nature that mankind can commit. By it, he destroys forever that which Nature created.

Only a few years ago, miscegenation was against the laws and taboos of Caucasian civilization. Yet today, the Illuminati-controlled media promote and encourage this crime by every possible means. This control reaches into academia, all branches of science and the entire educational system. This control is not new. Born of the elite long ago, it is an octopus.

It can be seen only as a deliberate act that fossil and artifactual evidence that establishes that Homo sapiens preexisted the ancestors "political correctness" would force us to accept as ours, is ignored and covered up. The fossil and artifactual evidence, confirmed by evidence derived from "molecular anthropology" when viewed objectively, establishes incontestably that there are two species of hairless bipeds with entirely separate origins on earth. Darwinian evolution as used today cannot describe the origin of Homo sapiens.

The apparent involvement of the Carnegie Institution and Rockefeller Foundation in this deception (34) gives a clue to the underlying agenda which dates back over 2000 years. Once called a conspiracy, it is no longer. It is in the open. The Illuminati and the world bankers are confident they have, at long last, won their secret war.

Today, it is called the "New World Order". Tomorrow, the whispered word will be "slavery". Homo sapiens does not take well—nor long—to slavery. He is, and always will be—and as long as he exists—a danger to the ruling elite, most if not all of whom also are hybrids. This might explain their hatred and selfsequestration. Homo sapiens must go.

There is a proved method of genocide that, though it takes time, always works. It is a method whose effectiveness increases exponentially as it is applied. It has been occurring at an explosive rate for the last 3000 years or more. It cannot miss! It is miscegenation. In the bodies of the progeny of such a union, miscegenation hides a genetic parasite that can never be removed. Always it is there, passed to each succeeding generation. And the saddest words that ever were, 'what might have been', are imposed upon each afflicted generation forever. Each is condemned to be less than it might have been.

As an implement of genocide, it may have been recognized and deliberately used by the Illuminati since the first century of the current era. They are patient.

Miscegenation with Pithecanthropus niger is being used to destroy Homo sapiens and his civilization just as it destroyed the Egypt of the Pharaohs long ago. For all of recorded human history, what is termed "interracial" breeding or miscegenation, has been a taboo, tragically, as in Egypt, often broken. Until just a few decades ago, it was illegal in most civilized nations. Only recently has official approval been openly advocated. Now, most of the media encourage and display this interspecies sexual obscenity.

During the Upper Paleolithic Era (30,000 to 5,000 B.C.E), Europe and Northwest Africa were occupied by Homo sapiens sapiens (Cromagnon man) whose features are now found most frequently in Ireland and the North Sea nations such as Norway (33). They, blond and blueeyed, were the early Pharaohs who created the glorious days of Ancient Egypt. The "Nubians" (black Africans from south of the Sahara) during these times were imported and used as slaves. The reign of Pharaoh Amenhoteph III was the zenith of the Egyptian civilization (35). It ended 1357 B.C.E.

Over the millennia, a burgeoning flood of blacks from subSaharan Africa has caused the population of Egypt to become increasingly darker, and their brains to become smaller (36). Egypt is the most obvious, once phenomenally great civilized nation, to be laid supine in Third World status, its ancient glory buried beneath a sea of mud. The social disorder and environmental destruction rampant in Hispanic America also is attributable to the 'taint of black' in the once advanced indigenous populations. TAKE HEED!

One cannot help but wonder. Does the chapter, Genesis, of the Judeo-Christian Bible have some basis in fact? Is it simply misinterpreted? Was the original sin of mankind his act of intervention, however performed, that preserved the genome of the doomed East African Pongid giving it survival as a new lineage with which hybridization is possible? Could he have punished himself and decreed his own destruction by his failure to have recognized that this creature is a chimera? Was Adam seduced by the plight of a cute little furry Eve trembling with Pongine passion on the branch of a tree in an East African Eden fourandahalf million years ago? Did he beam "Eve" up to his ship for alterations or did he succumb to her sexual invitation? The longago scenario had to have been one of these.

Or was his crime, not his original sexual tampering with Nature, but his failure to have corrected his error? The elimination of Pithecanthropus erectus from most of the world was a good beginning, but a job undone is a job never begun. Something unnatural and terribly destructive remained sequestered in the equatorial jungles of West Africa. Through continued miscegenation, this chimera has gained the semblance of man and is now poised to be used to complete the destruction of its wayward creator.

Is mankind's loss of the will to do what is necessary to preserve himself and all things of the living earth perhaps his greatest crime?

AFROCENTRIC "EDUCATION"

by

Major D.V. Clerkin

To teach that men have wings and can fly sounds ridiculous to the average white person, but this sort of nonsense is what might be expected of a race of people that never developed a wheel, a sail, an incline plane, a pulley, or a written language. Before you laugh it off, the Milwaukee Schools have black immersion courses which teach just this mythology as FACT. The ancient Egyptians, the story goes, were all black —and they could fly— they were equipped with wings. The Pyramids were built by these flying black Egyptians, the huge blocks of stone lifted up and into place by teams of flying spooks. Then along came the Europeans from Greece, and seeing the elegant flying spooks, became envious; consequently, the white men shot the flying spooks down with arrows. On top of that, the evil white men proceeded to steal all the knowledge from the black Egyptians concerning the ability to erect a civilization, enslaving them in the process. Where was this knowledge stored? Why of course in the Library of Alexandria. Now the Library of Alexandria was named after Alexander the Great, who lived from 356 B.C. to 323 B.C.So the Library of Alexandria in northern Egypt had to be built after the death of Alexander the Great. After all, it was built in a city named after Alexander, and Alexandria could not have existed before 356 B.C. and in fact was established in 332 B.C. by Alexander the Great himself. Remember now that the Afrocentrics claim that the Greeks stole all the knowledge of black Egypt from the Library of Alexandria, though the first Greek philosopher / scientist was Thales of Miletusin Asia Minor, who died circa 546 B.C. There was Anaximander of the Miletus school and Anaximenes, a younger associate of Anaximander; there was the School of Pythagoras; Heraclitus the Ephesian; Parmenides, Zeno and Empedocles; Anaxagoras and the Atomists. All of these aforementioned WHITE, ARYAN philosophers and scientists were known as Cosmologistsbecause their interest lay in the study of the Cosmos, the earth, what it is made of and they lived and died centuries before the erection of the Library of Alexandria. The Sophists, the pre-Socratic philosophers, Socrates, Plato and Aristotle, all lived and died before the founding of the Library of Alexandria.

Here is what Frederick Copleston, S.J. says in his A HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY, Vol. I, Greece and Rome [The Newman Press, Westminster, Maryland, 1963], pages 14-15: "...the question may be raised whether or not Greek philosophy was due to Oriental influences, whether, for instance, it was borrowed from Babylon or Egypt." This view has been maintained, but has had to be abandoned. The Greek philosophers and writers knew nothing of it — even Herodotus, who was so eager to run his pet theory as to the Egyptian origins of Greek religion and civilization.— and the Oriental-origin theory is due mainly to Alexandrian writers, from whom it was taken over by Christian apologists. The Egyptians of Hellenistic times (the late Classical Age -- Editor), for instance, interpreted their myths according to the ideas of Greek philosophy, and then asserted that their myths were the origin of the Greek philosophy. But this is simply an instance of allegorising on the part of the Alexandrians; it has no more objective value than the Jewish notion that Plato drew his wisdom from the Old Testament... That the Egyptians had a philosophy to communicate has never been shown, and it is out of the question to suppose that Greek philosophy came from India or from China."

So we have it on authority that not only was Greek science and philosophy not borrowed or stolen from the Egyptians, but not stolen from anyone else as well. The fact of history concerning ancient Egypt is that there were Egyptians and their slaves, a sub-Saharan Negroid people whom the Romans identified as the Nubians. The ancient Egyptians were an Hamitic people, sunbronzed but not black. Egypt today is somewhat black because of miscegenation over the centuries, especially since the rise of Islam, a faith which does not stress race. But it is certain that the people who designed and built the Pyramids were not a black people.

Afrocentrics claim that Cleopatra was a black woman. Also Hannibal [who was a Carthaginian, thus a descendant of the Semitic Phoenicians] is claimed by the Afrocentrics to have been black. Cleopatra was a Ptolemy, a descendant of the Macedonian general whom Alexander the Great left in charge of Egypt. As an Egyptian royal, the line of Cleopatra would not have been permitted to mix with Nubian slaves. Both Julius Caesar and Marcus Antonius had affairs with Cleopatra, Caesar giving her a son, Caesarion, and inviting her to come to Rome with their son [which angered the Roman Senate, fearing that Caesar if made a king would have Cleopatra as his queen]; and Antonius fought at her side against Octavian at Actium in 31 B.C. for control of the entire Roman world. Would either of these two foremost men of Rome have risked so much for a colored girl? As for Hannibal, well, there are extant busts of this Carthaginian general sculpted by the Romans at the time of his threat to the Roman state. Certainly Hannibal was no black man. The Egyptians from the Old Kingdom and the building of the Pyramids to the time of Cleopatra were definitely not a Negroid people. No Negroid people anywhere in the world has ever accomplished anything beyond bare racial survival, and in Africa there is nothing below the Sahara Desert denoting any sort of civilization until the coming of either the Arabs or the Europeans later. Yet the Afrocentrics teach black children that once upon a time they could fly. We Aryan racialists, as mean as we are supposed to be, would not ever teach anyone fairy tales as facts. A few months ago I talked over the telephone with a high school class in Ohio. During the symposium a young girl of mixed race challenged me to prove that the prominent men of the ancient world were not all black.I said that we have statues and busts of Caesar, Augustus, Cicero, Cato, Demosthenes, Plato, Aristotle and Socrates; we know what they looked like. Her response to this was 'Oh, those statues are probably faked!' Why? I asked her. 'Because the racists of those times did not want the black people to know their own greatness. Who told you these things? I responded. 'My church teaches us history lessons in Sunday School.' The black race is still childlike. It will believe whatever promotes itself, no matter how illogical.

My purpose in doing this article is twofold, (1) to teach a history lesson to young Aryans who have never been taught the history of the world; and (2) to warn young Aryans that mixing with these childlike blacks is a path toward the destruction of the white race and all it has conceived, all it will ever accomplish. Even the best of the blacks are not fit to consort with, for they can only be what they are and have been, a backward race without a history of their own, forced to steal the histopy of the white man and proclaim such idiocies as their birthright. I would imagine that some black crackheads come to believe in their stupors that indeed they have wings and can fly.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

On Race: "We must further understand that all races naturally regard themselves as superior to all others. We think Congoids unintelligent, but they feel only contempt for a race so stupid or craven that it fawns on them, gives them votes, lavishly subsidizes them with its own earnings, and even oppresses its own people to curry their favor. We are a race as are the others. If we attribute to Ourselves a superiority, intellectual, moral, or other, in terms of our own standards, we are simply indulging in a tautology. The only objective criterion of superiority, among human races as among all other species, is biological: the strong survive, the weak perish. The superior race of mankind today is the one that will emerge victorious – whether by its technology or its fecundity – from the proximate struggle for life on an overcrowded planet."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

The History and Significance of the New World Order

by

Scott Spencer

The concept and the reality of the New World Order are widely misunderstood, even by most patriots; or perhaps I should say, especially by most patriots. Some of this misunderstanding is caused by the shortcomings of the patriots, but there is also disinformation deliberately inserted by our enemies. We need an accurate understanding of what — and who — we are fighting to insure our victory.

The self-styled "patriots," the coin-sellers and quack-cure salesmen, if given the reins of power in the United States tomorrow morning, would either be shot dead trying to flee the country, or would be dancing to an internationalist Jewish tune by nightfall. Most of them want only to hawk their questionable wares. Even if they know what the New World Order really is, they would rather have their bank statements published than oppose it.

The Old World Order

The United States is, itself, a product of the fall of the Old World Order. The Old World Order, as far as government is concerned, was comprised of the Christian monarchies which ruled by "divine right" after the fall of the Western Roman Empire in the sixth century. The term "New World Order" pertained to an ideal world which was allegedly to develop on the ashes of the Old Order after no powerful monarchs ruled in Europe. The American Revolution was a relatively benign manifestation of a revolutionary movement against that Old Order. This movement bore its most bitter fruit in the 19th and 20th centuries. This revolutionary movement, whatever its merits once were, has been hijacked by the enemies of our race and nation.

The increase of chaos in 19th century Europe, brought about by the undermining of monarchies, was offset by the growth of national consciousness among the peoples of Europe.

The idea that the overthrow of a monarchy would always lead to self-government of "the people" was transparently fraudulent. Powerful Jews were often ideally positioned when the monarch fell. The Jews were, then as now, a people unto themselves. They had their own interests, and these interests were often antithetical to the interests of the peoples among whom they lived.

Self-government of a people leads to nationalism and a sensitivity to alien control of government. Consequently there was a healthy, although grossly inadequate, reaction against Jewish power. Nationalism is inherently hostile toward organized Jewry, and organized Jewry is inherently hostile toward nationalism.

The French Revolution

An early milestone of the New World Order was the French Revolution. The French monarchy, and the causes of its downfall, have been widely and deliberately misrepresented. The truth about the French monarchy was stated by the Scottish philosopher David Hume in 1742:

> Though all kinds of government be improved in modern times, yet monarchical government seems to have made the greatest advance to perfection. It may now be affirmed of civilized monarchies, what was formerly said of republics alone, that they are a government of laws, not of men. They are susceptible of order, method, and constancy, to a surprising degree. Property is there secure; industry is encouraged; the arts flourish; and the prince lives among his subjects like a father among his children.

Hume added that he saw more "sources of degeneracy" in representative republics like that of England than in France, which he called "the most perfect model of pure monarchy."

It is generally conceded that a conspiracy orchestrated the French Revolution. The moderate members of the conspiracy, such as Lafayette, were appalled at the outcome of the process they had helped to start. Lafayette and many others had merely wanted to establish a constitutional monarchy, but as in all revolutions, the moderates did not determine the outcome.

But in spite of any conspiracy, Louis XVI could not have been overthrown unless he allowed himself to be overthrown.

This may seem a peculiar thing to say, that Louis XVI allowed himself to be overthrown, allowed his kingdom to be ruined, and subjected himself and many others to the whim of filthy degenerates, but Louis XVI was a liberal, much like the liberals we encounter today. He was an enemy to his friends and a friend to his enemies. The entire French Revolution could have been stifled on several occasions if only the King had allowed his bodyguards and his troops to deal with the gangs of hired ruffians in the manner they so richly deserved. But no, Louis was a "humanitarian." In the Siege of the Tuileries the King's own Swiss guards were brutally murdered simply because he had forbidden them to raise their weapons, even in self-defense, against those hired thugs whom the King naively regarded as "the people."

Louis was not a congenitally stupid man, but from childhood his head had been filled with wrong ideas, the same kind of wrong ideas which public schools and the mass-media impress upon us and our children today.

The fate of Louis XVI should be a cautionary tale about the deadliness of wrong ideas. Some wrong ideas, the "brotherhood of man," for example, are highly infectious because they appeal to wishful thinking; it is soothing and pleasant to think that violence, conflict, and death are mere vestiges of an unenlightened past, and that all unpleasantness can be avoided simply by being nice to everyone. This mode of thinking is a deadly form of self-indulgence.

Louis XVI had far more armed forces than were needed to crush the Revolution, but he chose not to crush it. Over one million Frenchmen, many of whom were the best in the nation, were murdered — as a consequence of his "humanitarianism."

The Bolshevik Revolution

Czarist Russia was naturally a prime target of Jewish malice and defamation, since it was the last absolute monarchy in Europe. In addition, the government of the Czar (Czar is the Russian equivalent of Kaiser or Caesar), more than any other government, had taken steps to protect its people from Jewish exploitation. The Japanese victory over Czarist Russia in 1905 was the first great blow to the confidence of the White world; it was brought about with the financial assistance of Jewish bankers. Czarist Russia's defeat in 1905 was part of a long pattern of events, including numerous assassinations, attempted assassinations, and bombings. In the end there was the bloody ritual murder of Czar Nicholas II and most of his family.

It should be noted, however, that the Czar, like Louis XVI, essentially permitted his own rule to be replaced. At first, it was replaced by a republic. The republic was weak and dissolute and ended up paving the way for a reign of terror. As in France, the better racial elements were murdered.

The preponderance of Jewish influence in the Bolshevik Revolution is thoroughly documented. Additionally, Zionism played a part. Zionism is, and was, an integral aspect of the largely Jewish New World Order. Rabbi Moses Hess, one of the primary instigators of Zionism, was a mentor of Karl Marx.

The Destruction of Britain

Zionism contributed to the destruction of Britain as a world power. Zionism helped to dismantle the White-dominated world of our grandfathers, ushering in the Jews' New World Order of multiracialism, the absolute rule of money, and cultural chaos.

In 1914 the greatest power in the White world was the British Empire. After the First World War the alleged "victor," Great Britain, was a second-rate power. After the Second World War, which Britain also supposedly "won," she was a third-rate power and quickly stripped of almost all her possessions. How was this great empire destroyed?

As a consequence of the First World War, the international Jewish bankers raked in a huge debt. Britain in particular was ruinously indebted. Britain's plight would not have been so grievous had the Jewish bankers not succeeded in prolonging the war by involving the United States. Even Winston Churchill later stated that it would have been better if the United States had stayed out of World War I.

However, it was the moral weakness of Britain's leaders which allowed Britain to suffer usury and to participate in that fratricidal war. One can blame the people of Britain for having elected such leaders, and it is the British people who have suffered because of it, but it is an inherent feature of every democratic republic that the people can only vote on the basis of information the controlled media give them. It is only in retrospect that a voter can know whether he has made a mistake. Britain has gone to its ruin quietly and obediently, lacking a national leadership with the will to preserve the nation.

The First World War

The American people have likewise been saddled with treacherous leadership. Neither of the World Wars, and perhaps no foreign war in this century, has served the interests of the American people.

Jewish bankers, many of whom were influential Zionists, extorted the Balfour Declaration from Britain. Organized Jewry promised Britain to bring the United States into the war against Germany if, after the war, they would be given Palestine. How were the Jews able to bring the United States into the war? Firstly, even at that time, they owned many newspapers in the United States which they used for pro-war propaganda. And secondly, through Woodrow Wilson. Wilson was a weak-willed and self-indulgent man. He was the first U.S. president to be surrounded by Jewish "advisors" and to be thoroughly beholden to Jewish interests.

The German Kaiser, William II, had been a great friend of the Jews and had many Jews in his government. Jewish gratitude manifested itself just as it always has historically — as a stab in the back. Germany was deserted by World Jewry the moment Britain offered the Jews a sweeter deal: the Balfour Declaration.

The "war to make the world safe for democracy," as it was called, was the first war explicitly propagandized as a struggle for a New World Order. In November 1918, on the eve of the German surrender, the "League to Enforce Peace" published a pamphlet entitled The Foundations of a New World Order. The nominal president of the League was former U.S. President William Howard Taft. Evidence suggests the "League to Enforce Peace" was largely a Jewish creation. And its Orwellian-sounding title carries the mark of one of their operations.

The New World Order and Egalitarianism

World War I was the first of the many wars in which young White men were required to shed their blood and end their lives, not to defend their borders from invaders, not to gain an increase in the territory controlled by their people, and not even to enrich their national treasury, but for abstract and allegedly "moral" purposes crafted to increase the suckers' enthusiasm for slaughter. Thus, we had the war "to end war" or the war "to make the world safe for democracy." In recent times we have had a war to "restore democracy" in Kuwait and U.S. intervention to "restore democracy" to Haiti. The pattern was set in 1917.

The Pyrrhic victors of the First World War could not disregard the egalitarian New World Order propaganda which they had spouted. Lothrop Stoddard, a widely read political and social commentator in the post-war period, wrote in The Rising Tide of Color in 1920:

> During the war years the allied statesmen had officially proclaimed times without number that the war was being fought to establish a new world order based on such principles as the rights of small nations, and the liberty of all peoples. These pronouncements had been treasured and memorized throughout the East. When, therefore, the East saw a peace settlement based, not upon those high professions, but upon the imperialistic secret treaties, it was fired with a moral indignation and sense of outraged justice never known before.

The European powers, while they displayed an unlimited capacity for treachery toward defeated Germany, whose people were certainly not granted self-determination, did abide by their foolish feel-good propaganda of a "New World Order" when it came to the non-White world. Unrest by non-Whites in British and French colonies was met with concessions, and the European empires were gradually dissolved.

It is ironic that Britain was a leading promoter of the League of Nations and the New World Order; it perhaps lost more than any other nation because of it. It seems less ironic if one considers that British foreign policy was under the control of Jewish bankers, who did not give a hoot about Britain's destiny. Once the Britons had developed and pacified the dark continent sufficiently for safe operation of Jewish-owned gold, copper, and diamond mines, they were disposable. Beyond this trail-blazing function, all those White colonists were just in the way. And the destruction of White political power in Africa was an explicit part of the New World Order agenda.

A collection of essays entitled "The New World Order" was published by Oxford University Press in 1932. In the essay entitled Race Problems in Industry and Culture, F. S. Marvin states:

> Until South Africa can not only contemplate, but insist on having, a Bantu as one of its delegation to Geneva, it has not recognized the principle.

Marvin also advocated the admission of the non-White hordes into White homelands. He wrote:

> But there does exist a teeming population in Japan, pressing for outlets, and hundreds of millions of Chinese . . . . India, too, constantly increases her needy but industrious and naturally skillful peasantry. Meanwhile the white man in Australia, South Africa, and on the Pacific Coast [of the United States] is maintaining in his own supposed interest the strictest exclusion that he can arrange against the settlement of these people in lands which he controls, and they could happily and profitably inhabit. It is a policy untenable in the long run, condemned alike by considerations of industry, biology, and humanity. Let us be thankful that a League of Nations stands in the breach, not yet to take active steps, for other more urgent tasks are at hand, but to keep steadily before the eyes of all parties the hopes and duties of cooperating mankind.

F.S. Marvin was a professor of history and a member of the Royal Historical Society. It is absolutely terrifying that there have been, and are, men who hold positions of respect who speak such idiocy. Similarly, in more recent times, the Queen of England, in her Christmas address of 1994, praised the recent introduction of "democracy" to South Africa. F.S. Marvin's prescription was a toned-down version of the tirades of lunatic abolitionists one hundred years earlier. They said the same things because they suffered from the same syndrome: sadomasochistic race-treason clothed in the sanctimonious pretension of Judaic otherworldliness.

The conspiracy theorists who make so much noise about Cecil Rhodes and say the New World Order is a British conspiracy are trafficking information that is not only incomplete and misleading, but grossly out of date. One of these groups is the Lyndon Larouche organization whose leading figures appear to be mostly Jews. Similarly, it is a lie that the New World Order — even Communism — is a "Russian" phenomena. The biggest lie, however, is that the New World Order is some sort of German or "Nazi" plot. It is primarily Jewish in origin. "Patriots" who tell you otherwise are ill-informed or liars.

Hitler's New European Order

Perhaps the biggest lie on the God, country, and gold coin circuit is that the National Socialist German government was a progenitor of today's New World Order.

Bolshevism was viewed with great alarm by Russia's neighbor, Germany, which now found itself flanked on one side by the Soviet Union, and on the other by Judeo-democratic France. In the economic ruin deliberately foisted upon Germany at the end of the First World War, Bolshevism was a serious menace. A Judeo-Communist regime even seized power briefly in Bavaria shortly after the war.

The liberal Weimar constitution imposed on Germany after the war was written by Hugo Preuss, a Jew. The dominant political party of the Weimar period was the Social Democratic Party, founded by Ferdinand Lasalle, also a Jew.

NEW WORLD ORDER PLEDGED TO JEWS

Arthur Greenwood of British War Cabinet sends Message of Assurance Here

RIGHTING OF WRONGS SEEN

English Rabbi Delivers to Dr. S. S. Wise New Statement on Question After War

In the first public declaration on the Jewish question since the outbreak of the war, Arthur Greenwood, member without portfolio in the British War Cabinet, assured the Jews of the United States that when victory was achieved an effort would be made to found a new world order based on the ideals of "justice and peace."

Mr. Greenwood, who is Deputy Leader of the British Labor party, declared that in the new world the "conscience of civilized humanity would demand that the wrongs suffered by the Jewish people in so many countries should be righted." He added that after the war an opportunity would be given to Jews everywhere to make a "distinctive and constructive contribution" in the rebuilding of the world.

The message was delivered last week to Dr. Stephen S. Wise, chairman of the executive committee of the World Jewish Congress, by Rabbi Maurice L. Perlzweig, chairman of the British section of the congress. Rabbi Perlzweig arrived from England Monday evening.

Intention to Right Wrongs

Comparing the statement with the Balfour Declaration of 1917, Dr. Wise declared that in a sense it had "wider and farther reaching implications" as it dealt with the status of Jews throughout the world. He said that Mr. Greenwood's message could be interpreted as a statement of England's firm intention to help right the wrongs which Jews have suffered and continue to suffer today because of Hitler's "disorder and lawlessness."

Mr. Greenwood, sending the Jews of America a message of "encouragement and warm good wishes," wrote:

"The tragic fate of the Jewish victims of Nazi tyranny has, as you know, filled us with a deep emotion. The speeches of responsible statesmen in Parliament and at the League of Nations during the last seven years have reflected the horror with which the people of this country have viewed the Nazi relapse into barbarism.

"The British government sought again to secure some amelioration of the lot of persecuted Jewry both in Germany itself and in the countries which were infected by the Nazi doctrine of racial hatred. Today the same sinister power which has trampled on its own defenseless minorities, and by fraud and force has temporarily robbed many small peoples of their independence, has challenged the last stronghold of liberty in Europe.

New World Order Forecast

"When we have achieved victory, as we assuredly shall, the nations will have the opportunity of establishing a new world order based on the ideals of justice and peace. In such a world it is our confident hope that the consciences of civilized humanity would demand that the wrongs suffered by the Jewish people in so many countries should be righted.

"In the rebuilding of civilized society after the war, there should and will be a real opportunity for Jews everywhere to make a distinctive and constructive contribution; and all men of goodwill must assuredly hope that in new Europe the Jewish people, in whatever country they may live, will have freedom and full equality before the law with every other citizen."

In an interview at the Hotel Astor, Rabbi Perlzweig declared he was certain Mr. Greenwood "speaks for England." There is a clear realization, he added, that freedom and emancipation for the Jewish people are tied up with emancipation and freedom for people everywhere. The message, Rabbi Perlzweig remarked, was the subject of earnest consideration by the British Government.

"This is a declaration on behalf of the whole world," he observed. "Here the British Government expressed clearly what it hopes will take place after the war is won."

The economic devastation of Germany under the Weimar government was extreme. The currency became worthless. Workers were paid with wheelbarrows full of money — twice a day, because the depreciation was so rapid that your money would lose half its value by nightfall. Eventually, billion-mark postage stamps were printed, and trillion-mark bank notes, but all had the same ultimate value: zero. German workers and soldiers saw their savings and their future turn into nothingness. German children starved. Jewish businessmen, during the same period, bought ancient German estates for pocket change in foreign currency.

The Weimar regime was a sink-pit of degeneracy, corruption, and ugliness. Nihilistic creeds of self-destruction were made popular by the mostly Jewish-controlled magazines and newspapers. Drug use skyrocketed. Homosexuality suddenly became "fashionable." Modern "art" replaced the beautiful images of the pre-1918 period. Pornography of the grossest and most indecent kind was popularized. Marxism was preached from university lecterns and even many church pulpits. Sound familiar?

This was what it meant to implement the New World Order in Germany. What followed was a powerful reaction against the New World Order. But it was not merely a reaction. Nor was it an impractical attempt to reinstate the Old Order, although it did preserve much of what was good in the Old Order.

The Old Order had been based on monarchy and Christianity. Even in the anti-monarchical United States, Christian baptism was a widespread qualification for holding public office until the middle of 19th century. This reliance on religion alone as the official basis of society had made the Old Order vulnerable. Belief in Christianity had declined, especially among more educated Europeans. Some of the best minds of our race were resentful of the Old Order. And the reliance on Christianity meant any racial alien could become part of the nation simply by undergoing the ritual of baptism. For many Jews, this ritual was meaningless. It was simply submitted to as a means to achieve power.

In opposition to the New World Order, Hitler erected his New Order of Europe. It had some of the characteristics of the Old Order; for example, it preserved the nation-state and traditional morality. It also preserved many of Old Order's trappings, such as the customary Roman salute. But it was different from the Old Order in that it was primarily based, not on religion, but on race.

Misinformation about National Socialist Germany

A tremendous amount of malicious dishonesty has been directed against the memory of Hitler's New European Order. For example, there has been an effort to manipulate Christians with the lie that Adolf Hitler was a scourge of Christianity. In fact, Adolf Hitler received a great deal of support from Christian clergymen, Catholic and Lutheran. Among the smaller sects, the Seventh Day Adventist and New Apostolic churches were among the most ardent supporters of National Socialism, long before the party actually came to power.

Another lie is that Hitler was a member of the Thule Society. Such a society did exist, but Hitler regarded it as an embarrassment. You may read his opinion of its freakish "occult" characters in the last chapter of Book I of Mein Kampf.

It is also a lie that Hitler took away the guns from the German people. The promoters of this falsehood usually make the insinuation by means of a verbal shell-game, in which they distort the actual disarming of non-citizen, non-German, Jewish deportees during the war into a fictitious disarming of the German people — an event which never took place under National Socialism.

The National Socialists actually relaxed the gun laws in Germany. In fact, private ownership of guns persisted in Germany until the New World Order forces of the Allies rolled in and confiscated guns, and converted Germany into a brainwashed province of the New World Order.

This myth of Hitler the gun-grabber has been promoted most vociferously by an organization calling itself "Jews for the Preservation of Firearms Ownership." It should be clear that Jews in general are a very biased source of information about Hitler.

Why Is Hitler Demonized?

Hitler is accused of many things he did not do, but there is one thing he did do. He broke the Jews' grip on Germany and restored Germany to the German people. This fact is reflected in his popularity; during most of his administration, Adolf Hitler was favorably regarded by more than 90% of the German people — a popularity which no American President has ever matched.

Because Hitler put the interests of his own people first, and freed them from the New World Order, World Jewry declared war on Germany in 1933. They revived essentially the same propaganda they had used against the Kaiser. With appropriate changes, the same kind of propaganda is used to rouse us against whoever the current enemy of the New World Order happens to be.

Heaven forbid that our people should ever have a strong leader who cares for our survival as a people, as Hitler cared for Germany. That would not suit the New World Order at all!

And that is why the obsession with the democratic republic as a form of government is a grievous error in the American patriot movement. When the New World Order was implemented in Germany, it included the establishment of a republican constitution in place of the monarchy. Our political tradition in the U.S. and our public school education lead us automatically to regard this as progress. Really, we ought not to be so smug.

Those who make "democracy" their political ideal are, whether they realize it or not, helping the New World Order. Our main concern about government should not be whether it is a "big government" or a "democratic" government, but whether it is a government which serves us — or serves our enemies.

It is absurd to moralize against Adolf Hitler for setting up a strong government to preserve his people from the New World Order. It is absurd to criticize him for not acting like a typical American conservative — for not using approaches that have always failed. Conservatives always compromise; they use half-measures and try to be nice to everyone. It is to Hitler's credit that he saw clearly what had to be done and did it, with very little compromise. Let us no longer make virtues of irresolution and weakness; let us no longer moralize against success.

The New World Order Is Here Now

All of those so-called "patriots," with their flag-waving and their knee-jerk tendency to link everything bad to Hitler — including, most ironically, the New World Order — have built their house on quicksand, for it is the United States of America since 1933 which has been the enforcer of the New World Order, and it was Germany and her allies in World War II which defended our civilization against it.

It is customary for "patriotic" commentators to wail endlessly about the threat of the New World Order "taking over the United States." The New World Order is not some future threat. It rules now.

The New World Order crowd has been at the levers of power in the United States during most of this century. They experienced a temporary setback in the 1920s, during the Harding and Coolidge administrations, when popular sentiment recognized that the First World War had been a grievous error. During the 1920s immigration was drastically reduced, and a number of Jewish subversives were even deported. But since the Great Depression swept Franklin Roosevelt and his retinue of Jews and Communists into power, the New World Order has had uninterrupted control of the United States Government. The McCarthy era marked the last important attempt to regain control of the United States government for the American people. McCarthyism failed because the full depth and racial nature of the problem were not recognized and faced in a forthright manner. Most of the patriotic efforts since McCarthy have been far more timid, far less inclined to call a spade a spade and, as a consequence, have failed utterly.

The Scare Word "Nazi"

For telling the truth about Germany, World War II, and the New World Order, some of the coin salesmen will no doubt call me a "Nazi." Let me say this: There has never been a government on planet Earth that could receive unqualified endorsement from me, or probably from any reasonable man.

Learning from history is important, and it is interesting to study various regimes from as objective an outlook as possible. This becomes very difficult when a government, its leader, or its people have become demonized and turned into a metaphor for "evil."

Another heavily-demonized regime is the Old America, which I would define roughly as pre-1965 America, or European-America. Hardly a day goes by that the networks or the lie-papers don't torment us with a documentary "proving" the evil "racism" and "oppression" that were omnipresent in the Old America. However, anyone over 40 can remember America was freer, safer, more cultured, more prosperous, and more optimistic then than now. Exempt from demonization, of course, are New World Order change agents like the Marxist profligate "Martin Luther" King and the unspeakable Franklin Roosevelt, who were doing their best to destroy the Old America and everything it stood for. They are not demonized, but are regarded as heroes, if not saints!

The National Socialist regime in Germany between 1933 and 1945 has been demonized even more than the Old America. It has become a metaphor for "evil" used by almost all political factions in the insane asylum that still goes by the name "America."

We have the loony left accusing militias of being dangerous "Nazis," while some right-wing "patriot" groups accuse the Clintonistas and their enforcers of being "Nazis," "fascists," "stormtroopers," etc. "Nazi" has become a word that one attaches to any form of government power, or rebellion against government power, that one disapproves of. For all practical purposes, the word has ceased to have any actual meaning.

Like the word "witch" in the 16th century, the word "Nazi" still has the power to instill fear of ostracism or punishment, so cowards of many political stripes do all sorts of mental and verbal gymnastics to avoid the feared appellation.

The really interesting thing to note is that National Socialist Germany is not demonized by the establishment for its possible faults — but rather for one of its virtues. After all, many regimes of yesterday — and today — have far less personal freedom than was allowed citizens there. They have far less press freedom, far more regimentation, far higher taxation, far more government regulation, far more hostility toward their own citizens, and all the rest of it.

The real reason, and in fact the only reason, National Socialist Germany is demonized is the same reason that pre-1965 America is demonized: Both favored the survival of the White race. This is a crime that the New World Order cannot forgive.

Resistance to the New World Order

The modern resistance to the New World Order may be regarded as having begun early in this century, when alarm over the blood soaked Bolshevik Revolution — and its adherents in this country — began to grow.

Literally hundreds of nationalist, anti-Communist, and patriotic societies and organizations have arisen, prospered, and fallen in the past 80 years. Some of them achieved national recognition and had many thousands of members and supporters. Some names you would recognize, such as the America First Committee and the John Birch Society. Some may be familiar to you from their current shortwave and satellite radio broadcasts. While some of these organizations have made small fortunes, both by selling quack cures (for disease and for subversion) and by selling overpriced precious metals; they have all failed to halt the advance of the New World Order.

Why Opposition Has Failed

This failure can be attributed to the fact that the "patriots" themselves accept a large part of New World Order doctrine. They accept the idea of "rights" inherent in all beings arguably human, regardless of race, creed, color, sexual preference, etc., etc. — until you gag. As long as such nonsense is enshrined as "sacred truth," the failure will continue.

The doctrine "all men are created equal" is one such sacred cow. It must be repudiated by patriots, for in five short words it exemplifies New World Order ideology.

Its origin lies in the 18th century philosophy of the Enlightenment, which first enshrined the ideas of 1) basic human equality, and 2) rights which inhere in every human being equally regardless of the worth or attainments of that human being.

The American Revolution may have merely adopted some of the notions of the Enlightenment, such as "all men are created equal," simply because these were fashionable ideas at the time which were conducive to revolution.

The Declaration of Independence incorporates the very unfortunate statement, the only statement from that document which the public schools and the Jewish-controlled media have made sure that we know by heart: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal . . ." Now, it is obvious to almost everyone that individual human beings are not born equal to each other. On the face of it, Thomas Jefferson's statement is blatantly, and even embarrassingly, untrue. Jefferson himself later advocated repatriation of Blacks to Africa. This may give us some insight into his more mature and considered views. Unfortunately however, he did write that phrase.

During the Enlightenment, leading philosophers such as John Locke and Jean Jacques Rousseau seriously argued that everyone was born mentally identical. Locke's term for the condition of the mind at birth was tabula rasa, Latin for "blank slate." Racial differences were thought to be due to environmental influence over the course of just a few generations. These fallacies, part of the intellectual universe in which Thomas Jefferson lived, were overturned in the nineteenth century. Many scientists, including Charles Darwin, began making discoveries that showed human equality was a myth. Darwin dealt a death blow to the superstitions of the Enlightenment by providing evidence that man was part of the animal kingdom in which all are clearly not created equal.

Darwin wrote that men are not tabulae rasae; human motivations and emotions are based on instincts. These are at least partially hereditary, and differ from one race to another. More recently, mainstream psychology has largely acknowledged that the characteristics of the mind are largely hereditary, although the Politically Correct adherents of the Boas school still argue the point.

Science should have utterly dispelled the belief that all men are created equal, but unfortunately, because it is a piece of cant which has been enshrined on a holy relic of the United States it has continued to distort thinking. The Declaration of Independence was not regarded as a holy relic until about the 1840s, when it was put on display in the National Portrait Gallery, at the urging of Daniel Webster.

When "Martin Luther" King Jr. spoke in Washington, DC, in 1963, he used the words in the Declaration as if they were a debt instrument. He said, 'you claim to believe this; you must act accordingly.' (Perhaps his Jewish and Communist associate, Stanley Levison, had something to do with it.) It is a dramatic illustration of the latent destructive power of wrong ideas.

The Declaration of Independence, with enthronement of Judaic egalitarian dogma, has been a millstone around the neck of the American people. It has provided powerful rhetorical ammunition for egalitarian dogmatists. Yet, since it is one of the founding documents of the United States, the average American does not feel that it would be safe to say that the words of the Declaration are obviously not literally true — although he may know this perfectly well. Thus the average American is intimidated into endorsing the fundamental premise of the New World Order, "all men are created equal."

The Constitution of the United States is on an altogether higher level. We are indeed fortunate to have the rights which the Constitution expresses, but that piece of paper did not create them. These rights are part of the Anglo Saxon tradition and spring from the soul of our branch of the White race. The republican form of government has hardly existed outside of the White world (except in name) because it presupposes a self-discipline and independence of thought which are characteristic primarily of our race. When the republican form is transplanted to Africa or Asia, it simply does not work the same way. Witness Liberia. Witness the Philippines.

Secret Societies, etc.

It is not without some trepidation that I set out to discuss obscure conspiratorial aspects of the New World Order; it is a subject on which our enemies do not mind having patriots focus. The very obscurity of the subject makes misrepresentation easy, and the distance of such conspiracies from everyday life suggests that there is nothing that an ordinary person can do to resist. Some people who call themselves patriots have become so wrapped up in fantasies that the most obvious facts have escaped their notice: the fact, for example, that multiracialism is the centerpiece of the New World Order.

Many secret societies have been heavily influenced by Cabalism — a system of esoteric theory and "magic" developed by rabbis from the 7th to 13th centuries. "Illumination" is an important term in Cabalism, hence the series of Jewish-led organizations calling themselves Illuminati or Illuminated Ones. The Freemasons are one of the secret societies which have been influenced both by Jews and by Cabalism. With Illuminism and Freemasonry, the Jews essentially resumed the ancient Jewish practice of multiplying their own power by proselytizing Gentiles.

We may note in passing the continuing Jewish involvement in New Age cults, all of which, for some reason or other, seem to have "equality" and "brotherhood" and "One World" as central themes. The credulous followers of these cults are thus hoodwinked, like the Masons, into advancing the Jewish agenda in the name of a spurious humanitarianism with a small, or large, helping of "spiritual" gobbledygook thrown in.

It is customary among patriot commentators, eager to stay marginally on the Jews' good side, to point to some Gentile stooge as an excuse to avoid implicating the Jews. The so-called Jewish "patriots" can also be counted on to do this. The fact that these essentially Jewish organizations try to ensnare Gentile stooges is not at all surprising in light of Isaiah 61, which states:

> Aliens shall stand and feed your flocks, foreigners shall be your plowmen and vine dressers; but you shall be called the priests of the Lord, men shall speak of you as the ministers of our God; you shall eat the wealth of nations, and in their riches you shall glory.

Jews often recruit Gentiles to be their "plowmen and vine dressers," or some equivalent thereof.

Grand Orient Freemasonry and quasi-Masonic secret societies such as Adam Weishaupt's Order of Illuminati had an important role in inciting the French Revolution. The Grand Orient Lodge of Freemasonry, notorious for being Jewish-controlled, horrified Europe by ordering that Louis XVI be executed.

Jewish writer Max Dimont states in Jews, God, and History that there was an addition to Cabalism in the 16th century, which has significant implications:

> A new metaphysical philosophy was injected into Cabalism in the sixteenth century by one of the great Cabalistic scholars, Isaac Luria (1534-1572), known as Ari, 'the lion.' Luria held that all matter and thought evolved through a three stage cycle: tzimtzum, literally 'contraction' or thesis; shevirat hakeilim, literally "breaking of the vessels' or antithesis; and tikkun, literally 'restoration' or synthesis.

That last Hebrew term, tikkun, you have heard before: It is the name of Rabbi Michael Lerner's Jewish magazine. It was Rabbi Lerner who was the spiritual advisor of First Lady Hillary Clinton. It was Rabbi Lerner who put the words "politics of meaning" into her mouth.

Also notable is Jacob Frank, a Jew and the leader of the Frankists. They also called themselves the "Illuminated." This group was part of what is called the "Jewish Reformation," which also included Hasidic Judaism. Jewish writer, Norman F. Cantor, states in The Sacred Chain: the History of the Jews:

> Central to Frank's doctrine, and practiced by him and some of his followers, was the legitimacy of sexual promiscuity based on the assumption, from Cabalistic derivation, that sexual activity was a form of cosmic healing, unifying the spiritual and material realms.

The "free love" advocated and practiced by Jacob Frank and his ilk was echoed in the French Revolution, in the Bolshevik Revolution, in the radical abolitionist movement of the American Civil War era, and in the hippie movement of the 60s.

Abolitionism

Perhaps the most destructive movement in American history was radical abolitionism. This movement was comprised of a tiny minority of lunatics and degenerates, who somehow made enough noise that they succeeded in having America's racial identity officially destroyed.

Few of those involved were Jews themselves, but they represent an example of the Jewish "ideals" of universal human equality, which are vended to the gullible.

The general character of the abolitionists is suggested by a memoir of Henry B. Stanton, who attended a convention of abolitionists in Boston:

> There was a representative array on the front seats, near the platform. First was Garrison, his countenance calling to mind the pictures of the prophet Isaiah in a rapt mood; next was the fine Roman head of Wendell Phillips; at his right was Father Lampson, so called, a crazy loon — his hair and flowing beard as white as the driven snow. He was the inventor of the valuable scythe-snath, and invariably carried a snath in his hand. His forte was selling his wares on secular days and disturbing religious meetings on Sunday. Next to Lampson sat Edmund Quincy, high born and wealthy, the son of the famous President Quincy [of Harvard]. Next to Quincy was Abigail Folsom, another lunatic, with a shock of unkempt hair reaching down to her waist. At her right was George W. Mellen, clad in the military costume of the Revolution, and fancying himself to be General Washington, because he was named after him. Poor Mellen died in an asylum.

Another prominent figure in Radical Abolitionism was Victoria Woodhull, who was also a feminist, an occultist, and a Communist. Stanton continues:

> As if her time did not pass spectacularly enough, Victoria Woodhull organized an American section of the International Workingmen's Association [the First Communist International]. In this endeavor her chief ally was William West . . . Their section of the International advocated woman's suffrage and sexual freedom as well as Stephen Pearl Andrews' pet theories of universal language and "pantarchical" order.

These flakes were an embarrassment even to the Marxists. In the interests of party orthodoxy, Victoria Woodhull's section was expelled from the party when Marx relocated the center of World Communism from London to New York City in 1872.

In 1863 Henry C. Wright published The Self-Abnegationist, which was a reaction against the findings of Charles Darwin vis a vis the implications for man. Wright defined self-abnegation in these terms: "Suffer rather than inflict suffering; die, rather than kill."

He further explains:

> Self-preservation, at the expense of others, is condemned by universal consciousness . . . . Let any man, whatever be his moral or intellectual development, fully understand the meaning of self-abnegation and then enter into the sacred and silent depths of his own soul, and he will find this to be an abiding law of his nature, to which he will find his heaven in being obedient.

Mainstream historian Lewis Perry states that there was behind radical abolitionism a religious movement called "Perfectionism," which is "the quest for perfect holiness and the idea that such perfection might be immediately possible." Perry further states:

Perfectionist ideas permeated the major denominations and inspired a variety of shockingly radical splinter movements. It was possible for those who deemed their personal sanctification to be perfect to attack the practices of institutional churches and hold themselves to new standards of morality. Rumors of sexual promiscuity particularly haunted the career of perfectionism in upstate New York. John Humphrey Noyes proceeded from the development of perfectionist religious theories to preach common marriage among the saints, a belief which, as practiced by Noyes and his followers at the Oneida Community, was popularly referred to as "free love." Though free love and the disruption of churches were of course widely condemned, it was difficult for the evangelical orthodoxy to distinguish its basic perfectionist beliefs from those of scandalous radicals.

The combination of the term "perfectionism" with the advocacy of sexual promiscuity is a suggestive parallel to Jewish Cabalism. Adam Weishaupt's Order of the Illuminati was also known as the Perfektibilisten. We return to Perry:

The most notorious perfectionist was John Humphrey Noyes. Noyes had been brought up as an orthodox New Englander and educated in the 'New Divinity' at Yale... ." After a meeting with abolitionist leader William Lloyd Garrison, Noyes announced that he had retracted his allegiance to the United States government and now championed the claim of Jesus Christ to the throne of the world. He depicted the government as a fat libertine flogging Negroes and torturing Indians. . . . "My hope of the millennium," he wrote, "begins where Dr. Beecher's expires — viz, at the overthrow of this nation."

James Russell Lowell, a prominent abolitionist, explicitly advocated race-mixing, on the grounds that mulatto offspring would be more submissive — more "Christian" — than the White race. He wrote:

We have never had any doubt that the African race was intended to introduce a new element of civilization, and that the Caucasian would be benefited greatly by an infusion of its gentler and less selfish qualities. The Caucasian mind, which always seeks to govern, at whatever cost, can never come to so beautiful or Christian a height of civilization, as with a mixture of those seemingly humble, but truly more noble, qualities which teach it to obey.

Abolitionist Henry C. Wright stated in 1857 what would become the actual agenda of the Reconstruction period:

A baptism of blood awaits the slave holder and his abettors. So be it. The retribution is just. Must the slave holders become the slaves of those whom they have enslaved? History answers "Yes." If slavery goes down in blood, the conquered will be the bondsmen and bondswomen of the conquerors; for the practical teaching of Church and State is, that might makes the right to enslave. Bid American slave holders beware! Their turn may come, will come, must come, to be bought and sold as brutes, and to have their wives and daughters consigned to the Negro's harem, unless they willingly and penitently let their slaves go free.

It should be noted that, aside from the grotesque dream of forced miscegenation, Wright's vision is not essentially different from that of Karl Marx; it was an axiom of Marxist anarchism that workers were in fact slaves, who would one day change places with their masters.

Marxism: Illuminism Reincarnate

Karl Marx, though he disclaimed the Jewish religion, was the descendent of a long line of rabbis. Both his father and mother were Jews. His father, Heinrich, a well-to-do lawyer who was a dutiful follower of the Enlightenment philosophers, was faced with a choice of being baptized or giving up his profession. He chose the former.

Karl Marx had no mystical pretensions whatsoever; he called his ideology "dialectical materialism," incorporating a semblance of the Hegelian philosophy which was the popular, mainstream philosophy of that time.

One often hears patriotic broadcasters refer vaguely to "the Hegelian dialectic," as if Hegelianism itself were a tool of conspiracy. In fact, Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels both stated repeatedly that the Hegelian dialectic, as espoused by Hegel, was not and could not be an instrument of conspiracy. I consider it important to exonerate Hegel because it appears as part of a general knee-jerk tendency to dump on the Germans whenever possible so as to appease the real perpetrators of the New World Order, the Jews.

The Political Spectrum

In recent years, when the term Conservative has been redefined to mean laissez faire — a meaning it never had before — it has become the fashion among the historically myopic to redefine the terms "right" and "left" in politics. They claim that the left stands for "more government" and that the right stands for "less government," that Communism is the extreme of the left and Anarchy the extreme of the right. This conception of the political spectrum is a false one. Historically, Marxism has embraced both Communism and Anarchism.

The Anarchists of 100 years ago, such as Alexander Birkman and "Red Emma" Goldman, were called "Reds," and they were indeed Marxists who used the familiar Marxist slogans. On the ostensible premise that society makes men bad, the Marxist ideal is precisely the elimination of all government, and of all other social barriers — the same ideal which Adam Weishaupt espoused. The real motive behind this abhorrence of social barriers is simply the Jews' desire to recreate our society in their own image, so that they will have a free hand to engage in power-seeking activities without the barriers that traditional White societies imposed on them. They would like to freely engage in all the abhorrent practices which emanate from the Jewish soul and are condoned by their Jewish lawbook, the Talmud.

Perhaps it is clear now why laissez faire is so widely touted by Jews like Milton Friedman and Ayn Rand. Laissez faire and Marxism are not the opposites that most of our people assume them to be. Marxism actually goes farther than laissez faire, advocating a never-never land in which there is no government whatsoever.

The Captain of the Chicago Police, Michael J. Schaack, stated in his 1889 book Anarchy and Anarchists: a History of the Red Terror and the Social Revolution in America and Europe:

> It [anarchism] is founded upon the teachings of Karl Marx and his disciples, and it aims directly at the complete destruction of all forms of government and religion. It offers no solution of the problems which will arise when society, as we understand it, shall disappear, but contents itself with declaring that the duty at hand is tearing down; that the work of building up must come later.

When one considers that anarchism is, in fact, laissez faire carried a step farther, it becomes apparent that Marxism and the beloved laissez faire doctrine of today's so-called Conservatives are intimately related. The two philosophies are in fact striving toward the same impossible goal: a world without any constraints or conflict, and with plenty for everyone. The salient element in Marxism and laissez faire is the drive to abolish the constraints and the order of healthy White society. The bribe which these Jewish doctrines offer to their Gentile adherents is a license for self-indulgence. In the name of laissez faire, our millionaires justify stabbing American workingmen in the back by importing workers from the non-White world. And under Marxist inspiration, the so-called "civil rights" movement was organized. Now, it is obvious that the so-called "civil rights" movement resulted in less freedom for White people, but it has on the whole, by its destruction of communities and social norms, increased the level of anarchy, in the sense of chaos, in our society.

Furthermore, although it did produce an expansion of government, the really significant thing is that the government has been perverted. The big government we have today is distinctly anti-White and is pernicious in ways that a pro-White government of equal proportions would not be. Indeed if an equally powerful state had been organized for the purpose of fighting off the enemies of our race, perhaps we would not have been conquered by infiltration as we have been today.

Big Government

Any people which is at war will necessarily have a big government, and that is true whether the enemy is internal or external. The reason why our enemies, the enemies of our race, have built up a big government is that they have marked us, racially conscious White men and women (and really all White people) as enemies in our own land. Big government has been built up to wage war against us. Should we ever gain control of the seat of power, any scruples about using "big government" against our enemies will be a disaster, a snatching of defeat from the jaws of victory. The redefinition of "conservative" to mean "laissez faire" would be crippling at the very brink of victory. A government in the hands of White patriots will have to be a powerful government if it is to correct all the damage that has been done by the current anti-White regime.

So the question of left and right is not a question of more or less government. The original "rightists," were supporting the big government (for its time) of Louis XVI, and the original "leftists" like Weishaupt advocated anarchy. But anarchism is always a transitional ideology; anarchy is a power-vacuum, and Nature abhors a vacuum. Ultimately, the question is whether we will live in a society ordered according to the character of our own race or according to the demands of that vastly different Middle Eastern race.

This anti-government attitude among patriots is understandable, because in the United States our experiences with big government are almost all bad. Really big government in the U.S. began with Franklin Roosevelt. In the U.S., more government has always meant more racially destructive policies. This is simply because of the malevolent entity which controls our government. A government that is truly of, by, and for our people would not be of that nature, so the axiom that big government is bad government would not necessarily apply.

The crucial question about government is whether it is run by and for our people, or whether it is run by and for the enemies of our people.

Recruiting America as a Partner in the New World Order

Today in the United States both political parties are universalist, and both see man as a mainly economic entity. They share these characteristics with Marxism. The only valid alternative, the only true antithesis to the New World Order, is a society based on race. Only by establishing a race-based society can America and the civilization of the West survive. Only by establishing a race-based community can we begin to defeat the New World Order.

The last time America was culturally healthy was in the 1920s. Internationalism had been repudiated. The First World War had been recognized as a grievous mistake, and America's leaders were committed to keeping America out of any such future catastrophes. Eugenics as a national policy seemed entirely possible for the United States of the 1920s.

The last healthy epoch of America's existence was overturned by the Great Depression. The abrupt stock-market crash which heralded the Depression did not take the leaders of Jewry by surprise. Some have argued that the Jews used their control of credit through the Federal Reserve System, which they had in place from the days of their puppet Woodrow Wilson, to engineer the stock-market crash. Regardless of whether the Jews caused the crash, manipulated it, or merely had inside knowledge of it, evidence suggests that Bernard Baruch (an extremely wealthy Jewish speculator who had been one of the Jewish string pullers behind Wilson and virtual economic czar during World War I), knew exactly when the crash was coming. He abruptly pulled all his money out of stocks only a few days before the stock market crash, over the protests of his broker. After the crash, leading Jews were able to buy up American industry for practically nothing.

It is an old saw that money is the mother's milk of political campaigns. With their vastly increased share of the American pie, and with a smear campaign, the Jews were able to blame Herbert Hoover for the depression and replace him with their puppet Roosevelt, who had run as a Conservative but governed as a Marxist socialist and did not let the Constitution get in his way. Roosevelt was also notorious for stocking the executive branch with large numbers of Communists and Jews; many of whom remained for decades.

When Germany dispossessed the Jews, who had robbed them on a scale far more massive than in the United States, the Jews wanted revenge. Along the way, the Jews killed several birds with one stone. In order to discredit the eugenics movement which still had proponents in the United States, the Jews involved America in what amounted to a war against eugenics. It is said that a war makes any cause sacred, and the Second World War made the cause of doing the Jews' bidding sacred in this country. This false religion remains in place to this day.

The Cold War Era

At the end of the Second Fratricidal War in Europe, genuine patriotic Americans like George S. Patton urged that Bolshevism be finished off by military means. Several years later, Senator Joseph R. McCarthy published America's Retreat from Victory, which argued that the reason why the opportunity to destroy Bolshevism had not been grasped was that the American government was controlled by Communist sympathizers — an obvious fact to anyone who takes the time to investigate the matter. The division of the world into two enemy factions helped the New World Order planners in many ways. By maintaining Communism and capitalism as two ostensibly hostile brands of Jewish universalism, Jewish bankers and arms merchants were able to create wars at leisure. And by financing and selling arms to both sides in the various hot wars and in the ongoing Cold War, they were able to vastly increase their wealth and the debt-burden of the entire world.

Furthermore, the Cold War, with its focus on foreign aggression, diverted attention from subversion at home. Subversion in America advanced most rapidly during the Cold War, especially during the Vietnam War, when patriotic Americans were afraid to complain too loudly lest the country appear further divided in the face of its foreign foe.

At the same time, the Cold War's constant focus on a foreign menace caused people to overlook the treason in their own government. It was the end of the Cold War that allowed America's racial consciousness to spring back to life — in time to survey all the damage that treason had wrought in forty years. Not the least of this treason was the media's gradual brainwashing of our people, many of whom had learned to think of America only as the vehicle of a certain brand of universalism — the liberal capitalist brand. This brand of universalism was then represented as the only alternative to Communism. The liberal capitalist world view, this phony neo-conservatism, was the rationale for NAFTA and for free trade with China: In a purely materialistic and economic world view, whether it be laissez faire or Communism, race and nation receive no consideration. It is an encouraging sign, however, that in spite of the brainwashing, the majority reaction was against NAFTA. This shows that part of America still has some will to live.

The "Civil Rights" Movement

What damaged America more than anything else in recent times has been the so-called "Civil Rights" movement. It is misnamed because it is not about "rights" but about enforcing equality. This movement was planned by the Jews after the Second World War and was carried out at the tactical level by Jewish agitators and fellow travelers who held positions of influence in the media and universities. This war against the White race was also waged by Gentile stooges like Dwight David Eisenhower, who appointed Earl Warren to the Supreme Court, then said "Oops!" with a pretended look of surprise. Nevertheless, he did not neglect to send paratroopers to Little Rock to enforce the Warren Court's anti-White agenda. Eisenhower, the protege of Bernard Baruch, had also been the first "supreme commander" of the Soviet-American alliance that called itself the "United Nations" even before Communist agent Alger Hiss chaired the nominal founding meeting of that organization in San Francisco several years later. Eisenhower's mentor Baruch was also a leader of the Jewish community in the Western Hemisphere; at this point it is very clear how everything ties together.

Immigration

What threatens America most today is immigration. The United States government has for years been under-funding its border patrol and refusing to take adequate measures to curb the illegal immigration of fast-breeding mestizos. You will recall that non-White immigration was part of the New World Order program described by F.S. Marvin in 1932. In Canada this destructive immigration is part of official government policy. Almost one-quarter of a million largely non-White immigrants enter Canada legally every year, despite horrendous unemployment among the White population. The U.S. government pursues by subterfuge the very same New World Order policy which the Canadian government pursues openly, and which the British government pursued by bringing Blacks into Britain.

One would have to be brain-dead to believe that the motive for bringing these fast-breeding non-White populations into our homelands is in any way charitable, since any relief afforded to Mexico by emigration will quickly be canceled by population increase. The population of Mexico doubles every nineteen years! Current policies will lead to the entire world being overpopulated with brown men and women.

As America becomes increasingly non-White, it will also become increasingly unfree. A people united by common blood and common values need few laws, few prisons, and few policemen to get along peaceably. Multicultural empires are not known for their freedom.

Non-White America, populated by mulattos and mestizos, will be easier for our enemies to control and exploit, and whatever White minority remains, if it adheres to the representative process, will be perennially behind the eight-ball, always outvoted by racial aliens being manipulated by our enemies. It seems to me that those multiracial "Constitutional" patriots, who want us all to pretend that race doesn't matter, are leading their adherents in precisely this direction: toward a United States in which the Constitution is a revered artifact with even less influence than it has today.

We do not have to accept this fate, nor will the fight be impossible! Louis XVI and Czar Nicholas II died because they lacked the will to resist and didn't even really try. We understand what is happening. A highly motivated and disciplined minority can change the course of history. It has happened before. In fact, it has seldom happened any other way.

We have every reason to fight, and no incentive whatsoever to give up, for the loss of our race means the loss of everything. The struggle itself will make us strong!

FBI Contact

by

J.B. Campbell

17 November, 1996

To Our Friends:

On Wednesday, 13 November, 1996 I drove my family home to Hamilton, Montana from a trip to Missoula. It was about 12:30 in the afternoon. My wife noticed a new white Bronco coming out of our neighbor's ranch, whose road we share. There were two men in it. She didn't mention it to me. It had been a long time since we had been thinking about federal agents coming to our house.

We got the children and groceries unloaded and into the house. Within five minutes our dogs ran barking to the west end of the yard. We had visitors and they were in the white Bronco. I looked out and saw them at the gate, standing there. I put my jacket back on and went out to see who they were. When I got to the gate the younger one said, "J. B. Campbell?"

"Yep." He produced his identification and said, "Bill Jones, FBI." (name changed) Well, I thought, this may be it. Then he asked if I were involved with a tire disposal business, and I said that I was. Now, I understood. Then he said that they'd had complaints about my business. "My business? I don't think so..." Confused, he went to his vehicle and got his note pad. Reading, he named another business with a similar name. "Yeah, that's the one. They burned us, too." I had bought a franchise from a tire disposal business in New York but, along with a number of other victims, had been fed a pack of lies about the markets for our product, as well as the product itself. The patent holder in New York had gone to the FBI and given them my name as a fellow victim, against my wishes. I certainly did not wish to become involved with the FBI under any circumstances, and I knew that the con-man who had cheated us would not be paying us back in any event. I said as much to the agents.

Nevertheless, they said they had some questions about exactly how the crook had defrauded me. I gave a brief summary at the gate and then they asked if we could go inside for more details. So, I let them come in and invited them to sit at the dining room table. For the next hour and a half I explained the nature of the business as well as the various misrepresentations made by the crook. They listened politely and Bill took notes. The older one hadn't mentioned his name, but he watched me as I gave the details of the fraud, saying little. He really didn't seem that interested in the matter. It occurred to me that both men were quite nervous.

At the end of the interview, they got up to leave. I took them outside and walked them to the gate. As I let them through, the older agent turned and said, "I guess I really didn't need to come along on this... Bill could have handled it. But I've been wanting to meet you, since I've read your book..."

I looked at him in a new light. "My book?"

"The New American Man," he reminded me. Then I knew who he was.

"What's your name?" I asked him.

"Joe."

"Joe Dowd?" (name changed)

"That's right." Here we go, I thought. But he quickly continued. "You've obviously had a very interesting life... you were a mercenary in Zimbabwe—or Rhodesia, I guess it was called... And there have been a lot of other interesting things, besides the book. Anyway, I mainly wanted to meet you to find out if your ideas have changed..."

Joe Dowd runs the "militia desk" out of the Missoula FBI office. He'd been pursuing me for two and a half years, ever since I'd arrived in Montana. I'd heard nothing unpleasant about the man and in fact had heard that he may well be a decent individual, for an FBI agent. When I'd learned that John Trochmann, with whom I'd been closely associated for the last six months of 1994, had been meeting with Dowd for at least two years, I immediately disassociated myself from the Trochmanns and denounced them in my monthly column in the National Educator, published in Southern California. I had written, very charitably, that the Trochmanns held the naive belief that there were actual human beings in the FBI. This may be true, I wrote, but it isn't worth the risk to find out. I had been referring to the man before me.

"They have changed," I replied.

"How so?"

"I no longer believe that there is anything that can be done about our present situation..."

"You don't think so?"

"No. It must play out on its own."

"But, you wrote some pretty strong stuff... 'The government has betrayed us—'"

"'—and must therefore be overthrown,'" I finished for him. He nodded.

"That was pretty—"

"Yes, well—it's true. But you know that mainly I was talking about the invisible government—the ones we can't get at by voting. What are you going to do about them? Those boys are the problem."

"But you must have some ideas."

"No, I really don't."

"Well, I don't agree with that," he said. "I think there is still something which can be done."

"Well, I'd like to hear about it." He didn't say anything.

"Look," I said, "the government is totally corrupt. Your agency is probably going to be destroyed by the Oklahoma City trial... The Idaho deal was bad enough. Oklahoma City is going to be a catastrophe for you. When the people find out about what you all have been doing just in Oklahoma City, there'll probably be a national emergency."

"I understand the problems. I'm interested in solutions."

"Well... the solution is for the news media to tell us what's going on—to tell us the truth. But they only lie to us.

The news media are your public relations firms. As long as that's the case, we're going down."

"But the truth is coming out," he said.

"Yes, it is—mainly through the Internet."

"Well, that's something, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is becoming a problem for the news people."

"The truth about World War II would never have come out at the time, so that is some improvement, you must admit."

"Yes, it is... but it's really a matter of timing. The question is, can enough truth get out to enough people in time? In time to prevent the dictatorship. I frankly don't think so. You guys know about the plane that was shot down—you won't tell us. You know about the Gulf War disease—you won't tell us... We've got a president—this Clinton is a stinking little gangster and killer from Arkansas, a criminal! The creeps I was writing about in my book put him and his stinking wife in there because that's what they want. He's going down and will probably declare a national emergency to prevent that! No, I'm sorry—it's going to happen and there's nothing we can do about it. We are going to have martial law and then it's going to get bad."

"Well," said Dowd, "I'm an optimist and I believe that this can be prevented. After all, we do have some things in common... I have children just as you do and certainly don't want this to happen to them."

"Of course not," I agreed. "We do have that in common. I'm trying to give them a normal life for as long as possible. I've gotten back to horses and cattle..."

"But you're still a fighter..."

"Yes, I'm still a fighter, but I just don't believe that now is the time for fighting. Now is the time for watching this thing collapse... Look—the stock market is at 6300! Based on what? Look at today's paper. On the front page a big industry is shutting down; on the back page, Sunbeam is firing half their people. And the stock market goes up! What if the market corrects by twenty five percent? It will be a national emergency.

"Do you want a real shock? Have you read Votescam? Do you know how the vote is counted in this country? I'll ask you the way I ask everyone else: 'Do you know how the vote is counted?' The guy says, 'No.' 'It's done by computer.' The guy says, 'Oh.' 'Do you know who programs the computers that count the votes?' The guy then gives you a funny look. [I then digressed into a discussion of vote fraud.] Now, the authors of Votescam go to the FBI and this agent looks at their spread sheets and evidence and he says, 'This is vote fraud, but I can't do anything about it.'

Dowd nodded and said, "We don't have that much power..."

"Yeah, well—you're still an FBI special agent. You can do something." Of course, he was right. But I was right, too. He could quit and write a book, like Gary Aldrich. I encouraged him to read Votescam, which will probably make him join the militia.

"My book,"* I said to the other agent, "started the militia movement—"

"—I know," interrupted Dowd. "I know that it did, although there are people in the FBI who won't admit it."

"Well, it's true. It didn't turn out exactly as I had in mind, with all these guys marching around in uniforms, playing soldier, but it is better than nothing. The militia is really a state of mind, a willingness to stand up to government and say, 'No.' Do whatever has to be done." Dowd nodded frankly. "Anyway, how is that different from the American Revolution? That's all those guys did. Every one of them that signed lost about everything. That's the way it goes, but it needs doing every now and then."

"Maybe the truth is that it's our turn in the barrel," I told them. "You know, we have wrecked the rest of the world with our wars and foreign policy. Maybe we deserve what we're going to get..." (I reminded them about what we did to the Iraqis and to the Panamanians.) Dowd shook his head. "No, we must prevent that. You had a lot to say in your book..."

"You know," I replied, "my dad hated Roosevelt. Now, if he and his contemporaries did to Roosevelt and his gang what I called for in my book, then we wouldn't be having these problems... I came along too late, but I felt I had to make a contribution. Too little, too late." I didn't even bring up the nightmarish racial situation we face in America—our real downfall.

"You really should keep writing," said Dowd. "You have a lot to say."

"I write some now. I used to write every month for the National Educator but I got a little too radical for it... I'll tell you this: This is a very violent country. You've got some very brutal people on your side—real killers. They scare me. And, there are some brutal people on my side, and they scare me, too. I always said that after my book was out for a while some guys would come along who would make me look tame. And it's true. This is going to be a real bad deal."

"We believe," said Dowd for both of them, "that any corrupt people in the FBI should be punished."

"Well, I wish there were more of them like you."

"There are more than you think," said Dowd. "You know, I would like to talk about this some more with you, some other time. Maybe it will do some good, maybe not—I really don't know. But it probably couldn't hurt."

"You are welcome to read everything I've written," I offered. "I don't mind talking to you but I would require full disclosure." He looked at me. "I doubt if that would be possible." I shrugged. He added, "You have a certain genius for describing our problems and you should continue to write about them because maybe a solution can come out of your ideas." I looked at him and at the other one in a daze. Was I hearing correctly? All I could say in response was, "This is the most ironic conversation I've ever had."

Ever since I began writing for newspapers and Liberty Bell I have been relentless in my attacks on the criminals in the FBI, which I have called "America's Number One Terrorist Organization," based on countless examples other than Ruby Ridge, the World Trade Center and Waco. I doubt if any writer has written more consistently or loathingly than I about what is essentially a legalized criminal Freemasonic syndicate, the enforcement arm of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, and its destruction of those who have tried to defend our race from deadly miscegination. The FBI is a dying beast, but still dangerous. Its patron saint, Hoover, is now revealed as a homosexual transvestite who was controlled by organized crime through blackmail by Meyer Lansky. Its current director is a slimy opportunist run by a diseased lesbian, run by the two most disgusting human beings since Franklin Roosevelt.

The FBI has committed countless felony crimes against good Americans. The FBI's sadistic crimes against Louis and Sheila Beam—in Mexico—almost defy belief. Louis went on to become the only individual on the FBI's Top Ten Most Wanted who was acquitted of all charges—primarily that of "sedition." (The charge of sedition is the highest honor a corrupt government can bestow on anyone.)

The bureau has lost practically all of its former credibility, which existed only in the minds of those who knew the FBI from its Hollywood version, from Jimmy Stewart to Efram Zimbalist to the X-Files. Those people never stopped to think about Hollywood's function, which is to vilify the White race and glorify the enemies of the White race. That has pretty much been the FBI's function, as well.

I am personally aware that the FBI is heavily involved in the trafficking of narcotics, principally through Alaska for distribution to the lower 48 states. The FBI is involved in murder in that operation, as well. The FBI teamed with the ADL in an ambush murder of White patriots in Meridian, Mississippi in the late 1960s. There are reports here in Montana that the FBI is running drugs into this state from Canada. (CIA brings it in, FBI distributes it) The FBI actually made the bomb that blew up in the World Trade Center, as was reported in the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, Reuters, and others. If the bomb had been placed properly, it would have toppled one tower into the other and killed a hundred thousand people inside. Why? Because it would have shown that Israel's enemies are our enemies.

The FBI's true nature was revealed in North Idaho and at Waco. FBI criminals are now being prosecuted over the Weaver outrage. We haven't yet had hearings on Waco, because it will be Weaver times a thousand. And, as I indicated, the shocking truth about Oklahoma City may well bring down our so-called democratic government.

For those who are not familiar with my book, I simply called for the overthrow of our unlawful government and the elimination of those traitors and criminals who have ruined us and the rest of the world. Two carloads of FBIs attempted to arrest me on the charge of "sedition" in Medford, Oregon on 31 July, 1990. I was tipped off and didn't show up for my speaking engagement. But they never came for me after that, doubtless knowing that they could not win a sedition case in this country. They may have been trying to use me to find out about others. But I never became involved with any group until I came to Montana in the early summer of 1994. It was my belief that there was going to be a big fight up here and therefore this was where I needed to be. And there very nearly was...

The Oklahoma City bombing changed everything. I knew immediately that the government had blown the place up from inside, and said so as a guest on a Denver radio show within a couple of days. The certainty that the government had lost control of this country became blindingly apparent with the bombing. The attempt to pin it on the militia was pathetic. I realized that I had actually overestimated the enemy. The bombing demonstrated their sick fear of us—that they would even kill children of federal employees to make us look bad, and to justify our legalized lynching. The militia had made its point. The FBI and its rival agencies had thrown craps again.

Now we can see an FBI deeply involved with the Clintons' pending destruction, providing illegal favors, covering up the results of investigations into criminal activity, prosecuting innocent White House employees. Perhaps the greatest whistleblower in American history is about to administer the coup d'grace: Frederick Whitehurst, a special agent in the FBI's crime lab, has already tried to tell how the FBI routinely frames suspects with manufactured scientific evidence, and he accuses the current director, Louis Freeh, of committing this crime in his most important case. Whitehurst will be a witness for the defense in the Denver trial, which is being stalled off for as long as possible. No doubt Freeh and his perverted bosses are frantically considering ways to suspend the proceedings, perhaps with a declaration of national emergency.

So, as we see with Whitehurst, there are actual human beings in the FBI. Quite possibly the two men who came into my home are of the same species. I can't really blame Dowd for entering under false colors: It was the only way he'd have gotten in. As it is, I'm glad we had the talk. I remain cautiously optimistic (only with regard to this particular and isolated incident).

This does not excuse the Trochmanns for their working with Dowd for some four years now. Such contact with an agency as foul and dangerous as the FBI demands immediate and full disclosure, which I made immediately with telephone calls and an abbreviated e-mail version of this report. The Trochmanns worked also with the ATF against the Freemen, as well as with other agencies, attempting to persuade this or that dissident to surrender, a la Bo Gritz, with whom they collaborated against Weaver and Gordon Sellner (who received a life sentence for "attempted murder" after he was shot from ambush).

The main idea here is that we must reestablish the employer-employee relationship between us and our employees in government. Obviously we don't want to employ these people anymore. But they are still under us and we must continue to make this relationship clear until we can persuade them to take jobs in productive and private enterprise. Government work brings out the worst in people. The greatest favor we can do for them is to get them out of this self-destructive line which has become so deadly dangerous for us all.

I am convinced at present that we can only watch the destruction of our system. We must be prepared for the declaration of a national emergency, which will probably mean a suspension of what's left of the Constitution. There are elements in our government who are so evil that they have actually unleashed on us a number of contagious AIDS-like viruses known collectively as Gulf War Illness, which is in fact biological warfare. They have even devised a way to wreck gas masks. They do, however, possess an antidote to protect themselves from this mass death. We must persuade them to share it with us...

My life has been dedicated to fighting evil where I found it. I called for the destruction of our traitors consistently since 1968, eventually publishing this call to arms in the above-mentioned book, first written in 1983. The militia movement resulted from this call to arms but it remains primarily a defensive, rather than an offensive, movement. We cannot win by remaining on the defensive. At some point, probably after a declaration of national emergency, we will be forced to fight the brainwashed elements of our military and police to avoid deportation to concentration camps—in self-defense. If our hidden oppressors, the Rothschild-Rockefeller gangsters, are not punished then our lives are meaningless. We will have failed our children as our parents and grandparents failed us. We must break this cycle of powerlessness. We have the power! But if we don't use it, it is the same as if we don't have it. I tried to provide the spark to overthrow these sexually perverted, homicidal maniacs who have turned this country into a cesspool. Their orders will be ignored when they are gone.

We must take charge of our lives. There is no alternative to this except death. ❑

What is worrying you?

by

Major D.V. Clerkin

Do you look to the heavens for comets? Or do you think the world is coming to an end in the year 2000? How about the New World Order? The United Nations? I don't want to pooh-pooh some people's favorite boogeymen, but really, none of these things is as fearful as the absolute collapse of the United States into bankruptcy. There is nothing that we can do to prevent such a calamity, and in fact we ought to welcome this event; for without the demise of Washington as a power in this continent, the white race will not survive into the next century as a political force to be reckoned with. Demographics already show that the diminishing numbers of whites (due to a 1.6 birth rate) are losing the battle for political influence. Plus the fact that most whites think and act against their own racial interests. Were the United States to continue on, soon the non-whites would have political power over us, especially considering that the powerful Jewish interests always work against true white interests.

No, even though the collapse of the Washington regime will mean dangerous conditions for whites, if we are serious about surviving we ought to be thinking about a future in which we rebuild a national entity for ourselves on this continent.

How will the collapse come about? First understand that there is nearly eight trillions of dollars in public debt, and about 20 trillions in private, mostly credit gard debt abroad in this economy. Everything depends upon the ability to continue to pay the interest on these debts, public and private, but especially the Interest on the National Debt. Private individuals may bankrupt themselves with credit card profligacies, but the country does not suffer death because of it. But if the Interest on the National Debt is not paid, then the full faith and credit of the Unitd States will suffer. We have legal tender laws in the United States. The government could call toilet paper money if it chose to do so. However, the foreign concerns that buy Treasury Bills do not have to accept worthless scrip as payment of Interest on the Debt. If the full faith and credit of the United States is destroyed by the failure to pay the Interest quarterly, even one quarter, then the currency of the Unieed States, the "Federal Reserve Note," will be so worthless that no foreign bond holder will accept it. Washington will do anything it has to do to pay the Interest on the Debt.

The Interest now is paid because the foreign concerns hold Treasury Bills they have invested in the bond market. The money taken in from Treasury Bill sales is returned to the investors as interest. A dead bond market would finish the country quickly. Consequently, Washington does what it has to do to prop up a sagging bond market. If interest rates do not offer good enough investment, then the Federal Reserve will raise their "discount rate," causing a rise in the "prime lending rate," the rate at which big corporate customers borrow money. Soon the bank rates on homes and automobiles rise. If the Federal Reserve jacks up its "discount rate" too high, then all down the line interest rates are affected, causing slowdowns in the building of new homes and the sales of cars, thus putting workers on the unemployment lines. Keep in mind that all the economies of the Western world are based on debt, a condition engendered by Jewish practices going back to the Middle ages: fractional banking — the holding of only a fraction of the money lent out. Thus was paper currency born.

There have been paper currencies issued by the countries of the world not borrowed fromcentral banks theGreenbacks of Lincoln's time and the United States Notes of JFK's time, plus the Reichsmark of Adolf Hitler — these currencies issued on the worth of the economies in goods and services, plus the value of the land in resources. Now there is no such currency inexistence anywhere in the developed world. All currencies are borrowed from central banks through a devious process which creates them from thin air, then charges interest to the holders of such currencies who have to work to earn them.

Since Washington cannot seem to stop borrowing,cannot get hold of abalanced budget, the Debt principle risesand the Interest on that Debt goes up accordingly. Any business owner or householder knows that continued borrowing slowly saps the ability to keep up. Anyone who has extended his credit on a bank card beyond his ability to pay, is well aware of the eventual consequences. Washington, however, seems unwilling to face this fact. Probably because the unlimited ability to tax and play with interest rates permits the government to borrow and spend without thought to the consequences.

Failure to pay the Interest on the Debt will mean theend of confidencein the government's promises, what is known as the full faith and credit of the United States. The government MUST pay the Interest.If the Interest is not paid, then the holders of government bonds will file breach of contract suits in the U.S, district courts. The courts must entertain such actions, and judgements will have to be paid in something the foreign investors will accept. The currency being worthless, the judgments will have to be paid in federal lands and properties, there allegedly being no gold left in Fort Knox. Thus the United States will be partitioned.

But it will not come to that because the government will do anything to pay the Interest. As the Interest on the Debt rises, the Federal Reserve will have to fuel the bond market with a rise in interest rates. Because the government will not get to the business of living within its means, will not balance the budget (it is probably too late for that now), its only resort must be to raise taxes to pay for the increasing costs of the burgeoning government. Interest rates and taxes can only be raised so much before the economy dries up. So the alternative is to cutthe entitlements, the welfare programs, government pensions, civilian and military, Medicare, Social Security (whose trust fund is already nearing the point of no return for a Ponzi Scheme), and Medicaid. When the welfare budget is cut, and already the States are moving to cut free access to the welfare dollar, thus making recipients angry,the hotheads among the blacks will claim that these cuts are genocide against black people, the starvation of black children. Blacks have burned the cities before for lesser reasons. Race riots, shootings of police, attacks on white suburban communities, will bring on martial law and the Army will be ordered by the president to restore order. The militias will then rise up claiming that the Constitution is being overthrown by the New World Order. Civil war is a distinct possibility.

So the next time someone tries to work you up with stories of space creatures and spiritual possessions, remind him that the actuality of life is much scarier.

What to do about all of this? Well, be armed. You will need to be. A good short barreled shotgun and a good high caliber revolver, probably a .38 or a .357, or a .45 semi-automatic for those with a steady hand. And buy some rounds now while you can get them. Believe it or not, along with gold and silver, bullets will most likely serve as money during the crunch. Why not, they are capable of saving your life. You can't eat bullets, but youcan stay alive until you can find something to eat. Those whites fearful of guns and their lethal purpose will probably not survive the period of chaos which will follow the collapse of government control. They will be butchered without mercy by the marauders, many of whom will be whites on the prowl for whatever the unarmed have in their homes and cars. This goes for rural areas of the country as well as the big cities. You will only know who your enemy is when he comes calling with that look in his eye. So be prepared to use extreme violence, and don't think twice once you have decided this fellow is going to harm you or yours.

It is at this time that the great racial awareness among whites will arise. All talk of race equality will cease. Most blacks will attack you now if given the chance. Come the chaos and you will be a real target. Again I say to beware of thevicious white trash, the scum of our race,the predators who come into their own when law and order break down.Out of this chaos we will have just one chance to form into a new white polity, a Staat of our own in North America. It won' t be a large Staat at first, due to the fact that we will perforce be very selective of who we allow to enter into the new Staat. The first thing we must do is set up an immigration court. Petitioners must present their qualifications for becoming a citizen of the Aryan Republic. We shall have to be sticklers in our choosing. No race mixers of course, with their broods of bastards trying to escape the chaos; and no old boo-hoos for the 'poor blacks.' We do not intend to make the mistakes that killed America off. The Aryan Republic will be a place for the white loyalist, with an army to protect the borders, and a government determined to protect the best of our race, giving them a place to bring up white children in security and the high European culture.

America died a long time ago, the Republic died at Appomattox. There is no reason to think that any political action can resurrect it. The cream of our racial crop does not have to die with it. Be forewarned. ❑

DOES THE WEST HAVE THE WILL TO SURVIVE?

That is the obvious question posed by Jean Raspail's terrifying novel of the swamping of the White world by an unlimited flood of non-White "refugees." But there is also a less obvious and even more fundamental question: Must Whites find their way to a new Morality and a new spirituality in order to face the moral challenges of the present and overcome them? THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS is the most frightening book you will ever read. It is frightening because it is utterly believable. The armada of refugee ships in Raspail's story is exactly like the one that dumped 150,000 Cubans from Fidel Castro's prisons and insane asylums on our shores in 1980 — except this time the armada is from India, with more than 70 times as large a population. And it is only the first armada of many. If any book will awaken White Americans to the danger they face from uncontrolled immigration, it is THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS. JUDICIAL INTERPRETATION AND FROG LEGS FOR DINNER

Richard C. Bentinck, M.D.

The Western frog sits basking stupidly in the pond of Western Civilization as the temperature slowly rises. Already he is parboiled half to death and doesn't realize what is being done to him. The so-called 'hate crime', a term of totally open, political and even frivolous definition, might just be enough to finish him off. In Germany, even to speak the word 'holocaust' with a smile can get you five years in prison! Most of Europe is gone. Canada is not far behind. Australia is on its way. When we are gone, the war is lost.

In our Sovereign States of America united, we pride ourselves on our First Amendment of the Constitution. It guarantees us the freedom of speech and expression, doesn't it? We value it, don't we? Did not Voltaire, who fought judicial arbitrariness, define our First Amendment when he said, "I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it"? Well, we also—truly the last bastion of freedom in the world—are losing the rights first voiced formally in 1215 in the Magna Carta and locked in stone in 1787 by our Constitution. But even stone yields to attack by the winds.

An article called "Combating Bigotry in Law Enforcement" which appeared in FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin for June, 1996, shows the sneaky and insidious means by which politically correct, corrupted judges are turning the rock of our Constitution into anonymous sand. The article, written by a Ph.D. professor and an FBI lawyer starts off on a high-blown note of constitutional virtuosity, "In civilized nations, freedom of thought is sacred—the equal right of individuals to think as they see fit—freedom of thought is the most basic of all obstacles to governmental tyranny—(and)—the right to freedom of thought is unconditional". Did you catch the little hooker? What happened to freedom of expression? What they really are saying is, "You can think what you want as long as you don't communicate your thought to anyone else by word or action".

Think a moment. If thought cannot be aired, it is rendered pointless. As will anything that is unused, it loses purpose and meaning. Thought will die. What do we call a creature that cannot think? It is a robot. A robot is a thing that is totally under the control of something other than itself, isn't it? In a word, it is the ultimate slave.

Now they begin to get really devious. They say, "Neither the U.S. Constitution nor first amendment case law guarantees unconditional freedom of speech and nonverbal expression", implying that we've all been reading the darn thing wrong for over 200 years! Look again at their sentence. They cleverly construct the sentence such that it gives the impression that we really do not have a Constitutional right to freedom of expression. And the sentence is true. It is true, the Constitution devoid of its Amendments, says nothing about freedom of expression. That right is in the First Amendment (capitalized). While the sentence does not mention the First Amendment per se, its presence is implied. Instead, they mention 'first amendment case law' (without caps). And that also is true—but what the entire sentence says to the unwary and without analysis, is a lie. The First Amendment clearly guarantees freedom of expression with no conditions to all citizens of the Sovereign States of America united.

'Case law' is merely some judge's 'interpretation'. It is his 'opinion'—which may be bigoted, or worse. Is there anyone on earth still so naive as to believe that opinions are not for sale? As we know, judges are merely lawyers who, as federal judges, are appointed by politicians to life tenure because they know which side their bread is buttered on. If they are not federal judges, they are elected and we all know what a disgusting farce that has become. A judge is just a lawyer with a sinecure. The mere act of donning a black robe and sitting in a taxpayer-built palace does not magically confer either intelligence, knowledge, honesty or honor.

Now, the article discloses some pretty fancy judicial footwork. In order to allow somebody to penalize somebody else if they don't like him or what he says, judges have displayed remarkable terpsichorean talent as they pirouette through their dance of words. And then, adding insult to injury, they quote reams of previous semantically improper decisions in support of their own corruption of the basic law. That is exactly what it amounts to. Precedent (read, 'judicial interpretation') is the law, not the law itself in these latter days.

While this article seems to refer mostly to certain types of employees rather than to their wives, husbands, or neighbors, it is but an insignificant step to general application. How big a step do you think it is from penalizing one type of employee for speaking freely to extending this same penalty to all of us in the name of equality under the law?

These 'judicial interpretations' are quite properly labeled Orwellian 'newspeak'. They redefine words and reinterpret sentences out of syntax in order to fit some political expediency. Thus, according to this article, telling someone of your thoughts is protected by the First Amendment only if it may be "fairly characterized as constituting speech on a matter of public concern—whether it relates to any matter of political, social, or other legitimate concern to the community". Obviously, what may be a "matter of public concern" may be entirely in the mind of the listener or observer—or elected official!

He, the official, then gets to decide why he thinks you expressed it, whether you might have had some personal bias—which could simply mean that you knew more about it than he did—and whether you said it publicly. If you expressed this idea of yours at a private party, even as a lampoon to liven things up and have a good time, it would not be considered a matter of public concern because it was not bruited from the rooftops to the general public! So, if someone at the party disliked your perfume (the wearing of perfume is a form of expression) and you had saved it specially for the party and never worn it on the street, you are in trouble.

Don't think it stops there! This wonderful lawyer paid by your taxes to be a judge gets to apply the "Balancing Process".

Reaching into his deepening bag of tricks, your local paragon of justice gets to decide whether the value of your expression to the public interest outweighs its adverse effects on legitimate law enforcement interests! But, there is more. Your remark need cause no disruption of law enforcement interests. All it takes is that somebody has an idea that your expression could somehow cause some disruption of law enforcement interests. 'Interests' covers an almost limitless field—and the court can rule against you. Somewhere in the back of your mind, is the little phrase, 'police state', beginning to rankle?

Now can you see what is going on? First, get the poor, dumbed-down boobs accustomed to something lukewarm, confuse them with razzle-dazzle and then clamp down! The frog is almost ready for eating. Does he still have enough gumption to jump out of the pot? ❑

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Corneliu Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti-Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. Reading it will be an emotional experience you will not forget. "A sequel to Orwell's 1984" —R.S.H. "A searing exposé of Red bestiality!" —Dr. A.J. App). THE ANTI-HUMANS. Order #01013. Lately there has been much discussion about an impending Social Security crisis, and with good reason. Productive, thrifty people are awakening to the fact that Social Security is a rotten deal for them and is likely to become much worse.

If participation in Social Security were to be made voluntary it would have few takers amongst thrifty, self-reliant people, more of whose earnings could be put to more effective use in providing for their retirement years without being forced to depend on "our" profligate, bungling, corrupt, mendacious and redistributive government in Washington.

Of course, that government has the power to print ever-increasing amouts of paper money, but what will that money bug in future years?

Like others who were employed in the 1950s, I was forced to make "contributions" to Social Security that had a purchasing power around ten times as great as the dollars in which my present benefits are being paid. However, 85% of part of my benefits is being taxed at a rate which is applied to present-day earnings in debased dollars.

Monetarg policy is being formulated by men who are trying to figure out how to roll over the huge indebtedness of the government in Washington. Trust in the future value of the dollar has become so low that the federal government is now issuing bonds that will supposedly compensate for the decline in the future purchasing power of its paper money. People of my generation recall that the federal government callously repudiated its gold obligations in 1939.

The philososhical basis of Social Security lies in the over-saving theories which were current in the 1930s and in a cynical contempt of the inherent self-reliance of American workers.

1 January 1997

I was utterly astonished to read the following sentence on page 35 of the January, 1997 issue of the LIBERTY BELL: "One believes that there must be a money or value, 100 per cent gold and silver used for a short time around the 14th cencury."

What a lack of awareness of the real historg of monetary media, perhaps propagated by collectivist academic economists! As a matter of fact, European governments have been striking gold, silver and (later) bronze coins for over 2,500 years, not just "for a short time around the 14th century." By the fifth century B.C. Athens, for example, was producing a huge silver coinage with well established standards of weight and fineness. The Athenian silver coins became so highly respected, trusted and desired that they circulated as far away as India, where they were also imitated. In Germany, a figurative expression sometimes used for doing inefficient or pointless work is "Eulen nach Athen tragen" (to carry owls to Athens). This figurative expression corresponds to "to carry coals to Newcastle" in English, The "owls" of the German expression, which actually goes back to ancient Greek literature, are the Athenian silver coins, which depicted owls on their reverses as attributes of the goddess Athena.

By the way, the technical and artistic accomplishment of striking coins with elaborate designs, which required the preparation ("sinking") of steel dies, gives a notable testimony to the skills and mentality of ancient European man. Many books are available to the reader who wishes to learn about the remarkable ancient coinage of Europe, for example, Agnes Brett, Catalogue of Greek Coins, Museum of Fine Arts. Boston (1955 and later reprint). The magnificent artistic achievement of ancient European coinage can be viewed in the book by C.M. Kraay and Max Hirmer, Greek Coins (New York, 1966). The ancient Chinese civilization also brought forth coins as media of exchange but they were relatively crude, cast (not struck) bronze coins with inscriptions in Chinese characters. In ancient times Americsn Indians had no coins. They used such commodities as shells and cocoa beans as media of exchange. However, they treasured gold and worked it into artistically simple ornaments by hammering it and even employing the lost wax process.

When attempts have been made to substitute a fiat paper money for monetary media based on the precious metals, they have resulted in economic dislocation, chaos and injustice. Toward the end of the eighteenth century the revolutionary government of France issued paper money (assignats) supposedly based on the value of lands confiscated from the Church. These assignats soon became worthless as ever larger quantities of them were issued. (Goethe later satirized them in the second part of his drama, Faust, when Faust's evil companion, Mephistopheles, induces the government of an emperor to issue fraudulent paper money.) Napoleon's government returned to gold and silver as monetary media which served the European economy well for over a century. Paper money was also issued by American colonial and state governments around the time of thRe American Revolution. This paper money also became worthless. ("Not worth a Continental" referred to paper money issued by the Continental Congress.)

In our days the Federal Reserve System, founded largely by Jewish bankers in 1919, has provided us with another example or paper money. One of Roosevslt's first measures in 1933 was the prohibition of the use of gold as a monetary medium, quite in opposition to the intent of the Constitution, Article 1, Section 10, "No State shall... make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts." The "pestilent effects of paper money" are vividly described in Federalist Paper No. 44, written by Madison in support of that Section. The American Constitution, after all, was written by Aryan men as a manifesttion of their aspirations for governrnent and economic life.

Paper money hyperinflations in Europe during the early 1920s enabled Jews, with their international banking connections, to buy up great amounts of real estate and other tangible assets. They became wealthier on average than their host populations, (For details, see Louis Marschalko, The World Conquerors, 1958, reprint of 1968, pages 121 ff.) Such paper money inflations took place in Germang, Danzig, Austria, Hungary, Poland and Russia. In general, Jews have a tendency to favor monetary media that can be manipulated and debased. In Israel itself various monetary units have been subject to hyperinflations.

Aryan man at his best has a mentality, perhaps even geneticallg determined, which makes him comfortable with monetary stability. Aryan man is by nature inventive, energetic and thrifty, but his thrifty inclinations are betrayed when monetary media are debased and are thus frustrated. In our times a lack of monetarg stability is manifested in the decline of purchasing power of Federal Reserve Notes. If we look back on the prices or automobiles and postal services in the 1950s, for example, we observe that the purchasing power of such paper money has declined by about 90%, a reality which has had a profound effect on American life, particularly as a concomitant of the declining numbers and fortunes of the Aryan component of the American population.

When we reflect on actual monetary history of the past thousands of years its racial aspects become apparent.

(Monetary "reforms" took place in Israel during 1949, 1960, 1980 and 1985. In 1985 1000 old Sheqalim were equated to 1 New Sheqel.)

Dear George,

I have sent my extra copies of Liberty Bell to other people, hoping to educate or give another viewpoint, but I fear we have far too many slow learners or even non-learners among us.

Along those lines of non-learners I do put Joe Sobran. For many years I read his articles in The Wanderer and found thyem filled with such hate toward Germany and the German people. His constant repetition of dictator Hitler and the Six Million even long after Jewish historians were lowering the numbers irritated me and I wrote letters to him about this and also asked him if he read anything but the Jewish version of that war. Needless to say, I received no reply. Indeed it is only since his former friends, Jews have turned on him that he now tells a little about the hold the Jews have on this country. I firmly believe that if he were again accepted back into the fold of his Jewish friends he would again revert to his old refrain of the guilt of the German people because of the 6 Million.

I doubt that any of our people, Hans Schmidt, Michael Hoffman, Ernst Zündel or Günther Deckert or any others trying to get another viewpoint across could be printed in The Wanderer or Joe Sobran's newsletter. Those people are kept out of any print and may only be found in the smaller newsletters, newspapers or magazines such as Liberty Bell.

I do enjoy Liberty Bell for it encourages me to believe that one day the whole truth about not only those two wars, but this entire last century will be evident for all to see and read.

With my best wishes for the New Year,

Sincerly Yours,
Mrs. M.K., Oregon

Dear Sir,

11 January 1997

...There is one point of issue I think has largely been overlooked and that is the use by the Left of using words like apartheid and then giving them all sorts of connotations which have little bearing on their true meaning. If for instance people would use the English translation of separate development then they would arrive at a different conclusion to the one they had drawn on hearing only the foreign word. Another favorite trick was to use an abbreviation of foreign words like the word Nazi; this word in itself has no meaning and so can be twisted and used to stand for anything derogatory. Which is why the word Nazi is almost always used when describing either the Third Reich or the National Socialist German Workers Party or anyone sympathetic to either of these. If people were to use the correct term which is National Socialist then a true definition would emerge, one which the enemies of National Socialism would not like one bit.

Also another disturbing trend in recent years has been the total corruption of words to mean something different to their original meaning. I refer here to the definition Gay, the proper use of this word is to describe being merry, lively, happy etc., a positive word to denote merriment. But now it has been highjacked to fulfill a meaning of perversion. In actual fact the correct word for a homosexual is a Uranist and homosexuality is Uranism. Also something near to this is an Urning which means, according to the dictionary, a male who feels like a woman towards other males. So if this collection of Leftists and perverts wish to call themselves anything let them henceforth refer to themselves as they are the URANIST and URNING LIBERATION FRONTS and leave the word Gay alone.

Yours faithfully,
Mr. A.J.Ch., England

PLAGIARISM?

In the February 1997 issue of Liberty Bell magazine I have been accused of plagiarism by Kevin Alfred Strom of the National Alliance. This allegation, like all the others the NA has leveled against me, is false.

The article Mr. Strom accuses me of plagiarizing is "Jewish Media Control Close Up" by Jack Killey. This article was sent to me by Kevin Alfred Strom himself, and no one else, via e-mail. The article was then forwarded by me as an e-mail NSNet Bulletin. I "plagiarized" nothing; I gave both Mr. Killey credit as author and Mr. Strom credit as source of the article.

The article was also reprinted in the weekly newsletter of the NSWPP, Resistance, issue #88, September 16th, 1996. In that reprint, both Mr. Killey and Mr. Strom were given credit. Had Mr. Strom bothered to check with me before writing a defamatory letter to George Dietz accusing me of plagiarism, he would have learned this and I would have been happy to provide him with copies of both the e-mail and print articles to confirm that due credit was given to the author and himself.

This bogus accusation is part and parcel of a continuing series of vicious and contemptible attacks made against myself and the National Socialist White People's Party by the National Alliance. This campaign is motivated by fear of financial and political competition from the Party, and nothing more. It has recently escalated from the usual Movement smears and slander into acts of illegality such as forged e-mails and spams, vandalism, obscene and threatening telephone calls, and trespassing. The low point came on December 1st, 1996, when a member of the National Alliance, whose identity is known to me, crept up on my apartment during the hours of darkness and defecated on my doorstep. Mr. Strom is normally an intelligent and articulate spokesman for our race, but he is keeping some pretty vile company, and I am sorry he has allowed himself to become involved in this revolting business.

KEEP THE LIBERTY BELL RINGING!

Please remember: Our Fight is Your fight! Donate whatever you can spare on a regular—monthly or quarterly—basis. Whether it is $2., $5., $20., or $100. or more, rest assured it is needed here and will be used in our common struggle. If you are a businessman, postage stamps in any denomination are a legitimate business expense—and we need and use many of these here every month—and will be gratefully accepted as donations.

Your donations will help us spread the Message of Liberty and White Survival throughout the land, by making available additional copies of our printed material to fellow Whites who do not yet know what is in store for them.

Order our pamphlets, booklets, and, most importantly, our reprints of revealing articles which are ideally suited for mass distribution at reasonable cost. Order extra copies of Liberty Bell for distribution to your circle of friends, neighbors, and relatives, urging them to subscribe to our unique publication. Our bulk prices are shown on the inside front cover of every issue of Liberty Bell.

Pass along your copy of Liberty Bell, and copies of reprints you obtained from us, to friends and acquaintances who may be on our "wave length," and urge them to contact us for more of the same.

Carry on the fight to free our White people from the shackles of alien domination, even if you can only join our ranks in spirit. You can provide for this by bequest. The following are suggested forms of bequests which you may include in your Last Will and Testament:

1. I bequeath to Mr. George P. Dietz, as Trustee for Liberty Bell Publications, P.O. Box 21, Reedy WV 25270 USA, the sum of $ . . . . . for general purposes.

2. I bequeath to Mr. George P. Dietz, as Trustee for Liberty Bell Publications, P.O. Box 21, Reedy WV 25270 USA, the following described property . . . . . for general purposes.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

THE PURSUIT OF POWER

IS ELECTIONEERING THE WAY TO WIN?

The objective of the Vanguard is success in the pursuit of power: power meaning the whole compass of opportunity and ability to implement our ideas for the salvation, upliftment and prosperity of the Aryan peoples. For this successful pursuit we need the right sort of people, inspired by the right sort of ideology, and brought together in the right form of organisation with the right methods. Nothing else will suffice.

In thus defining our purpose, we are currently prompted by the proximity of a General Election in the United Kingdom to raise the question whether the conventional political party with its integral commitment to electioneering is the right form of organisation with the right sort of people and the right methods for our purpose. Does it instead represent a woefully mistaken, habitual conformity to gross waste in the pursuit of an utterly illusionary aim?

The British National Party and other lesser nationalist parties in this country, where at present there is no outright National-Socialist party, believe that the way ahead must be through a political party contesting elections. The BNP has accordingly committed itself to putting up 50 candidates in the forthcoming General Election, a target fixed precisely because of the free, five-minute television and radio time this extent of candidature will entitle it to, along with free mailing of election literature. It and the other participant parties of nationalism are currently convulsed with high excitement in their feeling of having climbed out of the shadows of comparative obscurity to join in "the big time" of ballot box competition.

The BNP explicitely recognises, realistically, that on this occasion it cannot expect to capture any parliamentary seats, or even in almost all constituencies to regain — through securing the necessary proportion of the total votes cast — the £500 deposit required of a candidate by the authorities. Nevertheless, it is insistent that the operation will prove immensely worthwhile in the recruitment obtained through contesting.

It rightly points out that for a cost of some £50,000 in deposits and the other expenses of contesting, such as printing costs (although not accounting for the value of all the time expended by party members on the electioneering), the party can gain around £3 million of television time, plus the value of the accompanying radio time, plus something in the region of £60,000 of postage. Considered purely on this arithmetic, the financial return so exceeds the financial outlay as to make the venture greatly worthwhile. However, a full and accurate assessment has to delve much deeper than this attractive but superficial reckoning.

Recruitment, the BNP has named as the immediate objective and justification for its electioneering, so what volume of recruitment and quality in that volume can be expected for the expenditure of the £50,000, plus the value of all the time expended? Set by its own criterion, the BNP case for fighting the 1997 General Election stands or falls on this asessment. In the final analysis this becomes the simple question of what amount of extra work and financial assistance can be expected from the total of election-won recruits in return for the total expenditure in obtaining them, and subtracting from this the further cost in accomodating them and keeping them content with membership. We will look into this crucial question in the course now of an examination of the whole question of party politics under Democracy.

THE GREAT PRETENCE

Democracy is the Great Pretence in politics, the pretence that the people rule themselves whereas in fact some particular people do the ruling for them. Under it, periodically we have a festival of head counting after candidates acceptable to the permanent dictators behind the scenes have been put before the public, and notions favourable to those candidates have been implanted in the minds of the public by the media, the public are said to decide between these candidates and so determine the government.

Certainly some extent of divergence is necessarily presented between the approved candidates in order to give the illusion of free choice. However, the divergence is kept within the family, as it were, confined within safe bounds. Thus the seemingly different parties are virtually but different wings of the same team, wholeheartedly agreed as one and the same in opposition to what National-Socialism holds to be vital for the salvation, upliftment and prosperity of the Aryan peoples.

Consistent with this, whenever the contrived array of parties comes up against a potentially dangerous outburst of discontent, safety valves are created. Bogus champions of rebellion are set up as in the case of Enoch Powell in the 1960s on immigration, and now on European union the billionaire, Jewish financier, Sir James Goldsmith, and his Referendum Party, and, to cater for all tastes, the United Kingdom Independence Party. Showing their bogus nature, both of these parties have a lot to say about the infringement of British national sovereignty by the European authorities at Brussels, but not a single word about the infringement of our sovereignty by way of the alien influence in and on British government at London emanating from such as the fellow tribesmen of Goldsmith. Patriotic Britons who persist in remaining blind to this disqualifying contradiction, hailing these fakes as St George-like saviours, are pitiable in their so easily satisfied gullibility.

Goldsmith at least lives up to his name. The Sunday

Telegraph (London, 21 April 1996) revealed regarding this shining crusader of Britain's national sovereignty nitwits, descended from the Jewish ghetto of Frankfurt, Germany:- "He keeps his wealth in gold and foreign currencies, dipping in and out of the world's stock market like a gambler when he senses a swift profit."

One thing we can be certain of is that this man's profit is not ours, swift or otherwise. Anyone so shallow minded as to be drawn by election fever to support him or any other representative of The Old Order of Democracy is clearly and conclusively feeble and not of Vanguard quality. What we need and want is freedom from the Goldsmiths of this world, whether based in Britain, Brussels or the Back of Beyond. Getting Britain out of Europe is not the supreme need. Getting the tribe of Goldsmith out of power in Britain and elsewhere is.

RULE BY BRAIN-BENDER BOX

The success of the Great Pretence of Democracy is attributable to the success of its practitioners in utilising the power of the media which they almost exclusively control, including the positively hypnotic power of the kind of image radiation peculiar to television which makes it unique as a means of mind control because of its magnetic capacity. These radiations, resulting from the electronic scanning peculiar to television, bombard the brain at a rate beyond the ability to cope of that part of the brain capable of reasoning, so that the passively uncritical part of the brain predominates. This visual hypnotism is comparable to the audio hypnotism achieved by repetitive, ultra-rapid "rock", radiated beyond the pulse rate of the human body, and thereby its ability to resist domination, which has reduced the younger generation to a zombie-like condition.

Democracy's dictators have established their domination of the ballot box through their domination of this compelling force of the brain-bending box in well-nigh every home, whereby the minds of the masses are enslaved to the system. Thus this dictatorship cannot be overthrown by playing the party game of the ballot box in the absence of gaining power over the brain-bending box, either by acquiring an adequate television facility in competition or by putting the television transmitters of the dictators out of action and keeping them out of action. Even Adolf Hitler could not today have succeeded otherwise in attaining state power, and we have no faint shadow of a second Adolf Hitler around today.

The mental enslavement of the masses is set to be made even more secure by the forthcoming introduction of 30-channel, digital television on top of satellite and cable television. Thus will primary television be reinforced in providing a daily, round-the-clock domination of the minds of most of the people, and thereby the majority of voters in the beguiling business of parliamentary elections as the core of Democracy's confidence trick concerning public rule. This digital access to the brain box as decisively influential to the verdict of the ballot box is to be in the hands of a consortium encompassing the British Sky Broadcasting of media magnate, Rupert Murdoch, whose mother was Jewish, making him by rabbinical standards Jewish too; Carlton Communications run by the Jew, Michael Green, worth £200 million; and the £7.5 billion Granada group; all very indicative of government of the people by and for the Chosen People.

So what of the BNP's goal of five minutes on the box? The realistic answer is that it has to be measured in effect against the effect of all the rest of the time, day in, day out, year in, year out in which the dictators of Democracy have been and will be conducting on that box what amounts to constant electioneering. They have been conducting this in the ceaseless propagation of their propaganda, both directly in the presentation of alleged information, accompanied by the elimination of contrary information, and indirectly in the deliberate and highly suggestive projection of fictional material favourable to their aims, for example the portrayal of inter-racial liaisons in an attractive setting, this being far more effective than mere exhortation to this end. The BNP's five minutes on the box cannot be more than an inconsequential flicker in comparison. Can the cost of this flicker prove worthwhile?

In estimating the answer to this question, we have to analyse the nature of a political party in relation to the nature of the British public today. A political party today is a reflection of the Democracy under which it operates, whatever it may incorporate in seeming challenge to that Democracy. A party is wide open to the masses who have been moulded by indoctrination by the media of Democracy, and that party's ultimate aim is to solicit successfully the sufficient approval of those indoctrinated by the media of Democracy. Electioneering and the party are thus inseparably linked, the electioneering of the party being pitched at the masses and the party in turn seeking to incorporate the masses.

The vast majority of the people who will watch the BNP's appearance on television and will read the BNP election literature coming in the post will be either Whites who are firm opponents or hostile Coloureds, and on all of these the indiscriminate output will be completely wasted, so that in respect of most viewers and readers what will have been costless will be gain-less. Beyond that there can be expected to be a comparatively small number of people who nod their heads in agreement, but who do nothing more about it. Beyond that there can be expected to be a comparively minute number of people who are sufficiently stirred to write for more information and even to enrol. Among them will probably be a very small part of them who will not only continue their membership permanently, but prove prepared to contribute substantially more than the cost of retaining them, these last-mentioned being the ultimate gauge of the worth of the operation, and probably costing in terms of the expenses of electioneering for their procurement a very high price each.

The great majority of that minute minority who may be recruited, temporarily at any rate, as the reward of the current electioneering will be conspicuously and injuriously the products of Democracy, far more reflective of the system, its outlook, its values and its ethos than rebellious to it their rebelliousness in most cases being only to some part or parts of it, without depth of perception of the interaction of all parts of the complete pattern of decay. As carriers of the psychological diseases of Democracy, they will have at least as much capacity to infect others as to improve them.

As background to this, it has to be faced up to that of the great bulk of the British people of today, while certainly not the scum of the earth, are equally certainly not the salt of the earth as so many nationalists are fond of making out in flattering them for votes and membership. A great part of the best of the breed was thrown away in the death toll of two mad wars against our brother nation, Germany. What remains has in most cases been duped and doped, degraded and corrupted by years of never-ending influence by the media of Democracy, their strength of character so sapped that they have become docile to the point of acquiescence in their own national and racial ruination, displaying the dismal demeanour of a beaten people.

It is thus fantasy to think that salvation can come through soliciting the masses. They will not be brought to undertake an uprising. On the other hand they will not take to the streets in violent defence of the system. As a motive force one way or the other regarding the rescue and resurgence of Britain, the general public is truly irrelevant.

The great majority of existing members of the nationalist parties, and the great majority of those who may become members through electioneering are and will be in the nature of things people of poor quality, part-timers, big on talk, big on beer, small on effort, wanting to be entertained, giving little and requiring as much if not more to keep them in place, poor on staying power, so many of them losing heart or interest after a while. So it is that the party is always like a bath with the tap running but the plug pulled out. They reflect the hard fact that people at large are not by nature fitted to be political workers and fighters, but only bystanders and occasional auxiliaries and suppliers of some money.

THE PARTY CURSE OF COMPROMISE

The form of organisation which is the party is thus condemnable because in the ostensible cause of combating Democracy it perpetrates the selfdefeating contradiction of throwing itself open to the products of that Democracy, and seeking outside the approval of these products at large as access to and sanction for state power. This inevitably means, sooner or later, major compromise. It cannot be otherwise. The process is a vicious circle. The recruited members of the public, being carriers of the psychological disease of Democracy, maybe subtely but no less surely stamp their character on the organisation, influencing policy and practice towards compromise. The leaders of the party, under the pressure of the bulk of the members, are led into compromise in order to retain their support. They are furthermore led into it in order to attract new support from outside.

The dominant inclination in a party is thus to adapt, omit, tone down, however debilitating this trimming is to the purported policy for national resurgence, wherever original principles come to be experienced as severely clashing with the prejudices and shortcomings of the recruited members and the solicited public; prejudices and shortcomings induced and fostered by the very promoters of degeneration in power at present. Thus a party by its very nature imports the thought, spirit and habits of Democracy, and is in constant danger of succumbing to them, being in this fashion taken over by Democracy, and rendered incapable of conquering it.

Not suprisingly the vast majority of the members of nationalist parties, heavily infected with the way of thinking of Democracy, are readily responsive to, indeed always eagerly expectant of Democracy's game of electioneering. One of the prime agitators for electioneering in one of these parties recently proclaimed that " ... nothing enthuses party members and activists like a General Election ..." as he passionately proceeded to applaud and promote this propensity. Either incapable of perceiving the arguments against electioneering or incapable of pursuing the alternative paths to power, the votaries of electioneering are instantly aroused to feverish excitement by the bustle of this conventional competition, forfeiting with alacrity what circumspection they otherwise possess. By their shallow disposition they are forever itching to stampede to the polls, like cattle to the feeding pens, and intent on making their leaders aware that this is their favourite exercise which they fondly want and first and foremost expect.

The tiny minority, already present in the party or to come to it in consequence of its General Election publicity, who are capable of higher things than the dull round of party activity amid beery gossip galore and ballot box delusions, can but be disabled and depressed by dispersal among the mass of mediocre or even more deficient members, instead of being selectively recognised and set apart so that their superiority can be put to best advantage.

This lumping together of the majority, who do and give little, with the tiny minority who do most of the work and provide most of the money and who in consequence are an elite, has been defended by one of the nationalist leaders as a mixture beneficial to the party because the comparatively inert majority help the party with some financial contributions and literature purchases. This advocacy of combination disregards the fact that these minor benefits could be coaxed from them without incorporating them in the organisation, instead dealing with them as auxiliaries outside, and thus without the nullifying cost of accomodating them inside, including the drag and deterrent they exert on the elite. It is an advocacy that comes strangely from a man fond of military analogies, since it is comparable to the advocacy of combining in one and the same unit back line Pioneer Corps and front line Parachute personnel, a practice shunned by the British Army and every other army in the world.

While the BNP is currently foreshortening the election debate to the matter simply of contesting for the sake of television and radio time, whereby access to the public and resulting recruitment can be gained, this cannot be taken as the end of the line, but only as the beginning. Having started out on the election road, this and any such party will be inevitably carried further along that road by the unleashed motive force involved in electioneering.

This means, incontestably, a permanent tendency to compromise as the price of soliciting the votes of the masses. This is so because the masses, being in the state they are thanks to the success of Democracy in using the media in its possession to mould their minds, will never accept what is really necessauy for national and racial salvation. Any alternative party which failed to compromise heavily, reducing its message to flattery and fleshy bribes and thus imitating the old parties of Democracy whose purpose is to keep the masses content with their exploitation in their degraded state as darkness falls, would be presenting to them a message essentially offensive to their vanity and taste in its appeal to the higher considerations of life above the lower. It would, therefore, not win their general support. The masses will not vote for their own upliftment in a higher order of society. This has to be accomplished without their support and request, despite them and indeed against them. It is absurd to pivot your whole project, as does a conventional party, on the submission of change to the decision of those who so need to be changed. You might as well make the case for law and order conditional on the approval of the criminals.

So the name of the party game, if it is to be played successfully, has to be compromise, compromise and still more compromise. The religious issue, namely the need to replace ruinous Christianity which is at the very bottom of our troubles, has to be avoided in a major move of self-emasculation in the cause of acceptability, so as not to lose the votes of all the Christians. Freemasonry, another instrument of corruption, has to be avoided, so as not to forfeit the votes of all the freemasons. The odious royal tribe has to be preserved from requisite condemnation, if not spoken favourably of, so as not to lose the votes of the multitude of doting admirers. The foul din of the jungle called "rock", so immensely damaging to our younger generation, has to be compromised with too, at least to the extent of self-censorship if not explicit acceptance (as was officially awarded in an item in the December, 1996, issue of the BNP magazine, Spearhead. Queers, being now so numerous and obtrusive as a natural result of the system of perversion known as Democracy, compromise with them is similarly called for in the quest for popularity and electoral success. If enough votes are not obtained through a certain amount of compromise, then clearly in playing the party game more and more compromise is needed.

If, eventually, such a self-mutilating, new party did happen to win its way to state power as a government, you can take it as certain that the long-standing habit of compromise would have become so ingrained as to keep it permanently on the path of compromise to retain the state power acquired by the same means. Thus the nominally new party would become in fact nothing new at all. In a process of compromise it would come more and more to resemble the old parties of Democracy it was supposed to replace.

HAIDER, LE PEN, FINI: THE WAY OF SELF-DEFEAT

Those in Britain who argue for electioneering as the way to power by courting popularity by trimming policy appropriately heavily rely on citing the electoral advances of "new" parties in Austria, France and Italy as proof of what can be achieved this way, and should be copied in Britain. What they do not candidly concede in the presentation of their argument is that the trimming they have in mind is so deep and extensive in its effect on principle as to change the nature of the party to that of more of a conformist than a rebel. All three of the supposedly "new" parties they have in mind have compromised themselves out of the latter category into the former.

The nearer a "new" party draws to the policy and practice of the old parties, the nearer it gets to the electoral support the latter obtain. It can always advance in popularity by retreating further and further away from the principles required for real resurgence. The reward for this contortion in the course of the party game is not the reality of success. It is the reality of self-defeat.

In projection of this mirage of success, we have held up to us the example in Austria of Jörg Haider and his "Freedom Party" which gained 28% of the Austrian vote in the November, 1996, European Parliament elections. Its deputy leader now in that European Parliament happens to be a Peter Sichrovsky, identified by the London Jewish Chronicle (22 November 1996) as a Jew.

The Washington Post (U.S.A.; 1 December 1996) said of Haider, "He disavows any plans for wholesale expulsions and stresses that he only wants to throw out illegal aliens and toughen citizenship laws. He also says that Turks and other immigrants from Islamic nations are welcome to stay if they adapt to Western secular traditions." Will something like this crass compromise be attractive to election enthusiasts in the BNP as policy enough to present to the British public in respect of Britain's Coloured Invasion?

As we in Britain await the Labour Party's projected penalisation of "holocaust" denial, will those same election enthusiasts be happy to know that Haider the trimmer is already doing the job for our enemies of suppressing denial of this dogma of Democracy? He has expelled from his party a member who dared to deny the Jewish propaganda (Sunday Times, London, 17 December 1995)

From France we have held up to us the example of Jean-Marie Le Pen and his vote-chasing National Front. "Le Pen has indeed consistently supported Israel and in February 1987 met with representatives of 24 American-Jewish organisations with whom he had 'positive and cordial' exchanges," reported Right Now (U.K., No. 10, 1996) quoting an interview in the Jerusalem Report of 27 February, 1992.

In a biography of Le Pen, who is a longtime friend of Robert Hemmerdinger, vice-president of the national committee of French Jews, the novelist Roger Mauge wrote: "Before the meeting I had engaged in conversation with a young Jewish French doctor from Amiens, a member of the FN since 1988. He was fiercely proud to tell me of his huge admiration for Le Pen and that whatever the FN's detractors may claim, it is not racist but a nationalist party and one with hundreds of active Jewish members, likewise black and brown members and supporters ..." (Right Now magazine, U.K., No, 10). Will those same BNP enthusiasts for electioneering endorse the same course of compromise for the BNP, namely cordial arrangements with Jewish organisations, and the admission of numerous Jews and Coloureds as members?

From Italy we have held up to us the example of Gianfranco Fini and the National Alliance into which by drastic compromise he has turned the former, fascistic MSI. How drastic that compromise has been is shown by the fact that a National Alliance delegation visited Israel in August of 1995 to meet Ephraim Zuroff of the baleful, Los Angeles-based Simon Wiesenthal Center, and in the following September Zuroff went to Rome to meet Fini at the party headquarters. Will those same BNP election enthusiasts who look to and acclaim Fini as a model, as they do regarding Haider and Le Pen, be prepared to follow suit and invite Zuroff to London to discuss co-operation in the pursuit of what are called "Nazi war criminals?"

The Institute for Jewish Policy's 1996 Anti-Semitism World Report analysed the electoral advances of Haider, Le Pen, Fini and the like as being the consequence of seeking respectability by rejecting overt anti-Semitism. Are the election enthusiasts of Britain's nationalist parties similarly prepared to sacrifice principle in respect of the Jewish problem for the sake of attaining respectability? Some have already shown so.

The lure of electoral success has already caused supposedly "new" parties in Russia to compromise decisively in this respect. Nikolay Lysenko, a former leader of Pamyat, has got himself elected to the Duma, the lower house of parliament, after renouncing anti-Semitism and declaring that Israel is "Russia's strategic ally" (Jewish Chronicle, London, 31 May 1996). Vladimir Zhirinovsky, leader of the reputedly nationalist "Liberal Democratic Party" , has put himself on record as stressing that he views Jews as equal citizens, which is not so surprising since his own father was Jewish (Jewish Chronicle, London, 14 June 1996).

In holding up as models for the BNP the performance of these foreign parties of abject compromise, one of the BNP's chief agitators for such electioneering by drastic compromise, a Tony Lecomber, has gone almost the whole way in selling out principle for the sake of expediency. In Spearhead (March, 1996) he has poured scorn on fascism and National-Socialism as something "old, stale and unsaleable", terming any association with Hitler's National-Socialist Germany "the kiss of death." It only remains for this gentleman to consummate what he no doubt considers to be his superb smartness by coming out explicitely as anti-Hitler, as have certain other nationalist bodies in Britain already, that much more to curry favour with the moronic masses, and to seek to appease the enemy.

Contrary to the misconception of this misleading Mr Lecomber, National-Socialism is not a dead creed but a living one whose principles remain as valid today as ever in the past. Properly understood, National-Socialism is neither restricted to the ways and means of the past in pursuit of those principles, nor is it driven to compromise those principles in order to pursue different ways and means in different times, such as now. The commanding requirement is simply that changes must always be consonant with and not conflicting with those principles. That the brainwashed public is currently opposed to National-Socialism, which they misunderstand due to media misinformation, is no valid argument for shedding National-Socialism to appease that public. Instead, power has to be pursued in all ways possible which are consistent with the inviolate preservation of our principles, and these do not include the party game and electioneering.

STOPPING A REBEL PARTY

If by chance a new party not only retained its soul from ruinous compromise but also gained enough votes to become something of a real threat to the controllers of Democracy — in combination a miracle — you can be absolutely certain that those controllers would bring about in one way or another the exclusion of that new party from state power. They would stop at nothing in putting a stop to the attempt to overthrow them. For them not to do so does not make sense, and does not fit with experience.

So what is our experience bearing out this conclusion? We might begin the answer 60 years back, when the British Union of Fascists looked like a growing threat. Then the holders of state power brought in the 1936 Public Order Act banning political uniforms to stop the great advantage the BUF was gaining from their use.

Over the past 30 years the holders of state power have brought in law after law increasingly to stiffle our essential, racial message in our fight against racially ruinous Democracy. They are still at it, planning further laws to ban questioning the alleged, Jewish "Holocaust" and to prohibit virtually any racial expression not complimentary to the Jews and the Coloureds.

At the same time as they have advanced in the use of outright, explicit prohibition, they have as their other arm of suppression advanced in implicit prohibition in practice by the denial of the necessary facilities for political campaigning by a party of revolt. Banning by way of police and Home Office exclusion and harassment has come to prevail in the matter of outdoor demonstrations and marches and meetings. One prominent example of this is the exclusion of our sort of people from Trafalgar Square, London's leading, open-air meeting place, ever since 1962, when the NSM there proclaimed that "Hitler was Right!" Yet ever since then every kind of racial minority from all over the globe has been allowed to use it. Indoor gatherings have been made extremely difficult, if not yet entirely impossible, by pressure on the owners of halls, joined to a tolerance of a attacks on meetings by rampaging Reds.

While the sly preference of Democracy is to ban indirectly by the imposition of handicaps, if this failed to be sufficient to prevent a new party of revolt, intact in its principles, from approaching anywhere near to state power, it is inconceivable that the present holders of power, who have already shown how ruthlessly they will impede such a new party, will stand by and allow that new party to attain a victory at the ballot box, and sweep them from power. While quite content, as long as that new party remains far distant from that power, to let it squander its resources in electioneering, pocketing its forfeited deposits, once the dictators of Democracy estimate the danger line has been reached you can be certain that they will outlaw the rebel party as "criminal" in its "racism" or"subversion", fabricating anything and everything necessary to this end.

Already the path towards outlawing, if necessary, is being prepared. One route already in place lies in the United Nations International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, adopted by the General Assembly and ratified by 129 states by the beginning of 1992. Its Article 4 (a) prohibits (1) All dissemination of ideas based on racial superiority, and (3) incitement to racial discrimination, and (6) the provision of any assistance to racist activities. Consider how easily these sections could be stretched to envelop the BNP and put it out of business!

Already the European Commission of Human Rights in a case designated Request No. 6741/74, X v. Italy, has agreed that seeking to reconstitute a fascist party is a criminal offence, and already such as the BNP is dubbed a "fascist party" In Germany ever since 1945 it has been rated a criminal offence to seek to establish a fascist or National-Socialist party, although the NSDAP in elections and referendums had the support of a transcendant proportion of the German people, who thus were in effect disenfranchised in 1945 by the power-wielders of the Great Pretence.

Already in a European Commission of Human Rights case designated Request No. D 8348/78 and 8406/78, Glimmerveen and others v. Netherlands, it has been laid down that Holland was correct in imprisoning the Chairman of the Nederlandse Volks Unie, a party supporting ethnic homogeneity for the country, for the offence of issuing an election manifesto expressing this; correct in confiscating the election manifesto; and correct in invalidating the electoral lists bearing the Chairman's name; all on the grounds of "racial discrimination."

How much longer do you think it will be in Britain before, in line with such international rulings, it becomes prohibited to stand for a Britain for the British, prohibited to advocate discrimination in favour of our own folk, and prohibited to oppose further Coloured immigration into Britain and to advocate repatriation of the Coloured immigrants already here?

The dictators of Democracy, besides being able to act against the BNP on the grounds of "racial discrimination", will also be able to act on the grounds of "subversion". Major-General Frank Kitson, expert on "counter subversion", gave the following definition of "subversion" in his book, Low Intensity Operations (Barrie & Rockcliff, 1971):- "Subversion, then, will be held to mean all measures short of the use of armed force taken by one section of the people of a country to overthrow those governing the country at the time or to force them to do things they do not want to do."

This echoes the statement of Britain's Director General of Military Intelligence 5, otherwise known as the "Security Service", who in June, 1994, proclaimed : "The intention to undermine democracy is what 'subversion' means to us." Those who over 30 years ago in the Spearhead Trial of 1962 were able to convict leaders of the then National Socialist Movement, including myself, of creating some sort of private army because they had organised a stewarding force for defensive purposes only against Red and Jewish violence should have no great difficulty in contriving a successful tion.

ELECTIONEERING: DEAD END ROAD OF FAILURE

In summary, from the survey which has been made the inescapable conclusions which arise are, firstly, that electioneering is a colossal mistake, tragically consuming the time and effort and money so sorely needed for other, truly productive pursuits of power. Even in the very short-term analysis as a means now to a media appearance and thereby recruiting it is not worthwhile. The quality and productivity of the recruitment will not be commensurate with the cost and effort of obtaining it. The 1997 General Election operation will thus prove a failure.

In the long-term, electioneering will fail to advance the party in the face of the overwhelming power and effect of a hostile media, unless an utterly ruinous extent of compromise is undertaken, which is in itself a form of utter failure. If it does not fail through cancerous compromise, it will fail nevertheless because the dictators of Democracy will intervene to crush it by the imposition of impediments or the imposition of a ban.

The vote-chasing herald of compromise, Tony Lecomber, calls his pipe dream "the electoral motorway" Actually it is no more than a dead end track to nowhere. A few occasions may occur when an abnormally substantial vote is obtained, maybe even an occasion of stark rarity when a winning one in a solitary constituency is obtained, but on any sober appraisal this is not to be taken as any indication of the beginning of some marvellous break through to power, but only a temporary derangement in an otherwise competently restrictive system.

The second, certain conclusion is that a political party today is an instrument of failure in the pursuit of power because its overriding concern is quantity before quality. Accordingly, in drawing in all grades of people, it draws in the defects of Democracy, and in combining all those grades in one and the same organisation, it deprives those of quality of the opportunity to function at their best because of the encumbrance of the mediocre members who are the majority.

It is said that a political party at the very least serves to provide a mustering facility whereby persons capable of better things, those with the potentiality to function as an elite, can be initially detected and contacted. However, even in such a secondary role it is a failure because it equally serves to bring people to the notice of the enemy, both the surveillance agencies of the authorities and the agents of other hostile forces. Such contacting has thus to be avoided. Recruiting for the Vanguard has to be pursued outside and away from the overt functions and visible presence of a political party as a matter of the most elementary security. It has to be done by discreet, private approach to particular individuals of seeming suitability, and in no other way.

I have no hesitation — in the outcome not of mere, armchair theorising, but the experience of some 50 years of political activity of almost every kind from the distribution of hundreds of thousands of items of literature, speeches at meetings galore, electioneering both local and national, and personal participation in an underground force which eluded apprehension by the authorities — in proclaiming the political party and its inseperable electioneering to be hopelessly unfitted for our needs today in pursuing power. I am absolutely convinced that, if we persist in occupying ourselves with a structure and a field of operation which has proved itself a failure, we will lose our very last chance of victory. I am sure that the very beginning of hope of victory lies in the complete rejection of the political party as an instrument, and thereby the liberation of the elite from the crippling clutches of this egalitarian structure.

In thus firmly rejecting the party game and its electioneering, it is clearly incumbent on us to go beyond a condemnation which is purely negative, however compelling its logic, and constructively supply an alternative of convincing efficacy to complete the argument. In this we have overall to show two things. Firstly, we have to show that we are not destructively arguing for a withdrawal into a retirement from action in which to dote on the past to the exclusion of the present and future which would be to pervert National-Socialism into a cult of nostalgia akin to that of the souvenir and fancy dress playboys who are satisfied with a Hollywood Nazi role to the delight of the enemy and the damage of our cause. Secondly, we have to show that we are thoroughly practical, being both thoroughly innovative and yet thoroughly averse to indulgence in fanciful aspirations beyond our current competence.

Hence at the outset let it be made abundantly clear that — contrary to any attempt by those of a contrary persuasion to cast us into ridicule by misrepresentation — we are not in the business of engrossment in juvenile fantasies of armed uprisings now or in the near future which are just about as crazy as the dreams of ballot box victory by those of a contrary persuasion. If there is to be any future whatsoever for Aryan civilisation, the time will come for the physical seizure of state power by our people, be certain of it as the only way of acquiring that state power, but that time is nowhere near. That time will only arrive by way of sufficient, preparatory undermining of the present system, which will take a long time and an immensity of effort to accomplish, and to which all attention and resources must from now on be devoted in place of the waste on futile, political parties.

What has to be grasped is that, appropriate to present conditions and our present cicumstances in those conditions, the need of the day is for guerilla activities. Open and frontal confrontation, as with marches and other conventional demonstrations and public meetings and the canvassing and picketing of electioneering,play into the hands of the far more numerous forces of the enemy, giving the big the chance to overwhelm the small, and which may show the bravery of the latter, but also most certainly shows its tactical stupidity.

At this point, preparatory to examining what needs to be done in place of the party game, we should be reminded of our opening definition of our objective. This is the pursuit of power in all its forms contributory to the salvation, upliftment and prosperity of the Aryan peoples.

This means that we have at the start to break free from the mental confinement of conventional politics whereby political power is seen as singularly synonymous with state power, and thus the matter alone of attaining the power to form a government of the state with the ensuing power to arrange the society of that state as desired. Power exists wherever the opportunity and the capacity to implement National-Socialism is to be found, and it is our job to identify and utilise all such forms of power in the outcome of a comprehensive study of the subject. This totality of perception of power accords with our totality of perception of our cause.

FORMS OF POWER TO PURSUE

In this we are brought, firstly, to recognise the most basic power of all: that of the individual to conduct his or her personal life as a fulltime, fully developed National-Socialist, daily living the National-Socialist way, and thus detaching himself or herself as far as possible from the society and life of Democracy. Here we come up against a distinguishing defect of the nationalist party which is that, so accomodating to the human products of Democracy, so intent on reaching out in electioneering to those products, most of its members in the pursuit of state power lack the understanding and application of this personal power. They babble incessantly about what they will do to put the state right when they win at the ballot box, all the time showing their sheer inability to put themselves and their families right. They cannot even govern their own homes and bring up their own children properly, let alone change the country for the better.

In so far as power comes through knowledge, the study — both by individuals on their own and by specialising teams — of everything pertaining to our struggle from the extent of our racial heritage to the workings of the enemy state and the enemy forces, as a prelude to successful action against that state and those forces, is a vital aspect of the pursuit of power. The systematic engagement in this prerequisite for success in that pursuit has to be a distinction of the purposeful and effective elite in contrast to the ignorant and impotent amateurs of the political party who regard vote-chasing as the be-all and end-all of political life.

Power in the form of influence exists in the ability of specialist teams to perform spectacular, propaganda operations which achieve an impact out of all proportion to the effort expended, and which is far beyond that of the customary propaganda of a political party. This is to be achieved through the combination of a highly imaginative selection of daring targets and the highly competent preparation and execution of operations by well-organised and well-trained personnel.

Here, contrary to the political party with its electioneering, the purpose is not to try to solicit the votes and the membership of the public at large, but specifically to stimulate discontent with and disruption of the system, creating sympathy for rebellion as preparation for the day when a seizure of state power becomes feasible because of the break down of the system. Come that day, the public will then at last become of real importance, not as active participants in the actual seizure, which will be the highly specialised task of the Vanguard, but, beyond mere abstention from active opposition, as sympathetic suppliers of auxiliary help. In this way and to this extent the consent of the people, however tacit, is ultimately needed, and therefore all along to be encouraged.

SABOTAGE THE SYSTEM!

Major, even decisive, power exists in the ability of specialist teams with the necessary aptitude, knowledge and training to strike at the delicate and vulnerable workings of the present system, inflicting serious damage contributory to its desired break down. This break down, which alone can provide the opportunity for the seizure of state power — break through only coming through break down — is not something simply to be waited for as the culmination of the inherent strains and defects of the system, however important they are as factors to be taken advantage of. Contrary to those who realise that only a break down can bring a break through, but then treat it as something which they can only wait for as bystanders, so that their realisation becomes an excuse for inaction, a break down is something which has to be brought on through the constant application of acts of sabotage, impeding and dislocating the machinery of government.

This conception of power through sabotage is most definitely not some facile and fanciful notion devoid of practicality and efficacy. It is an unconventional one of high potentiality meriting the most careful consideration. Among so much else, it includes, as a mild but nevertheless worthy form, the sabotage of the electoral process of Democracy, this process being vital to its Great Pretence. In place of participation in this process, contributory to its continuation, involved in the electioneering of nationalist parties, we have to urge strict abstention through the message of "Don't Vote!"

Alongside this imperative and invaluable disruption of the machinery of the present system, there is much scope for the disruption of enemy persons and organisations to counter their disruptive activities against us. For example, it is disgraceful that the Jewish Searchlight gang has been able for decades to continue to infiltrate nationalist parties and National-Socialist organisations, molest their members, and bring pressure to bear on owners of halls and hotels to refuse or to cancel bookings. Appropriate Vanguard personnel should be quite quickly capable of putting this gang out of business, and keeping them out. Likewise for another example, it is disgraceful that the impudent Asian, Ameer Anwar, who desecrated and destroyed the Rudolf Hess memorial in Scotland several years ago, has been allowed to go unpunished ever since.

Activities here indicated are all necessarily covert ones, and one rule which has to be stressed and stressed is that covert and overt activities and personnel must never be mixed for the most obvious reason of security. Having established this firm rule for the Vanguard, it can be mentioned that, strictly for those who have no intention now or in the future of engaging in covert activities, one highly purposeful, overt activity open to such Vanguard personnel, and which in its exercise of a form of power is not to be ignored as unworthy in comparison to covert activities, is the promotion of one form or another of National-Socialist community. Therein, National-Socialism can be put into practice on a small scale as far as possible, the community resembling a National-Socialist state in miniature, and in this constituting some seizure of power from Democracy.

Some of the alternatives to electioneering in the party game have now been briefly mentioned here to show that such exist. They and others will be examined in more detail in parts of "The Way Ahead" directly following this one. All of them require an elite, a Vanguard, as the one and only, competent form of organisation for their implementation.

BNP COMPROMISES ON JEWS. With electioneering comes compromise, as shown in this issue's main article. Further illustrating this, the BNP Spearhead (Feb., 1997, P.3) has an editorial statement rejecting "hostility to Jews simply on the grounds of their Jewishness" and stating "When we oppose the big Jewish interests, we do so not on grounds of what they are, but on grounds of what they do." This is a rejection of the racial standpoint basic to National-Socialism which holds that it is because of what they are that Jews do what they do, being by nature injurious to our race and nation. Talk only of opposing "big Jewish interests" implies that the rest of Jewry is acceptable as citizens and as members of the party.

HOLOCAUSTOPHILIA

by

Brander C. Kitchin

Here we go again! Will it never end? This has got to be the most incredibly successful money-raising fraud in world history. Now, according to an Associated Press release in July, 1996, two Jewish Senators have given one million dollars of taxpayers money to their brother-under-the-skin, Stephen Spielberg, producer of the most egregious hate-fiction film of the century, "Schindler's List." For this little million dollar endorsement, Spielberg, who already has added more than enough to the horror of Hollywood in the estimation of many, plans to add to the horror of the 'Holocaust Myth' by talking to 'survivors of the holocaust' whose number has grown to the legion of Jewish ethnicity. Mr. Spielberg, however, plans to speak to only about 50,000 of these. That works out to about $20 per conversation extracted just from the U.S. taxpayers alone. Only he knows how much more he might expect to collect from other sources such as the Ford Foundation which seems to have a penchant for funding projects destructive to the welfare of the nation and its Christian majority. Old Henry Ford, who held no fondness for Zion, is now affectionately known as 'The Spinner'.

Mr. Spielberg must be rubbing his little hands in glee as he chortles, "This single gift will open the floodgates to get all the funding necessary to complete this project".

Of the two Jewish Senators who concocted this heist, only one is named. He is Senator Arlen Specter, Republocrat of Pennsylvania. True to the definition of his name, he is 'something that perturbs the mind'. The name of the other is quite possibly guess-able to be one of the most odious Jewish liars in Congress. He may be one, who in this regard, actually outrivals his nearest competitor, the non-Jewish toady to the ADL (Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith) who emanates from the mis-named Southern Poverty Law Center. According to reports, it is anything but impoverished. Zion is generous to its goy minions. Why not? At 3 billion dollars a year straight out of the U.S. taxpayers wallet plus more millions in 'gifts' such as the 100 million dollars of airport detection equipment recently donated to Israel by Clinton, they can afford to throw our money around. This airport detection equipment had been destined for U.S. airports, but what's a few more dead goyim?

An article, "The Disappearing Millions", which appeared in the Spotlight Newspaper for April 29, 1996 presents officially-accepted statistics that by themselves spell 'finis' to the scam of the twentieth century. Aside from the mortality figures researched and presented by the Spotlight staff, there is a mountain of other data that refute the gold-lined holocaust fantasies of Zion.

Incidentally, holocaust wailing by Jews was a part of World War I and its aftermath. That is when the mythical-magical-money figure of 6,000,000 dead Jews was first used. In 1919 Felix M. Warburg of the Jewish banking family linked to the Rothschild empire had become chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee of American Funds for Jewish War Sufferers. He contended that "The Jews were the worst sufferers in the War. The successive blows of contending armies have all but broken the back of European Jewry and have reduced to tragically unbelievable poverty, starvation and disease about 6,000,000 souls, or half the Jewish population of the earth." Large amounts of money were collected and, it is reported, about 80% of it ended up in the hands of international bankers. The earlier financial success of the myth almost certainly encouraged its present vogue.

Few realize that Jews had been banished for cause from Europe for hundreds of years in the past. The government schools of today teach as if there were no yesterday—or, if mention of yesterday is required, it must be refurbished into something that it never was. After the Jew-managed disaster of the Treaty of Versailles which closed out a phase of the well organized plan to reduce the population of Aryan humanity, a desperate Germany's goal was simply to survive. The immediate threat to Germany's integrity were the Russian hordes gathered by the Communism of the Jewish Bolsheviks poised to destroy Western Europe and eventually all of Western Civilization. Internal sabotage by Germany's—and Western Europe's—Jewish population supported by worldwide Jewry was seen as not just an immediate threat, but European Jewry also was recognized as the long-term barrier to progress of Aryan civilization. Expulsion of all Jews from Germany and eventually all of Western Europe had, once again, become an imperative for sheer survival—and for essentially the same reasons they had been expelled before. Jews have a genius for invading and controlling the financial world to the detriment of whatever nation they parasitize. Take a good look at our own Federal Reserve System which is neither federal nor is it a reserve—for us. Gradually it is accomplishing one of Communism's most important goals: the elimination of private property, but that is another story.

Most Jews had left Germany for greener pastures during the thirties. German plans for resettlement of Jews in Madagascar were never carried out, probably because of the exigencies of the times. Food was scarce. The piles of human bodies photographed and used by the Jewish propaganda machine were almost entirely dead of typhus, starvation and allied bombing and almost all were non-Jewish. Fuel to feed the war machine was even more hard to find as the war went on. Mass incineration of millions of human bodies as claimed would have been out of the question because of shortage of the necessary fuel, if for no other reason. Considering that thoroughness marks the Teutonic temperament, it seems likely that, had extermination of all available Jews been the goal, it would have been accomplished.

On the other hand, we can get a glimpse of the Jewish proclivity for actions that really do fit the word they seem to love so much to bandy about. Under the regime of the traitorous Franklin Delano Roosevelt and one of his manipulators, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., a Jew and the son of a Jewish banker, the proposed extermination of the German people by starvation and castration of all males including children was a Jew-conceived atrocity. That is the real definition of real genocide! And then there are the tender sentiments of Israeli Cabinet Minister Shunamit Aloni. In a statement perhaps meant to excuse the Zionist holocaust against the Palestinians, he said that Israelis have "emerged from a system of religious beliefs which teaches that we are a Supreme People with the right to kill Arabs and take their property". Isn't that the real 'final solution' sought by the Zionist Jews? And this is exactly what they are doing with, of course, the help of the puppet U.S. government.

Maybe that explains why, to the Jewish people, all non-Jews are referred to as 'goyim'. I am told that 'goyim' is not a term of endearment. We are not even given the status of beloved pets of this self-styled vastly superior people. In their lingo, goyim are cattle. We, then, are just 'steaks-on-the-table'!

And maybe that explains why there are 'Holocaust Memorials' only to the Jewish dead. At last count, there are reported to be forty or more. Considering, according to the figures cited in the Spotlight article, that fewer than 200,000 Jews died in Europe of all causes—mostly starvation and typhus along with all the other hazards of that awful war—during World War II, that calculates out to about one 'Holocaust Memorial' for each 5,000 Jews!

We should be so honored! About 200 million non-Jews actually did die as the result of this awful war in which the killing power of both sides was largely indebted to the world of Zionist finance. And this figure does not include the millions of Russians who succumbed to the Jew-invented, inspired and managed juggernaut of Communism.

It was a terrible war—the most cruel and mindless in the history of humanity. The war itself was the true holocaust. But to all those millions of dead British, French, Germans, Poles, Italians, Greeks, Belgians, Dutch, Czechs, Russians, Canadians, Americans— yes, and Japanese—who were not Jews, there is no 'Holocaust Memorial and Museum'. Many times more non-Jews died than Jews and we no longer hear of them. Even cattle sacrificed to Mammon deserve some continuing recognition, don't they? How many dead non-Jews does it take to rate a holocaust memorial? All of us?

THE TRAGEDY OF GOVERNMENT SCHOOLS

By
Brander C. Kitchin

Why this continual parade, year after year, of multi-million dollar school bond issues? Why throw good money after bad? Whence comes the right to extort more money from property owners, many of whom have already paid their dues to the government 'school' system and seen their children maimed or destroyed in the process?

Government schools with the federal nose thrust into every nook, cranny and orifice of the citizen body are unconstitutional in the first place. Perhaps if they served the function the poor dumbed-down boobs are regaled to think they do, there could be some forgiveness for this violation of the Constitution.

But, they don't! There is absolutely no question that they fail to educate. While this nation spends more than any 'advanced' nation in the world, 'graduates' of the government school system rank, not only below their foreign peers, but even lower than students of some 'third world' countries. Why do government schools avoid like the plague teaching methods that were eminently successful over hundreds, even thousands of years? Outside of the failed government system, these same old methods prove every day that they still are successful with educable children.

The contrast between the performance of graduates of home schooling, private schools and, most glaring of all, the abysmal performance of graduates of government schools, is appalling. The disparity itself proves that children can be educated, but not in government schools. How can this be? Why does the government through its bastard creations, The corrupt Federal Department of 'Education', and the nefarious National 'Education' Association (NEA), the strongest union in the nation, fight in every dirty way in its armamentarium, the voucher idea? As a first step in expelling the federal government out of the business of child abuse (destruction of a mind is the most awful of all abuses), vouchers would return some of the taxpayer's hard-earned money for them to use in the rescue of their children. Furthermore, a voucher system would be fair, would work and would be consistent with our vaunted system of free enterprise

If a voucher system were in place, virtually overnight private enterprise would create a panoply of private schools catering to the educational needs of the spectrum of American families and their children. 'Crowding' would cease to be an issue. The real talents of real teachers with real texts would no longer need to be hidden virtues. Out of hiding, truth in education would be found again and the parade of bond issues designed to pauperize the property owner while destroying the minds of America's children would cease. And then, if State legislators can be made to remember their oaths of office and enforce the 10th Amendment of the Constitution, tax monies now sent to Washington to support the vast bureaucracies feeding from 'programs' forbidden the federal government by the Constitution would be retained within the State. Without an immense federal bureaucracy made up largely of blacks to support, costs—and taxes—will plummet. Once again, America can become 'the land of the free and the home of the brave'.

So why are Americans denied by 'their' government the freedom of choice our Constitution guarantees? Why do government schools exist at all? Why is a voucher system given only lip service? The answer is that the puppeteers who pull the strings of our elected and appointed politicians do not want an educated citizenry capable of thought. They do not want a distinct American culture of educated citizens aware of their heritage and their personal individuality. A polyglot mixture of cleverly divided and dumbed-down factions are easily herded.

The fatal process began in earnest in 1867 when, after the Civil War, in violation of the Constitution and in the exuberance of the rape of the South through Yankee-imposed 'Reconstruction', the Federal Department of Education was established. This ushered in the notions of 'progressive education' championed by the philosopher, John Dewey, a name that has become synonymous with the destruction of learning in this nation. This system holds that the education of the child must be directed away from the heretofore conventional categories of reading, writing, mathematics, science and history to 'individual development for social living'. Moreover, "education must be a continuous reconstruction of living experience based on activity directed by the child"! Does this sound a little like training for the Welfare State and gang warfare in the streets, in short, The New World Order? This does not require teachers, merely custodians.

Opposition to this politically-directed travesty grew as the progressive dumbing-down of younger Americans became increasingly apparent to their elders. Resistance crescendoed in the 1950's but, by then, the parasitic tapeworm of 'progressive education' had become so deeply burrowed into the entrails of society that it was able to control its host. Since then the dumbing down has become so profound and universal that opposition has virtually disappeared. What once was, is no longer remembered, let alone taught. One need only read the letters of the 'founding fathers' and others of that era to realize the reality of the dream that has been lost.

Pursuant to the 14th Amendment, itself a 'Reconstructionist' perversion of the Constitution signed improperly into being in 1868, the Supreme Court in 1954 imposed their desegregation order in violation of State's rights guaranteed by the 10th Amendment. In 1964, the close of this infamous decade saw the coup de grace administered to education in the union of Sovereign States by the so-called 'Civil Rights Act'. The transformation of schools to centers of violence and depravity for the indoctrination of America's children in the politically correct dogma imposed by the elite puppeteers was concluded.

It has been observed and known for centuries that the so-called 'races' differ profoundly in their educability. The pure African black lies at the bottom of the pool of educability with the brown floating a little above. The terrible and tragic damage that could be wrought by forced integration was no secret.

An interesting and equally tragic phenomenon tends to obscure the differences in mental performance between white people and blacks. The gene for blackness, the gene that determines the black skin color, eye color and black, kinky flat hair, is a dominant. As a consequence, we see many individuals who lack the characteristic physical features of the black—in fact, there are many with a near-Caucasian physiognomy, but with a black or dark skin. The genetic makeup of such individuals is predominantly Caucasian brought about through the egregious, though recently politically correct process of miscegenation. What this process has shown worldwide is that civilized behavior remains forever a thin and fragile veneer in these hybrid creatures, regardless of how remote the polluting genetic structure may lie.

Thus we see 'blacks' in relatively prestigious positions which, in most instances, they have attained over equally, or better qualified whites simply because of their color. This is one of the frauds of 'affirmative action'. But that is the least of the concerns. Most whites see this phenomenon interminably in the media. The Chief of Police is black with mostly Caucasian features. It is usually not consciously recognized that he is mostly white genetically with the dominant black skin. Hollywood portrays his underlings as white and stupid as they crawl to him for his sage advice.

Most whites identify blacks almost exclusively by skin color and, seeing such 'blacks' in authoritative positions, they are deceived into thinking that the teeming hordes of blacks are all alike. All that they need in order to magically become educable and civilized is more taxpayer's money and more self-esteem. And thus the government schools are using that deceit to impose a new grading system in which marks are awarded simply for the teacher's impression that the student was 'trying.' Whether or not anything was taught or learned is of no consequence. How can that be called education? It's not even training!

In order that minority dregs eventually 'graduate' with their self-esteem properly enhanced, the entire process of education had to be geared to the abilities and mentality of the least endowed. This process of 'dumbing down' to the lowest denominator was enhanced by its opposite, 'esteeming up.' If it was possible to make a pure negro think he was the equal of a Shakespeare because he could be trained to count his toes with 50% accuracy, the goal of the government education system had been reached.

Add to this spurious sense of superiority the idea that the historical failure of the negro to attain any semblance of a civilization was all because of his oppression by the white man as bruited by all media as well as the government schools, the result had to have been apparent to the elite masters who inflicted this travesty upon humanity. The net result of course, is that this blown up negro, his self-esteem inflated like a blimp, feels himself invulnerable and invincible. Just as, though less effectively, tribal 'witch doctors' in African tribal warfare are able to convince the 'warriors' of each side that the bullets of the enemy will turn to water and goaded by the elite-manufactured hatred, he feels free to let loose all his savage instincts. And that is just what he does. Violent, savage crime in this nation has increased exponentially, perticularly since the 'Civil Rights Act' of 1964 further enhanced the black and brown senses of power and hate. Washington, D.C. now largely black, is one of the most violent crime centers of the world. Incidentally, the 'Civil Rights Act' should rightly be called the 'Rights Deprivation Act' because, in practice, it removed rights from white Americans and gave them to blacks and browns. It was never meant to attain its advertised goal of a 'level playing field.'

There is another facet to the tragedy of government schools. With the process of education reduced to the level of comprehension of the lowest denominator, educable children are bored stiff. And, tragedy of tragedies, out of a combination of boredom and official encouragement, they begin to imbibe the way of life of their ineducable peers and take to drugs, indiscriminate sex, disease, crime and failure. As the government school system deliberately works to assume the role of parent, and government 'social workers' intimidate the real parents from taking the dominant role in the formation of their child's moral and social values, the American family goes down the drain. And so goes Western Civilization.

Can any reasonable intelligent American adult think that this course of events in the educational establishment which began in 19th century and crescendoes to its ugly finale at the end of the 20th is an accident? Is it sheer stupidity that drives the educational innovators to perform failed experiment after failed experiment to the overwhelmingly documented disadvantage of its victims? Absolutely not! Just as it takes genius to be alwaays successful, it takes genius to consistently fail. On the basis of chance alone, even an idiot will be right once in a while. This is a well-planned, deliberate process to destroy the dominant civilization in order that a dumbed-down and docile peasantry can be controlled totally in the New World Order. Think about it.

THE FEDERAL TOILET

By

Brander C. Kitchin

Government intrusion respects nothing. Now it even invades the nation's bathrooms and, of all places, climbs right into the nation's toilets. Well, maybe that's not so far out after all. Many feel that is exactly the place for it. But the problem is, with the feds in the bowl, the darn things won't flush! Like everything the federal mattoids touch, let alone climb into, nothing ever works properly again.

Once more 'out of its tree' and under cover of the "National Energy Policy Act" of 1994, the federal monkey has dictated that what it calls 'low-flow toilets' must be the only source of relief installed in the nation's new homes.

The feds are 'out of their tree' because the U.S. Congress has absolutely no Constitutional right to even consider legislating such an act unless it limits any authority stemming from the Act to the District of Columbia, the Solomon Islands and federally-owned-by-purchase buildings and installations in the several Sovereign States. Because such an act is an invasion of the rights of the Sovereign States, Congress is forbidden by the Constitution to undertake such legislation, let alone allow some federal bureaucrat to stop picking his nose long enough to come up with some regulations that defy interpretation. Each Sovereign State is superior to the federal government and each citizen of each State is boss of his State. What goes into a citizen's toilet unless the toilet is in a federal building or installationis none of the feds business. Well, not quite. If some enterprising individual attempts to market the product in interstate commerce, then a case might be made, but only at the state border and only the packaged product.

Back to the great federal toilet caper. Their regulations limited their new toilet standards to a maximum of 1.6 gallons per flush. Supposedly this was going to save water thereby diminishing the amount of secondarily-treated sewage that seeps into the nation's aquifers. Better ideas abound, but better ideas seem never to seep into the federal bureaucratic brain. The 1.6 gallons doesn't do the job. It takes two to three flushes to do the job. Meanwhile, someone has to stand by while the tank fills so he can press the lever again.

The net result? Not only is more water wasted, but time is wasted also. But that's not all. Its a plumber's delight! Many people, in the dead of a dark night, have a plumber take out the federally-designed junk and re-install an old-style, workable model. The federally-imposed 'solution' to the problem of water shortages and polluted aquifers has made the problem worse and created new problems along the way.

Doesn't this sound familiar? Can anyone name a single instance where a government-designed and imposed 'solution' has failed to worsen the problem is was supposed to solve and which, at the same time, failed to create additional problems along the way? This is the same old Hegelian dialectic which the federal government adopted long ago.

Think about it just a little. Is it reasonable that any organism can consistently make wrong decisions and take wrong actions out of sheer stupidity and incompetence? Even an idiot isn't going to be wrong all the time. Once in a while, just as a matter of chance, he's going to do something right! Being wrong all the time, like being always right, takes genius. Ergo, federal 'wrongness' has to be deliberate.

But why? Cui bono? Who benefits? Think about it! The end result of federal process as practiced is an infinity of 'problems', real or perceived. This means government involvement in everythingeven your toilet! This means dependence upon government which leads straight to total government control. Control by federal government means that the principles upon which this nation of Sovereign States was founded have been destroyed.

That is the road which already we have traveled too far. It ends at tyranny. Tyranny is slavery!

THE ANTI-HUMANS

by O. Ascu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Corneliu Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti-Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. Rosenberg at Nuremberg, An Assessment

(a fragment of a work in progress)

By

Guillermo Coletti

"You should seek your enemy, you should wage your war, a war for your opinions. And if your opinion is defeated, your honesty should still cry triumph over that!"

Thus Spoke Zarathustra
Friedrich Nietzsche

The Defeat of Europe

At the end of the Second Great War, the Old World, the land of our ancestors, found itself devastated by years of war, hunger, diseases and the violent deaths of tens of millions of Aryans, whose fates so ungratefully go ignored today, outweighed by sentiments arisen from the Zionist myth of the six million. The saying "one man's loss is another man's gain" could not have had a better opportunity to prove itself true. As millions of Europeans swallowed the bitter taste of defeat and destruction, in cities across the Atlantic jubilant people celebrated what synthesized the triumph of the modern over the eternal; the struggle of our forefathers had just been smashed by the brute force of soulless materialism. And in New York city, on its famous Wall Street, Jewish financiers planned the future state of affairs that was to rule the world up until our days.

Jewish WarMongering

The war that Judea had declared against Germany in 1933, pompously announced on the front page of London's Daily Express on March 24, 1933, had come to an end. "We knew that the Jewish high finance had declared war against Germany with all its subject powers, for today's Germany had first of all, and for all peoples, visibly broken the dictatorship of the Jewish Stock Exchange lords ...", wrote Alfred Rosenberg in his article "Europe's Revolution", published in Völkischer Beobachter in its May 12, 1940, edition. By 1945 victory had been delivered to the temples of the Stock Exchange, ironically, by Aryans.

As if a forecaster of terrible times to come, Feodor Dostoyevski had said, before the First World War, that "now comes the age of great wars and revolutions. From them will emerge as victor the international Jewish banker".

On his article "Jewish world politics", published in June 2nd., 1924, Rosenberg wrote: "On 10 June, 1895, the founder of political Zionism, Theodor Herzl, wrote in his diary that 'the next European war cannot harm us, but only promote us because all Jews will carry their property and possessions over in security; moreover we will already therein speak at the conclusion of peace as moneylenders and aim at advantages of recognition by the ways of diplomacy'. 'Carried over in security' is today some two thirds of the entire gold of the world. In the treasures of Wall Street Jews lies the blood of twelve million white men traded into metal! That is the result of the most enormous world war, which has actually not harmed the Jews but "only promoted" them. Entire villages, entire cities, (...) entire provinces are destroyed and buried by poisonous grenades. The most beautiful monuments of ancient European culture have fallen there beyond recovery. Millions endure unspeakable misery. But no nation has become free!". The Jew who Rosenberg referred to, Theodor Herzl, the founder of political Zionism, is today studied with utmost reverence in educational establishments in Western countries.

After the debacle of the Axis, Europe witnessed an unprecedented event: it was the judicial procedure popularly known as the Nuremberg Trial, conducted by an International Military Tribunal that brought together Americans, Russians, Frenchmen and Englishmen, to sit simultaneously as judges and prosecutors. Bolshevism and Capitalism, which up until the beginning of World War II had maintained an appearance of disparity, were now embraced, enjoying the glory of military victory over a defeated German people. Their vanquished enemies, in sharp contrast to the principles of Universalism and Egalitarianism adopted by the governments of Bolshevik Russia and the America of the New Deal, epitomized the concept of the nationstate and the preservation of ethnic traditions, before a rapidly globalizing new economic and industrial order.

Opinion of an Early Revisionist

When addressing the question of the Nuremberg Trial and the last days of the War, proper credit must be given to a very courageous early revisionist mind: Mr. Maurice Bardeche. This Frenchman who fought the German occupation of his homeland, a former member of the Resistance, released in 1947 his book Nuremberg or The Promised Land. This particular book, unfortunately, at least to my knowledge, not yet available in English, has been one of the greatest admitted influence for historians such as Paul Rassinier and Robert Faurisson. From this book the following words may help us understand the devastation and misinformation, all too common in those days.

"(..) I stupidly believe in the truth. I also believe that she always ends up triumphant on top of everything, even in spite of the image that of us has been created. (..) The forgery invented by the Resistance has already given us that proof."

"If the propaganda of the democracies had lied during three years, on matters concerning ourselves, if it has masqueraded everything that we have done; should we believe it when it talks about Germany? Hasn't the history of the occupation been falsified as well as it has presented a false image of the French government? (..) Shouldn't we ask ourselves, if the same revision doesn't need to be made over the condemnation that was pronounced by the same judges at Nuremberg? Isn't it honest at least, isn't it necessary to propose this question? If the judicial action that has hit thousands of Frenchmen is an imposture, what proof do we have that the sentences given to thousands of Germans isn't also the same? Do we have the right to disengage ourselves? Will we tolerate that, in this time, thousands of men suffer and revolt when seeing us avoid their testimonies, in front of our cowardice? (..) They reject the straight jacket with which we have attempted to silence their voice and their past; they know that our newspapers lie, they know that our films lie, that our writers lie, they know and they will never forget it. Should we let fall upon us those looks of contempt that they so justifiably throw us? The whole history of this war has to be redone, we know that. Will we deny our contribution to the truth?" "We have seen these men [the Germans] installed in our homes and in our cities; they have been our enemies and, what's even more cruel, that have been masters in our own homes. This doesn't take from them the right that all men have to truth and justice, the right to the honesty of other men. They have fought with courage, they have suffered the fate of a war that they have accepted; today their cities are destroyed, they live in caves among ruins, they own nothing. Like beggars they live of what the victor gives them, their sons die and their daughters are the bounty of the foreigner; their misery surpasses anything that could have been imagined. Will we deny them bread and salt? And if those beggars we outlaw were men like us? If our hands were not cleaner than their hands?; if our conscience were not lighter than their conscience?; if we had been mistaken? And what If we had been lied to?

"It is upon this sentence without appeal that the victors command us to found our dialogue with Germany and, more likely, to reject it."

Rosenberg, a Dedicated Patriot

Of all the men accused in the first Nuremberg Trial, one, Alfred Rosenberg, embodied the philosophy of National Socialism more deeply than any of the other defendants. During his years of service to Germany and to National Socialism, Rosenberg had served as Minister to the Occupied Eastern Territories and as chief National Socialist theoretician (the latter has caused Rosenberg to acquire philosophical recognition). That condition, his responsibility on the ideological field, could not have been overseen by the victors in the politically charged trial. Even the choice of venue, Nuremberg, appears today as an act of confrontation to the German Reich, since this was the city regularly used for the party rallies of the NSDAP (Nationalsozialistiche Deutsche Arbeiterpartei).

Alfred Rosenberg was perhaps the most misunderstood of all the people who had a position of relevance in the process of decisionmaking in Germany, during the years of the III Reich. Frequently criticized by party comrades, as well as political outsiders, and the target of adverse comments in Germany and abroad, the work of Rosenberg stands today defiant to the passing of time. Upon its release in December 1936, half a million copies of Rosenberg's magnum opus, The Myth of the 20th Century, acquired distribution in Germany almost immediately. This volume, described by its author as "an evaluation of the spiritualintellectual confrontations of our age", was so rich in historical and philosophical background, it moved many intellectuals to wonder whether there actually were as many readers as there were books sold. By covering a wide range of topics and events, from Ancient to Contemporary History and from Hinduism and Buddhism to Western philosophy, The Myth ... remains a complex book, doubtfully suitable for the uninitiated. His book The Myth ..., many of his articles and written transcriptions of many of his speeches, are currently available in most European languages, while compilations of some of his most remarkable speeches and essays have been translated and published even into Arabic, for distribution in Middle Eastern countries. For the young National Socialist minds of today, the philosophy that he embraced has survived and grown, in spite of the censorship that surrounds it and the political ostracism that endures. And along with the survival and growth of the National Socialist outlook on life, Rosenberg is today one of its guiding lights.

Nordicism, PanEuropeism and Christianity

When the topic of Rosenberg and his most controversial opinions are discussed, directly two items become material: Rosenberg's clear and determined Nordicism and his firm antiChristian views. Although many National Socialist scholars have chosen to refer to his views as simply nonChristian, it wouldn't be accurate to continue that opinion, since many of his writings are strong indictments of Christianity as a whole, of a Nietzchean caliber. Rosenberg's uncompromising Nordicism might have put him in a peculiar position with many of his countrymen and comrades; it must be remembered that the population of Germany is not composed solely of Norsemen and that Germans of Alpine background are not only numerous but have also been a crucial element in the development of German Culture. In a broader spectrum, this was a partial manifestation of a very well marked division among National Socialists of that time, those who supported PanGermanism and the advocates of PanEuropeism. It is, however, a mystery whether Rosenberg's outlook on the subdivisions of Aryans remained unchanged all the way until after the end of the war. It is very clear that the SS and the WaffenSS have arrived to the conclusion that all Caucasian men have a common fate: "The European peoples have only one choice if they want to save their existence: to see what they have in common and to stand up for it." (from an issue of the SS Leitheft, official WaffenSS periodical). Perhaps Rosenberg's attitudes towards nonNordics were modified by the end of the War, after witnessing that the last defense of Berlin was provided by volunteers of French origin from the Charlemagne division of the WaffenSS.

Justice by the Victors

At the aftermath of World War II, the life of Alfred Rosenberg was no longer depending on the outcome of military hostilities, but on the proceedings of the International Military Tribunal in Nuremberg. The socalled Nuremberg Trial stands today alone in history as a visible separation of might and right, a trial in which the victorious forces were simultaneously prosecution and judges. This was the first time in recorded history that entire governmental organizations were tried in a criminal proceeding, by enemy foreign occupational forces. By using collective indictments, and eventual convictions, against groups and organizations of the III German Reich, the Allies aspired to have in their hands the power to punish, ultimately even with death, any member of these groups, solely because of membership. The groups and organizations in question were the government of the Reich, the SS (Die SchultzStaffeln), the SD (Der Sicherheitsdienst), the SA (Sturmabteilung), the Gestapo and the High Command of the German Armed Forces. The ones which were eventually declared criminal were the Gestapo, the SS and the SD. The charges that led to the criminalizing of these entities and all the individual defendants were:

a) crimes against the peace;
b) war crimes;
c) crimes against humanity.

Additional charges were added, varying from defendant to defendant. In the case of Rosenberg, those charges were "looting", "plundering" and "slavery". The time frame adjudicated for these alleged offenses was established as: "The first acts of aggression referred to in the indictment are the seizure of Austria and Czechoslovakia, and the first war of aggression charged in the indictment is the war against Poland, beginning on September 1, 1939" [Official Transcript of the Int. Mil. Trib., August 31, 1946, p. 16920]. The first of the Nuremberg Trials lasted from October 1945 to October 1946 and, although International Law at that time mandated for international trials to be conducted by representatives of nations neutral to causes in question, in this case the judges were supplied by England, France, Russia and the US, the same nations staffing the prosecution teams.

Attorneys for the Defense Speak

The conditions under which the attorneys for the defendants had to prepare their cases were less than ideal and, by all means, inferior in resources to those used by the prosecution. Years after the culmination of the trial, many of these attorneys wrote articles and essays on the subject. What follows are some of their opinions.

Dr. Carl Haensel, chief Counsel for the SS: "Suspicion could arise insofar as the proceedings could be looked upon as a retaliation of the victors, because the Tribunal consisted of neither a representative of the defeated Germany nor a representative of a neutral nation." [The Nuremberg Trial Revisited, by Carl Haensel, De Paul Law Review, Spring/Summer 1965, p. 258]. Similar feelings of discontent on procedural matters have been expressed by other defense counsels.

Dr. Herbert Kraus: "If judgments based only on law in force had followed, the guilty parties could not have complained ... it is particularly unfortunate that only representatives of the four great world powers sat on the bench," (Dr. Herbert Kraus, Chief Counsel for Hjalmar Schacht, The Nuremberg Trial of the Major War Criminals: Reflections After Seventeen Years, De Paul Law Review, Spring/Summer 1965, p. 247). In the same article there is another very interesting passage: "I have in my possession a poem of one of the defendants, which expresses these sentiments clearly. Translated (from German to English) it reads as follows:

Legal Ascertainment

They administered law quite strangely
And held a queer trial too:
Because we broke a law,
Which they invented new;

But for those who break it now
It's in force and real;
Us: they could found 'guilty' only
Under postfactum law ..."

Dr. Otto Kranzbuhler: "Since the French Revolution it has been considered a basic requirement of true administration of justice that the separation of powers is strictly observed in legal proceedings. In Nuremberg, in the International Military Tribunal, it appeared that two of the legislators of the London Charter, that is the American, Jackson, and a Britisher, Sir David Maxwell Fyffe, acted as chief prosecutors, this as part of the executive power, while two other legislators of the London Charter, a Frenchman, Falco, and a Russian, Nikichankow, reappeared at Nuremberg in the capacity of Judges. By this personal overlapping, the doctrine of separation of powers was grossly neglected and thus the authority of the administration of justice greatly impaired from the very outset." "The conservative definition of a war crime certainly would not provide a sufficient basis for the prosecution of statesmen or public officers ... or ... members of the legal profession ... or, even less, the prosecution of industrialists ... (an) enormous step was taken in Nuremberg ... The supposition underlying this step was the recognition of a completely new doctrine; the doctrine that international law is binding upon the individual citizen. One can read in any textbook on international law that the law of nations is the law regulating the relations between sovereign states." [Chief Counsel for Grand Admiral Karl Dönitz, "Nuremberg Eighteen Years Afterwards", De Paul Law Review, p. 338].

Otto Pannenbecker, Chief Counsel for Wilhelm Frick, Minister of the Interior of Germany, wrote in his 'The Nuremberg WarCrimes Trial', published in Volume XIV, Number 2, 1965, issue of De Paul Law Review: "A much more serious objection, however, is raised by the indictment of planning, preparing and waging a war of aggression which was lodged against the defendants. Such an indictment constitutes a violation of laws existing in constitutional civilized states. These laws ensure that nobody shall be charged with a crime not already subject to legal punishment at the time of perpetration. This axiom, existing in all civilized countries, says that penal laws are not permitted to be applied retroactively."

This first trial was followed by a total of twelve processes against more than 170 defendants. The irregularities, peculiarities and arbitrariness of these processes are frequent topic of review by History and Law scholars worldwide.

Observations on Legal Procedure

When Alfred Rosenberg took the witness stand on April 1946 as a defendant, he must have known that the possibilities of this trial ending with an impartial judgement were narrowing. The owner of a sharp and analytical mind, the basis of this first Nuremberg Trial, in other words, the absolute control of the victors over Prosecutors and Judges and the lack of any neutral representation, other than witnesses without much authority to speak, object to or even expose wrongs, could not have passed inadvertently in front of him. The nature of the procedures at the Nuremberg Trial still today appalls the minds of jurists, even among some of leftwing extractions. The basis of the execution of International Law that had been articulated by the same Warwinning Allied countries, was now being flagrantly ignored by them, just a few years later. The legal principle that there is no crime without the previous existence of a law detailing with precision the criminalization of the alleged violation, a principle to which all countries presenting charges against the defendants fully subscribed had been grossly violated (see Otto Pannenbecker's comment, above). The Allies exempted themselves from complying with other legal rules that are substantial part of the legal systems of their own countries, as indicated in articles 19 and 21 of the London Agreement of 8 August 1945, which held that the Nuremberg Tribunal "shall not be bound by technical rules of evidence" and "shall not require proof of facts of common knowledge, but shall take judicial notice thereof".

Some of the violations of contemporary International Law ignored the following principles applicable and valid during the 19451946 period:

it was mandated that war crimes charges be presented in front of a tribunal where no representative of either warring faction was to be represented, thus guaranteeing neutrality and fairness;

it was instructed that the same country could not participate as both Prosecution and Judge;

International Law prescribed that allegations of war crimes, or allegations of crimes committed during the exercise of a military mission ('while wearing the uniform of a country's army'), were to be reviewed by military law and personnel, in Nuremberg the Defendants were all prosecuted and judged by civilian authorities;

international treaties signed by different countries can apply only to the participating countries, consequently treaties signed only by Russia, England, the United States and France must have at no time applied to Germany, Japan or Italy;

it was, and still is, instructed that Defense counsels must have access to evidence presented by the Prosecution, which in the case of this trial did not happen.

Attorneys for the defendants found themselves denied access to United States and Russia were the Prosecution kept large amounts of evidence until hours before being presented at the Tribunal.

The US Chief Prosecutor declared during the hearing of 26 July 1946 at the Nuremberg Trial, that the IMT was simply a "continuation of the war effort of the Allied Nations" against Germany, with which they were "technically still at war", even though the enemy's political and military institutions had been crushed.

Rosenberg The Accused

On April 15, 1946, Alfred Rosenberg took the witness stand as a Defendant in Nuremberg. He was first crossexamined by Dr. Thoma, his own attorney, who stated that Mr. Rosenberg "did not participate in a conspiracy against peace" and that he had indeed "advocated respect for all races ... advocated freedom of conscience and a sensible solution of the Jewish problem, even giving certain advantages to Jews" [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 444]. Contrary to popular believe, no tangible evidence was ever presented, before, during or after the Nuremberg trials, linking Rosenberg or any other German Defendant to cases of alleged War Crimes.

After taking the procedural oath to tell the truth, Mr. Rosenberg was cited. Part of the evidence to be reviewed, was a portion of Rosenberg's writings, as follows: 'Tradition and our Present Age', 'Writings and Speeches', 'Formation of the Idea' and The Myth of the 20th Century [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 444]. The bashing of National Socialism as an ideology, however, was present on a permanent basis during the months of the trial, but it was with Rosenberg, himself a theoretician, that this practice acquired larger inquisitorial proportions.

In the early part of his testimony Rosenberg recalled his joining of the NSDAP in late 1919, shortly after meeting with Anton Drexler and Hitler, recalled his membership number, 625 [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 447]. This initial portion of the Defendant's testimony attempts to become an account of the early days of the NSDAP, the NSDAP view of the European crisis and the solutions considered to that effect, as well as the philosophical influences and foundations of Mr. Rosenberg outlook of the world, but the President of the Court did not allow the Defendant to express more than a few phrases before ordering to the attorney for the Defense, Dr. Thoma, to "confine his witness to the charges against him" [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 449]. It is quite obvious that what was on trial in Nuremberg were not merely actions, but also the philosophy of nationalism in general and National Socialism in particular. Dr. Thoma replied that devoting "some time to Rosenberg's train of thought" was necessary to "determine the motives for his actions". Dr. Thoma also argued that "since the Prosecution maintains that National Socialism was a fight against democracy, a one sided stress on nationalism and militarism, he (Rosenberg) ought now to have the opportunity to say why National Socialism supported militarism, and whether that was actually the case".

The trial continues with Dr. Thoma asking the Defendant about the charges that National Socialism preached a 'Master Race' ('Herrenrasse'). What follows is Mr. Rosenberg's full answer:

"I know that this problem is the main point of the Indictment, and I realize that at present, in view of the number of terrible incidents, conclusions are automatically drawn about the past and the reason for the origin of the socalled racial science. I believe, however, that it is of decisive importance in judging this problem to know exactly what we were concerned with."

"I have never heard the word "master race" as often as in this court room. To my knowledge, I did not mention or use it at all in my writings. I leafed through my "Writings and Speeches" again and did not find this word. I spoke only once of super humans as mentioned by Homer, and I found a quotation from a British author, who in writing about the life of Lord Kitchener said the Englishman who had conquered the world had proven himself as a creative superman ("Herrenmensch"). Then I found the word "master race" in a writing of the American ethnologist, Madison Grant, and of the French ethnologist, Lapouge."

"I would like to admit, however—and not only to admit, but to emphasize—that the word "superman" came to my attention particularly during my activity as a Minister in the East—and very unpleasantly—when used by a number of leaders of the administration in the East. Perhaps when we come to the question of the East, I may return to this subject in detail and state what position I took in regard to these utterances which came to my attention. In principle, however, I was convinced that ethnology was, after all, not an invention of the National Socialist movement, but a biological discovery, which was the conclusion of 400 years of European research. The laws of heredity discovered in the 1860's, and rediscovered several decades later, enable us to gain a deeper insight into history than many other earlier theories. Accordingly, race ..."[IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 450451]. At this point Rosenberg was interrupted by the President of the court. It is impossible to imagine what Rosenberg would have said, had he been allowed to speak further on this issue of race, but there is an indication, by referring to heredity laws and ethnology, that at least he was attempting to approach the racial question within the criminal context the Prosecution aspired to see.

Certainly the Jewish question was not absent from the testimony of Rosenberg, whether when presenting his outlook on things or when addressing the policies that the III Reich had adopted on this matter. Rosenberg observed that in the 19th century a movement of national emancipation was to be found among many Jewish leaders who were finally starting to realize that they should seek their way in their roots, namely Asia. On the same matter, Rosenberg described his attitude in the political sphere as "more radical", citing his observations and experiences in Russia and Germany as crucial and opinionshaping. Referring to post World War I days, Rosenberg stated that he "could not conceive how, at the time when the German soldiers returned, they were greeted by a Jewish university professor who explained that the German soldiers had died on the field of dishonor. I could not understand that lack of reverence could go so far." [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 452].

Rosenberg also took advantage of some questions to further the historical background on the topic of mass deportations. He mentioned the little publicized fact that "leading papers of the socalled democratic parties recognized the increase of unemployment in Germany and suggested that Germans should emigrate to the French colonies, to the Argentine, and to China" [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 452], in clear reference to the period between World War I and the III Reich. Rosenberg went on to add that "prominent Jewish people and the chairman of the Democratic Party suggested three times quite openly that, in view of the increase of unemployment, Germans should be deported to Africa and Asia." It is precisely at moments like this when Rosenberg's presence acquires larger stature. Under the pressure of being tried and prosecuted by the enemies of the German Reich, Rosenberg assumed responsibility for his ideals, rather than seeking refuge in administrative or procedural excuses. The principle of individual responsibility, which was stressed from the NSDAP leadership, manifested itself, through Rosenberg when discussing the Jewish question. A rare commodity among individuals who at one point held political office, was not absent from the lifeexperience of Rosenberg, from theoretician to defendant at Nuremberg: coherence in integrity.

The charges against Rosenberg partially arose from his duties as Minister for the Occupied Eastern Territories, the position that was proposed to him in person by Adolf Hitler on April 2, 1941. Rosenberg recalled the meeting as follows: "the Führer summoned me in the morning and explained to me that he regarded a military clash with the Soviet Union as inevitable. As reasons he quoted two points: first, the military occupation of Rumanian territory ...; second, the continual reenforcing for a long time and on a gigantic scale of the Red Army along the line of demarcation and in Soviet Russian territory generally. These facts were so striking that he had already given the relevant military and other orders and had decided to assign me as a political adviser in a decisive capacity ... On 20 April (1941) I received a preliminary task, which was to form a central department for dealing with Eastern questions and to get in touch with the highest Reich authorities concerned with these matters." [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 476477]. Although the position of Rosenberg concerning the Eastern territories had a powerfulsounding name, the truth is that the SS, crucial on the management of Eastern affairs, was at no point under his supervision. To that effect, the Führer decreed on July 17, 1941, that "Police security in the newly occupied Eastern Territories is a matter for the Reichsführer SS and Chief of the German Police" [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 483]. Nevertheless, the extent of Rosenberg's responsibilities was quite complex, since it involved the administration of areas known for their hundredsyears old conflicts and populated by ethnic groups diverse in language, religions and culture.

Special attention was given during the proceedings at Nuremberg at the issue of German policies towards Jews. He mentioned that, although he had never visited no real concentration camp, he had "heard from the foreign press all sort of derogatory atrocity reports" [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 513] and that he conveyed this to Himmler. Rosenberg recalled Himmler's response: "Why don't you come to Dachau and take a look at things for yourself? We have a swimming pool there, we have sanitary installations—irreproachable; no objections can be raised." Rosenberg gave two reasons for his refraining from visiting Dachau or other camp; he thought that if indeed something improper had been going on at Dachau it would have probably not been shown to him and, "for reasons of good taste" he "simply did not want to look at people who had been deprived of their liberty". Nevertheless, just making this comment to Himmler, Rosenberg reasoned, might have brought awareness of the nature of the rumors which were being spread.

Rosenberg made on several occasions, during his statement, parallels between some of the actions and attitudes of the Reich, and similarities with the victors. The official story of the Holocaust claims that Jews as well as Gypsies, Jehovah's Witnesses and homosexuals were targeted for removal. Indeed, Jehovah's Witnesses have been prosecuted in the United States for the same reason they have been prosecuted in the III Reich, namely, their conscientious objections to military duty. To this regard Rosenberg added; "An American chaplain has very kindly given me in my cell a church paper from Columbus [Ohio]. I gather from that that the United States, too, arrested Jehovah's Witnesses during the war and that until December 1945, 11,000 of them were still detained in camps." [IMT, Blue Series, Vol. XI, p. 513].

At the end, all efforts by Rosenberg to provide truthful background information for his thoughts and actions, proved fruitless, for he was one of the convicted Defendants. It was instructed by the Tribunal that the sentences be implemented during the night hours of October 15 and 16. The condemned spent their last hours of life under strict scrutiny; the Allies had not to allow one more Nazi escape the noose by committing suicide, as had just happened with Hermann Göring. The guards received orders to keep the prisoners in sight at all time. Eyewitnesses accounts mention that, while The Bible became the favorite last reading among the prisoners awaiting execution, Rosenberg read Die Geige, a novel by Binding. In the early morning hours of October 16 1946, at 0130, Alfred Rosenberg was removed from his cell by American Military Police personnel, who led him to his final destination. A prayer for him was offered, which he decisively rejected. Finally, this "sentence without appeal" was carried out by a John C. Woods, an American executioner from Wisconsin. Rosenberg's life came to an end by hanging.

DOES THE WEST HAVE THE WILL TO SURVIVE?

That is the obvious question posed by Jean Raspail's terrifying novel of the swamping of the White world by an unlimited flood of non-White "refugees." But there is also a less obvious and even more fundamental question: Must Whites find their way to a new Morality and a new spirituality in order to face the moral challenges of the present and overcome them? THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS is the most frightening book you will ever read. It is frightening because it is utterly believable. The armada of refugee ships in Raspail's story is exactly like the one that dumped 150,000 Cubans from Fidel Castro's prisons and insane asylums on our shores in 1980 — except this time the armada is from India, with more than 70 times as large a population. And it is only the first armada of many. If any book will awaken White Americans to the danger they face from uncontrolled immigration, it is THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To My Friends Around the World

At the beginning of 1997 I want to thank you personally from all my heart for your friendship, your regular contact and your help with encouragement and money. May the new year find us again in the center of the fight for our race and nation.

It has been a long time since I sent out letters in English. I had neither the time nor the physical strength to do it. But the press has reported about my activities more than in ten years before. I wish I could have sent all these newspaper articles with an English translation. We have hit the headlines again and again. A few items I will copy for you to give you an impression.

I was on the move most of the year, oranizing spectacular actions, speaking to big and small audiences or visiting friends in Germany and other countries. Very seldom I spent a few hours in my office. Correspondence was practically zero. And when I was at home I was completely worn out. But I think it is more important to hit the headlines than writing long letters although I love writing and wish I could be in regular contact with you.

The climax of the year was the publication of my 95 Theses for Germany on the occasion of Martin Luther's death 450 years ago. I handed them over personally to our State president and our Bundestagspresident during a ceremony in Luther's town Eisleben, afterwards they were printed on a full page in the big daily newspaper HESSISCH- NIEDERSÄCHSISCHE ALLGEMEINE with 450,000 circulation. For three weeks it was the main topic of this paper and it was sold out every day. We got hundreds of letters and phone calls, 95 percent positive or even enthusiastic and only very few (mostly anonymous) negative reactions. It was as though the whole nation has been waiting for a message like this, the good news of the end of our psychological slavery. Up to this day letters and phone calls come in daily in regards to this subject.

Apart from the publication in the paper 50,000 leaflets have been distributed all over the country, and many doors of churches and synagogues habe been decorated with big posters of the Theses. Now they have been translated even into Japanese. Our good friend Hans Schmidt has organized this stroke of genius. Now we need a translation into Russian to inform Lebed and Zhirinovsky and others that there are Germans with a normal mind, not imbued with a guilt complex.

Our next big stroke was the attack on the anti-Wehrmacht exhibition produced by two communists and financed by the cigarette multy millionaire Reemtsma. A friend and I sprayed our protest onto the big posters of this exhibition which defames all Gerrnan soldiers as criminals. I was sentenced to 4,500 marks in court for damage. But every one of four court sessions was reported by televison and the press. With the result that the whole German public was alerted, and now all veteran societies and the Bundeswehr are alarmed and are planning to do something against this affrontery. Hundreds have already demonstrated in Nürnberg and Karlsruhe. And on 1 March a huge demonstration will be held in Munich with over a thousand people. 50 busses are ordered already.

On 17 March will be the hearing in the upper court in Erfurt because both, prosecutor and myself, appealed the sentence. The prosecutor wants me behind bars and I want to accuse the justice system for not only allowing the defamation of our soldiers but even protecting these communist liars. I am preparing a huge demonstration in front of the court.

When I was released from prison in 1990 I made the decision to concentrate on one thing only: to liberate my people from this develish guilt complex and give them a new faith again, the old faith of our forefathers, to give them pride and moral strength. And I asked God to give me another ten years for public activities until the end of this century.

Give a man a faith and you make him ten times stronger. Give a nation a faith and she will be invincible. But how do you do it? It certainly is not enough to hand out leaflets or write articles, it is not enough to found a party or an organization. It needs courageous action. Unless you do something courageous you will never find a faith. And you cannot give faith to others.

For me it meant to go out on the street and proclaim my conviction and stand for it. To go where the stones are rough, where others shy back, where I hesitated to go myself. It meant not only to draw up 95 Theses with my conviction and hand them out to my friends, but to make them known to the government, the church leaders, the press. It meant: if my nation is calumniated and downgraded to stand up and attack the liars publicly. Which I did with the communist exhibitors and with the Jew boy Goldhagen. And I will do again and again until others join me and thus give hope to our nation that there are still men to take up the fight, that a nation is not lost as long as there are ten men to stand up and be counted.

The top Jew in Germany, Ignatz Bubis, has accused our president and the speaker of parliament for not having done anything against my 95 Theses. They should have done something although my writings are not punishable, as the General Attorney stated. But Bubis demanded: whatever Roeder may write — the authorities have the duty to do something against it. That means: I am the most dangerous, the most hated man to the Jews in Germany. What an honor! I took the opportunity in January when Bubis had his 70th birthday to congratulate him. I wished him the tranquillity to meet me and challenged him to argue with me on a TV show.

Everybody thinks that this will never happen. The Jews and their puppets are determined to keep us silent. I know the situation. But this is where faith comes in.

Why should we accept facts as they are? Why not believe in miracles? Why not believe in a power to change the course of history? I do! I know: God is with us, He loves those who expect miracles from Him.

Believe it or not: one day after Bubis' birthday the German TV came to me on the Knüll for an interview. They did not know anything about my letter to Bubis but they interviewed me for two hours and wanted to know everything about my international activities, especially my connections with America. They had just filmed American groups of opposition and want to give a report of movements discontent with their governments. Three young boys, open-minded, down to earth and disgusted with the suppression of free speech in our country and elsewhere.

I am not so silly to believe that there will be a positive report about us but the sheer fact that TV is interested in what we are doing is a miracle in itself. And even a negative report is better than silence. Adolf Hitler, in MEIN KAMPF, once wrote: If I open the newspaper in the morning and I am not attacked by the Jew press I know that I have not done my duty the day before. Better to be hated than to be ignored. The day will come soon when we can proclaim our conviction from the roof tops.

Yours in the fight, as ever,
Manfred Roeder, Haus Richberg

Dear Mr. Dietz:

The February issue of Liberty Bell was first-rate. I particularly enjoyed Bruce Campbell's splendid article re the Aryans. It was well researched. He was kind enough to mention in his article that I had seen the Tarim Basin mummies before Alan Alda and Professor Mair had viewed them. I must confess that at the time, January 1986, I was unaware of the true significance of what I saw. Thanks to Dr. Mair et al, and to Bruce and his wife, we are now learning the true worth of these incredible finds. We have only heard the beginning of "Les Aryans." I would like to add that I heartily agree with Bruce's conclusions re the Jewish religions and the harm they do. See the last paragraphs of his article. We as a race or people will never solve our problems until we give up celestial crutches and admit we are of this world, not some mythical Beulal Land in the sky.

Hans Schmidt's letter to the Smithsonian was a marvel of compelling argument against Robert Shnayerson's sly, evil propositions carried in the October 1996 issue of the Smithsonian magazine. Hans, you "done" good!

A letter by Kevin Alfred Strom appeared in the February issue. He took some slams at Harold Covington who is the General Secretary of the revitalized "National Socialist White Peoples Party"; the party of the late, great Lincoln Rockwell.

While I agree Mr. Strom has some basis for being peeved, if events occurred as he outlined them in his letter, I, nevertheless, think his peevishness over such a minor point is a bit much. This constant backbiting, bickering and fits of jealousy within our so-called "movement" leaves me cold...real cold. We're too damned few to waste time and resources pursuing these stupid, little "Oh, I'm just so sensitive" games.

In defense of Covington and the NSWPP, I would suggest his is the only group that has a plan of action for the future. What do other "racial" groups offer? Do they serve up anything other than well-written moans about how terrible things are with Jews and Negroids so dominant? Does that interesting, well-written publication, Instauration, present a plan of action for a future white society? Does the National Alliance? Does Mythbusters? Does any other white, racialist publication or organization? I can't think of one. Enlighten me if such do exist.

All the whining in the world about how bad things are will get us nowhere. There has to be goals set; plans laid; action taken. The only form of government tried in the last 1000 years that made ra- cial, moral, economic, ecological, rational sense was Adolf Hitler's National Socialism. A modified Third Reich is called for now! It is a political system that came into existence through the ballot box in Germany; and that is the way it should become reality here. Hitler wanted no coups after the aborted try in Munich. Lets be perfectly legal; no criminal acts whatsoever! Out in the open with our plans and arguments. Coups and revolutions are self-destructive. When conditions get hopeless enough, a majority of the people will vote NS into power. Racial National Socialists have as much classical right as any other group to sell their political program; their political ideal. The NS program for government, and Colin Jordan's Ten Commandments for the code that National Socialists live by, are the nucleii around which we should be gathering. Look! Racial National Socialism has great appeal. Great appeal, indeed! Why do you think Jews, liberals, negroids et al soil their pants every time NS messages surface? If NS ideas and visions had no worth; no appeal, then that lot wouldn't waste a yawn over them.

The USA is approaching a condition similar to that of Weimar Germany of the twenties. The Jews are already in the driver's seat here as they were there then. Aryan America is also suffering negroidal excesses today as did the South during those terrible years of reconstruction. So...the time has arrived to hone NS theories for governing; to take part in "sandbox" exercises to test those theories, and to build a manpower elite who will be the governing cadre for that coming glorious NS state we all long to see. So, come on! Let's coalesce! Now!

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigous academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

BOOK REVIEW

By
Charles E. Weber

Danger: Extremism / The Major Vehicles and Voices on America's Far-Right Fringe, a Publication of the Anti-Defamation League. (823 United Nations Plaza, New York, NY 10017, 1996.) XII+308 Pages. $19.95 + $3.90 postage and handling.

The powerful, well-financed Anti-Defamation League, founded in 1913, has its national office at a prestigious address in New York, an office in Washington and no less than thirty regional and satellite offfices in various parts of the United States, as well as offices in Jerusalem and Canada. These offices are listed on the very last page of the book. The huge financial resources of the ADL are obvious from this list. By stark contrast, the financial resources of the individuals and organizations which the ADL attacks in this book are minuscule by comparison. The activities of the ADL seem analogous to using a gun designed for killing elephants to shoot a squirrel. Further evidence of the lavish financial backing of the ADL is the extensive listing of its publications that have appeared just since 1988 (pages 294-295). Earlier editions of Danger: Extremism appeared in 1983 and 1988.

One of the obvious objectives of this book is causing Jews in the United States to fear and distrust their host population and thus making them willing to contribute to Jewish organizations such as the ADL. Another obvious objective is promoting ethnic solidarity and racial awareness amongst Jews in the United States, whose ethnic identity is being diluted by intermarriage and other factors.

In the United States Jews and their well-financed organizations have an almost unbelievable power and influence, perhaps greater than those in any other country in the recent history of the world with the possible exception of Soviet Russia, where Jews played a devastating role against the Aryan middle and upper classes as well as against the most productive farmers. President Clinton is one of the most obvious manifestations of that power and influence. He has appointed two Jews to the Supreme Court, thus causing that powerful body to have a 22% Jewish membership. The Departments of State, Treasury, Defense and (especially ironically) Agriculture are now headed by Jews appointed by Clinton. A host of Jews are also in key positions of the Federal government. (See "Clinton's Kosher Krowd" elsewhere in this issue.) Perhaps the chief sources of Jewish power in the United States are derived from virtually complete control of motion picture production and network television. Jews are now grossly overrepresented in the United States Congress. Some of the most prestigious American universities now have faculties that are strongly disproportionally Jewish. Jewish power over lower levels of public education is manifested in the imposing of "Holocaust" courses and other forms of anti-Aryan indoctrination upon intellectually defenseless school children. Jews have such great political influence that they are now blackmailing a whole Aryan land, Switzerland, by means of false or exaggerated claims against its respected banking industry. A striking, highly visible manifestation of Jewish power is the Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, a huge structure located near the small, modest memorials to American soldiers who died in distant lands supposedly fighting for the welfare of the United States. This museum will no doubt stand for centuries as a constant reminder of Jewish political power in our times.

Is it so astonishing that there have been a few courageous, patriotic Aryan Americans who have reacted negatively to Jewish power and its record of misuse, corruption and cruelty? The generally small-circulation periodicals which oppose the power of Jewish organizations and the misuse of that power are almost analogous to a boy with a peashooter trying to stop a tank. However, the fact that the boy has the courage to oppose the tank has its significance. There is also the consoling thought that the microscopic end of a pin can cause a huge, overinflated baloon to collapse.

Let us now turn to the contents, general nature and organization of Danger: Extremism. The book commences with an introduction (pages V-XII). In it are references to various current developments such as the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City on 19 April 1995. It is suggested that this act was inspired by The Turner Diaries, "a racist and anti-Semitic fantasy novel." Other concerns expressed in the Introduction are the growth of militias, the influence of David Duke and the pro-Aryan use of the Computer Internet. ("One posting on a hate group Web site, at minimal expensive, can simultaneously reach a potentially unlimited audience around the world.") in reddish-purple ink. These chapters, typically three or four pages in length, attack 59 individuals (pages 1-175). There then follow attacks on 36 pro-Aryan organizations (page 176-286), some of which are weak, divided, obscure or even defunct. These attacks abound with such terms as "hate groups," "pseudo-scientific," "pseudo-intellectual," "pseudo-historical," "neo-Nazi," "Holocaust denial," "conspiracy theories," "racist," "extremism," and of course "bigotry."

Amongst the most important publishers and publications which Danger: Extremism attempts to denigrate are George Dietz (Liberty Bell), Ed Fields (The Truth At Last), Larence T. Patterson (Criminal Politics), Wilmot Robertson (Instauration), Hans Schmidt (GANPAC Brief), and Mark Weber (Journal of Historical Review). Even the restrained American Renaissance, edited by Jared Taylor, is reproached for recognizing genetically determined racial differences.

One of the most valuable features of Danger: Extremism, no matter what might have been the intentions of the authors, lies in numerous quotations taken from a wide range of pro-Aryan publications. Perhaps the compilers of the book thought that the quotations that they selected would shock readers. But do they? Many of them are, in fact, reasonable arguments and ideas with which unprejudiced, thoughtful readers could hardly disagree. Of course, the reader must bear in mind that most of the quotations are short and taken out of context.

The authors of the book boast about the damage which has been done to the Ku Klux Klan and its various splinter groups by means of litigations, in some of which the Anti-Defamation League has been a participant. They also claim that membership in such groups declined considerably. In the chapter on the Institute for Historical Review there is no mention of the fact that its offices were almost completely destroyed by arson in 1984. Such crimes demonstrate, of course, the importance and validity of revisionist history.

How should pro-Aryan activists, individuals and groups react to this book? They should consult it for the valuable information in it which surveys the promising, idealistic activities of pro-Aryan individuals and groups while bearing in mind the many unfair characterizations and statements in the book. One might even describe the book as a veritable encyclopaedia of pro-Aryan activities and thought in North America. If used properly and with an appropriate perspective this book can be used as a valuable reference work. Above all it presents encouraging evidence that at least some American Aryans are now cognizant of the threats to the survival of their race. ❑

ENVIRONMENTALISM versus IMMIGRATION:

An Aryan Overview

By

Eric Thomson

The knowledgeable Aryan observer can analyze ongoing issues from a racial perspective: is it good or bad for Whites? Once we understand that this is our only relevant question, all matters and issues fall into their proper place in the cosmos. The jews have always asked, "is it good for the jews?" This question is the basis of jewish survival and success. It is also the basis of Aryan extinction and failure. It is high time that every White should ask himself, "is this good for Whites?" before making every decision.

Is it good for Whites to have expensive addictions? To be in debt to jew banksters? To entrust our children to racial traitors and aliens? If you answer "no!" then it is up to you to start defending Our Race by defending your own Aryan interests. It is never too soon and never too late to think in terms of Our Race: "Is it good for Whites?"

We cannot afford to take Our Race for granted. We cannot afford to subordinate Aryan Survival to philosophical games and disembodied principles. Least of all should we place an alien cult of anti-Aryanism ahead of the survival of Our Race. What good are Aryan laws, Aryan ideals and Aryan inventions without Aryans?

It is the bane of Our Race that we are prone to confuse means with ends. The only end toward which we must strive is the survival of Our Race. All issues, matters, principles, philosophies, laws, religions and activities must serve the White Race. If we do not put Our Race first, the jews will continue to exterminate us with every means at their disposal, just as they have been doing for thousands of years.

The Peloponnesian Wars extinguished Aryan Greece, just as World Wars I and II may have been the death knell of Aryan Europe—and beyond. The ancient wars between Sparta and Athens and their allies were strikingly similar to the modern wars between Germany and Britain and their allies. In both genocidal conflicts, ancient and modern, the root cause was jewish gold and jewish control of Athens' and Britain's money. In both cases Our Race was enslaved and annihilated on behalf of predatory jewish money merchants. Although this was a "good" thing for jews, it was certainly not "good" for Aryans. One historical observer was given to comment about these ancient and modern wars with the epitaph, "Our Race We Slew For the Inner jew." This epitaph applies to millions upon millions of Whites who were slain by their fellow Whites for millennia and whose bones lie scattered throughout the world in unmarked and unhonored graves.

With the introduction of Christianity into White living space, Whites plunged into an internecine bloodbath of conquest and forced conversion: "baptism or death!" A short time later, goaded by Christianity, the best of Our Race was squandered in the Crusades. Then came the Protestant version of Christianity and with it, The Thirty Years' War, which killed some two-thirds of White Europeans.

The jewish strategy of 'divide and destroy' proceeded apace. Aryans were called upon to slay one another over such issues as "monarchy versus republicanism", "nationalism versus imperialism", "clericalism versus Freemasonry", et al. Jewish power grew as Aryans slew one another in defense of or in pursuit of these nebulous phantoms. As if such divisive issues were not enough to drain Our Race of its best blood, the jews added Marxism, the secular version of Christianity, to their witches' brew. Now, Aryans could be divided into many conflicting groups, including "communists versus capitalists"!

Many Aryans are baffled when they learn that there are jews at the forefront in the promoting of every issue. There are even "jewish Nazis!" Erroneously, such Aryans conclude that "there is no jewish conspiracy". These Aryans are truly baffled when they learn that one and the same jew actively supports BOTH sides of an issue, or ALL sides in a war. It is no secret that the Rothschilds and their ilk lend money to all combatants in a conflict; nor is it any secret that jew-capitalists financed jew-communists from 1917 onwards. The talmudic team of Marx and Engels promoted proletarian revolution while living like feudal barons off the profits of exploited labor. Judah Benjamin, Confederate Secretary of Treasury, had no qualms at fleeing Southern Separatism to leap into the lap of British Imperialism, where he drafted The Articles of Confederation, under which the British Crown ruled Canada. Such judeo-capitalists as Armand Hammer and the Rockefellers openly supported their supposed archenemies, the judeo-communists. Rockefeller banksters bragged in full-page ads that their Moscow H.Q. was located at Number One Karl Marx Place! I was impressed by the fact that the Soviet radio in Moscow relied upon a jew named Posner for its English broadcasts, while the U.S. radio relied on another jew named Posner for commentary on Soviet broadcasts. Were there two Posners or just one? It was hard to tell any difference.

These ostensible 'contradictions' in the jewish nature even lead some Aryans to take pity on "the poor jews" who have become paranoid and schizophrenic because of centuries of "persecution". When an Aryan thinks racially, however, these 'contradictions' vanish, for he has learned to distinguish between means and ends. The jew uses all issues to achieve his end: enhancement of jewish power. Just as a carpenter may use a saw, a drill, a plane and a hammer to achieve his desired result. When each tool has performed its task, it is set aaide and replaced by another. Politics, religions, philosophies, economic programs, et al, are simply tools which the jew picks up or discards, according to his purpose. This explains the current wardrobe change in the erstwhile Soviet Jewnion. Kosher commissars have swapped their uniforms for capitalist-style business suits. The wrapper is different, but the content remains the same.

The Aryan religious writer, Savitri Devi, noted the sudden unification of all Dark Age forces against Germany's Aryan Renaissance: judeo-christianity, judeo-communism and judeo-capitalism suddenly dropped their pretended antagonisms in an allout struggle against the Aryan Savior, Adolf Hitler. The touted differences were the sham; the reality was the eternal unity of these jewish creatures against The White Race. There is no more conflict between judeo-christianity, judeo-communism and judeo-capitalism than there is between a hammer, plane or saw! All are means, not ends, as we have noted.

I am reminded of a little chat I had with a jewess, who had chosen to sit next to me on a bus. Although she never mentioned to me that she was jewish, I can spot a jew without so much as donning a pair of those special sunglasses from that revealing movie, "They Live!" We fell into a discussion about Africa. The jewess was in favor of "Black Rule". The Blacks were the majority, so the Whites must hand over power to them and get out, she opined. I not only agreed with her, but I said the same policy should be applied here in North America. Suddenly, she became a champion of "minority rights"! I concluded by saying that the only consistency in her arguments was that she was anti-White. Thus ended the conversation. "They Live, We Sleep,"

The antagonism one would anticipate between such ostensibly contradictory policies as 'no growth', environmentalism and 'infinite growth' immigration is non-existent, to my knowledge. On the contrary, both policies are promoted by very much the same groups and individuals in the Zionist media and government, as well as the schools and universities. Only a jew-wise racialist can discern the fact that these policies are not two opposing spear points, but two prongs of a spear which is aimed at the Aryan heart. We saw it first with Zero Population Growth (ZPG). According to Zionist propaganda, this was a panacea for the world's ills in general and for the ills North America and Europe in particular. As we know, ZPG applies only to Whites, for it creates vacant living space for the hordes of colored invaders. For non-Whites, birth-control is deemed "racist" and "genocidal". The jews constantly remind us that only Whites can practice racism and genocide and that we can never be the victims of such policies. But we are! The White People are the most endangered species on Planet Earth.

The so-called Unabomber was an outstanding example of this jew World Order bipolarity: on one hand, he wanted the eradication of all Post-Columbian industry; on the other, he romanticized the fast-breeding mestizos and wanted them to fill the continent with their brown bodies. Poor fellow! In order to experience the 'joys' of primitivism, along with population, all he had to do was move to Bangladesh. I recommend that his fellow Zionist zombies do likewise. Look at all the postage it would save, plus all the fuss and bother of preparing parcel bombs.

The jewish authors of The Morgenthau Genocide Plan, the only plan for genocide hatched during World War II, aimed their murderous scheme at the German people. The Plan first appeared in book form entitled Germany Must Perish by Theodore N. Kaufman. (This book is available from Liberty Bell Publications for U.S. $7, including postage and handling in the USA.) The genocide plan was elaborated by such jewish writers as Louis Nizer (What to do with Germany?) and Hans Morgenthau Jr. (Germany is Our Problem!). It was Morgenthau who directed the drafting of the Allied extermination program, which was appropriately named after him.

The Una-bomber and his ilk want to de-industrialize North America. The Morgenthau Plan eagerly anticipated the death of two-thirds of the German people from this policy alone! The remainder of the population would 'disappear' from starvation and sterilization. As we know, The Morgenthau Genocide Program began as soon as the German government signed the documents of military capitulation. The entire civilian population was put on starvation rations, German military personnel were deemed "Disarmed Enemy Forces", rather than "Prisoners of War" by the non-White General Eisenhower. This new definition permitted him to deny the German prisoners any of the protection accorded them under the Hague and Geneva Conventions. Thus stripped of their rights, the Germans were also stripped of their food, clothing and shelter, they died in their thousands from starvation, disease and exposure in barbed wire cattle pens, as eager anti-Whites stood guard to shoot any who tried to escape. It is important to remember that many of the anti-Whites were themselves White. America's "gallant Soviet allies" were no less murderous on their side of the Zionist-Soviet "Iron Curtain". The so-called Cold War was indeed a war directed against the prisoner populations of West and East. No war ever existed between banksters and bolsheviks, capitalists and communists. It was a jew's war and a Gentile's fight all along, designed to gull and cull the dumb Goyim. That's us!

Once The Morgenthau Genocide Plan had sufficiently starved and terrorized the Germans into submission, the re-enslaved Germans were put to work on behalf of Zionist interests, just as they remain today. The jews can thereby enjoy the fruits of German industry while they eliminate the Germans with their policies of White ZPG race-mixing and non-White immigration. Does it sound familiar, White Man? Yes, the very same policies apply to North Americans who supposedly "won" World War II. We have allowed the jews to put our necks in the same noose as Germans and we did not even fight. On the contrary, we rammed our collective neck into the jewish noose with self-righteous enthusiasm. Most White Americans are no different from the lemmings of "Heaven's Gate" or Jonestown, when we get down to basics: "To be or not to be." Do lemmings find 'safety in numbers'?

North America's bloated population cannot exist without its industrial and agricultural base, the result of White invention and diligence. This is what presently attracts and supports the non-White influx: the high standard of living which stems from the means of White productivity. Environmentalists note that this productivity is already stretched to its maximum limits, for the 'dark side' of such intensive productivity is environmental pollution and depletion. It is therefore erroneous to hold the absurd belief that we can decrease our industrial base AND increase our population. Both must be decreased drastically, for the survival of Our Race. The question is, how?

If the Una-bomber and his ilk were to get their collective wish, North America would be returned to its pristine, pre-where else." The present population of so-called Indians, now mestizos, would be reduced to its previous numbers, before the White influx. Life would resume its 'idyllic' savage course: nasty, brutish and short; no electricity, no TV, no washing machines, no refrigerators, no soap, no hot water, no toilets, no showers, no cars and no disposable diapers—just to mention a few items. No wonder the Una-bomber never found a woman of any color willing to marry him! No mestiza wants to 'enjoy' the Una-bomber's chosen lifestyle, for that is what she fled from in her own land and culture.

The Una-bomber and his kosher cohorts would love to impose his lifestyle on all Whites, just as the bankster-bolshevik jews imposed their 'proletarian' poverty upon the Gentile masses of the Soviet Jewnion. But never would they think of imposing such standards upon themselves! As British General J.F.C. Fuller noted: "Lenin promised the Russians a workers' paradise. What he gave them was a bankers' paradise!" If we are to understand jewish parlance, we must understand that "some are more equal than others", just as Orwell noted. When jews spew their vaporings about "humanity" they only mean themselves. Like it or not, that is always the outcome of jewish policies which we so foolishly support. "Communism" for the jews is poverty for us and plutocracy for them. "Capitalism" has the same result. Only a jew-dazed Gentile would see them as opposites.

Can Aryans find a solution to the dual problems of over-industrialization and over-population? Of course we can, but only if we become self-governing, within our own living-space. Every day, in every way, we must, through our thoughts and actions, determine the destruction of the ZOG (Zionist Occupation Government) and the departure of the wogs. Only an Aryan State can make its Survival possible. Every step we take must be toward this goal. No task is too daunting for those of us who want the best for Our Race. Won't this be good for Aryans? ❑

MENCKEN'S TUB TALE AND THE HOLOCAUST

By

Allan Callahan

On December 28, 1917 noted writer H.L. Mencken had a piece in the New York Evening Mail entitled "A Neglected Anniversary." He said that on that date, seventy-five years before, one Adam Thompson, a Cincinnati cotton broker, had installed in his home the first bathtub in America. This, said Mencken, brought forth a storm of protest, because bathing then was looked upon as an affection and a menace to health and morals, even by medical societies. He said that Boston passed a special ordinance against bathing, state legislatures imposed prohibitive taxes to prevent the act from spreading, and that there was a strong public outcry when President Millard Fillmore installed a tub in the White House. But in the end, bathing caught on, and carried the day.

The story was, in Mencken's words, "a tissue of heavy absurdities, all of them deliberate and most of them obvious." But it caught the public's imagination. Quack doctors used it to show the stupidity of mainstream doctors, while the latter used it to prove medical progress. Editors used it as an example of their knowledge. It appeared in government bulletins and standard reference works. Important men repeated it, including the Commissioner of Health for the City of New York and the president of the American Geographical Society.

By 1926, however, Mencken, "having undergone a spiritual rebirth and put off sin," felt that the joke had gone on long enough. He confessed publicly that the story had been a hoax, and pointed out why a critical reader should have realized this. This confession was printed in thirty newspapers "with a combined circulation, according to their sworn claim, of more than 250,000,000," and the public gullibility received many editorial rebukes.

But it didn't work. Within a month the yarn was being reprinted in the very papers that had run Mencken's confession.

He came out with a second confession, but it seemed to have no more effect than the first. He tried once or twice more to set things straight but it was no use and he was called a meddler and aliar. People were as determined to believe in the bathtub myth in those days as they are in the Holocaust myth today.

Also ignored was the fact that Mencken was somewhat of a humorist. But if the believers had just stopped to think, they should have realized that the tale was preposterous, as much so as the Holocaust tale is. Bathing universally condemned in America in 1842? State legislatures imposed prohibitive taxes against it? Boston passed a special ordinance forbidding it? Preposterous.

Yes, but no more so than many of the tales told about the Holocaust. Ground where some Jews and others were killed never stopped trembling for months afterward, and also occasionally spurted geysers of blood? Some camp inmates had no water and had to "drink mud?" At Belzec, people were gassed in buildings which figured out to about 30 people to the square metre? (About like getting 30 people into a phone booth). Also preposterous.

These tales, and many others just as outlandish, are all cut out of the same cloth. People swallow the wild Holocaust stuff because they have been mentally conditioned to accept it. They were not mentally conditioned to believe Mencken, but believed him anyway, even after he told them that the "tub tale" was a fake. It seems to be one more proof that some people want to be deceived.

The Jewish War Against Germany

As we enter the sixth decade after the death of the greatest White Leader of all time, Adolf Hitler, the world-wide Jewish Lie Machine is pouring out a massive propaganda campaign against Hitler with a viciousness unsurpassed in the annals of history. Not only are the lies and calumnies directed against Hitler personally, but against the entire German people as well. Just as the Jews directed hate propaganda against the Romans 2000 years ago, just as they made everything Roman despised and hated, so, today, is everything German under relentless attack by the Jewish propaganda network.

Why this vicious and concentrated autpouring of hatred against the German people and against anything German? After all, the Germans have for centuries been the source of some of the most creative and advanced contributions to our White Christian Civilization.

The answer is not hard to find once we understand that the central strategic goal of the Jews is, and has been for many centuries, the destruction of the White European (Aryan) Race.

They have made the Germans their number one target for the following reasons:

First, as in the case of the campaign against the Romans of 2000 years ago, the Jews operate on the principle of "destroying the BEST first." For this reason, the Jewish war against the German people dates back at least several centuries.

The German people, being naturally energetic, productive, creative and intellectually gifted, and residing in the heartland of Europe, would almost certainly have long ago succeeded had they been allowed to unite in leading all of Europe into an Aryan "Golden Age" of peace, prosperity and cultural and scientific advancement.

This would have taken place, as far back as the early 1600's had not the Jews torn them apart in the fratricidal "Thirty-Years War" (1618-1648). This bloody conflagration set the Germans and Aryan Europe back many decades, if not centuries.

Despite this setback, these energetic people finally recovered their incipient leadership after the unification under Bismarck in 1870. But the Jews intervened again, making sure that these resurgent people would be decimated by the two World Wars of the 20th Century.

Under Adolf Hitler in the 1930's, the German people were finally able to get the blood-sucking Jewish parasites off their backs. They also, under Hitler, broke the Jewish financial stranglehold on Germany.

Hitler, for the first time in the modern history of the White Race, clearly articulated the Racial Ideal, and focused worldwide attention on the parasitic, destructive nature of the Jewish Race. Since this same idea was rapidly taking root in other Aryan nations, the entire Jewish racial conspiracy was in utmost danger of being blown wide open right in the faces of the Jewish conspirators themselves.

For all of the above reasons, and for the last one in particular, the Jews found themselves in a most precarious position and in dire peril of being swept into oblivion. Time was of the essence.

The Jews, who understand Race and history better than anybody, and have had thousands of years of experience destroying races and peoples, decided that Germany must be destroyed, not just Hitler. Further, it would have to be destroyed so viciously and relentlessly that no one would ever revive the Racial Ideal except for the Jewish Race itself.

They went ALL OUT in the most frantic and malicious propaganda war a gullible and uncomprehending world has ever witnessed.

In short, Judea declared TOTAL WAR on Germany and Hitler, financially, politically, militarily, with every means at their disposal. And their power, as we shall see, was formidable. Before Hitler would, or could, lift even a finger against them, the Jews were ready and wasted no time in launching a world-wide campaign against him.

As early as August, 1933, Samuel Untermeyer, President of the Jewish World Economic Federation, called a Congress of Jewish leaders from all over the world to declare war on Germany in the name of the Jews. The Congress was held in Amsterdam, Holland. Upon returning to the United States from that meeting, Untermeyer made a speech on radio station WABC in New York on August 6, 1933, in which he announced that the Jews of the world had declared war on Germany and would starve them to death. This was long before any action of any kind had been taken against the Jews by Hitler's government, and six years before military hostilities broke out in 1939.

"We have been at war with him from the day he gained power," stated the London Jewish Chronicle of May 8, 1942 in its "Sermon of the Week."

Rabbi M. Perlzweig, head of the British section of the World Jewish Congress, speaking in Canada, stated: "The World Jewish Congress has been at war with Hitler for seven years." (Toronto Evening Telegram, Feb. 26, 1940)

The Dutch-Jewish paper, Centraal-Blaad Voor Israeliten in Nederland declared on September 13, 1939: "The millions of Jews who live in America, England and France, North and South Africa, and, not to forget, those in Palestine, are determined to bring the war of annihilation against Germany to its final end."

We must remember that, at this time, (Sept. 13, 1939) the war was less than two weeks old. No concentration camps, no "gas chambers," etc., had been set up, for the Jews or for anyone else, or had even been alleged to exist!

The Jewish Sentinel, on October 8, 1942, declared: "The Second World War is for the defense of the fundamentals of Judaism." Indeed it was. To be more specific, it was a war of, by and for the Jews. They knew it. They instigated it. They perpetrated and stage-managed this most bloody conflict in all of human history! The naive and gullible goyim, meanwhile, slaughtered each other with a vengeance, not knowing or wanting to know who were the REAL perpetrators and war-criminals!

Vladimir Jabotinsky, Jew-Communist and founder of the terrorist 'Irgun' gang, said in the January, 1934 issue of Natch Retch:

"The fight against Germany has been carried on for months by every Jewish community, conference, congress, trade organization, by every Jew in the world. There is reason to believe that our part in the struggle will be of general value. We shall let loose a spiritual and material war of the whole world against Germany. Germany's ambition is to become a great nation again, to re-conquer her lost territories and colonies. Our Jewish interests, on the other hand, demand the complete destruction of Germany. The German nation is collectively and individually a danger to us Jews."

Could it possibly be stated any more explicitly? Hardly! The facts are plain — Germany and the Germans, Hitler or no Hitler, were and are a threat to the Jewish conspiracy for world domination and their goal of destroying the White Race. Therefore, nothing less than the complete destruction of Germany and all things German would satisfy the vicious, implacable Jew.

Hitler, whose concern was not only for the Germans, but for the White Race as a whole, understood the deadly pogram of the parasitic Jew. He pleaded in vain with England not to play the Jewish game. Speaking in September, 1939, he said:

"On numerous occasions I have offered the friendship of the German people to England and the English people. My entire policy was built upon the idea of this understanding. I was always rebuffed... We know that the British people as a whole cannot be made responsible. It is that Jewish plutocratic and democratic ruling class which hates our Reich."

On behalf of the non-Jewish class, it must be pointed out that those who went along with the Jews were, by-and-large, shabbaz-goyim: people like Winston Churchill, traitors in the pay of the Jews, or under their control.

So firm was the Jewish control over the British people (as well as the French, Poles, Americans and others), that the Jews were successful in plunging the world into a fratricidal war of destruction on a scale never before seen. All White nations were losers, but the Jews were particularly bent on the destruction of the Germans.

Some of the Jews wanted to exterminate those Germans surviving the destruction of the war by sterilization. Theodore N. Kaufman, spelling out the program in the book "Germany Must Perish" [Available from Liberty Bell Publications, $5.00 + $2.00 postage] said: "To achieve the purpose of German extinction it would be necessary to sterilize some 48,000,000 — a figure which excludes, because of their limited power to procreate, males over 60, and females over 45..."

Other Jews wanted to exterminate the Germans outright, by starvation. A notorious advocate of this idea was Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury in the Roosevelt Administration. The following quotation is from the memoirs of Cordell Hull, Secretary of State in the-same administration:

"Morgenthau's plan, I added, would wipe out everything in Germany except land, and the Germans would have to live on the land. This meant that only 60% of the German population could support themselves on the German land, and the other 40% would die."

A version of this evil Jewish plan was in fact implemented for a period immediately after the war. Huge amounts of all kinds of machinery, factories and rolling stock that survived the war were shipped to Russia. Viewing all this, Mr. R.R. Stokes, a labor M.P. in Britain declared at the time: "Today in Germany, six months after our victory, graves are now being dug for people not yet dead, people who will die of starvation in the next few months."

cord of April 18, 1946):

"Mr. Morgenthau now stands convicted before the conscience of the world as an instigator of the systematic annihilation of the German people. The record further proves beyond a question of doubt, that these fanatical and reactionary high priests of hate and vengeanee will never be able to defend their conspiracy before the bar of human reason and human decency."

It was only through the opposition of heroic Americans like Senator Langer that the Jewish conspiracy to sterilize and/or starve the German people to death was not carried through.

Although they did not succeed in achieving that goal, they came close, and did, in fact, murder millions of the best German men. They also unleashed a campaign of rape and terror against German women by means of the Russian army and American Negro troops.

What can we White Americans learn from this horrible Jewish crime perpetrated on our Aryan German kinsmen?

First, the Jews "play for keeps." They EXTERMINATE their enemies whenever the "opportunity" arises, and such "opportunities" are planned YEARS or DECADES or even CENTURIES in advance! Their program of always exterminating the BEST of the White Race is relentless and implacable. We must always remember: WE are NEXT!

Second, the Jews are our MORTAL ENEMIES, and ALWAYS HAVE BEEN and ALWAYS WILL BE so long as they exist!

As they have stated in their own literature, they are IMPLACABLE. Nothing we can ever do will reconcile or pacify them. Their unswerving goal is to MONGRELIZE, ENSLAVE and ultimately DESTROY our WHITE ARYAN RACE!

We have NO choice but to FIGHT them TO THE DEATH! We must be TOTALLY MERCILESS and UNCOMPROMISING. We must develop a FANATICAL RACIAL CONSCIOUSNESS in every WHITE man woman and child. Every White brother, sister and must be told the RACIAL TRUTH about history, and must be imbued from sunup to sundown, morning, noon and night, with WHITE RACIAL PRIDE and with TOTAL HATRED of the PARASITIC, SATANIC JEW!

CIVIL RIGHTS

by

Stephen Contrado

White people have been supremely generous to the Negroes. They have raised blacks from savage tribal conditions to civilization. But history does not record the kindness. Instead, historians use the relative concepts of "slavery" and "racism" out of historic context and use them to deride aristocratic southern plantation owners and contemporary white loyalists for abuses. These historians foment modern communistic revolutions. Comparing the Old South to the exploitation, crime, and social misery of the modern city slums, one definitely acquits the Old South. Moreover, during the 19th century the "free" workmen of Europe worked long hours from an early age, lived in slums, ate bad food, and were subjected to numerous social ills. Economic and political competition between the North and the South was the chief cause of secession and civil war, not slavery in itself. Lincoln did not issue the Emancipation Proclamation until 1862 when the Civil War was half over, freeing only slaves in territory then in rebellion.

The negative interpretation of the Old South's heritage could only have been conceived and promoted by a race of vulgar opportunists who had no integral relationship with the Western heritage—the Jews. Indeed the Jews had even established the slave trade. Their principal advantage was to pass as Caucasian or white. But their literacy, shrewd business acumen, and ghetto traditions of separateness facilitated their success. General Ulysses Grant barred Jews from his jurisdiction because of the trouble they caused. As the power of the Jews grew in America so did racial conflict between Negroes and whites. Jewish money corrupted government, labor, education, churches, the press, and other leading institutions.

Racial segregation was a generous plan, but white benevolence went back many decades before it. The plan to repatriate Negroes in Africa had shown great promise. The races (Indians included) were kept apart for the benefit of civilization and good breeding. The Ku Klux Klan was founded in 1866. It saved the southern white race from reconstruction and social anarchy. It was disbanded, but reformed in 1915.

In 1896, in the case of Plessy v. Ferguson, the Supreme Court upheld the custom of "separate but equal." It correctly concluded: "Legislation is powerless to eradicate racial instincts or to abolish distinctions based upon physical differences, and the attempt to do so can only result in accentuating the difficulties of the present situation."

But traditional universities even admitted well-qualified blacks. W.E.B. Du Bois (b. 1868), the founder of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), earned a Ph.D. at Harvard. (Later Jews controlled the NAACP.) Idealists founded institutions for blacks only (e.g., Lincoln University, Howard University, Fisk, Tuskegee Institute, and many agricultural and mechanical schools). Jewish propagandists later indoctrinated these institutions to accept values to destroy white culture.

Negroes had a sense of identity and belonging by having their own cultural forms and associations. Their sports were drug-free and not a multibillion dollar show. Scott Joplin, for example, created new musical styles that swept the nation. When the Jews captured the music industry. Jews like Irving Berlin destroyed the black spirit out of greed for profits. Chauvinism is a natural trait of the Negro, but it was not based on anti-white prejudices, protests, lawlessness, and exaggerations about the intolerance blacks faced. A subculture reduced to blaming a majority has no real independent life or vision and is doomed to decay.

Civil rights from Booker T. Washington (b. 1856) to Martin Luther King (b. 1929) were to become a spoiling and demolition of black identity and nationalism. Integration destroyed black solidarity, creating "racism," and undermining United States greatness and national sovereignty. This benefited only the international race—the Jews. Negroes never wanted equality: they wanted free expression for their unique talents. And, so, equality turned out to be self-denial and acting out. Black codes were needed to control a people not used to freedom and of a different biological make-up.

1954 was a critical year. Earl Warren (b.1891) in Brown v. Board of Education forbade racial segregation as a violation of the 14th Amendment guaranteeing "equal protection": "We come then to the question presented: Does segregation of children in public schools solely on the basis of race, even though the physical facilities and other 'tangible' factors may be equal, deprive the children of the minority group of equal educational opportunities? We believe it does. ... To separate them from others of similar age and qualifications solely because of their race generates a feeling of inferiority as to status in the community that may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone ..."

Warren was not the bleeding-heart historians portray him to be, but a ruthless communist working for the destruction of the United States. Even President Eisenhower regretted appointing him to the Supreme Court. Warren had been responsible for the seizure of property from Japanese-Americans interned by the federal government. Warren had no respect for democratic traditions: he usurped the power of the legislature. The Brown decision was not based on judicial procedure. No real inquiry was made into the biological consequences of race-mixing. It was simply a sociological ultimatum.

The Warren court protected every class of criminal and crime skyrocketed in the country. Mapp v. Ohio (1961) made evidence irrelevant unless gathered with a warrant. In Escobedo v. Illinois (1964) it permitted those clearly guilty of crime to go free because of court technicalities. Miranda v. Arizona (1968) made all convictions in jeopardy if suspects were not informed of their rights. These were all Jewish communist schemes.

The whole process of racial integration has been designed to alienate the races and promote civil strife and anarchy. Yet the process was concealed in liberal rhetoric. In 1957 Congress approved the civil rights bill for blacks to protect voting rights. And highhanded conduct was not trifling. The same year Eisenhower had the National Guard integrate all-white Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas. And the mass media have gained tremendous political power in policing social relations and values. For the most part, these are owned and managed by Jews.

Thus only when the Jews are circumscribed by white civilization can segregation work and ensure the peace and progress of society. Why then has government taken the opposite course of empowering the international Jews with their self-aggrandizing policies for a one-world government? And why are all strategies and solutions of white people for social progress censored and suppressed? Are we past the point of no return for civilization as we know it?

In the final analysis, the Establishment has usurped all traditional rights and institutionalized new relationships based on its absolute authority. Its race-mixing intent is apparent. But every evidence demonstrates there is no social justice nor biological advantage to race-mixing.

Hitler believed the racial instinct was the only cause of the formation of communities and civilization: "All that we admire in the world today, its science, its art, its technical developments, are the products of the creative activities of a few peoples, and it may be true that their first beginnings must be attributed to one race. The maintenance of civilization is wholly dependent on such peoples. Should they perish, all that makes this earth beautiful will descend with them into the grave." (Mein Kampf)

If we compare the conditions of 19th century white workers, we see how liberals ignore the vast amount of social misery suffered by whites. That "Afro-Americans" and minorities should be singled out as privileged groups for special treatment augurs the dispossession and extermination of whites. Compare the "rights" of Jews to whites. The Jews built up a whole Holocaust industry—museums, monuments, foreign aid to Israel, media consorship of so-called anti-Semitism, hate laws, pensions and relief services to Holocaust survivors, etc.—that biases every European and American institution to pay tribute to an alleged 6 million Jews gassed! But whites who challenge the myth are quickly demoted, blacklisted, and ostracized.

More and more whites are sensing the conspiracy every day. Civil rights will prove to be a bigger failure than laissez faire economics. Documents from 19th century British industry depict what whites could expect from life. British mines, for example, were deplorable. Lord Ashley's Mines Commission made an investigation of labor conditions in the mines. Here is a glimpse of the times.

Sarah Gooder, aged 8, reported: "I'm a trapper in the Gawber pit. It does not tire me, but I have to trap without light, and I'm scared. I go at four and sometimes half past three in the morning, and come out at five and half past. I never go to sleep. Sometimes I sing when I've light .... I go to Sunday-school and read 'Reading made Easy. [She knows her letters and can read little words.] They teach me to pray. [She repeated the Lord's prayer, not very perfectly....]'I have heard tell of Jesus many times.... I would like to be at school far better than in the pit."

Isabella Read, 12 years old, a coal-bearer, reported: "I am brought with sister and brother, it is very sore work; cannot say how many rakes or journeys I make from pit's bottom to wall face and back.

"I carry out about 1 cwt. and a quarter on my back; have to stoop so much and creep through water, which is frequently up to the calves of my legs.

"I do not like work, nor do the lassies, but they are made to like it."

Mary Barrett, aged 14, reported: "I have worked down in the pits five years. Father is working next pit.... I hurry for my brother John, and come down at seven o'clock about. I go up at six, sometimes even seven. I do not like working in pit, but I am obliged to get a living. I work always without stockings, or shoes, or trousers. I wear nothing but my chemise. I have to go up to the headings with the men. They are naked ... I cannot read or write."

Patience Kershaw, 17 years old, reported: "My father has been dead about a year. My mother is living and has ten children. Three lassies go to mill. All the lads are colliers.... I go to pit at five o'clock in the morning and come out at five in the evening. I eat my breakfast of porridge and milk first. I take my dinner with me, a cake, and eat it as I go. I do not stop or rest any time for the purpose. I get nothing else until I get home, and then have potatoes and meat, not every day meat. I hurry in the clothes I have on, trousers and ragged jacket.

"The bald place upon my head is made by thrusting the corves [vehicles for carrying coal]. My legs have never swelled, but sisters' did.... I hurry the corves a mile and more underground and back; they weigh 300 cwt. The getters I work for are naked except for their caps. They pull off all their clothes. I see them at work when I go up. Sometimes they beat me, if I am not quick enough, with their hands. They strike me upon the back. The boys take liberties with me; sometimes they pull me about. I am the only girl in the pit. There are about 20 boys and 15 men. All the men are naked." Lord Ashley's Report added that this girl was ignorant, filthy, ragged, and deplorable looking, such as the uncivilized

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Corneliu Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. NATIONALISM

WHAT IS SOCIETY?

Society is the social organization of any like-minded, blood-related, indigenous people. And since man's nature is that of the social animal we must have societal structure of some kind, for our very survival and for our progress. The level of culture, progress and stability of a particular society is inherent in its design, character and make-up. Society should take on the appearance of an organic structure consisting of all the cells that make up an organism, arranged and formed into a complete and functioning whole.

The social structure of society should be neither democratic, electoral, aristocratic, caste-class system or plutocracy, but instead should be a social system of Meritocracy, i.e., based on merit, in the inherent intelligence, talents, capacity, character and effort of the individual, who may arise from any family in society—system whereby the talented are chosen and moved ahead in pyramidal form on the basis of their achievement. In turn, society must judge the worth and reward of the individual, not on the type of his work activity (yeoman, artisan or intellectual-culture producing work), or the field of his work (military, government, religious, educational or private), but instead the evaluation of himself and his work must be judged according to the manner, form and quality of his achievement.

Since this is a group of people (or more correctly, a group of families and communities) that must live, work, grow and die together it is obvious that they must all be of the same general ideals, beliefs, moral code and consciousness. Nothing is isolated in society—what affects one affects all.

WHAT MAKES UP SOCIETY?

Society is made up of four basic elements. These are always present (in some form) in any type of society: tribe, clan, nation or civilization. These four basic elements are:

1) Religious Order [spiritual, moral-ethical: druids, priests, shamans]
2) Governing Body [laws-polity, military: state, chief, kingship]
3) Economic [monetary system: work system, livelihood]
4) Social-Racial [blood-language ties, education, media: customs, traditions, elders, scholars]

It is these elements that make up a society. The reason these elements have been present in every society in history is because each element represents each element in man: mind, body and soul (our mental, physical and spiritual-psychological needs). The elements in society are an expression of the elements in man. In order for man to maintain his health and not fall into a state of degeneration these elemental needs must be fulfilled. The religious (representing the spiritual) provides the outlet for the fulfillment and development of our inner being and gives our spiritual and moral codes. The governing body (serving the physical) provides the secure and orderly environment for our families, communities and nation. Economic provides for our physical needs, also, but equally provides for our psychological as well, in the form of our livelihood (work activity), which gives us purpose and meaning, a chance at self-expression, creativity, pride, effort and leadership. Social-Racial—The social provides for our mental, our thirst for knowledge and enlightenment, giving us the semblance of culture in the forms of art, music, literature, science, etc. The racial gives us our identity and sense of belonging; it binds the society and provides the feelings of specialness, exclusiveness and kinship.

Keeping in mind though that each separate societal element is a potential, equal, omnipotent power of its own, and if left to its own device has the power to rule, control or subvert any other element.

Each separate element reflects only one side and one need in man. But, "A human being is a psyche-physical unity. We have no experience of mind, body and soul as separate entities. They are but the inextricable and interdependent parts of our being; or, yet more exactly, but different aspects of one organic whole. They never occur, and strictly should never be considered, apart from one another."[1]

So, for man to be a complete whole and for society to be a complete whole, all elements must come together and work in unison, in equal quarter parts, each one playing off the other. Thus, no element should have a separate life of its own. Nor should it be allowed to dominate any other.

But first, there are ideas, concepts and theories (generally necessitating from a reaction to the experiences, triumphs and tragedies of the way of life that existed before) which develop into an outlook-on-life, mentality, a Consciousness. From this philosophy-of-life and historical perspective an Ethos is established. This is the value system for every member of that society (nation). From this declaration the four elements (constitutions) are formed.

Society at its roots, is control—the control of our natural human traits. Nature has provided the mass of men, the majority, with an overpowering instinct. This instinct puts the mass of men all on basically the same self-motivated effort level. It is what keeps man on an immature level, keeps him from self-mastery, and is the very reason he must be given direction, guidance and control. On one hand, this instinct holds man back from realizing his full potential (intelligence, talents), on the other, it keeps him from becoming atomized and is actually what allows society to happen. For like Ibsen says, "The strongest man on earth is he who stands most alone." But alone means no society, no progress, enlightenment or development, no arts, literature, science, music, language—no culture.

1. William G. Simpson, Which Way Western Man?

The failure of all great cultures, societies and civilizations was and is man's inability to see, recognize and then control our natural human traits.

But control comes in many forms: force, coercion, guidance, enticement, education and manipulation. Each of the four elements represents its own form of control. In almost all societies past, the form of control came primarily from only one of the four elements (or if more, they were separate and represented their own power structures).

With the analogy of parent to child we see what happens when a dominant, ignorant parent raises a child with only the use of force and fear. And the opposite when an ignorant, liberal parent raises a child with no discipline, self-control or regulation—producing the spoilt child (and the modern man). But this extreme method of control (or extreme lack of) retards man from his full growth and development and leaves him and society unbalanced and unstable. Which brings us to one of the main points of this paper, that being, that the key-to-life is balance. All life struggles for balance. Balance is what maintains health and stability. When the four elements come together they offer the proper balance of control. In the end we actually get the semblance of less control and more freedom than we would get from one element trying to control all the other elements in man.

The elements, then, become the moral and value standards for society. Tempered with an elder system, the control factor takes on the forms of customs, traditions, creeds, constitutions and codes. The reason for set standards (elements) is because of the extreme rarity of individuals in any given generation having the level of character, capacity and understanding needed for the complexity of leading and guiding a society with no set standards. So the idea of having a successor (each of whom are of their own ideas and philosophy of life) of the proper caliber at the helm of a society each and every time a new leader is needed is a ludicrous one.

So it stands to reason that the destiny of each society's health and well-being lies in the validity of its elements.

If even one element is of a false and perfidious nature it may eventually infect and poison all other healthy elements. An example of a society with sick and injurious elements is the Western Civilization of today. It amazingly has four false elements: 1) The Religious—with its pacifistic, anti-nature, superstitious creed; 2) The Governing Body—with its theory of equality, its democracy and election process; 3) The Economic—with its usurious, materialistic monetary system and its mass-industrialistic work system; and, 4) The Social-Racial—the social with its liberalism and lack of an elder system, and the racial—with its lack of a homogenous racial creed.

There is an equally dangerous factor of having the lack of an element. For instance, suppose a society had all the healthy elements but lacked, for example, the racial element. The society would then be open to the threat of rampant immigration, with the obvious problems of different races living together. An example in case is the Jewish race, who, when living in another's society, refuse to assimilate, work themselves into positions of influence and then proselytize their own beliefs, customs and consciouness. This, of course, causes a breakdown and ultimate disintegration of the original moral and value codes of the host nation. Even people of the same race, but of different cultures, must go through a slow process of assimilation—but because they are of the same blood/race, assimilation occurs in a natural process.

Because of the cancerous nature of the elements described above (or the lack of such), the degeneration of society and its ultimate destruction is inevitable.

A society is by its nature artificial; it takes on a form much like that of the machine—if used in proper amounts (and used correctly) it can be of great benefit to man; but if allowed to get out of control, by not taking the human condition into consideration, it can easily become a "Frankenstein."

state. There are basically two unnatural states produced by society. One is of the oppressive and repressive nature, by not allowing man's instinctual desires to be fulfilled (and in some cases, like that of Christianity, denying that some instincts even exist). The second unnatural state produced by society is the exact opposite. It is when man's desires are allowed to be satiated in excess.

When man lived in a primitive state his instincts and desires were kept in check (often brutally) by raw nature and external forces. But when man lives in a society (especially one of prosperity) he experiences the chance of fulfilling his instinctual desires in abundance, sometimes without limit. If there is no force to keep these desires in check and balance it becomes excessive over-indulgence. For the man not capable of the understanding and self-discipline necessary to control this behavior (the mass), it leads people to hedonism, laziness, apathy, comfort-seeking, leisure, boredom, etc., and this in turn leads to the weakening of man, and society in general.

Whenever man is in an unnatural state and his psychological and instinctual needs are out of balance (excessive or repressive) he experiences symptoms of frustration, hostility, depression, anxiety and excessive stress. When kept in this state for a length of time, the effects of this condition manifest themselves into the degeneration we see today in rampant alcoholism, drug abuse, hedonism, suicide, crime, thrill seeking, etc.

Most modern men of today believe the "progress" of man, is man in some new, changed or evolved form, that he is something genetically different and better than any before him. This progressionist thinker believes mankind and society are automatically moving toward some higher end or goal.

This is a dangerous "idea," and it is having disastrous results. In reality, the progress of man and society is nothing more than man's discovery of himself and the world around him. Man of today is the man of 10,000 years ago, with the same instincts, capacities and psychological make-up, then as now. The development of man and society is like that of the lone man in his individual life span—from birth to old age he is continually learning, growing and discovering himself and his environment. Technology, science, literature, languages, polity, arts, music, industrialism, etc., these are effects of man discovering himself and his environment (the resources of nature). The more knowledge, enlightenment and understanding a man gains through life, the better and smaller the world appears around him.

If this lone man's development were to end with his death the next man would have to go through the process all over again. But with the grouping of man and then societies, much of this information and discovery is passed on, and improved and added onto, from one generation to the next; thus the semblance of progress and the false appearance of man changing. But the man himself, his mind-body-soul make-up never changes. Education, enlightenment and necessity only bring out the potential man already has in him.

On the societal level, as long as man uses his ability to examine and study societies of the past, learn from their mistakes and successes, society and its elements will continue to improve.

So far in history, we have seen that some "ideas" can have catastrophic results. A few ideas and methods that became elements come to mind: communism, liberal-democracy, egalitarianism, multi-culturalism, progressionist theories, superstitious anti-nature religions, hereditary aristocracy, mass-industrialism, to name a few—the main "ideas." Actually, all of these ideas and methods are anti-nature—that is, they don't take man's human nature into consideration. So, all of the so-called "progress" in the world is of little use if man's new discoveries and enlightenments soon lead him to ruin. Ideas have consequences.

The goal of society then, is to have men and elements that have a thorough philosophic and physiognomic understanding of man's behaviors, instincts and natural human traits, with elders of the vision and foresight to know if and where a particular idea, belief or theory might lead. Because even if a society were to begin with four healthy elements, in order to maintain this health it must still have men of the proper capacity and caliber at the helm of each element. And this is only possible if the society has the proper structure for allowing the best and most qualified men to assume these positionsi

Note: When we mention elders, the Jewish race comes to mind. There is a definite wisdom to their elder system. Probably the single most important reason the Jews have stayed together as a race (even with their nomadic and parasitic nature) is because of the rabbi. To Jews the rabbi is more than just a figurehead of their religion. He is a teacher, scholar, mentor, spiritual advisor and big brother all in one, there for all of his people.

Using the United States of America as an example, we see that America started with a constitution to the element of the governing body, but with no other constitutions for the other three elements. And without the direction and control of a constitution, men of a base nature are able to use and manipulate these unguided, non-structured and lawless elements for their own malicious purposes, to subvert and eventually overthrow the laws, ideals and consciousness of this lone element—the United States Constitution.

We should now see why it is imperative that each one of the four elements have a separate constitution of its own, formulated with the whole of society in mind, to work in unison with all other elements. In turn, the four constitutions (elements) derive their inspirations, ideals and theories of laws and codes from the Ethos, for it becomes the supreme fundament of the land.

This paper is the beginning of the preface to the four volumes written on each of the elements. Each volume of an element would be a compilation of all the knowledge, enlightenment, history and experiences of all our past societies and civilizations. From our ancestors we have much learning and experience to build from. To quote from one of our great ancestors: "... humanity will always have to continue building where the last good foundation stops. It will not have to be ashamed of using already existing truths. For the whole of human culture, as well as man himself, is only the result of a single long development in which every generation contributed and fitted in its stone. Thus the meaning and purpose of revolutions is not to tear down the whole building, but to remove what is bad or unsuitable and to continue building on the sound spot that has been laid bare. Thus alone can we, and may we, speak of the progress of humanity."[2]

So, a society begins with a consciousness (the seed), the elements become the fruit, the society represents the entire plant (or organism). If the society began life in conjunction with the cosmos, with mother-nature, then with human nature, and if it has within its genetic code (the elements) the ability and will to adapt, live with and to live within the boundaries (laws) of nature, it will be destined to remain healthy and strong, and it will propogate and progress. If it did not, it will go through the inevitable process of all organisms that did not or could not—Decay and Extinction.

Ethos: the distinguishing character, sentiment, or moral nature: the guiding beliefs, standards or ideals that characterize or pervade a group, community, or people. The complex of fundamental values that underlie, permeate, or actuate major patterns of thought and behavior in any particular culture, society or institution (the value system of a group).

2. Adolf Hitler, Mein Kampf

Nationality: a usually large and closely associated aggregation of people having a common and distinguishing racial, linguistic and cultural background and forming one constituent element of a larger group (as a nation). A group of people, tribes, or communities, bound together by a common-law or government.

Consciousness: "Knowledge is a collection of data—organized data, presumably—in someone's mind, together with a system for making sense of it. But consciousness is a higher state of development. Consciousness is knowledge plus motivation. Knowledge involves only the mental faculty; consciousness involves a coupling of the mental and the spiritual faculties. Knowledge resides in the mind, in the depths; consciousness becomes a part of the personality; it resides on the surface as well as in the depths; it permeates the being."[3]

Consciousness is not just the set of opinions, knowledge, values or understanding, but it is the total configuration in any given individual, which make up his whole perception of reality, his whole world view. It is that by which he creates his own life and thus creates the society in which he lives. Consciousness then, becomes the way one lives, perceives and interprets life.

Meritocracy: an educational system whereby the talented and meritorious are chosen and moved ahead on the basis of their achievement; leadership by the talented.

National-Ethos: a movement that believes a society is comprised of four elements; the Religious, the Economic, the Governing-Body, and the Social-Racial. And that these elements must have set standards (constitutions) that coexist with each other and with an overriding value and belief system (Ethos), that unites all families, communities and people into one National Union. A nation (society) bound by one common race, religion, language, social structure, culture, economy, governing-body, and consciousness. ❑

The Jewish Problem

William L. Pierce, PhD

I recently discussed the ongoing Jewish extortion effort against Switzerland. Jewish organizations claimed that Swiss banks were holding onto assets deposited by wealthy Jews in the 1930s and 1940s who later perished during the Second World War and so were never able to retrieve their money. Jews demanded that this money be put into a special fund for so-called "Holocaust survivors."

More information has come to light about this Jewish extortion campaign, and I want to share it with you today, because it helps us to understand better the situation all of us are in. In the first place, let us be clear on the point that what we are talking about is not simply an effort by Jews to get back what rightfully belongs to them. It is not a matter of aging "Holocaust survivors" David and Sarah Goldblatt in Miami Beach trying to get their hands on an account their late uncle Abe set up in Switzerland before he was hauled off to Auschwitz in 1943 and never seen again. It is, in fact, a massive campaign of criminal extortion, complete with threats, deception, and fraud on a huge scale and criminal collusion by the Clinton government and the controlled news media.

The initial response of the Swiss to the Jewish demand for money was to state that Jewish depositors always had been treated just like all other depositors, and that Swiss bankers already had investigated their dormant accounts and looked for the rightful owners, and that there was at most a few million dollars in such accounts which might belong to relatives of Jews who had died during the war. All David and Sarah Goldblatt had to do to claim Uncle Abe's money was present evidence that it was rightfully theirs.

This, of course, wasn't what the Jews had in mind at all, and so they began applying pressure and making threats. Switzerland's president at the time, Jean-Pascal Delamuraz, angrily accused the Jews of "blackmail" and "extortion" in trying to pressure Switzerland to turn money over to them without any evidence that they had a legitimate claim. But, unfortunately, Mr. Delamuraz was leaving office at the end of 1996, and his successor was more willing to pay blackmail in order to avoid trouble. Just to make sure that the Swiss got the message the Jews persuaded some of their Christian collaborators to join their campaign. Willing church leaders in Switzerland organized a public demonstration in Zurich by 15,000 churchgoers who demanded that the Swiss government and the Swiss bankers give "God's Chosen People" whatever they wanted and stop accusing the poor, persecuted Jews of blackmail.

The Swiss bankers and the Swiss politicians are a bit more hardheaded than these pale, soft, hymn-singing churchgoers, however. Arguments that God's Chosen People deserve whatever they want because the Bible says so have little effect on them. The real pressure was being applied to them out of the public's eye. On January 10, 1997, billionaire Jewish liquor merchant Edgar Bronfman, head of the World Jewish Congress, met with the Swiss ambassador to the United States and threatened him that unless Switzerland coughed up $250 million immediately, the upcoming Congressional hearings by the House Banking Committee would be made as embarrassing as possible for Switzerland.

And other pressure was being applied behind the scenes. A group of New York Jews, claiming to be "Holocaust victims," brought a class-action suit against three of Switzerland's largest banks and petitioned the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to suspend the banking licenses of the defendant banks pending the outcome of the lawsuit. If such a petition were granted it would cause the banks to lose billions of dollars.

Israel got into the campaign when the Jewish Agency, headquartered in Jerusalem, hinted that it would call for a worldwide boycott of Swiss banks if the former Swiss president didn't apologize for characterizing the Jewish campaign as "extortion." The result of this threat was the apology which had been demanded. And Mr. Clinton's State Department has been cooperating with the campaign by releasing a series of World War II documents, one every week or so, purporting to show that the Swiss were cozy with the Germans during the war. The release of these documents at this time is clearly a ploy calculated to embarrass Switzerland and put pressure on that country to bow to Jewish demands for more and more money.

The Swiss already have coughed up the $250 million demanded by Bronfman, and now the Jews are indicating that that is just the first payment. They are suggesting that $7 billion may be a reasonable total amount for Switzerland to pay the Jews. And the Jews claim that they can't understand why so many people hate them!

It is clear in this case that the Jews will go for just as much money as they figure they can extort from the Swiss, and not a shekel less. And it is the shekels which count with them, not how many more people learn to hate them as a consequence of their behavior. That's the way it's always been with them. Of course, in this case it's hard to feel sorry for the Swiss, because they chose to capitulate to the extortion rather than to fight — which is what the Jews calculated they would do. In this democratic era there just don't seem to be politicians or businessmen anywhere with principles or a sense of honor.

Another interesting example of the Jews' characteristic of pushing ahead arrogantly with whatever they believe is advantageous to them without any concern for the hatred which their behavior generates came to my attention recently. The great fad these days, the great media-promoted craze, is "diversity," and Jews are to be found in every nook and cranny of the "diversity" movement. Jews produce the "diversity" propaganda, they agitate for new "diversity" legislation, and they always are pushing to cram more "diversity" down our throats. If they see any group of White people — the residents of an apartment building, students in a school classroom, a sports team, a Saturday-night poker club, any all-White group — they will try to force the group to accept three Zulus, a Chinaman, and a disabled Hispanic lesbian.

The idea, of course, is to exterminate us, to wage genocide against us, to leave us no opportunity to be among our own kind, no opportunity to feel a sense of kinship and belonging among our own people, no opportunity to organize and defend ourselves. They want to be the one and only self-conscious group on this earth able to act intelligently in promoting their group interests, and then the world will belong to them. They've been pretty successful so far in their campaign against us.

They've been successful because they've kept their motives moderately well concealed, and they've been able to persuade large segments of our own people to collaborate with them in their "diversity" campaign by convincing them that it's the "moral" thing to do. The hymn-singers are an example.

But sometimes their arrogance just runs away with itself and blows their cover. They put out a newsletter called Managing Diversity, which goes to all of the government agencies in Washington. It tells the bureaucrats how they can increase the amount of "diversity" in their bailiwicks and still keep things under control. It tells them how they can displace more normal, White government workers with Hmong tribesmen, wetbacks, or AIDS-infected alternate life-stylers and still keep the remaining Whites from rebelling.

In addition to this sort of practical advice, Managing Diversity also has a lot of "sensitivity training" articles in its issues: articles which are supposed to be posted for the White workers to read in order to keep them feeling guilty and cowed. An example is a front-page article in a recent issue of Managing Diversity written by Harris Sussman, PhD. Doctor Sussman's article is titled "What Are the Values of White People?" And then this too-clever and too-arrogant Jewish "diversity" promoter turns and bites the very hymn-singers who have collaborated with him and his kind most eagerly. He writes:

> It turns out that the white people we are talking about have been primarily Christians, often acting in the name of their Christian values. . . . In the name of Christian values they had the Inquisition. They called native peoples "savages" who did not qualify as human beings. They set up definitions of pagans, heathens, primitives, undeveloped people which left Christians superior and dominant. They killed Jews and Gypsies in the Holocaust.
> In our post-modern vocabulary, "whites" or "the white man" is all we need to say to invoke this history and experience of injustice and cruelty. When we say "white people," we mean the people who value things over people, who value money over people. We know exactly what their values are and where they lead. We have all paid a terrible price for those values.

Remember, this is a Jew telling us that we Gentiles are too interested in money. In the same article Doctor Sussman goes on to gloat over what he and his kind already have done to White people with their brainwashing campaign. He gloats over the psychological and spiritual damage his "diversity" campaign already has caused. He crows:

> Many white people are uneasy with their own history. They are having a profound identity crisis. . . . This means that many white people do not think of themselves as white people.

He then describes the many ways in which guilt-stricken Whites are trying to escape from their own identity and conform to what Sussman and his fellow Jews want them to be. He writes that many confused White people are trying to "adopt the values of native peoples. Look at ecofeminism, look at holistic health, Earth Day, the Rainbow Gathering."

Copies of Managing Diversity can be found in every government workplace in Washington. Sussman figures that the hymn-singers will let him kick them in the teeth and then will lick his toes and beg for another kick. And, unfortunately, that's exactly what many of them will do. There's a sort of masochistic tendency among many of them. But there are a lot of us White people who aren't masochists, a lot of us unreconstructed White boys who don't react to Doctor Sussman and his kind the way they want us to, a lot of us who read what he has to say and then make a pledge to ourselves that one day we'll rid our society of his poison, no matter what it takes. And, you know, there are some old-fashioned Christians among us too, who will be more than happy to help!

These two examples of Jewish behavior — the brazen extortion of hundreds of millions of dollars from the Swiss people and the arrogant gloating about the damage they have done to us with their "diversity" campaign — these two examples lead us to a closely related subject discussed earlier — the so-called "Holocaust." We've looked at various aspects of "Holocaust" propaganda in the past, and we've uncovered some of their little psychological tricks, such as calling anyone who doesn't swallow the whole myth lock, stock, and barrel a "Holocaust denier." If you question any of their numbers about how many Jews supposedly were put into gas chambers, if you question a single one of their overblown atrocity stories, then you're a "Holocaust denier," implying that you believe that the Germans took no defensive measures at all against the Jews during the Second World War, when, in fact, you know that the Germans did try to rid themselves of Jewish influence.

We've examined some of these tricks of theirs, and we've explored some of their specific lies about the "Holocaust," but the question remains: Why do they do it? Why do they push the "Holocaust" business so hard? Why, 55 years after the fact, they keep playing the same tune? Why do they demand that the American taxpayers provide free land for "Holocaust" museums for them? Why do they demand that our children in the public schools be subjected to "Holocaust" propaganda courses? They are aware that many other peoples have gone through their own "holocausts": the Armenians, the Germans, the Ukrainians, the Russians. Why is it only the Jews who keep pushing it, only the Jews who make it the focus of their lives, the essential core of their identity?

We know the answer to this question now. We understand that they push the "Holocaust" for two reasons: first, because they make lots and lots of money from it; and second, because it protects them from criticism and enables them to get away with the most outrageous behavior, behavior that would not be tolerated in any other people. They have just collected $250 million in cold, hard cash from the Swiss in blackmail money: money which the Swiss gave to them not because there was the slightest evidence that the Jews were entitled to any of it, but simply to avoid a boycott. Now, the Jews are aiming for $7 billion more from the Swiss the same way. Anybody else who tried a stunt like that would end up in prison for extortion. The Swiss government wouldn't have caved in to anybody else. If, for example, the heirs of Russian aristocrats who were butchered by Jewish Communists in the 1920s had made a similar demand on the Swiss bankers for lost assets, the Swiss would have fought them all the way. But they didn't want to fight the Jews — they even apologized for frankly telling the Jews what they thought about the whole racket — because they knew the Jews would wrap themselves in the "Holocaust" and it would look like the Swiss were picking on the poor, innocent, defenseless, persecuted dears. They knew the Jews had them beat at the propaganda game, at the sympathy game.

That's just one example of the cash value of the "Holocaust." Another example is the $4 billion in American taxpayers' money which goes to Israel every year. Germany has also given Israel billions of dollars over the past 50 years, paid for by German taxpayers.

Or consider Doctor Sussman's boasting about the damage the Jews' "diversity" propaganda already has done to the self-image of many gullible White people. Who else but a Jew would have the brass for that? And where does that brass come from? It comes from a sure knowledge that he can retreat into his "victim" status if anyone calls him to account. He knows that he can invoke the "Holocaust," that he can wrap himself in the "Holocaust," and his accusers will retreat in embarrassment. At least, the hymn-singers will retreat in embarrassment. And any harder-headed critic of the Jews or their behavior or their influence knows that he will be regarded as a bully by everyone who has been taken in by the "Holocaust" propaganda.

The fact is that we do have a Jewish problem in America. It is by far the biggest and most dangerous problem we have. It is worse than our crime problem, worse than our drug problem, worse than our political corruption problem, worse than our immigration problem, worse even than our race problem. Our Jewish problem, in fact, lies at the root of nearly all of our other problems. If we are to have a future we must solve it. We cannot let ourselves be buffaloed by the "Holocaust." We must face the fact that, regardless of all the nice, inoffensive Jews you may know as individuals, all of the Jews who mind their own business, the Jews as a whole are destroying our society. Their policies are poison to us. And with their control of our news and entertainment media and their corollary control of our political system, they have a death grip on our country. We must have the courage to stand up to them and to do everything necessary to break that death grip. We must free our media and our government from their influence. We must make an example of the Sussmans and all of their collaborators. Otherwise they will destroy us as surely as they have destroyed every other society in which they were given free rein.

Conspiracies, Then and Now

by Moriarty

In the America of the 1950s and 1960s, it was not uncommon, on meeting a fellow right-winger, to come to touch on—better put, to dwell on— what we called in those times the Communist menace. Nor was it less common, after sundry Bolshevik atrocities and terrifying threats had passed in review, for one of us to play the trump in civilized humanity's case for the prosecution: "Communism's a conspiracy, you know." So we knew—or thought we knew.

It's almost a decade since the U.S.S.R., well, not exactly collapsed, but began to slough off its Soviet skin. Only a few diehards, even on the right seem willing to maintain that this is all a carefully contrived deception to lull us to our doom. Nor is it widely claimed, even in the remotest stands of Birchdom, that whatever beast is aborning or slouching is worse, or could be worse, than Lenin's, Stalin's, Brezhnev's Russia.

More than 30 years after the late Revilo Oliver debunked conclusively the right-wing delusion that some malevolent and seemingly omnipotent combination was to blame for all the right wing's and all the white man's woes, communism may be moribund, but conspiracy—The Conspiracy—lives on.

Consult the booklist of nearly any "patriotic" publisher. Three years short of the millennium the same hodge-podges of Gothic romances, arabesque invention, baroque exaggeration, Victorian consternation—all calculated to make your maiden auntie and 10,000 right-wingers swoon—vend and wend their way among our kind,

Freemasons? Rosicrucians? Illuminati? Banksters? Bilderbergers? CFR? Skull and Bones? Club of Rome! A diller, a dollar, a thousand Rhodes scholars!

Run even part way through the profusion of plotters and complotters that "experts" in "conspiriology"—as many of them like to call "science"—have at their fingertips and the names begin to have a nonsensical, but vaguely comforting ring, somewhat like the London church-bell rhymes of fond remembrance from childhood.

What then is wrong with a little conspiracy theory? First, as Professor Oliver argued in his magisterial Conspiracy or Degener- acy [available from Liberty Bell Publications, $6.00 + $2.00 postage], it doesn't adequately describe reality, aside from failing to explain the workings of politics and history.

It is noteworthy that the very word conspiracy is a legalism, denoting a secret plan to carry out a crime. Conspiriologists have converted this legal formulation into a moral one, whereby all the doings of designated "conspirators" become evil. (Note that often enough the "conspirators" or their elements—e.g., the institution of the Rhodes scholarships—are seldom crimes by law.)

The malign afflatus of conspiracy quickly overwhelms its individual crimes, real or imagined. Soon enough a Manichaean (Magian in Spengler's sense) spirit infuses the conspiracy hunters, the most fervent of whom may discover in the workings of the Federal Reserve or the Order of Demolay the direct and continuing work of the Evil One himself.

This is not to argue—any more than Oliver did—that conspiracies don't occur. Leaving aside the innumerable criminal and sometimes not-so-criminal arrangements that delight American prosecutors' hearts (and wishing sadly in passing that some of our rambunctious and misguided activists had know the practical consequences of their own "conspiracies"), plots to overthrow governments, to topple dynasties, even found new nations have been a staple of history.

The authors of England's Glorious Revolution, and our own, were just as conspiratorial as those who masterminded France's and Russia's upheavals. But try to find a patriot who'd call Washington and Jefferson "conspirators." His contemporaries, however, weren't afraid to call the Sage of Monticello conspirator, revolutionary or worse. Yale College President Timothy Dwight stumped the country accusing Jefferson of being an Illuminatus.

This sort of historical embarrassment is common enough for the current crop of conspiriologists. Their politics are generally populist. They scorn "elites." But the conspiracy literature they feast on is often absolutist; often stalwartly Papist—logically out of place at gun shows and right-wing conclaves where it's sold as its sellers would be if they sat behind their tables in the costumes of the Ancien Regime.

"But, ah," some argue, "conspiracy makes good propaganda. Certainly it sells. When all the names of defunct cabals are gotten through, at bottom lurks, invariably—the Jew!"

Is the possibility of conjuring up from all the gimcrack apparatus of conspiriology the Eternal Jew—Judeus ex machina, if you will—enough to make it all worthwhile? Once more following Revilo Oliver, I say no. Conspiracy mongers invariably treat the Jewish problem in one of two ways: they either overrate and overdamn the Jews and their influence, or timorously, they leave them out altogether.

As Oliver, in his learned prescience, foresaw over three decades ago, Aryan objectivity and ingenuity has begun to devise, under the rubric of sociobiology, the first synthesis of which was broached by Professor E.O. Wilson, theories that explain the Jews and their behavior. One such, Professor Kevin Macdonald's A People That Shall Dwell Alone: Judaism As an Evolutionary Group Strategy (Praeger, Westport, CT, 1994), is easily worth the price of all the anti-Semitic conspiracy pamphlets combined.

A book like above brings the Jewish problem within the province of biology, within the same precincts as the racial problems which perturb the American social order. Here let us note how seldom the conspiracy screeds even so much as glance at race. The fall of the Knights Templar, the introduction of the metric system, the symbols on the reverse of a dollar bill—these are deemed far more important that the history, say, of how America's immigration policy was turned topsy-turvy in the 1960s.

Most instaurationists aren't conspiracy buffs. The editor has wisely seen to that. But on the wide and woolly right conspiracy theories rule.

Thirty years after Oliver's Conspiracy or Degeneracy, nearly a decade after our "victory" over the Soviet, not even the publicly proclaimed intent to turn America into a Third World nation—and the effects of that transformation day by day, year by year, decade by decade—the awful truth is transformed, transvested, gussied up in conspiratorialist drag. Then, and only then, the cobwebs fall from glazed eyes. The patriots smile, they understand: "Oh, you mean the New World Order! It's a conspiracy, you know."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear George:

I have to " attempt"to answer a letter to the Liberty Bell of April on page 51, by Charles Weber.

Now I have read Mr. Weber's articles in the past and at the moment can think of none that I disagreed with, however I am disappointed with this letter. To start with, he lifted one sentence out of one paragraph, completely out of context and turns out three pages that had at least one error and some "history" that had no significance with the thesis of my article.

Everyone who has read history knows that "money" has been one of the most controversial subjects of history, why, because "He who controls money, controls the life blood of a nation" The Federal Reserve Act was passed in 1913, not 1919, which also could be said was the date the Jews had finally got control of the "World's money supply". The first step in world control is the control of money, everything else falls in place as needed.

What I wanted to do was expose the Federal Reserve and to present an alternative solution. What I also wanted was for the 100% gold backed money crowd to explain where they get the gold necessary for their type of money; you see, the Jews have all the gold. "He who has the gold makes the rules."

It has been some time since the Wright Brothers flew their aeroplane and quite a lot of improvement has taken place since then in aeroplane construction. We have been using the Jew's money system quite sometime and I think we can improve on that. In my opinion, money should represent wealth and should be created into circulation, for goods and services, not borrowed into circulation. That should be one of the main duties of a responsible Government. If we can ever dislodge Jewish power from Government and the news media, we can get a responsible Government.

No, Mr. Weber, I do not have Ph.D. behind my name and I never went to college. I have done a lot of things, from docking lambs to a construction superintendent and many other things, and I read a lot, and I make up my own mind. And, Mr. Weber, if you have a better plan, I am all for it. What is it?

March 14th, 1997

Dear Mr. Dietz:

I received your March 1997 issue today and find it excellent as usual.

However, there was no answer by Winston Smith, General Secretary of the NSWPP, to the vicious, lying letter by Kevin Strom in your lastiq ue.[See the February issue, pages 50 ff. —Editor]. Why was it not published in your March issue? [Simply because the March issue had been printed before we received the reply by Winston Smith. It was printed on page 56 of the April issue!—Editor]

I trust this negligence will be corrected in your next issue! If not, I fear I will have to cancel my subscription and cease any further contact with you.

I, along with a growing number of former members of the National Allliance have left and are now proud members of the National Socialist White People's Party. It would be a serious mistake if you side with Pierce and refuse to print General Secretary Smith's excellent refutation of Storm's miserable and false attack.

Yours for Aryan Victory,
J.W.H., Florida

March 19, 1997

Dear Mr. Dietz:

I thoroughly enjoyed the last two issues (February and March) of Liberty Bell, and I certainly want the four preceeding articles on "The Way Ahead" written by Colin Jordan.

I also loved Bruce's [Campbell] article on "Our People, the Aryans" and I thought Richard Bentinck's "The Descen-sion of Man" absolutely delightful. What a wonderful sense of humor. He reminds me a bit of R.P. Oliver whose style I always envied.

I'm so sorry to hear about your illness. Please be very careful and try not to overdo the work load when you begin again. This is a very hard period for people like us who care and who know from their own experience how much America has changed since the early part of this century.

I am enclosing a letter that I have written to The New American. I realize that it will accomplish nothing, but perhaps if they get enough of their readers to express the same sentiments, it might make them think a little bit. I have the feeling that people like that are infinitely more dangerous than our outspoken enemies who at least leave us in no doubt about how they feel.

It has also occurred to me that the 'dumbing down' of America was accelerated not only through the public school system but also through the monstrous numbers of good men slaughtered in the last two world wars and the mini-wars that have followed, all engineered through the political and media dominance of the Zionist Jews. After all, isn't that part of the blueprint for world domination as outlined in the Protocols of the Elders of Zion?

I hope you will take a prolonged and restful vacation before you come back to continue the publication of Liberty Bell. We need people like you, desperately.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Lee Norris, California

Dear Julie:

I have been very pleased with your magazine's exposure of the police state that characterizes our present federal government, though I would be more grateful if you would also expose exactly what and who is behind all this rottenness. This desecration of what was once a great country seems to me to have been deliberately planned as an on-going campaign since the ending of the first world war, steppped up during the Roosevelt administration and brought to almost full bloom under the drug-infested, sexually perverted, criminally involved Clinton cesspool. It is no accident that the entire media is playing the game along with the politicians. It was not by chance that the socialized nanny state took form under Roosevelt, or that the churches, schools, and judicial system have all become willing allies in making us into a one-party, third world slave pen for the coming New World Order. Nor has the flooding of the country with substandard aliens been accidental. As Roosevelt, the degenerate representative of a once elite Wasp family, said many years ago, "Nothing happens by chance. You can believe that it was planned that way".

Then how and when and why was it so planned? Don't tell me that this has all been a natural degeneration of a once great people. Such a profound unplanned change could never have happened in the short space of 30 to 40 years. It had to be a style of brainwashing so expertly applied, so irresistibly motivated that even a people as basically strong as the Nordic Americans fell victims to it.

I want the guilty parties to be identified—and punished in a manner equal to the fiendish tortures given the German leaders at the Nuremberg trials following World War II. I watched the same evil force at work in the Republic of South Africa, using the same methods and achieving the same shameful triumph over the very competent apartheid government established under Dr. Vervoerd. And until we know why this was done and who has been responsible for it we will never be able to break loose from its alien octopus grip on our western culture and civilization. Your very admirable articles on what is wrong will never accomplish anything unless you also answer the question of what force is directing this obscenity and why it is being done. And don't use the simplistic explanation of MONEY madness. It goes much deeper than that, else why would it be necessary to destroy our religion, our culture, and our very racial soul in the pro- cess?

I am re-subscribing for six more month hoping that you will follow the trail of this evil and horribly destructive force to its source and help bring back the America that we once knew.

Sincerely,
Lee Norris

April 14, 1997

Dear Sir:

I have been a subscriber to Instauration, Liberty Bell, GANPAC, Truth-At-Last, Free Speech, American Renaissance, Mythbusters, Resistance, and other racialist publications for a number of years now. I am beginning to feel it is all a waste of time and money. Nothing is ever done.

Despite all the good writing found in these publications; despite the splendid definitions of the problems facing Aryans in the West today; despite the web-pages we have on the Internet, we are spinning our wheels.

I am so bloody tired of hearing about all the terrible things negros (bantus I call them) are doing to us and to our society. It only takes 50 such examples to get the attention of even the moronic element in our midst. The same can be said for the jews. We all know by now what harm they have done and are doing us. Merely repeating tales of that harm ad infinauseum to the same group does no good at all.

We can not put into effect racial, environmental and economic policies similar to those of the Third Reich without political power. We can't gain political power without gaining the minds of a large segment of the white population. We can't gain the minds of the people without strong media presence. We can't get that without money...lots of money. So there is the problem in a nutshell: money.

We are not going to attract anyone with money as a splintered, feuding group of apparent losers. The racial movement has to first coagulate around a political theory. I think it has to be a very radical theory such as National Socialism. What won me to the racialist movement in the first place was finally reading Adolf Hitler's Mein Kampf and finding that I instinctively agreed with most of the propositions he set forth. That was followed by Alfred Rosenberg The Myth of the 20th Century and the Holocaust on Trial by Robert Lenski. These works opened my eyes as to the identity of those who caused the decay of the West and made me aware of the urgent need to combat these destroyers: the Jews.

We must not only weld our splintered groups together, there must appear from somewhere a man of the hour. A leader. A man of great courage, strong will, genius. A man of superb character. A man of honor and honesty. A man not willing to compromise. A man of great charisma, yet a man who knows humility and is not eaten by the worm of egoism. Movements get nowhere without superhuman leadership. While he will be a target of ZOG and ZOG's many allies, we must surround him with our lives. Time is short. Let the search begin.

E.H., Arkansas

Dear Sir:

I believe that the American people are so conditioned and brainwashed by the media that any mention of race automatically causes the great majority of them to "turn off" and reject anything else you might say out of hand. As long as any movement appears to match the stereotype planted in the people's heads by the media it will get nowhere. Those who conform to the "racist cracker redneck" image only drive people away and make our chances for victory even slimmer (if there still are any). Publications such as WAR and Racial Loyalty will only alienate most of our potential recruits and justify the media's stereotype. We constantly play into their hands and get nowhere. We need people. We need grassroots support. In a country this size we need at least a million people. The ideology which is the right one is that which mobilizes a million people. If you don't have the technology or the money, you need people. Our enemies have unlimited funds and control of the mass media. If we cannot get a groundswell of discontended people together we will die.

We need to attract all those who have suffered in any way because of the system, and there are many. Victims of crime, drugs, unemployment, the corrupt system, the evil, self-destructive pop culture— these are the issues we must address. People who have lost their jobs, have a raped daughter, or a dead child due to drugs don't want to hear about race or genetics. We have a far better chance than Rockwell did to influence people because in the '50's this country was still prosperous and safe, but we keep beating our heads up against the same stone wall and are getting nowhere. We do exactly what our enemies expect every time and they use us. The Americans judge people as individuals. There's no tribal instinct to harness here as in Europe. I think something more akin to Italian Fascism would gain more adherents. AT THE PRESENT TIME.

We must get the ears of at least a million people before we have the power to do anything. Now we have next to none. I believe this would evolve into National Socialism as it did in Germany, but AFTER we have power. It wasn't racial slogans which brought the NSDAP to power, it was "Arbeit, Freiheit und Brot."

We all know that our enemies are Communists. They didn't get into power by flying the Red Flag or singing the "Internationale." They got into power by preaching compassion and kindness, by addressing the grievances of one part of society and appearing as social reformers. That's also how they got accepted by the Middle Class. Today, I'm afraid, Liberalism IS Americanism, and now that they have the power they drop the mask and come after us!

But, now, we have an advantage too. Never in the history of the United States have so many people hated the system. They are giving us our last opportunity. Ironically, we are like Gandhi and the British. They have all the money and power and we have a lot of disaffected people. The unions have sold them out and the churches have mostly defected to the other side. We must agitate the unemployed, the dispossessed farmers, the victims of crime and corruption. We must campaign for order, morality, jobs, and national self-sufficiency. We must attack what the people hate—crime, governmental corruption, the banks, NAFTA, GATT, perversion, drugs, and the media which supports it all. We must show the people how they've been sold out by the system and by all those in power. Only by mobilizing the disaffected and giving them a solution to their problems do we still have a chance.

Sincerely,
G.A.C., York, PA

Dear George:

Seems Clinton is stealing Hitler's thunder and not even giving him credit. A "wanna-be" president wanting to go down in history as a caring man and a "wanna-be" being groomed for the job to show people how to volunteer and care for everyone.

And I have no doubt people shall fall for all this.

Sincerely,
Mrs. S.W.K., Oregon

Dear Editor,

We are told by our government that our military is down-sizing, closing bases, forts, etc., yet these closed bases and sea-ports have been opened to foreign troops under the flag of the communist-dominated, while our boys have been sent around the globe on their so-called Peace-Keeping Missions.

There are a half-million people around the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) in parts of Kentucky and Tennessee, involving a few million acres, being told to move. An angry bunch of people are having meetings on this situation, while the military are taking over hundreds of thousands of acres in Mississippi and Louisiana, in addition to what they already have. Again the controlled media is silent.

Then there is "Weather Control as a Weapon" against our people. Russia and the United States have been experimenting with weather control as a weapon of war for 20 years. We now have towers throughout the U.S. to electronically alter the weather, floods, drought, tornados and possibly earthquakes. This is scary folks, look at what is happening in the mid-west this year, and the year before in western states. I have just received a 90-minute video on this subject. If you want a copy, call 1-800-729-4131, or write to Bob Fletcher, 10061 Riverside Dr., #801, North Hollywood, CA. 91602.

If we would direct the energy that we put into the sports world into saving our nation, we could triple our chances of regaining our freedom, so that we can try our traitors on the court house lawn.

The spiritual world is not in the business of saving misguided nations, we have to do it ourselves.

Sincerely,
G.T., Lousiana

Dear Liberty Bell:

...I wish to cancel my subscription because I've rethought my ideas on race. (I still appreciate and agree with your historical Revisionist views however.) Last year my dad remarried after losing my mom to cancer in 1994. The woman he married has an adopted daughter who is Hispanic (Puerto Rican to be precise). I've come to see her and her husband (he's Caucasian) and their two children (6 and 4) as human beings who I think a great deal of, therefore I can't accept all the racist bullshit I've read in L.B. over the years

I guess I'm a revisionist and free-thinker in the mold of my friend Bradley Smith out in California (who's married to a Mexican-American lady, incidentally). Please refund my subscription as soon as possible

P.S. For what it's worth, I still support your right to free speech 100%, even though I think your race ideas are wrong.

Suggestion to get even with Gun Grabbers and other criminals and have some fun while we are at it

Patriots could identify in their community those people who are proponents of disarming the American people, the gun grabbers, and make it as well known as possible that this household is presumably unarmed, and would look like inviting, easy pickings to criminals. On the other side, patriots who are opposing our gun-grabbing enemies can display identification of the American Rifle Association, Gun Owners of America, or the like, that would indicate that their household is armed and ready, and so deflect criminals away from such household to those of the deserving gun grabbers. This policy should help to protect decent Americans and give the gun grabbers what they have coming to them. If it turns out the gun grabber is armed after all, tough luck for the criminal, and the gun grabber gets put in a bind with his hypocracy. LET'S GIVE IT A TRY!

The Tyranny That Has Become Ours

When people have been made to bend their will to that of government in so many fields as we have, and this without any meaningful opposition, it is because the modern media, in collusion with government, have proved capable of deceiving the public to an extent never before possible.

Our government and the media have become an evil, omniscient enemy. They are waging an unrelenting war against all we hold dear, while at the same time feigning concern and regard for them.

Never has treason had such a traiterous handmaiden so odious and false as to now threaten our very existence as a country and people. It brazenly advocates the relinquishing of our sovereignty and becoming a vassal of the U.N.'s New World Order.

That this New World Order means slavery for the U.S.A. no one dares to say. And until this is realized and understood meaningful opposition will not occur. The media will see to it that truth is kept hidden.

Our tyranny is such that it cries to high heaven. The same as when our children were sent to school areas where politicians themselves feared to tread. Then came the time when God and Prayer were banned from their schools.....in order to let chaos enter.

An now, the present, when government uproots entire inner city neighborhoods and moves them en mass into smaller communities without any regard for the inhabitants thereof. That such sudden population influx moves are unnatural and bode naught but trouble for both parties means nothing to the tyrant in Washington.

When asked from whence this governnment of the people derived its power to hurt the people — there was no honesty but lies and threats.

And thus the people are afraid of their government. The people live in fear of the tyrant. How else does one describe such an evil praticing authority?

And is it not time to end such tyranny? Therefore, is it not now time to talk with your neighbors? If you, and you, and you do nothing — God help us! And may He and your children forgive you.

KEEP THE LIBERTY BELL RINGING!

Please remember: Our Fight Is Your fight! Donate whatever you can spare on a regular—monthly or quarterly—basis. Whether it is $2., $5., $20., or $100. or more, rest assured it is needed here and will be used in our common struggle. If you are a businessman, postage stamps in any denomination are a legitimate business expense—and we need and use many of these here every month—and will be gratefully accepted as donations .

Your donations will help us spread the Message of Liberty and White Survival throughout the land, by making available additional copies of our printed material to fellow Whites who do not yet know what is in store for them.

Order our pamphlets, booklets, and, most importantly, our reprints of revealing articles which are ideally suited for mass distribution at reasonable cost. Order extra copies of Liberty Bell for distribution to your circle of friends, neighbors, and relatives, urging them to subscribe to our unique publication. Our bulk prices are shown on the inside front cover of every issue of Liberty Bell.

Pass along your copy of Liberty Bell, and copies of reprints you obtained from us, to friends and acquaintances who may be on our "wave length," and urge them to contact us for more of the same.

Carry on the fight to free our White people from the shackles of alien domination, even if you can only join our ranks in spirit. You can provide for this by bequest. The following are suggested forms of bequests which you may include in your Last Will and Testament:

1. I bequeath to Mr. George P. Dietz, as Trustee for Liberty Bell Publications, P.O. Box 21, Reedy WV 25270 USA, the sum of $ . . . . . for general purposes.

2. I bequeath to Mr. George P. Dietz, as Trustee for Liberty Bell Publications, P.O. Box 21, Reedy WV 25270 USA, the following described property . . . . . for general purposes.

DO YOUR PART TODAY—HELP FREE OUR WHITE RACE FROM ALIEN DOMINATION!

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

Yellow Alert, First Warning:
The Alzheimer's Economy

By Gary North, Ph.D.

On January 1, 2000, the world's computers will either shut down or go haywire. So will everything dependent on them: banks, Social Security, Medicare, and (if you don't take action soon) your retirement plans. (There will also be another major victim: the communications network of the U.S. Defense system and NATO.)

Dear Fellow Victim:

"That just isn't possible!" That's the first reaction of everyone who hears this story for the first time. But when people hear me out, they change their minds. Always. I'm not saying that everyone believes that things will get as bad as I think they will. I am saying that everyone at least says, "Maybe it really is possible. Maybe mainframe computers could go down. Maybe we've got a problem. Maybe it's bigger than I had thought.

"Maybe" is the first step to your survival. And I don't mean just financial survival.

(Throughout this report, I quote directly from U.S. government and industry sources which document in detail everything I say here. I also give you an address on the World Wide Web where I have posted electronic links that take you right to these original sources and to a lot more evidence that I don't have room to present here.)

Here is my prediction: over the next 36 months, investors will have an opportunity to make the greatest profits or greatest losses since 1929-32. Some people will make fortunes, only to be wiped out —trapped —when governments impose economic controls. Timing will be crucial.

Let me explain, briefly. Over 40 years ago, a tiny group of incredibly skilled technicians made a fateful decision. They took a calculated risk. They saw that they could save their employers a little time per task and a lot of money overall. To achieve this, they would necessarily place most of Western civilization at risk in the year 2000 — maybe the greatest risk in the West's history. They went ahead and did it. You and I will soon become victims of their decision. Our lives will never be the same because of them.

Who were these people? Computer programmers — back in the days when there weren't many of them. As technicians, they wanted to save money with the most efficient technical solution. But as social forecasters, they were fools: the greatest group of fools in the last 1900 years, as you and I are about to find out. Here's what the programmers did. In order to save two digits on punch cards and to save hard disk space on computers — back when hard disk space was very expensive — they dropped two digits: 1 and 9. Specifically, they dropped the first two digits of the year, so that 1953 became 53, 1967 became 67, and so forth. All will go well until 2000 becomes 00. At that point, all uncorrected ("noncompliant") computers will think it's 1900. At that point, they will either shut down or start computing on the basis of a 100-year error: chaos.

The world's mainframe computer systems will then begin to crash. (So will millions of desktop computers.) Their internal calendars will either shut them down or, worse, start spewing out incorrect information. The year 2000 is a leap year; 1900 wasn't. This will throw the calculations off by a day after February 28. The days of the week are different in the year 2000 from 1900. Meanwhile the Federal Aviation Administration's ancient software is programmed in terms of traffic and congestion patterns based on the day of the week. Think of annuity calculations in the insurance industry, interest rate payments by government treasuries, and on and on. Chaos!

Can't these older computers be fixed? Some can; some can't. In the time remaining before the year 2000, most can't. It's not just a problem with the computers. It's also a problem with the programs that tell them what to do. These are very complex programs, highly specialized to particular industries. They cannot be replaced with new programs in the brief time remaining.

Existing programs sometimes have 10 million lines of code, or 20 million, or, in the case of the Defense Department, 358 million. This code is incredibly complicated: zeroes, ones, peculiar words, and instructions that today's programmers can't understand. Any line of code may contain an error. Worse; if you fix one line of code, your "fix" may corrupt any of the other lines. This is why 40% of the "fix" must be devoted to testing. But few (if any) organizations have enough unused mainframe capacity to run the required six-month parallel test! So, the mandatory testing will not be completed in 1999. No one can know for certain if a computer system is Year 2000-compliant until the year 2000, when the computers go on-line in the real world, when internal clocks say January 1, 2000. It's all or nothing !

About 85% of large-scale mainframe software projects are completed late. But the year 2000 is fixed. (Some fiscal year-based systems will start failing as early as mid-1998.)

How much does it cost today to correct a line of code? It depends. The usual estimate today is $1 a line, but in some applications, such as military applications, it can be almost $9 a line. Then add testing. As the year 2000 approaches, demand for computer programmers will rise, all over the world. I know one "headhunter" who recruits mainframe programmers for companies. He estimates that in 1999, their hourly wage will be $300 to $400. Multiply this by ten or twenty programmers. (Allstate Insurance today employs 100.) Pay them for a year. How many companies will survive this kind of capital drain? But those that can't will die in the Year 2000: computer breakdown, law suits, etc.

To update all of the world's mainframe computers, it will cost between $300 billion and $600 billion, the Gartner Group has estimated. But this overly optimistic forecast assumes that there are enough programmers available who can read and understand the 400 different mainframe computer languages, most of them unknown to today's younger programmers. (COBOL is the main one.)

This also assumes that there will be a pre-repair agreement among all of these isolated programmers: a single standard that all computers will recognize after they are repaired. This coordination is impossible to achieve.

If the repairs are not coordinated by a standardized approach — and none exists — then one of two horribly destructive things will happen: (1) uncorrected computers will send their corrupt data into the corrected computers, making them noncompliant, or (2) corrected computers will "lock out" all data from uncorrected computers. In the first case, the reliability of all computers in the data-transfer system will be ruined. In the second case, the overall system will disintegrate because the uncorrected computers are locked out. There will be no more "system." There is no third option except compliance of all computers in the unregulated system, which is managerially impossible to achieve.

All of us are now going to pay for the programmers' mistake: the worst peacetime mistake in the 20th century . . . and maybe in the last 1900 years. Some of us are going to pay a lot more than others. That's what this early warning report is all about: keeping you from having to pay more than is absolutely necessary. I call this Yellow Alert, Stage One. What I describe in this report will not happen all at once. The cost of taking effective action to defend yourself and your capital will keep rising, but for now, it's not astronomical. But step by step, as this scenario unfolds, I will have to update this report. It will eventually become Red Alert, Final Warning, sometime before December 31, 1999. But those who receive that report will find it very difficult and costly to take evasive action.

Organized Systems Will Either Go Down or Go Crazy

Think of one word: banking. What if your local bank's computer is fixed, but it can't communicate with 10,000 other noncompliant banks, or 20,000, around the world — the lockout scenario? How will your bank cash checks and clear credit cards issued by uncorrected banks? How will other banks cash your checks and credit card purchases? All banks are at risk if most of them aren't Year 2000-compliant by December 31, 1999. The banking system is far more complex and vulnerable than one bank's computer.

Maybe all of the world's major banks will be compliant by late 1998. Maybe your local bank will be. Maybe most depositors will believe this in 1999, even though no one can really be sure that any computer is compliant until Jan. 1, 2000. But what about such presently noncompliant sectors as insurance, railroads, government retirement programs, government health care programs, government treasury departments, and national defense?

We are about to enter a new phase of the economy. I call it the Alzheimer's economy, when the world's mainframe computers lose their memories. No one with any political power is talking about this in public. No national political leader wants to talk about it before every other leader is talking about it. A national leader who sounds the alarm too early risks career suicide. (I am not a political leader. I'm willing to sound the alarm. A few of you will believe me: the Remnant.)

The Millennium Bug

There's bad news — incredibly bad news — and good news. I begin with the bad news. Until you understand the extent of the threat, you won't recognize the opportunity. Here is my personal recommendation: When your ship comes in, you had better not be down at the bus terminal. You had better start thinking about this problem now, before the rush. It will become very costly to deal with it once the world's stock markets start down. It may be more than costly. It may be impossible. You do not want to be in a totally vulnerable situation, saying to yourself, over and over: "You fool! You knew years in advance! "

The problem I've described here is called the Year 2000 Problem. It's also called the Millennium Bug. You've probably heard a little about it, but you don't know the details. It's sort of like Muzak: it's there in the background, but nobody pays much attention to it. They will, When the Dow Jones falls below 5,000, they will. When it then falls below 2,000, they will be hearing about little else. Then things will get really serious.

When this stock market crash begins, a handful of people who can see what's coming will double, triple, or quadruple their money by using; a little-known mutual fund that was set up to hedge against lust such a meltdown. I discuss it later in this report. By using its services, it will be ridiculously easy for informed investors to make a great deal of money.

But the big problem won't be making money. The big problem will be knowing; when to abandon whatever it is that most people call money today, prior to the year 2000. Your problem will be this: timing; your sale of today's bank credit money for tomorrow's money — the money of the next millennium. Money in America after January 1, 2000, is unlikely to be pieces of green paper with Presidents' pictures on them.

The stock market's pre-2000 meltdown isn't the really bad news. It will merely be a late warning of the far more serious events to come after 2000. The public will not believe this story until after the market crashes. It will then be way too late for the average investor to profit from what I'm going to tell you in this report.

Let me make myself perfectly clear, as President Nixon used to say. Because you are reading this report, you have been given a distant early warning. You are already way ahead of several billion future victims. Their lack of knowledge and then their unwillingness to take evasive action have given you a head start.

Just don't forget this crucial fact: the finish line in this desperate race is absolutely fixed. It's January 1, 2000. Don't waste the head start that you now enjoy. If you sit there, nod your head in agreement, and then do nothing, you're in worse shape than your competitors. You'll be more responsible. The Bible warns:

> For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more (Luke 12:48),

The Domino Effect

I'm not talking here about a worldwide stock market panic. That's a minor event. I'm talking about the worldwide panic (except in Red China) that will follow the stock market panic. You may be thinking: "What kinds of things are you talking about?" Here's a real-world example. If all of your credit cards are rejected as "expired" at the check-out stand, and your local bank's ATM cash machine won't give you any cash, and your checks start bouncing because your account says "closed because of no recent activity," will you grab your passbooks, go to your bank, and empty all of your accounts for cash? Of course you will . . . if you still can. (By the year 2000, it may be out of business.)

If the same thing has been happening to 90% of the bank accounts and credit cards on earth, do you think the entire banking system might get into trouble? Like maybe bankruptcy [bank + rupture]? Do you think there will be a long line in front of every bank still in business (and not many will be)? If so, you're beginning to get the picture.

Here's another example. Your city is supplied daily by a railroad that brings in bulk items that can't be hauled by trucks. Millions of tank cars, grain cars, and coal cars keep America's economy running. They keep our cities alive. They keep you alive. You probably don't think much about freight trains. You don't even notice them. Why? Because the trains run on time. And why shouldn't they? They're computerized! But what if these computers go down?

Is this example merely hypothetical? I don't think so. In Datamation (Jan. 1, 1996), David Baum reported that back in 1995, the Union Pacific railroad started running into problems with its five year scheduling, budgeting, and forecasting operations. The year 2000 did not compute. "Why not?" someone asked. (This, by the way, is how Social Security also found out in 1989: a ten-year forecasting exercise that revealed the anomaly.)

Union Pacific officials began researching its problem. Its grim discovery: over 82% of its programs are sensitive to date-related fields. It has 7,000 programs totaling 12 million lines of code. Estimated cost of conversion: 200,000 man-hours or 100 staff years. The company in late 1995 had not yet decided which conversion tools it would use. I assume that it has by now. The problem is, Union Pacific is not America's only railroad. Will all of the others be compliant in 2000? More to the point: Will the North American freight transport system as a whole be compliant?

Consider this. Railroad cars are owned by investors. The railroads lease them. A car may be transferred from company to company as it is directed to shipping points. Mainframe computers integrate this system. They ship cars hither and yen. If this privately owned, unregulated computer network loses its collective memory, the railroad companies will lose track of the cars. In January. Now think: New York, Boston, Detroit.

The government will have to nationalize the railroads. But if the banks go down, how will the government — any government — collect taxes? Or what if the IRS computer goes down? Or what if taxpayers think that the IRS computer has gone down? There will be a massive tax revolt. How will the Federal government pay its employees?

You may be thinking, "Things like this could never happen!" As recently as October, 1996, that's what I thought, too. But things like this are going to happen unless something very much like miracle takes place. I'm not counting on miracles.

Meanwhile, I hope you're not thinking this: "If this really were about to happen, President Clinton would surely warn us." Anyone who thinks that any national politician with enough authority to be taken seriously will sound the alarm and risk triggering a banking panic is not much more reliable than a mainframe computer will be in the year 2000. Here is my prediction:

This Will Be the Biggest Social Crisis of My Life (and Yours)

I'm a historian by training. If what I think is about to happen really does happen, history textbooks will include at least a page about it in a thousand years, the same way they include a paragraph on the bubonic plague of 1348-50. (That grim event killed one-third of the population of Europe, from Italy to Iceland.)

I'm a financial commentator by profession. If what I think is about to happen really does happen, investors will be talking about it in 60 years, the same way we talk about the 1929 crash, the Great Depression, and World War II, all rolled into one.

This could be the biggest single event in the history of the West. Am I exaggerating? Not deliberately. But I hope I'm wrong. Ridiculously wrong. Dead wrong. What I'm about to tell you I didn't believe as recently as last October. I would have said, "It really couldn't be this bad." But what I have learned since then has changed my mind.

I first read about the Millennium Bug back in 1992. Robert X. Cringely (a pseudonym) wrote about it in his book on the recent history of the microcomputer industry, Accidental Empires. Warning: Don't do what I did in 1992. Don't read it and say, "So what?" I did not understand the implications of his prophecy back then. It took over four years for the realization to hit me. When it did, my life's plans changed overnight. I hope it doesn't take you four years. Here's what he wrote.

> We can predict the date by which the old IBM — IBM the mainframe computing giant — will be dead. We can predict the very day that the mainframe computer era will end. . . . On December 31, 1999, right at midnight, when the big ball drops and people are kissing in New York Times Square, the era of mainframe computing will be over.

I know, I know: So what? We can all live without IBM, can't we? No. I mean this literally: "No, all of us can't live without IBM." It would be like trying to remain productive with three-quarters of your memory gone. You couldn't do it.

Your family would put you in a convalescent home to "convalesce." ("To convalesce" in this setting means "to stop breathing.") We are about to enter the Alzheimer's economy.

The Alzheimer's Economy

Business decision-makers in Fortune 1000-size firms throughout the world — the companies listed on the world's stock exchanges — use data stored on mainframe computers to make their decisions. Something in the range of 75% to 80% of this decision-relevant information is stored on mainframe computers, mainly IBM computers. The smooth operation of the free market is totally dependent on a continuing flow of accurate information. If the world's mainframe computers go down or start spewing out inaccurate information, the world's economy will be like a person who is struck down by Alzheimer's disease. Struck down overnight!

The world's economy today is not completely dependent on mainframe computers. Red China isn't. India isn't. Bangladesh isn't. But the West's economy is so dependent that any break in the information system or the payments system will create massive unemployment. The enormous specialization of jobs in the modern economy places us at risk if the means of payment goes down —banks —or public utilities become unpredictable.

But don't businesses have lots of desktop computers? Yes, but this fact will save the West's economy only in the long, post-2000 recovery phase, after trillions of dollars worth of capital —including jobs —have been lost. First, most desktops and software are not Year 2000-compliant. Second, a desktop computer has a lot of power — vastly more power than older mainframes have. The problem is not computer power. The problem is the incredibly complex, highly specialized computer programs that run only on mainframe computers. These are old programs, and they cannot be rewritten for desktops in the short time we have remaining. What I am saying is this: all systems can't be repaired in time. But if all of them aren't compliant, the information system fails.

Most of the computers in a system must be compliant for the system itself to survive. But most mainframes will not be compliant in the year 2000. After 2000, how will decision-makers in governments, big businesses, and the financial markets make accurate decisions? How will the free market link together supply and demand? Keep in mind the computer user's phrase: garbage in, garbage out. What if decision-makers can access only garbage?

Year 2000-noncompliant mainframe computers belong in the equivalent of retirement homes or convalescent homes, yet they are running the world's governments and its largest businesses. It is now too late to get rid of these mainframes, since they run the day-to-day operations. Social Security sends out 50 million checks a month. (SSA's Kathleen Adams, Consortium Quarterly, Oct. 1996, p. 10). All governments in the West do the same. Bureaucrats can't shut down these mainframes without shutting down the Governments. (Candidate Bill Clinton promised in 1992 to "end welfare as we know it." He didn't do it, of course. Neither did Congress. But the Millennium Bug will.)

Consider another problem. Allstate Insurance is America's second-largest insurance company. It relies on a mainframe computer system that has 40,000 programs operating as one complex system. This system has 40 million lines of code! In 1995, Allstate figured out that it had a problem with its system. It hired a hundred programmers to fix the code. The company has budgeted $40 million for this project.

The programmers are not scheduled to complete the "fix" until late 1998. But all experts in this field say that at least 40% of a repair project must be devoted to testing. It takes months of testing to get a reliable assessment. The new program must be run side by side with the old one to see if it crashes the system. If the "fixed" program crashes the system five months into (say) a six-month test, the entire program must be examined, repaired, and completely tested again.

Do you really believe that a team of 100 programmers will go through 40 million lines of code and not make a single mistake the first time through? A mistake in one line of code can affect any of the other 40 million lines of code. This could shut down the whole system. Here is what one of the programmers told a Wall Street Journal reporter:

> When I started here, I thought I would come in, write a thousand lines of code, and change the world. Now, I'm afraid to change even a single byte. Everything is just so complicated. (December 11, 1996, second front page.)

What if the team misses the deadline? What if Allstate is threatened with bankruptcy in 1999? Will another insurance company buy its assets? What insurance company? I am aware of no major insurance company anywhere on earth that is Year 2000-compliant today.

Next problem: What if people holding cash value life insurance policies start demanding their money at the contractual rate of 7% or 8%? If they think their insurance companies could go bankrupt, won't they cash-out those policies? Meanwhile, other policy-holders will stop sending in premiums. Would you send in premiums to a company that you think could go bankrupt in a year? What will the companies do?

Here is my prediction: (1) they will go to Congress and ask to have all such cash value contracts suspended because of a national emergency (and there will indeed be a national emergency in 1999); (2) failing to receive such government intervention, they will start selling off their assets. What assets? Mainly these: mortgages, bonds, and stocks.

Interest rates will skyrocket. As rates climb, other cash value policy holders will exercise their right to get cash. The downward spiral in the capital markets will continue. What little is left of the stock market will fall again. The present market value of bonds and mortgages will plummet. Without mortgage money, the real estate market will collapse. Sellers will not be able to sell real estate except by carrying back paper (debt), in the midst of rising interest rates and a falling mortgage market, when nobody will want to issue long-term credit and everyone will want cash.

I ask you: Is my scenario too exaggerated? Too extreme? Too apocalyptic? Fine. Tell me: Where am I wrong? If you tell me that this isn't really that big a problem, answer me this: Why is Allstate spending $40 million trying to fix it? Why isn't Allstate Year 2000-compliant today, after two years of expensive repairs? Finally, do you think all large noncompliant companies are as flush with money as Allstate is? Where will they get the money or the programmers? They won't. They'll die.

Without liquidity, there is no mobility. There is a market for urban real estate today, and places to buy in safer, smaller locations, only because hardly anyone has seen what the Millennium Bug could do. When they see what will happen, it will be very difficult to buy and sell real estate except for cash. "He who hesitates is lost," the old saying goes. This time, I believe it. Do you?

It's Catch-22

Most mainframes are located in large cities, where big businesses and big government are. Warning: When the handful of programmers who can fix only a handful of the thousands of mainframes that must be fixed finally realize in 1999 that most computer-driven systems will go down, some of them will quit. They will leave the job unfinished. They will see what the Millennium Bug can do to a city, and they will offer their services to some rural public utility company, which will hire them in a flash (probably at $200 per hour).

It's a Catch-22 problem. Businessmen and politicians will put up the money necessary to make the necessary repairs only when they get very, very scared about what the effects of the Millennium Bug will be. They will have every right to be scared. They aren't scared enough today. But the very forecasts that will scare them will scare off the technicians who can make the repairs. The more motivated by fear the managers become, the more motivated the programmers will be to leave.

I have a good friend who did the original programming 20 years ago for Medicaid. I was on the phone with him for hours in mid-December. He told me the following:

> I knew back in the 1970's what could happen to the economy if the people we worked for didn't replace both our software [programs] and the hardware [machines] used to run them by the year 2000. But the two-digit year tradition was two decades old by the time I got into this business. It was built into the actual hardware. We couldn't change this in the 1970's. So we wrote the code. But the state governments are still using the old code and old machines. They never upgraded. It's too late now.
> The code that I wrote and the other team members wrote cannot be revised in time. The states have "patched" it for two decades. The original code's documentation is gone. The code's program compilers [organizers] are gone. Medicaid is a state program. The states don't know where I am. Nobody has called me. Our team is scattered. Medicaid will go under on Jan. 1, 2000.

This man has already moved to the area of the United States that I am now looking at very closely. He has told me that he plans to use his money to "buy lifestyle, not more paper money investments." He could make a fortune as a programmer, but he will not move to a large city. He sees the threat to his lifestyle that his programming in the 1970's has created. He wants out of the trap.

Then there is the IRS computer in Martinsburg, West Virginia. It's an old IBM system. My one optimistic advisor says that it will suffer major problems in tracking depreciation schedules. But will the whole system collapse? Technologically, probably not, he says. But, he says, the IRS loses up to 20% of its data files each year anyway, which is why they can't provide data on cases older than three years. If taxpayers in 2000 think they can't be caught, many will stop paying. If they stop paying, the income tax system will collapse. If revenues drop, what happens to the government debt markets? I mean every government on earth! Think about the interest rate implications. 20%? 30%? What? (This assumes that the IRS computer will not actually crash.)

What about bank cash machines? One programmer posted a message on a Year 2000 discussion forum that I follow daily. She says that she has revised 30 ATM (automatic teller machine) systems. Some were year 2000 compliant; some weren't. Some used four digits; some didn't. Her conclusion: the ATM systems as a unit will default to 2 digits. She didn't say it, but this implies that there will be a major breakdown. It is crucial that your bank's credit card be year 2000 compliant now. You dare not trust a promise of "real soon now."

A December 6, 1996 posting from a computer specialist surveying the situation in England reported that he had contacted a local water works company. It was still using a mainframe IBM machine. The water works had not begun the repair project. What about your local water and sewer system? Is it year 2000 compliant now? Are you sure of this? Are you going to find out? When?

Let me share a letter that a very skilled programmer sent me in December, 1996. I had sent him my preliminary findings on the Year 2000 Problem. He works for a large company that does these repairs, so I can't name him. He lives at the edge of a northern city with a large ghetto with hundreds of thousands of people on welfare. He says that the repairs required are impossible to do. Our only hope is with the Internet and its communications opportunities, which are run by microcomputers, not mainframes.

> On all (even slightly) complex upgrade projects I have always told the customer it is cheaper to rewrite from scratch than to try to retrofit the old software. I cannot even read my own code after 6 months unless it is copiously documented. I can almost never read someone else's code or follow their logic. Systems with 20 years of patches would be nearly impossible to fix.
> Good programmers do not want to get into year 2000 fixes because there is no future in it (beyond the year 2000).
> Testing "fixes" is close to impossible. Many systems pronounced "Year 2000 Compliant" may fail when the real year 2000 hits. . . .
> The only chance we have is vast deregulation and decentralization of government and large centralized organizations — especially 'near government' ones.
> I am going to make sure I have plenty of cash, food, and survival gear on hand come January 2000.

The bad news is the banks, insurance companies, and even public utilities may be headed for a breakdown. The good news is that so are the governments. Most of them. (But not Red China, which never had the money to buy mainframes.)

Seminars for lawyers are now being held on the Year 2000 Problem. Some estimates run as high as $1.3 trillion in settlements in the U.S. alone! Noncompliant companies will be sued (if the banking system survives). Think of this when you hear "Dow 10,000." Corporate executives and Board members will start bailing out before the year 2000. Massive insider trading will be the signal that stock market mania will turn into panic.

The Looming Crisis of the Internal Revenue Service

Some of my subscribers took me seriously when they received my Year 2000-compliance sample letter to mail to their banks, mutual funds, and suppliers. (I have included a copy of this letter on page 3 of the enclosed insert.) Some of them sent me copies of these replies. There were some choice ones.

The most important letter came from a man in the securities business. He said that he contacted a friend of his who works for the Internal Revenue Service. He was told verbally by his friend that the IRS will not be compliant in the year 2000. I quote from his letter:

> I ran the year 2000 scenario by him and asked him what the IRS awareness level is, what they are doing, etc. His response was that the IRS computer system is a mess and that they have only in the last few months begun to talk about the need to do something.
> When I pressed him on the "not enough time left" issue, here is what he revealed. In 1989 the Social Security Administration started working on the problem. The SSA projects that they will be Year 2000 compliant in 1998 (maybe they will be, maybe they won't). . . . . It was then he revealed the IRS strategy. They plan on simply tapping into the SSA system and databases! Granted, there will be no tax-return histories, etc. But there will still be a significant amount of comparable data that the IRS can use, i.e. SSNs, earnings histories, etc. Of course, this assumes that the SSA can make the deadline. Time will tell.

Obviously, I cannot get formal confirmation on this story from the IRS. If the IRS were to let this story get out to the general public, this would begin to affect the government's credit markets. If the IRS is going to have problems tracking payments, then the Treasury's promise of "full faith and credit of the United States government" becomes highly problematical. Ever since Franklin Roosevelt had the U.S. government steal the nation's privately owned gold in 1933, this catch phrase has undergirded the nation's capital markets, and through foreign central bank holdings of T-bills, the world's capital markets.

The promise of the U.S. government to continue to tax us, so that it can meet the interest payments on its ever-growing debt, is supposedly far more reliable than the promise of gold. Gold's promise is based on geology: you can dig up only so much of it. The government's promise is different: it can dig into our wallets, or at least print up the money, for far less than it costs to dig up and refine an equivalent dollar value of gold.

To reduce its costs of getting our wallets, the IRS installed an IBM computer system and paid to have it programmed. That was over 30 years ago. Now the IRS faces what all the rest of the computer-dependent world faces: a drastic increase in costs.

On January 30, 1996, the IRS admitted publicly that its 11-year, $4 billion computer upgrade had failed. The IRS's Assistant Commissioner, Arthur Gross, told a commission established by Congress that the agency's systems are "dysfunctional." Nevertheless, he said, the IRS must continue to use these systems for the foreseeable future. (New York Times, Jan. 31, p. Al.)

On February 5, the Wall Street Journal ran an article on the editorial page that was written by the former historian of the IRS, Shelley Davis. This article confirmed the worst suspicions of anyone who had read the New York Times article. But Ms. Davis raised the issue that the New York Times had not mentioned: the Year 2000 Problem. Here's her assessment:

> Without decisive congressional action there may only be a few years before we face an IRS meltdown. The looming

"year 2000" software conversion issue brings a chill to those who realize its seriousness. The same Arthur Gross who admitted the intellectual lapses of the IRS said last fall that a failure to complete this conversion "would mean a major disabling of the IRS."

The next day, I called Ms. Davis and did an audio taped interview with her. I asked her point-blank if the IRS would be flying blind if the revision of its code turns out to be as big a failure as the last 11 years' worth of revisions. She said that "flying blind" describes it perfectly. (On how you can receive a copy of this interview, see the last page of this report.) Then she made an amazing statement: the figure of 11 years is an *under*estimate. She said that the IRS has been trying to update its computers for 30 years. Each time, the update has failed. She said that by renaming each successive attempt, the IRS has concealed a problem that has been going on for 30 years. She was the IRS's historian. I take her seriously.

She told me that the IRS estimates that it will take 900 programmers working full time to revise each module of the system, and there are four main modules. Where will they hire and train enough programmers to make the system compliant?

I have two questions. First, how will a non-compliant IRS computer gain access to a (promised, hoped-for) compliant Social Security computer after Jan. 1, 2000? If the SSA is going to defend its computer files from data corruption by non-compliant computers, the IRS computer will have to be locked out. Certainly, there can be no input from the IRS.

Second, will the SSA meet its deadline? It has not been easy for me to get information on the status of the SSA's repair program. Congressman Stephen Horn's office released a report card giving SSA an "A." But this report card was graded on a curve. The SSA was in competition only with other U.S. government agencies. The problem is, the real test will be pass-fail. It will not be graded on a curve.

Can Social Security Meet Its Deadline?

By going onto the World Wide Web, I was able to locate a copy of CIO Magazine, a small circulation publication that goes to CIO's: chief information officers. These are the people in charge of large computer departments. In the September 15, 1996 issue, an article appeared, "Will Your Systems Survive the Year 2000?" It reported that the SSA has adopted an algorithm that translates two-digit years and converts them to four digits. "By June 1996, changes were complete for six million lines of code, with 24 million left to go" (p. 58).

Think about this. The SSA discovered the problem in 1989. They began working on the correction in 1991. Their announced deadline for 100% compliance is December, 1998. This means that in order to run parallel testing and leave time to make corrections, they have to finish this year or early next year. In five years, they completed the repair of 6 million lines of code. From June of 1996 through (say) December of 1997, they must complete an additional 24 million lines. Furthermore, the SSA has not yet completed its inventory of operating systems, which keep the overall system running.

Testing requires parallel simultaneous runs. Identical data must go into the existing program and the revised program. The revised program must produce identical results. It must not shut down. If it shuts down, the programmers must go through 30 million lines of code to find what went wrong. A bad fix in one line can corrupt any other line. Question: Where will they find the unused computer capacity to run the necessary tests? Are they now running the SSA computer at, say, 45% capacity? If not, where will they get the mandatory extra capacity to run the parallel test?

This question is the Achilles' heel of all glib talk about compliance. At least 40% of the cost of making a system compliant is in testing. But there is not enough excess mainframe computer capacity sitting around dormant that will enable the tests to be performed. The world will go into the year 2000 with its handful of hopefully compliant mainframe systems still untested! Any organization that says it will be year 2000-compliant that cannot show where it will get the additional 100% of computer capacity needed to run the tests is misinforming the public. Do not accept anyone's assurance of compliance without proof that the organization has this extra computer capacity.

The SSA keeps assuring Congress that it will meet the deadline. Well, so what? Anyone can promise anything about compliance. How can any project this complex be forecasted accurately? In 85% of the cases, large-scale programming Projects are brought in late. What Congressmen refuse to ask (in public) is the really crucial question: "What happens to Social Security if the project is not finished in 2000?" Fortunately, we have a roundabout answer from Kathleen M. Adams, who is associate commissioner for systems design and development for the SSA. She told CIO Magazine:

> We send out 43 million checks each month, and we have to have as close to zero defects as we can. Even with a 1 percent error rate, we'd have 430,000 people coming in or calling our district offices; so we do everything we can to avoid risk in our core functions .

(She said 50 million checks in Consortium Quarterly.) What if SSA is, say, 10% noncompliant? Will anyone ever get through to Social Security again? No. The busy signal will be permanent. Lines will start forming in front of local offices. Or, what if the checks go out, but 10% are wrong? "The worst thing that can happen," she says, "is if an application does the calculation but does it wrong. It would be better if it broke. Broke is the operational word. That's what the government will be.

There is no good reason to believe that Social Security's computer will be compliant. But if it isn't, then the IRS will not be able to track down tax cheats. Word will get out. It will then not take very much to persuade people to stop filing. There will then be a huge population explosion: tax deductible dependents will multiply in the year 2000, thereby eliminating salary tax withholding.

Here will be the tip-off that the IRS is going down: The government will pass a law making it mandatory for businesses to verify all claims regarding the existence of emplpoyees' dependents. When that law is proposed, or when the IRS announces it through the Federal Register, it will be time to sell your government bonds. (Maybe sooner.)

You want a chuckle? Try this. Federal law now mandates that after January 1, 2000, every business in the U.S. must submit its tax withholding forms and checks by computer. No more mailing in paper checks! Millions of noncompliant PC's will send in mountains of noncompliant data to a noncompliant IRS computer, presumably by way of third parties that will format all these noncompliant PC data into one gigantic system-destroying virus.

Then the IRS will tap into the Social Security Administration's computer to verify everything. Ain't we got fun!

Stocks, Bonds, and Banks

On December 6, 1996, Congressman John Dingell (D-Michigan) put the Securities & Exchange Commission on notice: it's time to get the securities industry compliant. He cited an article in Security Industry News (Nov. 18), "Why the Securities Industry Can't Afford to Hide Its Eyes." He refers to "the catastrophic business and economic consequences" of this problem if industry delays. This is not the kind of language you read in the conventional financial press, which survives through its conventional advertisers.

Dingell asked for an annual report, beginning on June 1, 1997, regarding what the SEC and other regulatory agencies and organizations are doing, including broker-dealers. He also asked for a report on "what the SEC is mandating with respect to disclosure by publicly reporting on companies regarding their potential liabilities as a result of year 2000 computer problems and what they are doing to address them." Unfortunately, Dingell is no longer chairman of the Committee of Commerce. (I never thought I would write "unfortunately.") He cannot compel the SEC to comply.

Still unconvinced? Consider this. On June 17, 1996, the Comptroller of the Currency's Administrator of National Banks sent out the OCC Advisory Letter. It was addressed to the Chief Executive Officers of all national banks. It was signed by Jimmy Barton, the Chief National Bank Examiner. He sent them a copy of a report by the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council (FFIEC). This organization represents the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the FDIC (insurance), and the National Credit Union Administration. The report spoke of the "substantial risks" of this problem. Pay particular attention to this statement (emphasis added):

> . . . industry estimates are that only 30 percent are currently addressing the issue. . . . This lack of planning could result in the extended or permanent disruption of computer system operations. . . . This issue affects EVERY financial institution. . . .

Notice that it does not say that 30% of banks are compliant. It says that 30% are: "addressing the issue" in some way. The financial world has not grasped the magnitude of the risk that is now facing us. We are talking about the system of payments: the flow of funds that keeps every institution's doors open, from supermarkets to the local police department. We are talking about the world's fractional reserve banking system, a gigantic inverted pyramid of debt that will topple and shut down when people seeking cash create bank runs. This will shrink the division of labor. Such an event is called a depression.

The two largest banks in the United States are Citicorp and Chase Manhattan Bank. Citicorp has a staggering total of 400 million lines of code to check, with an estimated 5% to 10% noncompliant. Citicorp began its fix in 1995. (Investor's Business Daily, Feb. 12, 1997.) Its noncompliant code may be larger than Social Security's entire system! (After six years, Social Security still isn't repaired.) Chase Manhattan has 200 million lines of code (Software Magazine, March, 1997, p. 32). As for the Federal Reserve System, our nation's central bank, it is in the assessment stage (Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, Financial Update, Oct.-Dec. 1996, p. 3). Not fixed. Not testing. Assessment. Oh, my!

What about Desktop computers? They feed data into every mainframe system. Karl Feilder is a South African specialist in desktop computers. He says that the problems as a whole for desktop PC's will be worse than the mainframe problem, since PC's are uncoordinated. Recently, he checked out 125 brand-new pentium PC's from five different manufacturers. Not one was year 2000-compliant.

Here is the problem, meaning our problem: standard off-the-shelf software for PC's is rarely 100% compliant, no matter what the manufacturers say. Spreadsheets are especially vulnerable. This includes accounting systems. Small businesses will be hit with a crisis that very few businessmen will be prepared to deal with. Time is running out.

Consider what will happen if 250 million desktop computers (worldwide) begin malfunctioning in the first week of January, 2000. What if these malfunctions, especially in spreadsheets and accounting, are not detected early? We will see the words of Social Security's Kathleen Adams come true:

"The worst thing that can happen is if an application does the calculation but does it wrong."

A tip: if you want a quick test and possible fix for your personal PC, free of charge, go to www.righTime.com and download the software program. Warning: Do not run any date test without backing up your entire hard disk. Also, do not save any changes to your hard disk while in 2000 mode. You need to know that there are risks in not testing and risks in testing. It's your decision. I'm just trying to warn you that this is not strictly a mainframe problem.

One way to test for year 2000-compliance is to set your PC's date at 12/31/99 and its clock at 23:58. Then wait two minutes. Does the date go to 1980 or 1984? Also, some of your software is probably noncompliant. Your data could get corrupted. That's why you must back up your disk before you run this test. (Even telling you about this test creates risk of a lawsuit. Someone may find that his system goes down, so he sues me. "You told me to run this test! It's all your fault!" Let me make this clear: We are all trapped by this problem. We're at risk if we sit and do nothing. We're at risk if we run tests. We're at risk if our solutions don't work. My view is this: It's better to know what's coming and do your best to evade the worst effects. But it's your decision, not mine.)

National Defense

So far, I've been talking about the economy. It's time to look at the West's defense system. I've been only mildly pessimistic so far. Now I get really glum. Maybe so far you've remained skeptical. "This just can't be as bad as North says." Now it's time to let someone living inside the calm eye of the hurricane tell the story. You may think I've exaggerated the problem. I don't blame you. Prior to October, 1996, I would have said the same thing. Now let me show you what pushed me over the edge when I found out about it, six months after the event.

On April 16, 1996, Assistant Secretary of Defense Emmett Paige, Jr. testified to Congressman Horn's subcommittee on Government Management, Information and Technology. His testimony should have been front-page news all over the world (especially in Asia.) He said, "The Department of Defense is very much aware of this serious problem and we are treating it much as we would a computer virus." He went on: "We face a firm deadline and there is no 'silver bullet' product in the marketplace to find, fix, and test all the changes required. The impact of taking no action on the Year 2000 Problem is that we risk the high probability of severely hampering, in some cases, many Defense activities. Some of those activities will involve military operations. Does this place some of these operations at risk? I believe that it does." He was adamant: There is no silver bullet. There will be no quick fix that will save the system in the last hour. Don't count on a technological miracle.

The problem, he went on to say, is not just with individual computers in the system. The problem is the possible failure of the entire military communications system. He admitted the possibility of this terrifying scenario:

> If a particular system fails, we have generally learned how to work around an individual failure. However, if a problem, that happens to be common in most of our systems, were to cause failures in all of those systems at the same instant, the consequences might be catastrophic. The Year 2000 problem has these characteristics.
> If our personnel and payroll systems process dates incorrectly, current employees, members of the Armed Services, and our annuitants cannot be properly paid. If our logistics and transportation systems process dates incorrectly, people and equipment can not be delivered to the correct place at the correct time. This, of course, could have catastrophic consequences should it happen during a time when our fighting forces are being called upon to react to national security crisis or lend emergency assistance. Some of our weapons systems would not function properly. Our databases would be greatly corrupted.

He pointed out that America's defense is dependent on a vast system of computers, yet these do not speak the same computer languages. Some of these languages are very obscure, he said, and (he didn't say this) almost forgotten by modern programmers. This is the software problem. Then came the corker: it may also be a hardware problem. Consider this:

> Another problem is that we may find the Year 2000 date problem in computer chips used only by the Department of Defense. Those chips may no longer be in production. Some of these chips are because of special military requirements, such as in a missile. Others of these are part of the legacy of past policies that allowed broad use of military-unique specifications rather than encouraging the use of commercial, non- developmental items.

Got that? We may be dependent on chips that have the Millennium Bug, and these chips may be out of production. I conclude one of three things: (1) the military does not know everything it needs to know about its high-tech weapons systems; (2) the military experts who know aren't telling Mr. Paige because the news is too horrifying; (3) Mr. Paige knows we're in big, big trouble, but he isn't saying it in unambiguous language, for obvious political reasons.

Meanwhile, Red China has the largest army on earth and a navy that uses World War II-era technology, i.e., is not dependent on mainframe computers. Today, our high-tech navy can hold the Chinese navy in check. In 1999, however, I would not be an investor in Taiwan or in companies dependent on imports from Taiwan. Taiwanese residents hold more U.S. government debt than any foreign nation except Japan. What if they start selling? This alone could create a panic in the U.S. debt market. Interest rates could skyrocket.

Here, you must pay very close attention. What Secretary Paige said about the military's mainframe computers is true of all other mainframe computers. They must all be compliant internally and also compliant externally, or none of them is safe. This is the key fact regarding the coming breakdown. If the following statement is accurate, we face an enormous disaster:

> The management aspects associated with the Year 2000 are a real concern. With our global economy and the vast electronic exchange of information among our systems and databases, the timing of coordinated changes in date formats is critical. Much dialogue will need to occur in order to prevent a "fix" in one system from causing another system to "crash." If a system fails to properly process information, the result could be the corruption of other databases, extending perhaps to databases in other government agencies or countries. Again, inaction is simply unacceptable; coordinated action is imperative.

Got that? Corruption of data in every defense system, all over the world. This presumably means NATO. He warns that a compliant computer can crash a noncompliant computer. It works both ways: a noncompliant computer can corrupt the data in a compliant computer. The entire system must work perfectly as a unit for any part of it to be reliable. To fix one computer is not sufficient. We must fix every computer that is in the system, and then coordinate these fixes, all over the world. In short — and I mean this literally — the Programmer had better be God. He must be omniscient. He must also be omnipotent. He must know exactly what to do and have the power to make other programmers do it his way. Finally, he must have the money to do it.

So, what is the military doing? Study groups are being formed. "The Military Departments and Defense Agencies are assessing the impact of the Year 2000 Problem and prioritizing the needed work on the systems for which they are responsible." In short, there are committees. But there isn't is a compliant system. He closed with this warning: "We cannot spend an inordinate amount of time analyzing and assessing the problem; we do not have the time."

You should read Secretary Paige's complete testimony. For those of you with access to the World Wide Web, I have posted it on my Web site. I have also posted other testimony from military officials. My Web address is:

www.garynorth.com

Computer World is a specialized computer publication that goes to programmers. It is not on most newsstands. In the January 2, 1997 issue, it ran several reports under the general title, "Year 2000 may ambush U.S. military." How serious is this problem? Retired Air Force General Thomas McInerney assessed it this way: "I think the president or vice president should declare that this is a potential national emergency."

Anyone who tells you that the Year 2000 Problem is "really not all that bad" is saying that the publicly admitted threat of the breakdown of the West's entire defense system is not all that important. I think it's very important. What do you think?

Your Check Will Not Be in the Mail!

On September 24, 1996, Congressman Horn, who is Chairman of the Subcommittee on Government Management, Information, and Technology, submitted to the full committee a report on the Year 2000 Problem. The Subcommittee held hearings on April 16. He said that there is not enough concern among government agencies over the threat this problem poses to the operations of the entire U.S. government:

> Without greater urgency, those agencies risk being unable to provide services or perform functions that they are charged by law with performing. Senior agency management officials must take aggressive action if these problems are to be avoided.

Yet despite Congressman Horn's valid warning, little is happening. He knows this. These agencies must shift hundreds of millions of dollars from their existing budgets to hire outside programmers to rewrite the code that runs these agencies. This isn't being done. More to the point, the longer they delay, the worse the problem gets. You can't just go out and hire programmers who are familiar with the old code. As businesses find out what threatens them, the demand for these highly specialized services will soar.

The Subcommittee's report warns: "This issue may cause banks, securities firms and insurance companies to ascertain whether the companies they finance or insure are year 2000 compliant before making investment decisions." It also says that companies will start demanding contractual warranties guaranteeing against Year 2000 breakdowns.

A memorandum from the Library of Congress's Congressional Research Service (CRS) has warned that "it may be too late to correct all of the nation's systems." So, the question arises: Which systems will survive and which ones won't? Remember, the CRS is a government agency. Its researchers tend to guard their words carefully. Here is the CRS's "restrained" analysis (not the opinion of some "crazy" newsletter editor). Problem areas include:

> Malfunctioning of certain Defense Department weapon systems;
> Erroneous flight schedules generated by the Federal Aviation Administration's air traffic controllers;
> State and local computer systems becoming corrupted with false records, causing errors in income and property tax records, payroll, retirement systems, motor vehicle registrations, utilities regulations, and a breakdown of some public transportation systems.

I don't think these are small issues, though there are worse ones. They will probably start receiving media attention when it is so late in the process that there will be massive foul-ups in coordinating the computer code's revisions. The Subcommittee's report warns:

> The clock is ticking and most Federal agencies have not inventoried their major systems in order to detect where the problem lies within and among each Federal department, field office and division. The date for completion of this project cannot slip.

By "cannot," the Subcommittee's report-writer meant "must not." The date can surely be allowed to slip. It almost certainly will be allowed to slip. The report went on:

> Additionally, the task may be more difficult for the public sector, where systems have been in use for decades, may lack software documentation and therefore increase the time it takes from the inventory phase to solution.

Did you get that? The software code's records are gone! Then how can anyone repair it? It can't be done. Remember also that we're not just talking about the United States government. We're talking about every government —national, state, and local —anywhere on earth that has its data stored on a noncompliant mainframe computer system or which relies on any third-party computer service that uses uncorrected software.

Social Security began revising its code in 1991. The programmers still are not finished. Estimated completion date: December, 1998. This leaves only one year to test something in the range of 50 million lines of code! What if the 7-year repair fails? We don't need any more official promises that Social Security will be compliant. We need sworn Congressional testimony on what happens if their computers aren't compliant. If Social Security's computers go down or haywire, what happens to the almost 50 million households that receive monthly checks? If their checks don't come, millions of people will call local Social Security offices. They'll get busy signals. Then they will go down to the local offices. Lines. Everyone will see these lines on television. The banks will be next.

All this assumes that the banking system will still be operating. By January, 2000, bank runs may already have shut down the capital markets. The Federal Reserve will have printed up mountains of paper money to stem the panic, but what good will paper money be? How will checks be cashed? How will credit cards bills be paid off! With cash? How much will the cash be worth? I am talking about a breakdown in the payments system.

If the Payments System Breaks Down. . . .

The typical big manufacturing business has thousands of suppliers. Today, businesses keep inventories low by means of a production system called just in time production. This production system is highly vulnerable. Without inventories, manufacturers are not allowed many mistakes. If a supplier fails to deliver a crucial component, a business's production system grinds to a halt.

The reason businesses have been able to adopt a just-in-time system is because of computers. Large businesses use mainframes. They also use Federal Express and similar overnight delivery services. Crucial components come from all over the world. Everything hinges on one thing: the payments system. When you ship an item, you expect to be paid for it.

What if the payments system goes down? First, banks. Second, if they somehow remain open, government welfare agencies. I don't mean just the U.S. government; I mean every government that relies on mainframe computers. All over the world, if these mainframes are not Year 2000-compliant, the checks will not be sent out. No government can address millions of checks by hand.

When granny doesn't get her check, she has to get money out of the bank (assuming her bank is still open). She cuts back on purchases. Every business that sells to her is hit. Then she calls her children, begging for money. Then she moves in with them, if she can sell her house. If she can't, she may have to rent out part of her home to get income.

All along the line, things grind to a halt. Businesses can't produce on time. They start firing workers. How many suppliers does a large automobile manufacturer have? Estimates run as high as 15,000. What about a large city's power-generation plant? It has in the range of 5,000 suppliers. On and on it goes. Production gets spotty and unreliable. So do sales. People can't plan rationally. They can't count on their suppliers, and they can't count on their customers. Past markets don't tell them anything about today's markets. This is the Alzheimer's economy in action, or inaction, as the case will be.

There is one nationally known politician who gets at least part of the picture. On July 31, 1996, Senator Moynihan (Democrat of New York) sent a letter to President Clinton. In it, he asked the crucial question regarding the banking system. Your future, my future, and the economy's future are encapsulated in this question:

> . . . what happens to the economy if the problem is not resolved by mid-1999? Are corporations and consumers not likely to withhold spending decisions and possibly even withdraw funds from banks if they fear the economy is facing chaos?

Then What Is the Good News?

If the banks do shut down and stay closed, this will be a disaster for individuals. But consider what it will do to governments. The entire bureaucratic monster known as the welfare State rests on three pillars: (1) the promise of security for all; (2) the ability to scare people into paying taxes; (3) the banking system, which allows taxpayers to write checks. If the banks go down, the welfare State dies. At best, it will be able to print paper money.

If the Federal government can't collect taxes, it will pay its employees with paper money. This money will fall in value. Money is backed by "the full faith and credit" of the government. Beginning in 1999, that phrase will become a joke. But I'm not talking about the United States alone. I'm talking about the West. Wherever governments have relied on mainframe computers to administer the Welfare State, the system will begin to crumble. The century-old experiment in government welfare will visibly fail. Voters will not again trust national governments to provide security by taxing and spending.

But the state governments are at least as far behind as the Federal government is in making the repairs. Power will therefore shift back to local governments. This transition will not take as long as it has in what used to be known as the USSR. The old slogan, "state's rights," will be regarded as a lot of left-wing hokum. "County rights" will be the new slogan: the way it was two centuries ago.

If the banks go down, we lose our money and gain our liberty. If the tax collectors' computers go down and the banks don't, we will keep our money and gain our freedom. Frankly, I'm hoping for the latter scenario. I'm planning on the former, however.

Abraham Lincoln in the Gettysburg Address spoke of a new birth of freedom. The Millennium Bug will do more for giving birth to freedom than anything we have seen in modern history. The price will be high. But it was high for Americans in 1776, too. Our forefathers left us a legacy of freedom because they were willing to pay that price. There is this difference, however: we won't have a choice about whether we will pay this price. As a nation, as a civilization, the programmers have made that choice for us. Our only choice is as individuals. It depends on what we — you and I — do before the year 2000.

How heavy a price are you going to pay? That depends on such things as these: where you live, what form of money you own, what skills you have, how morally responsible you are, how healthy you are, how optimistic you are, how trustworthy your neighbors are, and whether you can survive the shift to a lower division of labor economy.

We are living at the end of a millennium. The last time this happened (approximately), both the Russians and the Vikings (there was a lot of intermixture) were converted to Christianity. The Vikings stopped raiding and started trading. Historians can date the end of the "Dark Ages" and the coming of prosperity to medieval civilization: around 1000 A.D. Our transition out of the Dark Ages of the welfare state will be a lot faster. The "Vikings" — government tax collectors and bureaucrats — are going to have to find productive work. Their "raids" are going to cease. We will find ourselves in a new, unfamiliar world. It may look very dark for a time. For some unprepared people — morally unprepared, educationally unprepared, and financially unprepared — it will indeed be a dark time. But the darkness is greatest before the dawn.

My mother sent me a book for Christmas a few years back. It was called We Had Everything but Money. It was about the Great Depression. It was about how families and neighborhoods pulled together in hard times. It was hard-going then, but the memories of those who pulled through are good memories. I love to re-read that book. It inspires me.

The bad news is: you may live in a neighborhood where there is no sense of community. You may live in a city where too many people are addicted to government welfare, including retirement checks. You may live in a city where you can't trust the police to protect you and your property in a crisis. These are good reasons to move, whether or not the Millennium Bug hits us.

You should not become paralyzed with fear about the Alzheimer's economy. It won't last forever. It may last a decade. So what? Is that too much to pay to gain our liberty? We have microcomputers. If the phones stay up, we have the Internet. (If the phones go down, it really will be a disaster.) We have creative people. We will have liberty.

The kind of world we really want to see can come only if the dead hand of big government is pulled from off our necks. That monster is not going to go away quietly. It has to be killed. The Millennium Bug is more likely to kill big government, all at once, all over the world, than anything we can imagine. As the Bible says, our redemption draweth nigh. But not at zero price.

Ways to Make Money (While the Dollar Is Still Money)

A handful of people — the Remnant — who invest now in small companies that produce products and services that help "fix" computers should make tremendous profits by 1999. The public will start buying up Year 2000 stocks when the media finally cover this subject in depth, night after night. I have prepared a list of 16 small companies that I think should do well between now and mid-1999. I'm making this list available to new subscribers to my newsletter, Remnant Review. (I've already informed my existing subscribers.)

These companies are small. They are, as the saying goes, thinly traded. To mention them in an open letter like this one would drive up their price too early. Serious investors could not get in. But when the word gets out on the Year 2000, buyers will be frantic to find and buy companies like these, in my view. That will be the time to sell. Timing will be crucial. The greed factor will tend to keep successful investors in this market too long. If you aren't willing to get out when things look rosy for these stocks, don't buy!

I recommend a little-known stock mutual fund that allows you to short the market. I like it because you can't suffer a margin call. It's the Rydex Ursa Fund. You put your money in the Rydex money market fund until you're ready to go short by switching to the Ursa fund. Ursa has a $25,000 minimum. For a prospectus on both funds, call: 800-486-3705. I don't know when you're reading this report. It may not be time to short this market. For timing that crucial move, you will need advice.

There is also a mutual fund managed account program that is as year 2000-compliant as any fund can be. This company has located several advisors who are good at timing the market. They have long-term, verified track records. The fund invests its clients' money with advisors who are ready to short the market by using the Ursa Fund. These traders use the services of Year 2000-compliant investment houses and funds. (Warning: Some of these advisors have set limits on the money they are willing to handle. When word gets out, they will close access to late-comers.) For an investment that offers the possibility of making dollars in a major market downturn, this is worth considering. $25,000 minimum. For a prospectus, call: 800-348-3601.

Here Is What You Can Do to Protect Yourself

This is the scariest scenario I've ever seen. It may not happen. The governments on earth may get their computerized acts together. They may finally spend some money to fix the problem. Businesses will spend money, too. A few of them already are. But money won't solve the problem. It isn't a money problem; it's a "where are the programmers and skilled project managers'?" problem.

We are not talking about a minor technological problem. We are talking about a looming catastrophe that could destroy the world's capital markets. You had better be in regular communication with someone who monitors developments in this field daily, and who can accurately assess what he is reading. This is not about getting rich. It's about maintaining your wealth to build again on the far side of a looming disaster.

I will cover this topic and related matters over the next four years, unless: (1) the problem gets solved, or (2) the banks go down and I can't get paid. To receive the next 12 issues of Remnant Review, call 800-TRAPPED (800-872-7733). This one-year subscription Costs $129.

In times of trouble, keep in mind these ancient words of wisdom: "But godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment let us be therewith content. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition" (1 Timothy 6:6-9). The goal is a comfortable lifestyle, in good times and bad. I emphasize bad times. They're coming. Fast.

So, what do you think? Is what I have said at least possible? Are you willing to take at least a few steps to verify any of this? I hope so. That's why I'm enclosing a form letter (yellow paper) for you to type up and mail to your bank and to other suppliers of crucial goods in your life. You need to ask them up-front: "Are you 2000-compliant?" You had better find out early if they aren't. The form letter is preceded by a two-page report by Congressman Horn. I am pleading with you to read Congressman Horn's report.

Here is one final fearful report. You may think "they" are taking effective action, but "they" aren't. Last October, Peter de Jager, an expert on the Year 2000 Problem, published a summary of two meetings at which he had just spoken. He said that 300 representatives from government agencies were in attendance at his first lecture. He asked how many of them were actively engaged in a compliance project. Three hands went up. A week later, he spoke before 140 representatives of Canadian public utilities. He asked them the same question. Six hands went up. When I read that, I knew: the economy is going to crash. It's too late to stop it from happening.

The experts agree: the two keys to success are pre-repair planning and post-repair testing. One more time: complete testing involves running parallel data analysis. The programmers must enter today's data into the old program and the revised one, and then wait to see if the revised program breaks down, shuts off, or starts spitting out nonsense. Parallel testing for a large program takes six months. If there is just one breakdown, the programmers must examine the entire program: say, 40 million lines of code. They must repair bad lines. Then they must start the test again.

One more time: to do the test, you have to have enough excess capacity on your multi-million dollar mainframe computer to run all of your operations in parallel. This means that your computers had better be running today at less than 50% capacity. I challenge you to find even one big company or one government agency that has extra computer time. disk space, storage tapes, and operators to double its present operations for six months or a year in 1999.

Here are my predictions: (1) the repair teams will bring in the project late; (2) the tests parallel testing will not be conducted; (3) the Millennium Bug will hit the whole world, as scheduled, on Jan. 1, 2000. Plan on it. Invest in terms of it.

I have been writing Remnant Review since 1974. In all that time, I have never come across a threat to the economy to match this one. Unlike every other potential disaster, from terrorism to nuclear war, this one can be dated. In all of man's history, we have never been able to predict with such accuracy a worldwide disaster of this magnitude. The millennium clock keeps ticking. There is nothing we can do to delay it. This disaster is programmed.

If you think to yourself, "This just won't happen," ask yourself this question:"Exactly what is going to prevent it?" If you can come up only with an unsupported hope in some as-yet uninvented technological fix that can be rapidly and cheaply applied, you might as well assume that President Clinton will find it under his pillow some morning.

Time is running out. Don't sit there, immobilized, like a deer caught in the headlights of an oncoming truck. Don't play Scarlett O'Hara: "Well, fiddle-dee-dee. I'll think about it tomorrow." Think about it today. Keep thinking about it tomorrow. Then start taking evasive action. It will take you two years. There is no silver bullet. If you just sit there and do nothing, you're going to get hit by the Alzheimer's economy. You have to begin making plans now with or without the Remnant Review. The deadline is set: January 1, 2000. It cannot be changed. But your personal situation can be changed. Your degree of vulnerability can be changed. So can your investment portfolio.

I know that my story sounds fantastic. So, test it. Use the enclosed form letter [to get a copy of this form letter, call the number listed above] to find out if you really are as vulnerable as I say you are. The programmers have trapped us in an all-or-nothing decision. Never forget: a decision to do nothing is still a decision. You need to take decisive action, beginning now. Procrastinate on this matter, and it could cost you everything. I mean everything!

First, subscribe to Remnant Review. Second, type up and start mailing out the form letter. I'm offering you a 90-day, 100% money-back guarantee — long enough for you to get back replies (or not get back replies: stonewalling) from these organizations. What you do not want to hear back is that the organization is planning to become compliant, or is studying the problem carefully, or has hired some programmers to work on it. What you need is a signed statement that the organization is compliant today according to the contract standards issued by the U.S. government. (These standards appear in the Feb. 6, 1997 report of the Office of Management and Budget.) If, after hearing back from them, you decide that this is all a bunch of Chicken Little stuff, call my office and ask for your money back. (Keep all of the bonuses.) You be the judge!

P.S. If this report is even remotely on-target, it is time to start praying. I am serious about this. We face an international emergency, a monumental crisis for the West. We need wide dissemination of this information. It's time to sound the alarm. Time really is running out on all of us. It's time for millions of sleepwalking victims to be awakened. You may want to photocopy this report to give to relatives and friends. I hereby authorize you to do this. I'll help you. For 20 copies of this report for $10, call 800-TRAPPED (800-872-7733).

P.P.S. When you subscribe, you will receive my report on 16 stocks which stand to benefit from this crisis. (The sooner you subscribe, the sooner you get this report . . . before their prices start climbing.) But getting out is as important as getting in. There will be a time to get out —when others have jumped into this market sector after finally hearing about the Millennium Bug. I'm going to tell you when to sell. You will also receive two audio tapes: one with my assessment of what to do to protect yourself; the other with my interview with the IRS whistle-blower, Shelley Davis.

Only in Remnant Review will you receive the information you need to make decisions in the middle of the worst peacetime crisis this world has seen in this century. You need one source that will keep you informed, The conventional news services don't dare report the full story. Bad news upsets advertisers. The media will not cover this topic until it has to . . . after the collapse has begun.

As I said above: Yellow Alert, First Warning. Don't wait until Red Alert, Final Warning to make up your mind. In short, don't imitate the government. Procrastination will cost you far more than you can imagine. Get out your credit card (before you are issued a 00 expiration year card that gets rejected because it's "expired"), pick up the phone, and call 800-TRAPPED (800-872-7733).

P.P.P.S. If you get a really choice reply from some organization, FAX it to me: 903-593-1577.

DOES THE WEST HAVE THE WILL TO SURVIVE?

That is the obvious question posed by Jean Raspail's terrifying novel of the swamping of the White world by an unlimited flood of non-White "refugees." But there is also a less obvious and even more fundamental question: Must Whites find their way to a new Morality and a new spirituality in order to face the moral challenges of the present and overcome them? THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS is the most frightening book you will ever read. It is frightening because it is utterly believable. The armada of refugee ships in Raspail's story is exactly like the one that dumped 150,000 Cubans from Fidel Castro's prisons and insane asylums on our shores in 1980 — except this time the armada is from India, with more than 70 times as large a population. And it is only the first armada of many. If any book will awaken White Americans to the danger they face from uncontrolled immigration, it is THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS. For your copy (Order No. 03014) send $12.00 plus $2.40 for postage and handling.

Time To Do What's Right

Why Does it Matter Who Controls the Media?

By

Dr. William Pierce

Well, well, well! Finally even someone in the Clinton gang said something about it: there are far too many Jews in Clinton's new government. An as yet unnamed bureaucrat in the State Department, trying to implement the Clinton government's policy of maximizing "diversity" in the bureaucracy, looked around and noticed that nearly all of the people in the key policy positions in the State Department are Jews, and he wrote a memorandum to other bureaucrats saying, "Hey, we have too many Jews. We need to hold off on appointing any more Jews to vacant positions around here and try to get some other ethnicities involved." He pointed out in particular that everyone in the section of the State Department dealing with the Middle East is a Jew.

Of course, the number of Jews in the State Department has become much more noticeable since Clinton's new Jewish Secretary of State Madeleine Albright was appointed and immediately surrounded herself with a swarm of Jewish assistants and advisors. But it is considered impolite to notice this, and when someone leaked the memo about there being too many Jews to a local newspaper, the Washington Times, things hit the fan. There were screams of outrage from all the usual quarters. Jewish Congressman Benjamin Gilman, a Republican from New York and chairman of the House Internal Affairs Committee, complained angrily about the memo to Mr. Clinton, wailing that any attempt to stop the State Department from becoming entirely Jewish is "religious discrimination." And, of course, in Mr. Clinton Congressman Gilman found a sympathetic listener. Mr. Clinton has appointed more Jews to government positions than any other President in history — by far. In particular he has hardly appointed anyone except Jews to the positions of control over America's foreign policy. His entire national security team is Jewish: the secretary of state, the secretary of defense, the chief of the National Security Council and his deputy — they're all Jews appointed by Clinton. And so the State Department bureaucrat who wrote that memo is now in very hot water. Predictions are that he will be crucified — which, come to think of it, is a punishment which has a historical precedent for a similar offense against the Jewish establishment: you know, for saying things the Jewish establishment doesn't want you to say.

His problem is that is that he just didn't get it: He just never understood that what the government's policy of "diversity" really means is, get rid of the straight, White males. One heterosexual White male in any department is too many. But you do not ask whether or not there may be too many homosexuals or too many Blacks or too many Hispanic lesbians or too many Vietnamese immigrants in a particular government agency — and especially you never, never, never comment about there being too many Jews. There can't be too many Jews in positions of power and influence. "Diversity" doesn't apply to Jews.

The government bureaucracy isn't the only place where it is Politically Incorrect to notice the huge overabundance of Jews; organized crime is another area. When the Los Angeles police announced last week that they had found out who had killed the son of Black television actor Bill Cosby, they told the world that their suspect is a "Russian" — and might be a hit man for a "Russian" organized crime gang, suggesting that Cosby may have been involved in some sort of drug deal which went bad. When this announcement hit the news last week, there was much talk on television about how the "Russians" are taking over organized crime in the United States, about how the most vicious and sophisticated organized crime gangs are made up of "Russian" immigrants, and so on. The word "Jew" was never mentioned in connection with any of this, and so the average television viewer would never realize that these crime gangs actually have no Russians in them at all. They consist entirely of Jews from Russia and other parts of the former Soviet Union. They are Jewish organized crime gangs, but that fact is never mentioned by the controlled news media.

The reason America is now plagued by the Jewish organized crime gangs is that our government in Washington has for years treated Jews differently from all other persons in Eastern Europe seeking entry to the United States. If you're a real Russian who wants to come to the United States to get away from the disastrous economic conditions in post-Communist Russia, our government won't let you in. But if you're a Jew who wants to come over here from Russia because your tribe already has picked that country's bones clean, why you are welcomed with open arms and given every advantage. You are classified as a "refugee from persecution." Hundreds of thousands of Soviet Jews have poured into the United States during the past 20 years, and many of them were hardened criminals. They ran the rackets in Russia, and now that they've bled Russia dry they've come over here to suck our blood. It is these Jewish so-called "refugees" who have set up the vicious organized crime gangs on the east and west coasts — especially in the New York and Los Angeles areas — and are doing far more damage than the mafia ever did. But you would never know that from watching television. And don't expect the Clinton government to change its policy toward those poor, persecuted Soviet Jews still pouring into America.

After the Los Angeles police had investigated their suspect, Mikhail Markhasev, for a day or two, they announced that they believed he was not acting on behalf of any organized crime group when he shot Cosby. He is only 18 years old and came to the United States with his family eight years ago as a "Russian refugee," they said. Still no mention that he is a Jew, but the description of him as a "Russian refugee" is a dead giveaway, because, as I just mentioned, for all practical purposes it is only Jews who are given that status. And it turned out that this particular 18-year-old Jew has an extensive criminal record and is known as a hardened and vicious thug, and may have been undergoing initiation into a gang when he killed Cosby.

The two news items I've mentioned today — the fuss about a bureaucrat's memo on the growing Jewishness of our State Department and the murder of Bill Cosby's son by a Jewish criminal from Russia — may sound like they're completely unrelated, but they're not. The common link they have is the Jewish control of America's news and entertainment media.

Take the State Department. It's supposed to look out for America's interests in our dealings with other countries. It's supposed to exercise diplomacy on our behalf in a way which will solve our problems with other countries without our having to go to war. One of the key problem spots in the world, of course, is the Middle East. Our State Department spends more time dealing with problems in the Middle East than anywhere else in the world. The root of all the problems in the Middle East is the seizure of Arab land by Jews in a series of wars over the past 50 years. And so how does our State Department look out for our interests in the Middle East? It staffs the Middle Eastern section entirely with Jews. That's like trying to solve problems in the henhouse by putting a fox in charge.

No major politician in Washington, no sophisticated bureaucrat in Washington, believes that the State Department is looking out for American interests in the Middle East. Everyone understands that the real job of the State Department is to look out for Jewish interests. Everyone understands that except the general public, that is. The general public hasn't been let in on the secret, because the news media, which are supposed to keep the public informed, are covering for the Jews. Can you imagine the screams of outrage which you would hear from the media if any President or Secretary of State tried to staff the Middle Eastern section of the State Department with Arabs? They would be screaming that the State Department was biased against Israel, that it wasn't really looking out for America's interests, that it was siding with the Arabs, etc. They would make sure that the public heard about it — over and over and over. But when the State Department becomes essentially an arm of the government of Israel, the public doesn't hear a peep. And, you know, it may be foreign affairs that our Jew-heavy State Department deals with, but these foreign affairs do have domestic consequences. They do cost American lives. They do take money out of the pockets of American taxpayers. You know, the American public may not have found out yet that our State Department doesn't represent American interests, but the rest of the world has found out. That's why the Marine barracks in Lebanon was blown up, killing 237 of our Marines in 1983; that's why the World Trade Center in New York City was bombed a decade later; that's why our military people were bombed in Saudi Arabia last year; that's why there will be other terror bombings in the future which will take American lives. And it's why the Jews in our State Department very well may lead our country into another war in the Middle East in the near future. They will do it because they know that the Jews who control the media will cover for them.

Or take the Cosby killing. The Soviet Jewish thug who did it was in this country only because our government automatically classifies any Jew in eastern Europe who wants to come to the United States as a "refugee from persecution." It's a racket, and it wouldn't exist if our news media would expose it. But they don't. And so the organized Jewish groups put pressure on the politicians, the politicians give them the special laws and handouts for Israel and other things they demand, and the news media just keep quiet about it, so Joe and Jill Sixpack never have a clue as to what's happening.

What we need, of course, are honest, responsible, and patriotic news media, which actually keep the public informed about what's going on. As long as the Jews have their death grip on the media, the public will remain ignorant, and every sort of corrupt and destructive activity will be able to proceed without the public's knowledge. Joe and Jill Sixpack will learn only what the Jews want them to learn.

Actually, you know, the public consists of more than Joe and Jill Sixpack. When I say Joe and Jill Sixpack, I'm talking about the great mass of Americans who never have an idea in their heads that they didn't get from television, who turn first to the sports section when they open their newspapers, and who never analyze anything, who never think carefully about anything. Unfortunately, Joe and Jill vote — in fact, they make up the great mass of voters — and so it suffices for the Jews' purpose to keep Joe and Jill in the dark. But there are people who do keep up with what's going on in the world. There are lots of people who concern themselves with what's really happening. They read the small print in their newspapers, and they read between the lines. They know how to add two and two and draw the correct conclusion. They have noted what our State Department has been doing during the past 50 years, and they have noted many of the names and faces of the people involved. And so when they spot a small news article reporting Congressman Gilman's outrage over some minor personnel official in the State Department being concerned that there are too many Jews in the department, these people are not surprised or confused. They understand. And they have read and remembered the fine print about the immigration of Soviet Jews into this country, and so they understand what the newspapers really mean when they report about "Russian" gangs of organized criminals.

They understand, so why do they not speak out? Why do they remain silent while the Jews continue to deceive and plunder their fellow citizens? These people who understand more often than not are successful people, people who wield a certain amount of power, a certain amount of influence. They could make a difference. After all, the Jews constitute only 2-1/2 per cent of the population. The people who understand what the Jews are up to make up at least that large a portion of the population. So why do they remain silent?

I have spoken with many of these people, and I have asked them that very question. And some of them have answered me in a very reasonable way. They have told me that while they understand that many Jews are engaged in destructive activities, especially in connection with their control of the news and entertainment media and their influence on governmental policy and the political process, they don't know everything that's going on. And they don't want to speak out in ignorance. They don't want to make fools of themselves and perhaps do an injustice to some Jews by making blanket statements when they don't yet have all of the facts.

Well, we have a mutinous faction in the ship's crew which is drilling holes in the bottom of the boat, the ship has taken on a lot of water and already is listing at 45 degrees, but the ship's officers refuse to take any action because they don't yet have all of the facts. What would you say about those ship's officers? Are they just trying to be careful and fair? Or do they have some character flaw: perhaps a deficiency in courage or a defective sense of responsibility?

You know, I understand as well as anyone that there is a cost involved in doing what is right instead of just going with the flow. I understand that the Jews always try to punish those who speak out against them. I understand there is some risk involved in being Politically Incorrect when one is living in a degenerate society under a corrupt government. But look at the cost of remaining silent: the loss of one's self-respect, the loss of one's sense of righteousness — unless one has a very flexible conscience. Is it worth it?

You know, someone once said, "What does it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and yet lose his soul?" And I say, what degree of security, what amount of material wealth, is great enough to sacrifice one's honor for it? What can the Jews threaten a man with that is more terrible than living with the knowledge that he has shirked his responsibility, that he has failed to do what he knows he should do and could do?

You know, I am attacked continually by the Jews in their newspapers and their television. They shriek that I am a "hater," and they try to frighten ordinary people into staying away from me. And they do more. They sic the government on me, and they try to bankrupt me with harassing lawsuits. I used to have a tax exemption because all of my work is educational, and I'm certainly not in it for the profit. But the B'nai B'rith, one of the powerful Jewish organizations to whose tune the politicians dance, complained to the Internal Revenue Service, and they obediently took away my tax exemption. Morris Dees and his Southern Poverty Law Center tried to bankrupt me with a spurious law suit in an effort to silence me. Morris Dees boasted to the newspapers when he sued me that he would "shut Pierce down." And these things certainly are a nuisance. But the compensation is that I sleep well at night. I live and work constantly with the joy of knowing that I am doing the right thing, that I am doing what I should be doing, to the best of my ability. And despite all of the hatred and all of the attacks the Jews direct against me, the number of my friends and supporters continues to grow.

You know, it is possible to stand up to the Jews. It is possible to do what you know is right without being destroyed. They have much power, but it is power which they are obliged to keep concealed. They understand that they are playing a very risky and tricky game. They know that there are more of us than of them. They know that they can only continue to suck the blood of our people if they can do it without provoking us sufficiently that we wake up and take action against them. And now they see more and more of us waking up. That must be a very unnerving experience for them.

You who are listening to me now are at least partially awake. You are a cut above Joe and Jill Sixpack. And I say to you now: think about what you are doing with your life. Think about the responsibility you have to your children and grandchildren and great grandchildren. Think about the responsibility you have to all of those who came before you and whose sacrifices made your life possible. And think about your responsibility to yourself, your responsibility to be the best person, the most righteous person that you can be. Think about all of these things, and then let me hear from you.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Recently I read a very important book entitled, The Hiram Key, published by Element Books in 1997. It is a scholarly and well-researched book about the origins and history of Freemasonry written by two advanced Masons, Christopher Knight and Robert Lomas. The authors reveal for the first time many of the secret rituals of Freemasonry although they do not disclose the secret passwords and handclasps that enable Masons to recognize one another. As it turns out, the Masons had good reason to keep their identity secret. During the Inquisition the penalty for being a Mason or heretic was torture and death. Here is a very good lesson on how to successfully operate a secret organization. This book also does an excellent job tracing the evolution of religion, "It is not so much that God made man in His image; it is more that man continually re-crafts God in his image."

I have always been curious about the controversy surrounding Freemasonry and its persecution by the Catholic Church among others. Freemasonry was an underground movement dedicated to Truth, Knowledge and Enlightenment; an objective that was vehemently opposed by "The Church" when these principles were applied to their dogma. It is surprisingly reminiscent of our present day situation with regard to Holocaust Revisionism. I sometimes feel like a modern day heretic, cursed and spit at, beyond the pale of consideration. The Establishment, led by hysterical Jews, will not even allow discussion of the topic. Dogma is never to be questioned.

The story of Freemasonry is centered on the crusading Knights Templar, whose tour of duty in the "Holy Land" allowed them the opportunity to excavate under the ruins of the Temple of King Solomon and find one of five copies of the Dead Sea Scrolls. These ancient documents, then as now, have the potential to shatter the foundations of Christianity. The scrolls were written at the time of Jesus by the Essenes who formed the first "Christian" Church. They are the precursors of the Gospels which are the first four books of the New Testament, written some 300 years after the death of Christ. Biblical scholars have long recognized that every book in the Bible had been "doctored" throughout the course of History and this early version of the Bible proves conclusively how distorted and corrupted our current Bible really is.

The Hiram Key is a roller-coaster ride through history. Starting in Ancient Egypt, a religion was founded based upon Truth, Mathematics and the principles of Science, then a familiar social parasite invaded and hijacked their culture. "The Egyptians became dominated by a people known as the 'Hyksos'. The Hyksos did not suddenly sail up the Nile and demand surrender; the process was far more subtle than that. They infiltrated Egyptian society smoothly and over a great period of time until they were in a strong enough position to force their control...They are believed to have been a mixed group of Asiatic people, mainly Semites, who appeared out of Syria and Palestine...The Hyksos were composed of scattered nomadic tribes which the Egyptians called Habiru (Hebrew) and spoke the same western Semitic language as the people who would later become known as Israelites...There are several reasons why we believe that there is a direct connection between the Hyksos and the Jews, not least the fact that the first mention in the Bible of the Jewish people coincide precisely with the time when the Egyptians chased the Hyksos out of their land — to Jerusalem!"

"Moses is known to have been a young Semite general in the army of an unidentified pharaoh (possibly) the last Hyksos king and was driven out of Egypt into the wilderness with the rest of the Asiatic hordes when the Theban monarchy regained control...He later returned to lead the Habiru slaves to freedom...Reading the story of the Exodus carefully and objectively left us horrified. The view that had been formed in our minds during our Christian-focused upbringing was quickly turned on its head. Instead of a noble and great people winning their freedom and finding their 'promised land', we read a disturbing catalogue of primitive demonology, betrayal, mass murder, rape, vandalism and grand theft. It was the most disgraceful statement of origin for a new nation imaginable."

"We believe it was the training Moses received in Egypt that gave him the insight and ability to create his own god and establish a new nation in the face of great difficulty. Gods rarely, if ever, spontaneously pop into existence; they develop naturally and undergo metamorphosis as they absorb qualities transposed from other deities...The first recorded meeting with the God of the Jews and Christians seems strangely cold and threatening. When Moses enquired about His credentials and asked for His name he was being very smart; but it did not work. Moses knew from his Egyptian upbringing that gods were not always superior to humans and if a man could extract the name of the god he would have power over him...The concept of the god of the Israelites living in his ark is no different to a genie living in his bottle granting wishes to his friends...It will be hard for many people to accept, but if we take what the Bible says at face value, then the creator figure, whom the Western world calls simply 'God', started out as a humble genie living on his wits in the mountains of north-east Africa and southwest Asia."

The authors continue the history of the Jews in the same harsh manner through David and Solomon up to the time of Jesus. One might be inclined to say it is Anti-Semitic, but only deranged minds would give the Truth a negative connotation. I have clung to the idea that Jesus was an Aryan in a desperate attempt to keep alive my last remaining vestige of Christianity. This book has settled the question in my mind once and for all. Oliver and Klassen are vindicated!

My personal opinion is that God is life itself expressed in all living things. Life is manifested by the eternal laws of Nature like Chemistry and Physics. Evolution through Natural Selection is the generator of life.

The Spirit of Renaissance that lifted Europe out of the Dark Ages can be credited to men who considered themselves an Enlightened Brotherhood. Freemasons like Sir Isaac Newton founded the British Royal Society, dedicated to learning the mysteries of life through experimentation and the Scientific Method. The American Revolution was conceived and guided to a successful conclusion by Freemasons. Unfortunately that magnificent and noble social experiment has been corrupted by alien infiltration and our laws have been perverted by Talmudic interpretation.

I can now understand why Freemasonry was discouraged by the NSDAP. British Intelligence was and is completely under the influence and control of Freemasons, who accepted Jews as their brothers. It is not surprising that the German government recognized the danger posed by an underground fraternal order whose loyalty was above that of the Nation. Israeli Intelligence has become the best in the world because every Jew in all parts of the world can be counted on to give unswerving loyalty to their kindred. We should strive to emulate this admirable quality. All of Masonic ritual revolves around the martyrdom of the Master Mason, Hiram Abif, who would rather die than reveal the secrets of a Master Mason.

To the Society:

It was a few nights ago that I ran across the first copy New American" in the free mag rack of the local Safeway Store in Napa. After picking one up from a pile of about fifteen or so and thumbing through it I immediately recognized the unmistakable flag-waving kosher conservatism of every Birch tract that has ever been written. Your new mag has the same glossy and expensive full color format that the old American Opinion pablum pulp had. I've always wondered how much ammunition, explosives and other weapons a person could buy with the tens of millions people like you have squandered on trying to "educate" the brain dead American public.

You quite falsely claim to be "fighting" a global criminal conspiracy. Why have you never once filed a "criminal complaint?" Either you are lying to the public or, more likely, don't have any intention whatsoever and never have had any of "fighting" anything. In fact, you give every appearance of being PART OF IT. Your twisted idea of "educating" the damned idiot public is to give them just enough verifiable truths mixed in with bald faced lies, willful omissions and half-truths so as to frighten, disorient, infuriate, but above all, DISHEARTEN the American people—flood the nation with less-than-half-educated slaves. Isn't that the real truth about the Birchers? Go on, try to deny it!!!

Since its inception in 1958, when a very obscure candy millionaire named Robert Welch decided it would be highly profitable to start his own "patriot business" (the John Birch Society), you people have been deceiving and swindling the U.S. public. If anyone wishes to see the John Birch Society for the pack of counterfeits and pseudos they really are, that person should write to Liberty Bell Publications, P.O. Box 21, Reedy WV 25270. [Read all about the late Professor Revilo P. Oliver's involvement with the John Birch Society in, America's Decline: The Education of a Conservative, $12.00 + $2.40 postage, available from Liberty Bell Publications.]

George Dietz, for example, penned a gem of an expose of the Birchers, "Another Belch from Robert Welch;" it might also be added that the NSRP filed and WON a lawsuit against the Birchers pursuant to a stupid two-bit slander from a Birch cretin and hack writer named Alan Stang. If America is ever a free country again it will be in spite of the JBS, not because of it. A copy of this is going to each of your ad space accounts.

Dear Mr. Dietz:

I regret I do not recall who made the following statement because it is an accurate thirteen word summary of White History during this century: "When men lose their manhood and women their virtue the nation is doomed."

The nation our white ancestors founded and built on blood, sweat and tears has degenerated into a perverted, anti-white, communistic third-world country because white men lost their manhood and as a result of being thrown to the wolves white women lost their virtue.

Blaming Jews, blacks, corrupt preachers, politicians, jews-media, etc., for taking full advantage of our own stupidity, complacency and lack of courage to defend what is rightfully ours is, in my opinion, an exercise in futility.

Our nation did not fall into Judeo-communist hands by accident, the white majority handed it over to them on a silver platter, along with a blank check to finance their international intrigue, including two successful sneak attacks against the West dubbed World War I & II.

The only thorn in their side has been the refusal by a few courageous white mavericks to passively follow the white herd to the slaughter house. Many of whom are no longer among the living, others are rotting in jail and the white masses could not care less. Only time will tell how long a few brave souls are able to stand up against brutal government forces ready and willing to murder civilians, including women and children, on command.

I recently read 78% of the armed forces are still packaged in white skin, proving without an endless supply of brain-dead honkies, willing to do their dirty work for them, the pharisees and their henchmen would still be plotting our demise in secret behind closed doors, not issuing edicts from the "District of Corruption."

Last, but certainly not least, thank you for keeping Liberty Bell afloat in the tumultuous sea of anti-Aryanism.

Sincerely,
Mrs. P.L.R., Washington

KEEP THE LIBERTY BELL RINGING!

Please remember: Our Fight is Your fight! Donate whatever you can spare on a regular—monthly or quarterly—basis. Whether it is $2., $5., $20., or $100. or more, rest assured it is needed here and will be used in our common struggle. If you are a businessman, postage stamps in any denomination are a legitimate business expense—and we need and use many of these here every month—and will be gratefully accepted as donations.

Your donations will help us spread the Message of Liberty and White Survival throughout the land, by making available additional copies of our printed material to fellow Whites who do not yet know what is in store for them.

Order our pamphlets, booklets, and, most importantly, our reprints of revealing articles which are ideally suited for mass distribution at reasonable cost. Order extra copies of Liberty Bell for distribution to your circle of friends, neighbors, and relatives, urging them to subscribe to our unique publication. Our bulk prices are shown on the inside front cover of every issue of Liberty Bell.

Pass along your copy of Liberty Bell, and copies of reprints you obtained from us, to friends and acquaintances who may be on our "wave length," and urge them to contact us for more of the same.

Carry on the fight to free our White people from the shackles of alien domination, even if you can only join our ranks in spirit. You can provide for this by bequest. The following are suggested forms of bequests which you may include in your Last Will and Testament:

1. I bequeath to Mr. George P. Dietz, as Trustee for Liberty Bell Publications, P.O. Box 21, Reedy WV 25270 USA, the sum of $ . . . . . for general purposes.

2. I bequeath to Mr. George P. Dietz, as Trustee for Liberty Bell Publications, P.O. Box 21, Reedy WV 25270 USA, the following described property . . . . . for general purposes.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigous academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

The Jewish Century

Today's World Politics has shown little tolerance for neutrality on the Jewish question. The current status quo demands that Jewish issues be discussed with utmost reverence. Allegations of Jewish misfortune are treated with more compassion and sympathy than those of any other people. The rule of foreign policies for Western countries is that Israel is to be protected regardless of violations to basic principles otherwise upheld to the rest of the nations. Whatever criminal atrocities Jews have perpetrated, and still do up to this day, in the name of Israel's security, are shamefully tolerated. The many times that Israeli military personnel have massacred Palestinians or Lebanese civilians, the Western democracies limited themselves to simply writing symbolic letters of complaint; letters which were never intended to pressure Israel to modify its human rights policy or to suggest correction. The Jewish state has never been punished for the repeated violations to the borders of the nation of Lebanon. The community of selfproclaimed "law abiding nations" has created a double standard for Israel. Professional politicians in the West are on the Jewish side in a wide variety of issues. When free-thinking intellectuals call to question governments' allegiances to the Jewish state, they become ostracized dissidents who endure all kinds of adversities, from losing their jobs and careers to losing their freedoms and even, in some extreme cases, their lives. As this nameless century nears an end, it becomes more appropriate to deem it the Jewish Century, since the Jewish rise to power is one of the most determining factors in the lifes of nations. At the heart of the most dramatic events of the last one hundred years are the children of Judea and their Talmudic beliefs.

The most sensational examples of this allmighty influence are to be found in the Bolshevik Revolution, the two World Wars, the Marxist inspired Maoist takeover of China and all the Middle Eastern armed conflicts. Jewish power is no more a matter of suspicion and it must no longer be called a conspiracy: it has become an "in your face" kind of force. Everything is now in the open and made official by laws, decrees and other types of documented policy. Deeming the Jewish power as a conspiracy implies that the basis of its existence are concealed and available only to the selected few. Reality is so grotesquely explicit that it has become selfevident. We need not to imagine what goes on behind closed doors; what they allow us to see has surpassed all levels of healthy tolerance.

Shrines to Jewish Power

Great civilizations have always erected their most magnificent monuments to praise their leaders. In Ancient Egypt, the pyramids and the sphinxes, largest structures known to man of those days, were raised to honor the lifes and deaths of the masters of Egyptian society: the Pharaohs. The Ancient Greeks have also built great monuments, too many to mention, to their higher figures, their gods as well as their worldly rulers. The European cities, to this day, are adorned with thousands of statues, museums and monuments dedicated to those who once ruled the land and led the people. Exception to this norm are monuments to "unknown soldiers", so many of them tainted with cheap demagoguery! Today, that tradition has not changed. As in the 1980's cities were 'modern' only when subscribing to avantgarde cosmopolitanism (gay pride parades, easy accesability to recreational drugs, etc.), in the 1990's the most 'modern' requirement to be met is also the final architectural tribute: a Holocaust Museum. All over the West, edifices bear witness to this dramatic Jewish overstepping into our values. The Holocaust memorials, museums, monuments and other similar structures, are shrines to Jewish power that as long as they stand, will remind us all who the real rulers of our nations are. These buildings are pantheons to national surrender; a solid document of massive submission.

Argentina and the New World Order

Democratic Argentina is a country that has embraced the New World Order and, rather consequently, all the trends and mannerisms that come with it, with a willingness almost passionate. No opportunity to demonstrate allegiance to the influence of the World Stock Exchange and the United Nations has been spared. During the Persian Gulf War, Argentina sent three warships to the region to incorporate itself to the multinational effort to oust the Iraqis from Kuwait, their former province. Later, Argentina's navy was also present at the multinational blockade against Haiti, a country with national defense forces inferior in number and fire power to those of the Los Angeles Police Department. Members of the Argentinean military have also worn the "blue helmets" of the United Nations in the Balkans and currently they keep peace (at least allegedly) in parts of Africa. A few Argentinean young men (the actual number is less than 10) have died in the black continent due to regional viral diseases they have contracted, while some have brought new viruses to the otherwise healthy population of the South American country. Argentina has opened its doors to nonWhite immigrants from the Orient, Koreans being the most largely benefited by this politics of "open borders". Amnesty was granted to all illegal aliens during the early 1990's, thus giving legal status to nearly half million mestizos from bordering Latin American countries (the Amnesty Law had initially been promoted on the basis that no more than fifty thousand illegals would be using the advantages of that piece of legislation). Argentina's lackey submission to the New World Order has been reinforced with the enactment of antihate laws, which curb constitutionally guaranteed freedom of speech. It all seems to indicate that the unwritten policies of diplomaticeconomiccultural apartheid that once made Argentina a pariah nation, since and due to its neutrality during World War II, are finally changing. The government of President Menem and his allies in the Legislative branch of political power, have gone one step further in their effort to get closer to Washington, Tel Aviv and Bonn. Now Buenos Aires will have its own Holocaust Museum, a respectful shrine to Jewish power.

A Holocaust Museum in Buenos Aires

Law 24636, sanctioned by the Argentinean Congress and published in the May 7, 1996, edition of the Official Bulletin, mandates the construction that will "honor the memory" of the alleged 6,000,000 victims of the Holocaust (one of the proponents of the law stated that 1,500.000 "victims" were Jewish children). For this purpose, the national government has donated an expensive piece of property in the area of the Congress building. This donation was made in 1995 to the Fundación Memoria del Holocausto (Foundation Memory of the Holocaust). On paper, the Museum has been proposed by a number of legislators who bear no Jewish last names (their backgrounds appear to be Spanish, Italian, Irish and English). Ruben Beraja, the Argentinean Jew banker vicePresident of the World Jewish Congress, said in an interview published in the daily Clarin (May 8, 1996) that "this was a spontaneous initiative of the legislators and we support it because it will put Buenos Aires among the cities of the world that repudiate the horror of the Holocaust". Mr. Beraja's assertion that the initiative was "spontaneous" is difficult to believe, considering the background of some of these politicians and the intrusion of the proIsraeli lobby in the national affairs of Argentina. Also suspicious is Mr. Beraja's sincere interest on what is best for Buenos Aires. Worthy of mention is that while the above mentioned parties were trying to sell to the Argentinean populace the notion that this whole operation was "spontaneous", the Jew Gilbert Lewi, president of the Foundation "Memoria del Holocausto", takes credit publicly for the whole idea. His foundation will get a piece of the estate, as it's explained in the latter portion of this report.

Holocaust Museum = Germanophobia

Although the construction of the Holocaust Museum was approved only in May of 1996, by November of the same year the architectural work had already been assigned (to architects Berdichevsky, Cherny, Pfeifer, Huberman, Schmunis, Triskier, etc.). The Museum is described as a "narrative museum" (in other words, a Talmudic theme park), suggesting that what the attendants won't see it will be narrated to them; not necessarily the best method for stimulating critical thinking. Traditional museums offer attendees opportunities to observe and draw their own conclusions without the emotional burden of having speakers placed all over the areas where they walk, inciting them to approve or disapprove, rejoice or cry. Judging by the emotionally charged antiGerman overtone of the plans for this museum and previous similar projects, this one is expected to be a house of propaganda, a Hollywoodesque recreation of the all too often seen scenes of mean Aryan villains abusing helpless, righteous Jews. The top two floors of the structure will be taken over by the foundation "Memoria del Holocausto", from where they will coordinate activities for the advancement of traditional Jewish interests.

A Congressman Loyal to the Jews

One of the most relentlessly proIsraeli members of the block of 14 legislators is deputy Claudio Mendoza, who sits in the Argentinean Congress as a representative of the impoverished province of Chaco, near the Paraguayan border. Mr. Mendoza is no neophyte in the field of promoting Germanophobia; in 1994 he inaugurated a Holocaust Museum in the city of Resistencia, the capital of his native Chaco. The monument in question consists of seven columns representing; in Mendoza's words, "the advance of humanity from primitivism toward spiritual evolution". That first monument was designed by a Jewish architect, Claudia Aranovich. Coincidentally, in 1994, Mr. Mendoza received a Human Rights Award from the worldwide B'nai B'rith. It is interesting to notice the proJewish record of Mr. Mendoza's agenda. Certainly the same energy and devotion has not been applied to represent the members of his poverty stricken constituency. The Chaco province has quite a pathetic record of backwardness; 9.7% of its population live in residences with dirt floors; illiteracy runs at 16.5% of those over 10 years of age; 36.1 per 1,000 of newborns die before ever reaching their first year of age (official statistics as of 1992). Nevertheless, Mr. Mendoza sees it appropriate to campaign, as a paid representative of the Chaco province, for Holocaustmania. Mr. Mendoza's willingness to comply with the mercurial desires of the chosenites seems to know no limits.

May this be a case of innocently misplaced loyalties?

Personal Skepticism

In spite of the millions of dollars spent throughout the globe, I have not found any evidence that the type of projects that aim to perennially remind us all of alleged Jewish sufferings have contributed to any of the supposedly desired objectives, namely: promoting peace, understanding and justice among all men; reconciling and healing old wounds; fighting ethnic stereotypes and building a society where tolerance rules, without political persecutions. Isn't it about time that we evaluate the results and the purposes of this international campaign to perpetuate sorrow and solidarity for a dubious Jewish defenselessness and victimization? I believe that none of the previously mentioned objectives will ever be achieved in any Western nation, as long as the success of some of these goals remain in the hands of frenzied antiWhite aliens.

Jewish Victory Against Free Speech in Brazil

by

Guillermo Coletti

The headline published in the December 1996 issue of the bulletin of the Latin American Jewish Congress joyfully boasts of "Victory"; a Jewish victory that is. In the report originated in Brazil and produced by Mauricio Soibelmann, president of the Israeli Federation of Rio Grande do Sul (a southern Brazilian state), we learn that the victory that causes celebration in the Jewish community in Brazil is a new defeat for free speech in the largest South American country.

In a decision delivered in late 1996, Brazilian judicial authorities tried and convicted the local revisionist writer, publisher and intellectual, Siegfried Ellwanger Castan. Mr. Castan's best known work is Holocaust, Jewish or German?

Mr. Siegfried Ellwanger Castan

Mr. Ellwanger has proven to be one of the most efficient activists of the Revisionist cause. The above mentioned book was released in 1987, and since then at least twenty two (22!) editions have followed the first one. More than one hundred thousand (100,000) copies have been sold in Portuguese, Spanish and English. Mr. Ellwanger was born in Southern Brazil in 1928 and has lived a very interesting life. He volunteered to the Brazil Marine Corps in 1946, is a patent holder of support plates for rails used in Brazilian railways and also exported. He successfully worked in the steel business, at a young age he was the head salesperson of a very important steel importing corporation. Ten years after that, Mr. Ellwanger started his own business, also in the trade of steel. A curious man and researcher of history, Mr. Ellwanger has traveled to the Americas (from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego), Western Europe and Poland. His afterretirement involvement in the revisionist studies of the Holocaust, has doubtlessly provided Mr. Ellwanger more excitement than an average retiree aspires to have. Although I have never had the pleasure to meet in person with Mr. Ellwanger, personal accounts of others depict him as a dedicated man who holds the highest standards of hospitality with his friends.

A Fighter For Free Speech

Through his publishing company, 'Revisao Editora Ltda.', Mr. Ellwanger has made available to the Brazilian public a wide variety of books, some originally written in Portuguese while some had been translated from their original tongues. Some of the works that the Jewish lobby has targeted for their inquisitorial objectives are (original titles are in Portuguese): The Secret History of Brazil, by Gustavo Barroso; World Conquerors, by Marchalko; Brazil, a Bankers Colony, by Barroso; Henry Ford's The International Jew and The Protocolos of Zion, as well as summaries and translations of the Leuchter Report and material from the Institute for Historical Review.

Mr. Ellwanger's record of fighting censorhip is a long one. Unfortunately, I have not kept record of the many times his literature was censored or confiscated by government authorities. But the latest court decision is particularly more serious. In the afternoon of October 31, 1996, Mr. Ellwanger was sentenced to two years in prison for publishing antisemitic books that "show contempt for human dignity". This decision was based on law 8081, enacted in 1990. The prison term was changed to three years of community service.

For further questions regarding this matter please do not hesitate to contact me by writing to: Guillermo Coletti, P.O. Box 61221, Pasadena, CA 91106, or contact Mr. Ellwanger at: Revisao Editorial, Ltda., Caixa Postal 10 466, 90001 Porto Alegre, RGS, Brazil

Another Extravagant Theory on Race

by

Guillermo Coletti

The debate of the Race question, in a magnitude never seen before, has entered a convulsive period where logic and absurdity may clash with full force. An open discussion of this issue has been suppressed for decades by actions perpetrated by the radical left, condoned by the humble and defeated remains of the right. Dr. Hans F.K. Günther has traced the background of this distortion of anthropological realities to an even farther remote time: "the conviction of the strength of heredity may have been debilitated by the penetration of the world of Christian ideas (in Aryan lands), with its emphasis in the separation of body and soul, spirit and flesh", as he stated in his 1933 essay 'Volk und Staat in ihrer Stellung zu Vererbung und Auslese'. Thus, ceaselessly imposing on Westerners fantastic views and notions of alleged unequivocal racial equality, only one side has been allowed to propagate into the main channels of public opinion. By ostracizing ethnocentric views, with the chronic emotional charges of bigotry and prejudice to currents of thought that could supply diversity into the treatment of this topic, the egalitarians have accomplished to bring their perspective into educational institutions, mass media, etc. How long can the status quo hold on to its power? How long can distorted and flatout false anthropological ideas survive the relentless search for truth? Judging by recent events, the prognosis for absolute egalitarianism does not appear to be one of longevity (to review a great summary of the latest anthropological findings I strongly recommend reading 'Our People, The Aryans', by J.B. Campbell, published in Liberty Bell, Vol. 24, Issue No. 6 of February 1997).

Generation after generation of liberals have provided us with a wide variety of theories pertaining to ethnicity, all of which have been articulated and circulated for the sole purpose of advancing their antiAryan agenda. From their mouths we have heard that environment and weather make races what they are, as well as other wild excuses for their stated biological egalitarianism. It has also been said that actual differences among races are limited to skin color but that, given the exact same circumstances and surroundings, individuals of different backgrounds would behave and progress along the same lines. Some negrocentric leaders have announced that all human life derives from the African negro. I've also come across black nationalists' literature that strongly suggested that whites were created by sophisticated negro scientists flying intergalactic machines, thousands of years back, during a genetic experiment that went bad. I could go on listing enough varieties of this topic to fill up thousands of pages with nothing but empty rhetoric. I won't do that. I will just dedicate a few lines to one of the latest absurdities to have reached my very crowded desk.

Princeton University Press recently released The History and Geography of Human Genes, a book by Luca CavalliSforza, Paolo Menozzi and Alberto Piazza. This eight pound package of paper (per book!) reveals some, perhaps all, of the findings of an allegedly lengthy study of human blood that used blood samples of individuals who settled in communities established in selected places before 1492, the year Italian navigator Christopher Columbus arrived in America. The immediate goal was to examine chromosomes, genes and all that good stuff, of people whose genetic histories were presumably preserved unchanged.

This essay, which was timely for a rebuttal to some of the basis of The Bell Curve, repeats the notion that racial differences are mainly adaptations to climate, as humans migrated from one type of weather, to another. Afrocentric agitators have much to be happy about with this book, which emphatically affirms that the African form of human life is the oldest. So far nothing unheard of. Anyone who has researched the race question must have encountered these beliefs at one point or another.

"The Basques are likely to be the most direct descendants of the CroMagnon people, among the first modern humans in Europe". I've never doubted the Basques were quite modern, but being "the most direct descendants of the Cro Magnon people" goes beyond being modern, that is 'cool'. The reader must figure out whether this characteristic is a plus or not. I've always liked the Basques, chances are I will always like them, regardless of the truthfulness of Mr. Cavalli's findings.

What I've found to be uniquely unbelievable and deeply irritating is CavalliSforza's suggestion that all Europeans are a hybrid population, with 65% Asian and 35% African genes. In other words, according to CavalliSforza all Europeans are mongrelized; there's no such thing as a White race, but a subrace of mongrels who are two thirds Asian and one third African negro, and happened to have developed similar features and cultures. If we were to accept this as true, then we should, more or less, accept as conceivable the following scenario:

a negro female and a negro male reproduce during a torrid afternoon in the jungles of Africa, simultaneously in Bangkok, an Asian female and an AsianAfrican male reproduce, these two couples will have (respectively or irrespectively) a male and a female offspring who will later on mate to give birth to ... a Norwegian, or a Frenchman, or a Briton, or any other European you may wish to choose.

CavalliSforza, Princeton University and the entire bunch of countercultural McGovernicks they represent, are experiencing new heights of desperation. Being a resident of Southern California, as I have been, for over the last ten years, I have had plenty of opportunities to observe all kinds of mongrelized children. I don't believe there's a possible mix whose sample I haven't seen at a shopping mall or elsewhere. And I have, most certainly, seen the results of the unions between Asians and Africans, even in the suggested percentages. And none of those offsprings, never, ever, has resembled a White man.

No matter how many blood samples CavalliSforza and his associates have taken during their trips to the wilderness of Africa, or to the rice fields of Asia, a logical foundation is missing from the treaty they so vehemently produced. I don't believe it.

Life Magazine 1945: A Call To Vengeance

by

Guillermo Coletti

"The man who reads nothing at all is better educated than the man who reads nothing but the newspapers"
Thomas Jefferson

Former Argentinean president Gen. Roberto Viola once said, much to the irritation of Jews in South America and elsewhere, that if the Axis forces had won the Second World War, the War Crimes Trials would have taken place in Arlington, Virginia instead of Nuremberg, as they did. What he tried to say was not that there was an Axis plot to put the leaders of the Allied nations on trial, but that the procedures at Nuremberg were simply an extension of the hostilities, a 'trial by the victors'. It must be remembered, as an example of the atmosphere reigning at the Nuremberg procedures, that a newspaper publisher, Mr. Julius Streicher, who never participated in the German government or in acts of war, was sentenced to death by hanging and, eventually, executed for "war crimes". If publishing opinions not in favor of a winner of a war constitutes a war crime, then where would it have fit the editorial we are about to review, had the War Crimes Trials taken place at Arlington, Virginia?

Life magazine edition of May 28, 1945, ran an editorial simply entitled 'War Crimes: To Promote the Idea of Law is More Vital to us than Killing Nazis'. The headline is indeed slightly misleading, since it projects a benevolence rather hard to find in the piece. It was the end of the war and the graphic accomplishments (quite impressive indeed) of the lavish publication rejoiced over the destruction caused to German cities. Almost every issue of Life magazine of the period 19451946 is richly adorned with full page photographs depicting the devastation inflicted upon some of the most sacred sites in the history of Western man, almost always concealing from the American public the human side of the tragedy: the faces of the Germans wandering among ruins which once were home. At best it may have been intellectual inertia, as the drums of war kept beating in the pages of Life until long after the hostilities have ended. The general overtone of that editorial can very comfortably be diagnosed as acutely germanophobic.

It is commonly accepted, at least in unspoken ways, that not even the most fanatical neoChristians actually believe that we should love our enemies. But when it comes to exercising antiGerman propaganda, although it is not expected to see the enemies of Germany turn the other cheek, the rhetoric is tainted with unique viciousness. Why? What could have prompted this society with such large Germanic presence (GermanAmericans are the largest ethnic group in the USA) to be so prolific in the field of Germanophobia? Certainly GermanAmericans outnumber Jewish Americans, as do almost all other Caucasians. Factually speaking, the United States has been involved in many wars, military campaigns on foreign soil, 'peacekeeping' operations, etc. On average, for every year this land celebrated its independence, a foreign land saw itself under American military presence, under one pretext or another.

Not every time a crisis developed it was followed by a declaration of war. Let's bear in mind that American diplomats are committed to send their armies overseas to protect peace, freedom and democracy. Examining all of the other circumstances of military confrontation, the anti German situation finds no parallel in defamation. The editorial we are about to review would be irrelevant to the affairs of world politics of today if the antiGerman climate had been completely sanitized, or at least subsided, but it hasn't. I remember fondly that during an Oktoberfest celebration that took place in 1996, a letter sent by President Clinton was read on the loudspeakers. My German friends felt verily honored. It was, we all believed, a friendly letter in which President Clinton gracefully acknowledged the many contributions the Germans have rendered to humanity in general and to the American state in particular. In the letter, names of prominent Germans were given as examples of goodGermans; as far as I know every single German the President deemed a good German in his letter was a Jew, with Albert Einstein on top of the list. But the war is over! It has been over for over fifty years and, even more to my argument, the Germans were defeated! It's 1997 and the Commander in Chief of the American Armed Forces is still handing out medals to veterans of the war against Germany. No matter how many sensitivity training sessions are designed, all year round, to please homosexuals, gang members, lesbian mothers, Jews, heroin addicts or others, nothing is being done to repair the insults that the memory of each one of the ten million dead Germans from World War II has received. Let's review some of the statements featured in the above mentioned editorial.

"Human instinct demands some sort of action to express our horror at what the Nazis have done. Retribution, vengeance, justicecall it what you like—but action." No holds barred. The looting of Germany, the tons of explosives dropped upon millions of defenseless German civilians, the invasion, the hunger unnecessarily inflicted on multi millions of women and children, were not sufficient to placate the bigotry of Life's editorialist, whose name goes unknown. He wants more 'retribution', more 'vengeance'. In what form did he want to see this 'retribution' and 'vengeance' accomplished? And who, precisely, did he want to see avenged? Was his purpose to incite more Germanophobia even at the end of the war? What did people like him want? What punishment would have been enough? The good thing about this particular statement is the baldness and unpolished truthfulness about the real intentions of the circus surrounding the postWar punishment of Germany. Who can question the 'Nazis' tomorrow for calling on the demands of human instinct for vengeance for what 'whoever' have done? Justifying vengeance and retribution on the basis of human instinct actually is the same as aspiring to a carte blanche for whatever cruelty may be performed on suspects of the crime of 'inhumanity'. And, by the way, up until this day I encounter people who emphatically sustain that the Allies were too generous and too humane with the Germans.

In increased excitement the piece continues: "The War Crimes Commission broadening of the definition of war crimes made potential criminals of four to six million Germans at one stroke." The writer could hardly contain himself from calling for genocide, but implying that four to six million Germans were worthy of punishment as war criminals in a very direct form suggests that additionally to the defeat of Germany, an extra four to six million (a million more or less make no difference) could be easily added. He continued: "If there are to be executions on any such wholesale scale, the British and American firing squads may find their thirst for blood soon slaked." Now that's what I call objective journalism, mainstream opinionshaping, unbiased reporting. I only wish he had put some 'objectivism' aside for a moment and would have added some personal emotion into this piece, just to make things more palatable for blood thirsty Brits. Don't we all wish he had told us, if only for a minute, how he really felt about the German people? I must add, and in a more serious tone, that I have never found any evidence of any such thirst for blood was present in the British soldier.

"If the whole of Germany is guilty of murder, no doubt it would be just to exterminate the German people." Perhaps this passage is the most significant of all. Maybe Life magazine proposed a debate that few were alert enough to notice it and, consequently, it went unanswered. Perhaps nobody dared touching the subject. Maybe he is right when he says that if the whole of a people are guilty "no doubt it would be just to exterminate" them. The extermination of an entire people is, after all, a moral dilemma, even when it's about exterminating Germans. Maybe there's something here that all decent people and good people should give some thought.

This anonymous editorialist of Life magazine made an obvious attempt at convincing his readers that he was not alone in this hatred. He, perhaps, wanted America to accept that he was speaking for all Americans. "The National Lawyers Guild, for example, decrying 'excessive legalism', is prepared to prove almost any German guilty of anything." Of course, one has to be truly cynical to believe that; we all know well that the bulk of the American lawyers would never endorse such emotional outbursts. The American lawyer is without a doubt one of the most ethical human beings ever to be found on the face of this planet at any given time. The American lawyer of the 1940's, as well as the one of the 1990's, has the kind of human fiber rarely found among beings of lesser morality. The American Lawyer is made of the substance that brings nationbuilders into this world. And justice too.

As the editorial progresses, Life finds it difficult to conceal its raging enthusiasm. "But what should our 'national policy' be? Should it be to secure the maximum number of convictions? Or to reestablish in demented Europe a respect for the law?" What would this journalist think of the Jewish state? Would he propose a large number of convictions or establishing respect for the law in demented Israel? Although this exaggerated parlance may lead many to question the background of the unknown author of this Life piece, it is better to remain outside prejudices and not assume immediately that this man might have been Jewish.

And so the history of American journalism and its commitment to the truth, and nothing but the truth, goes. The country that once gave us H.L. Mencken, progressively, little by little, unnoticeably for the masses, finally led us to Geraldo Rivera. Of course.

Germany Protects Peruvian Terrorists

by

Guillermo Coletti

The crisis at the residence of the Japanese Ambassador in Lima, Peru, finally reached an end on April 22, 1997. After the leftist guerrillas of the Revolutionary Movement Tupac Amaru (MRTA) occupied the building, by extensive use of explosives and blasting fully automatic AK47's, and took over 400 people hostage, this sorry situation ended quite benignly. Of the initial number of hostages only a few more than 70 had remained under control of the Maoist MRTA until the end. I have to say that it made me happy seeing the brutes of the MRTA defeated under the same rules they had chosen to conduct their own subversive business, the rules of strength and military might. President Fujimori was present right there, with his soldiers, at the site of the fight. Not a chance we will ever see Prime Minister Kohl anytime soon next to the soldiers of his Fatherland, fighting Communism. I know that by now many must be thinking that I'm really stretching the point. For many it must be difficult to imagine a possible reason to bring to Germany into this picture.

There are reasons why the government of Germany is not totally marginal to this crisis. As the final rescue operation developed, CNN was broadcasting live from Peru, whatever piece of the action their cameras could get. A fine job indeed, at least as an indicator of the modern technologies available in broadcasting. Bernard Shaw was at the studios in Atlanta explaining, or trying to explain, what was going on. CNN was also connected to a 'freelance' female reporter in Peru. A visibly disappointed Bernard Shaw then had a telephone conversation with the leader of the MRTA, Mr. Isaac Velaso, a Peruvian who is a resident of ... Hamburg, Germany. Yes, the leader of one of the most brutal and ruthless terrorist groups ever to have existed resides in Germany. How can this be possible? Isn't this the same German government that imprisoned Gerhard Lauck, Günther Deckert, Hans Schmidt, Fred Leuchter and many others, for openly discussing historical viewpoints? And yet, there he is, in Hamburg, the leader of the MRTA, the leader of a terrorist organization that has killed people, that is responsible for detonating thousands of explosions, robbing banks, destruction of property, kidnapping innocent people, etc., etc., etc. Germany gives this terrorist enemy of the West a place where he can live in safety. This terrorist openly admitted, over CNN, live for hundreds of millions of people to hear him the world over, his responsibility for this criminal outrage but he boastingly added that he will continue an armed struggle to distabilize the government of Fujimori in Peru. In other words, the government of Germany is protecting terrorists and, consequently, creating the right conditions for the promotion of terrorism. While all of this is tolerated by German authorities, that same government jails historians and Germany's own national patriots. That is Democracy at work.

Focusing Our Anger

To Be Effective, Our Anger Must Be Properly Directed

By
Dr. William Pierce

Hillary Clinton went to South Africa a few days ago to show the Clinton government's support for Black rule in that country. She met with the new Black ruler of South Africa, Nelson Mandela, and she toured the prison where Mandela was an inmate for 27 years. And she said all of the Politically Correct things during her tour: about White injustice toward Blacks, and the victims of apartheid, and so on. The average American viewer watching her performance on television and listening to her comments was given the very definite impression that the jailing of Mandela was one of the "injustices" Mrs. Clinton was talking about, that Mandela was a "victim of apartheid," who had been locked up by the wicked South African racists merely because he was a Black man.

The fact of the matter is that Mandela was locked up for being a terrorist and nothing else. In 1963 the police in South Africa broke up a terrorist gang which had been meeting at Rivonia, near Johannesburg. The group consisted of both Blacks, of whom Mandela was one, and Jews — plus one Indian. The Rivonia gang had detailed plans for a campaign of terror and murder. They already had carried out a number of terrorist killings before they were arrested. Terrorists acting under their direction had murdered a number of White South Africans, including women and children. Some of the Jews involved managed to escape from the country and continued their terrorist activities from abroad. One of these Jews who escaped was Joe Slovo, the Communist Party leader of South Africa. Mandela was not able to escape, however, because he already had been picked up by the police in connection with his illegal Communist Party activities before the raid on the terrorist headquarters at Rivonia. He was put on trial for his role in the terrorist conspiracy, convicted, and sentenced to life in prison. Now, of course, he is a hero of the leftists, including the Clintons and the American news media.

At home the Clintons are very much down on terrorists and always are calling for new laws to fight them and for more severe punishments when they are caught. It wasn't always that way. Back during the 1960s and 1970s Bill Clinton ran around with terrorists who burned ROTC buildings on university campuses and bombed Selective Service offices.

The lesson in all of this is that when the Clintons condemn terrorism, what they mean is that terrorism by White people on behalf of White people is bad and must be stamped out, but terrorism by Jews or Blacks against Whites is commendable.

It is unfortunate that the great mass of White Americans are not able to see this hypocrisy on the part of the Clintonistas. The reason they can't see it is that the controlled news media keep it covered up. How many of you listening today have ever even heard of Rivonia? You've certainly heard plenty about Nelson Mandela and the fact that he was sent to prison by the White South African government, but the implication always is that his only offense was that he was a Black leader, and that his imprisonment was an instance of White injustice against Blacks. You never hear that he was convicted of terrorism, of being an active terrorist in a gang which had murdered White South Africans and had the intent to murder many more of them and overthrow their government. The bosses of the news media know that, and the Clintons know that, but they deliberately conceal that information from you. If you're really interested in the details, go to any large library and look for information about what was happening in South Africa in 1963, 1964, and 1965 in connection with the Rivonia terrorist gang. That name again is Rivonia: R-i-v-o-n-i-a. That's where Nelson Mandela got his start, but you'd never learn that from listening to Hillary Clinton or watching the television news today.

And there are many other things you'd never learn from Hillary or the television news. Mrs. Clinton has been holding a number of press conferences during her South African tour, and she never fails to say how pleased she is by all of the "progress" which has been made since the advent of Black rule there. She smiles and tells the television audience how wonderful everything is in South Africa now that the Whites no longer are running the country. And that is a bare-faced lie, but you won't hear any television newsman contradicting her. The truth is that South Africa has become a much more dangerous and unpleasant place to live, for both Blacks and Whites, since the country was turned over to Black rule three years ago, and Mrs. Clinton and the media bosses know it. The murder rate and the rate for crime of all types have skyrocketed. Johannesburg, which used to be a clean, decent, and safe city under White rule, now has the highest murder rate in the world. Gangs of armed Black criminals roam the streets of Johannesburg and prey on both Blacks and Whites with impunity. In the Black tribal areas of South Africa old superstitions have reasserted themselves, and thousands of Blacks have been burned, hacked, or stoned to death on suspicion of being witches during the past three years. If your neighbor's cow dies, he may accuse you of having caused the death by witchcraft, and then you may have your hands wired behind your back and a gasoline-soaked tire put around your neck and set afire, the same punishment Blacks used to administer to other Blacks suspected of collaborating with Whites. Under White rule, killing Blacks suspected of witchcraft was not tolerated, but now there's no one to stop the practice. White South Africans who live on farms or who drive in rural areas must worry constantly about Black gangs. One of the practices of these gangs is to descend suddenly upon a White farm or to force an automobile with White occupants off the road and then gang-rape any White females they find.

The infrastructure of South Africa is beginning to come apart from neglect and corruption, and Whites who can afford it and have the option are fleeing the country. Even Blacks often will whisper to visitors that they wish Whites were still running the country, because their lives were much better under White rule. South Africa, in other words is coming unrav-eled under Black rule, is ceasing to function as a civilized country — much like our nation's capital, Washington, DC, also is coming unraveled under Black rule. But don't expect to learn this from any television news program.

You know, I talk with many people about things like this deliberate sanctification by the controlled news media of a Black terrorist thug and their lying about conditions in South Africa, and sometimes I become emotional when I talk about such things. It angers me, it makes me furious, that our news media, on which we depend for our knowledge about what's going on in the world, are under the control of a bunch of Jews who deliberately deceive us in order to advance their own interests.

What irritates me at least as much as this deception, however, is the moral paralysis of many of the people to whom I speak. They agree with me that it is bad that the news media deliberately deceive us, but they don't become angry about it, they don't become outraged. They just take it for granted that the media are deceptive, but they don't feel any obligation to try to do something about that. It's as if they consider themselves merely spectators watching the world go by like some sort of drama on a television screen.

I'll give you another example, and that is what is happening to young White women in our armed forces. It is good, of course, that the Army brass finally have made a move against the Black drill instructors and Black officers who have been raping them. Finally. What has not changed, however, is the system which deliberately subjects White women to the authority of Black males and pretends that everything will be all right, a system which pretends that there is no difference between Blacks and Whites or between women and men. That filthy and destructive system is still in place. And it is only a fluke that the rapes and other abuse of our women under that system have been exposed. It's not that no one knew what was happening all along. All of the White enlisted men and the White officers knew what was happening, but they didn't do anything about it because they were afraid of being accused of racism. So now, finally, the dirty little secret about our Army is out because a few women raised hell about it, but the system is still in place. How the filthy creatures who designed that system and support that system must be smirking and gloating now.

You know, more than 20 years ago, in 1975, when I began writing The Turner Diaries I foresaw this sort of thing, and I predicted it in my book. I saw that, on the one hand, the feminists were generating hostility between men and women and were undermining the special, protected status that women always had had in our society, and on the other hand the race fanatics who demanded the forced social integration of the races were poisoning the minds of our young people with their propaganda and persuading them that it was evil to refuse to give Blacks whatever they wanted because their ancestors had been the slaves of our ancestors and so we owed them something. I saw this, and I predicted that it would lead to both large-scale miscegenation and to a much greater incidence of violence against our women and rape of our women. In fact there is an episode in The Turner Diaries where Black U.S. Army soldiers are gang-raping White girls, and White officers who are aware of what is happening refuse to interfere out of fear of being charged with racism.

And so now, just a little over 20 years later, it has come to pass. But I did not make that prediction cold-bloodedly. I looked at the trends I could see in 1975, and I thought about where they would take our society in the next 20 years, but I wasn't cool and detached about it. I was mad as hell, and I'm still mad as hell. Even back in 1975 I wanted to take all of the feminist agitators and propagandists and all of the race-mixing fanatics and all of the media bosses and all of the bureaucrats and politicians who were collaborating with them, and I wanted to put them up against a wall, in batches of a thousand or so at a time, and machine-gun them. And I still want to do that. I am convinced that one day we will have to do that before we can get our civilization back on track, and I look forward to the day.

Of course, I didn't machine-gun any of these destroyers of our civilization, any of these poisoners of the souls of our people, because I didn't have the means for doing so. But I didn't just sit on my hands either. I pledged that I would do everything that I could do to build the means for one day stamping out the filth that is poisoning our people. And that's what I have been doing, reaching out to our people through every feasible medium — through books and through the Internet and through these American Dissident Voices broadcasts — informing our people, awakening them, explaining things to them, and trying to inspire them.

And I know that I've been reaching many people, because I hear from them all the time. They tell me that I have helped them to understand what is happening, that I have helped them to make sense out of things, that I have given them a new sense of direction. And I am glad for all of that. But what still is disconcerting to me is the relatively small number of these people who display any passion, any anger. For many of them it is as if they have been watching a confusing television drama, and I have helped them to understand the drama a little better, but it still isn't real to them; it still isn't their responsibility to do something about it. They still are just spectators. Not all of them. The number of people who are angry is growing. But too many are still just dispassionate spectators.

Maybe I shouldn't be irritated about this. Maybe this is just human nature. Maybe most people are inherently incapable of being anything but spectators — although I'm inclined to believe that the television age has encouraged and exacerbated this passivity in some people who might otherwise be active and responsible citizens. Anyway, I should be thankful that at least understanding is growing among the spectators as well as among the more active people. Even passive support based on understanding is better than nothing.

But our real hope for the future lies with the people who still are capable of feeling moral outrage, still are capable of becoming angry: angry that our news media are being used to deceive us, angry that our entertainment media are being used to poison the minds of our people, angry that our government used our resources to pressure the people of South Africa into turning their country over to Black savages, angry that our Army has become what it is today. We need many more such angry people.

Our anger, of course, must be focused and directed. When someone sees his world being destroyed; when someone sees the future of his children being stolen from them; when someone sees everything around him that is fine and noble and beautiful being trampled into the mud; when someone sees his heritage, which has been created through the work and sacrifice of countless generations of his forebears, falling into the uncaring hands of savages — it is easy for him to be angry at many things, at many people. It is easy to be angry at liberals, who manage to be on the wrong side of every issue and whose mindless egalitarianism lies at the root of most of the destructive policies which are wrecking our civilization. It is easy to be angry at lawyers — along with big businessmen and corporation executives — a privileged class whose members seem to be far more interested in fattening themselves on the various processes of decay in our society, even hastening those processes whenever it seems personally advantageous to them, rather than using their positions of influence to oppose the destruction. It is easy to be angry at homosexuals and feminists, those sick creatures whose organized drive to remake the world to suit their own perverse needs has so poisoned our society in recent decades. And it is certainly easy to be angry at Blacks and other non-Whites, whose pestilential presence has done so much damage to our world.

And all of that anger would be justified. Certainly we must deal with each of these groups decisively before we can restore our world to health, but to focus on any of them now can only mislead us. There are just two proper targets for our attention and our anger now: they are, first and foremost, the controlled news and entertainment media, which have promoted and orchestrated every destructive and degenerative movement, policy, and tendency which afflicts our society; and second, the government, which for all practical purposes is today a creature of the media.

Without the backing of the mass media, liberalism would still be only a nutcase fringe tendency among a minority of academics and clerics. The whole campaign of racial integration and special rights for Blacks, which has pushed Blacks into every facet of White society since the Second World War, has been directed by the mass media: even the Black violence which has flared up so often in our cities is a direct and deliberate media product, a product designed to intimidate White opposition. None of the rioting, burning, and looting in Los Angeles a couple of years ago following the Rodney King incident, for example, would have occurred if the mass media had not incited it with their endless repetition on television of the arrest scene. Without the media incitement it would have been just one more arrest of a drug-crazed Black criminal by fed-up White policemen.

And just as the controlled news media today portray a Black terrorist and murderer of White women and children in South Africa as a saintly hero, just as they deliberately create the utterly false impression in White Americans that South Africa has become more peaceful and prosperous since the end of White rule, so it was the same sort of media lying and misrepresentation about South Africa in the past which led the U.S. government to boycott South Africa and apply other pressure leading to Black rule. The media, with their lies and propaganda, manipulate public opinion, and the politicians in the government just follow along.

And so it is with virtually every other governmental policy. The media push public opinion in the direction the media bosses want it to go, and the politicians, willing to do anything to be elected, go along.

So let us keep in mind who the principal enemies of our people are, and let us keep our anger focused on these enemies. But let us also remember that our anger must not be dissipated in foolish and unproductive violence. Not now. Not yet. Now is the time for hard work, for intelligent work, not for violence.

Abraham Lincoln reconsidered

Honest Abe's True Colors

By GRAY FOX

Much of Moriarty's recent essay (Jan. 1997) is devoted to backpedaling from the man that General George McLellan called "the Royal Ape." There seems to have arisen in Moriarty's psyche some dim recognition that Lincoln wasn't such a good role model for race-conscious whites after all. It is difficult to take seriously any racialist who favors the man that Nelson Mandela has identified as one of his most admired heroes along with Lenin, Stalin and Chairman Mao.

Unfortunately, following Moriarty's change of heart, he expends much ink to convince readers that the Southern view of Lincoln is irrelevant. He still denies that Lincoln played a major role in initiating white dissolution. He wonders if a successful South would have become just another Brazil. He assures us that "white racism" won't sell anymore and that neither the Old South nor the pre-civil rights South can be resurrected. Finally he proclaims that while "the issue today is how to salvage the, or a, white nation in America...splitting the white population along sectional lines seems counterproduaive."

At the end, there is a return to the earlier article (Nov. 1996) that puffs Lincoln as revealer of life's great profundities. Southerners who just don't "get it" receive some rather condescending advice. Having lost a vicious war by being too chivalrous, they should gratefully abase themselves before their conqueror's all-seeing wisdom.

> Certainly the South suffered, and its wounds are evident to this day. But suffering is more profitable if it brings knowledge as well as experience. Lincoln taught the Confederates the difference between a war and a duel. Lincoln can teach today's white Majority the difference between the United States of America and the American Nation.

This statement displays a callous disregard for the hundreds of thousands of courageous men in gray who fought to preserve their race and their civilization in the conflict of 1861-1865 and who endured the infamous Reconstruction that followed. It also displays a lamentable lack of understanding of the causes of the war and the nature of the forces arrayed against the Confederacy. Most distressingly it reveals a myopic inability to discern that the Cause of the Confederacy in 1861 is also the cause of white racialists today.

Red Republican in the White House

The South was not so ignorant as contemporary Americans of Lincoln's true colors, one of which turns out to be Red. Southerners in 1860 were well aware of the destructive force that first showed its face in 1848, when Karl Marx published the Communist Manifesto, the year that saw the outbreak of socialist revolutions throughout Europe. Although these revolutions were premature, it was seven more decades before the forces of communism were able to subvert a European state in their nihilistic revolt against civilization.

In an 1860 sermon delivered in the shadow of looming war, Southern theologian lames H. Thornwell revealed just how well the South understood not only the implications of the North's rising secular humanist pseudo-religion and its ideological soul-mate, abolitionism, but also the relationship of both to the embryonic political and ideological monstrosity whose evil, all-devouring nature he could have only guessed at in 1860.

> The parties in this conflict are not merely Abolitionists and slaveholders, they are Atheists, Socialists, Communists, Red Republicans, Jacobins on the one side and the friends of order and regulated freedom on the other. In one word, the world is the battleground, Christianity and Atheism the combatants, and the progress of humanity the stake.

This startling quote shows just how well Southerners understood who the principals were in the impending clash that New York Senator William Seward called "an irrepressible conflict between opposing and enduring forces." Americans should consider carefully the implications of the North's "Red" connection. Those who see Lincoln as anything other than an agent of white destruction place themselves in league with just about every enemy the white race has. One hopes that this is done out of ignorance rather than by informed choice.

Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels supported Lincoln's war. During the war, Marx wrote a column for socialist Horace Greeley's New York Tribune. Award-winning historian James McPherson made the connection between Lincoln and socialism in Abraham Lincoln and the Second American Revolution:

> Lincoln championed the leaders of the European revolutions of 1848; in turn, a man who knew something about those revolutions, Karl Marx praised Lincoln in 1865 as "the single-minded son of the working class" who led his "country through the matchless struggle for the rescue of an enchained race and the reconstrudion of a social world."

Russian revolutionaries favored the North. Alexander Herzen called Jefferson Davis "the greatest political criminal of our time." Michael Bakunin wrote of Lincoln's war, "[I]n the struggle between the Northern and Southern United States...the North...has all my sympathies." Bakunin was even more pleased with Reconstruction and the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments. Winning the war wasn't enough; for "popular self-government" to become a reality, "another revolution. . .far more profound" was required. Like the Bolsheviks who infiltrated America in the 1920s and 1930s, these early Communist revolutionaries clearly saw the potential of using the Negro race as a proletariat for subjugation of the West.

In light of this, perhaps it is not coincidental that Lincoln's administration enacted into law three planks of the Communist Manifesto. The first was a national banking act. The second was the Internal Revenue Service. The third, enacted by the Morrill Tariff Act, was public education and Land Grant Colleges.

Lincoln benefited from the failed 1848 Communist revolutions in more material ways. Many veteran "forty-eighters" fled to the U.S. With the outbreak of the War for Southern Independence, they joined Lincoln's invasion army, forming an experienced cadre of military leaders who helped compensate for the fact that many of the best U.S. officers cast their lot with the Confederacy. Friedrich Engels later wrote of this bonanza of Communist leadership that "had it not been for the experienced soldiers who had entered America after the European revolution (1848), especially from Germany, the organization of the Union army would have taken still longer than it did."

The list of revolutionaries who served as Union general officers is revealing. It includes: Joseph Weydemeyer, Carl Schurz, Franz Sigel, Thomas Medgher (commander of the Irish Brigade), Peter Osterhaus, August von Willich, Friedrich Salomon, Alexander Schimmelfennig, E. S. Solomon, Albin Schoepf, Julius Stahel, Max Weber and Frederick Hecker. The title of William L. Burton's 1988 book, Melting Pot Soldiers, tells the story with a remarkable economy of words.

The Lavender Lincoln

There is hardly time or space to recount the many horror stories of Lincoln's personal aberrations. There is some evidence that he was the bastard offspring of a North Carolina man who took Lincoln's mother into his home as an orphan child and molested her sexually. Lincoln publicly professed Christianity for the sake of politics, but as a young man he wrote a book mocking Christianity and the Bible. Recent medical studies of Lincoln's condition suggest that he may have suffered from Marfan's Syndrome, a genetic disease that frequently leads to early death.

Throughout life he was plagued by nightmares, delusions, hallucinations and forebodings about his own death, which some writers believe he may have craved.

His 1832 address to the Young Men's Lyceum in Springfield supports that theory. George McDaniel writes:

> In that bizarre speech, speaking almost wistfully, Lincoln rhapsodized about the founding fathers' having achieved glory in death. He went on to warn his young audience cryptically about the possibility of a genius rising up in America, who, in his quest for fame, might attempt tO destroy the country. He counseled his bewildered audience that they must help defeat this evil genius. Could Lincoln just possibly have been speaking of his own evil side and could the two faces exemplify his schizophrenic nature? Could Lincoln himself be the "house divided against itself" that he spoke of years later!

Lincoln was almost certainly a sexual deviant. Rumors persist of dalliances between Lincoln and Marine guards in the White House. These charges are unproven but others are more certain. In his book, The Inner World of Abraham Lincoln, historian Michael Burlingame describes Lincoln's homosexuality and the sadomasochistic marital relationship with his wife. In his 1926 book, Abraham Lincoln: The Prairie Years, Carl Sandburg, hardly a lightweight source, described Lincoln and merchant Joshua Speed as having "a streak of lavender and spots soft as May violets."

In The Story the Soldiery Wouldn't Tell: Sex in the Civil War, medical historian Thomas P. Lowry tells how Lincoln slept in the same bed with Speed for four years. When Speed announced his marriage, Lincoln became so depressed he could not perform his duties as an Illinois legislator. His friends feared he might commit suicide. As quoted in Lincoln associate William Herndon's 1888 work, Life of Lincoln, Lincoln wrote to Speed:

> Your [letter], announcing that Miss Fanny and you are "no more twain, but one flesh," reached me this morning....I feel somewhat jealous of both of you now. You will be so exclusively concerned for one another that I shall be forgotten entirely....I shall be very lonesome without you.

Firebell in the Night

While honorable men like Stephen Douglas and James Buchanan tried to salvage the Constitution and white civilization, Lincoln's abolitionist allies, known at the time as "black Republicans," fanned the flames of race war. Thomas Jefferson had long ago seen that the fervor aroused by the slavery question would lead to a national catastrophe. In a prescient letter to Massachusetts Congressman John Holmes following the Missouri Compromise of 1820 which excluded slavery from territories north of latitude 36É30' Jefferson wrote:

[T]his momentous question, like a firebell in the night, awakened and filled me with terror. I considered it at once as the knell of the Union. . . .A geographical line, coinciding with a marked principle, moral and political, once conceived and held up to the angry passions of men, will never be obliterated....I regret that I am now to die in the belief that the useless sacrifice of themselves by the generation of 1776, to acquire self-government and happiness to their country, is to be thrown away by the unwise and unworthy passions of their sons.

The War's cause has been distorted by both sides in the aftermath. The South's detractors claim that the war was fought to free the slaves. Many Southerners, fearing the "racism" smear, counter that the war was fought over states rights and free trade. The reality is that slavery was the central issue but in a way radically different than liberals admit. Southerners were forced to fight for survival against the "angry passions" that Jefferson foresaw.

Have Americans forgotten why John Brown attacked Harpers Ferry! Throughout the decades before the war, abolitionists agitated relentlessly for armed servile insurrection against the South. Intent on fulfilling this malevolent fantasy, Brown planned to arm Virginia's slaves as a prelude to massacre. For this monstrous act, the Northern press compared Brown favorably to Jesus Christ. With the examples of the bloody Nat Turner Rebellion, the genocidal Haiti massacres and other lethal slave uprisings before them, Southerners had little choice but to defend themselves against those who openly advocated their mass murder.

Outgoing President James Buchanan understood the potential for disaster far better than Lincoln. In his final speech to Congress in December 1860, he said, "Selfpreservation is the first law of nature, and therefore any state of society in which the sword is all the time suspended over the heads of the people must at last become intolerable." No one in a position of leadership incited passions more than Abraham Lincoln. To the South, Lincoln, the great "house-divided-against-itself-cannot-stand abolitionist was the point of the sword Buchanan so vividly described. The election of 1860 was the beginning of its descent. The South had no choice but to abandon a union that sanctioned murder of white women and children.

Given events since the war, is it true that Lincoln was "the historical and political progenitor of today's largely self-inflicted white genocide!" Is this mere "heated opinion," as Moriarty contends! Significantly, he fails to quote the remainder of my critical passage:

> Beyond the murder of over 600,000 of his own countrymen in a war of fratricidal vengeance marked by the deliberate employment of "total war" by Lincoln's Union army commanders.. .Lincoln's war conferred moral sanction, and indeed constitutional compulsion, upon the lethal delusion of racial egalitarianism.

It is the ascendancy of the ideology of racial equality that threatens our existence. Lincoln was not alone in creating our plight. It is certainly true that others have followed in his footsteps. But it was Lincoln who created the legal and social climate that legitimized the destruction of America's racial hierarchy. The inexorable consequence of Lincoln's revolution held at bay for a century by segregation and Jim Crow was an inevitable and concomitant rise of race-mixing and the agent of our "self-inflicted genocide."

This view is not mine alone. Perceptive Southerners said as much at the time. In his postwar book, In Defense of Virginia and the South, Robert L. Dabney, chaplain to Stonewall Jackson, described the deadly peril Lincoln's revolution created: "The black race is an alien one on our soil; and nothing except his amalgamation with ours, or his subordination to ours, can prevent the rise of that instinctive antipathy of race, which, history shows, always arises between opposite races in proximity." He added:

> [T]he offspring of an amalgamation must be a hybrid race.. ..And this apparently is the destiny which our conquerors have in view. If indeed they can mix the blood of the heroes of Manassas with this vile stream from the fens of Africa, then they will never again have occasion to tremble before the righteous resistance of Virginia freemen; but will have a race supple and vile enough to fill that position of political subjugation, which they desire to fix on the South.

Advance to Barbarism

The assertion that the embattled South thought of the War as some sort of romantic lark is so far divorced from historical reality as to be deeply insulting. Outnumbered more than 4-to-1 in population, and 100-to-1 in industrial capacity at the beginning of the War, the South fought because it had no choice. It was Lincoln who raised an army to invade the South. It was the South which fought with grim desperation as long as it was able.

Men like Stonewall Jackson and Nathan Bedford Forrest were not squeamish when it came to the art of killing. When asked what to do about massive looting and vandalism by Union troops in Fredericksburg on the eve of the December 1862 battle, Jackson replied: "Kill them, sir. Kill them every one." Forrest's ferocity is the stuff of legend. His philosophy was "war means fighting, and fighting means killing." He was so good at it that William T. Sherman once wrote, "Forrest should be hunted down and killed if it costs 10,000 lives and bankrupts the treasury."

Grant asked Lincoln to suspend exchange of Union and Confederate prisoners because he calculated that one Confederate was worth three of his "melting pot soldiers."

The Army of Northern Virginia under Robert E. Lee inflicted such devastating casualties on Grant's Army of the Potomac that it very nearly cost Lincoln the election of 1864.

It is true that the South refrained from the organized butchery of Sherman, Phil Sheridan, Benjamin "Beast" Butler and other Unionists who waged total war on defenseless civilians. The burning of Atlanta, the march to the sea, the destruction of the Shenandoah Valley, the depopulation of parts of Missouri and Georgia, the internment of civilians in concentration camps, the obscene treatment of Southern POWs in Northern camps, and uncounted other atrocities bear scathing testimony to Lincoln's barbarism against the South. However, only a man utterly devoid of civilizing instincts could construe such behavior as a virtue. As with the Allies' wars against Germany, self-righteous carnage against our own blood kin has brought the white race perilously close to disaster.

The second assertion that Lincoln teaches us, the "difference between the United States of America and the American Nation," says nothing positive about Lincoln. One presumes that "the United States of America" denotes the federal government, and "the American Nation" denotes the people themselves, sans government. One further presumes that a racialist must surely favor preserving the people ahead of their institutions. However, in the conflict of 1861-1865, it was Lincoln who fought to preserve the "Union," that all-powerful empire that was the United States of America. Conversely the South fought to preserve itself from racial amalgamation. It seems self-evident that a racialist must embrace the South's position and condemn the megalomaniac who tried to destroy it.

Salvaging an Ethnostate

Does Southern nationalism ("sectionalism") have no role in the political calculus of the 20th century? Who voted for California's anti-immigration Proposition 187 and anti-affirmative action Proposition 209? Far from abandoning racial awareness, we must fan its flames. As conditions worsen, the white population will polarize along racia lines.

As for Southern nationialism, if "sectionalism" is not the answer, what is? How, except by irredentism and geographic concentration, can an ethnostate arise! Shall we all move to odd-numbered street addresses and call that our nation! The idea is preposterous. Any animal in the wild knows instinctively that it must defend it's own territory or die. One can already see sectionalism at work in Quebec and in the Southwest, where Mexico is assiduously colonizing land that was once American. Does anyone believe that Mexicans intent on establishing "Aztlan" will forego "sectionalism" in pursuit of their goal? Those who dismiss Southern nationalism and the strong racial consciousness that underlies it should ask themselves what they would substitute in its place.

While no one wishes bloodshed, we must realize that salvation may not come without disruption. A core group identity and a locus of action are madatory for success.

Diffuse resistance everywhere translates to effectiveness nowhere. Most Southerners still retain a sense of kinship and loyalty to their Southern heritage. This self-consciousness exists in few other regions. It is not so pronounced even in the West, where antipathy to the federal government is at least as strong as it is in the South.

If one "section" or even one state takes action, it may be joined by others, just as Lincoln's call for the invasion of the lower Southern states precipitated secession by Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Arkansas. Refusal by a governor to accept a particularly noxious federal diktat may, in fact, be the confrontational spark that one day ignites the birth of an ethnostate. This will work best in a region where sectional loyalties command participation by sister states. It could have happened when Eisenhower sent troops to Little Rock.

Finally, no war is won without a unifying cause and symbols of that cause. The Confederate flag is still a talisman of extraordinary power, as anyone who has ever lofted it in defiance in the face of blacks can readily attest. The elemental fear and dismay are palpable.

What lessons, then, are we to learn from the man whose war caused the deaths of more white Americans than all other American wars combined, the man who ushered in political and social equality for a race whose genes are destroying Western civilization, the man who advanced the universalist cause as no one in his era had done before or since! Perhaps there is a lesson for us, but it is not the one cited in Moriarty's "Deep Politics." It is this: failure to discern the true nature of any conflict abrogates all hope of victory. In war one must identify enemies and allies. Those who are not allies are enemies, and must be treated as such.

Lincoln overthrew a nation based on the sanctity and preeminence of the white race in order to preserve an empire that trumpeted such sanctimonious "principles" as preservation of the Union, racial equality, commercial hegemony and on and on. This makes Lincoln the enemy.

What non-Southerners must recognize is that it was the South that fought to save the white race. In Lincoln's own words, Southerners fought against an "evil genius" who tried to destroy the American Nation and its founding people. Consequently the Southern Cause is the cause of whites everywhere and all whites must join that cause if we are to succeed. When the time comes to rectify the racial disaster that looms before us, the South will be in the forefront of that struggle. But it must not be alone. The "irrepressible conflict" is more than just a Southern struggle. It is more than just an American struggle. It is a struggle for white survival.

To ensure our racial future

We Must Know Our Racial Past

The Study of Languages. Historically, investigation regarding the origins of the white, Aryan or Indo-European peoples has been confined to methods and time frames consistent with and constrained by Biblical interpretations in the book of Genesis. This confined all discussion of the subject to no earlier than 2350 B.C. or about 1,656 years after the Biblical story of the creation, when the families of Noah disembarked from the ark and set out to populate the world. Consequently most of the early attempts to set the historical record straight involved speculative interpretations of ancient classical texts, as well as politically motivated fabrications of medieval monks. It was not until the development of the science of linguistics that racial studies moved from the realm of myth and guesswork to the scientific arena of fact.

The progress from savagery to civilization is intimately bound up with the advance of abstract thinking, which has enabled the world's civilized peoples to rise above the chaos of animal sensations and to fashion an ordered cosmos. The growth of reasoning in turn goes hand in hand with the development of language. Words, after all, are the very seeds of thought. It follows that a common language not only implies a common mental outlook among its speakers, but to a large extent also reflects the general progress of a race as it moves from animalism to savagery, from savagery to barbarism and finally from barbarism to civilization. Philology, the study of languages, may therefore claim a place among the historical disciplines, so far as it is able to trace and interpret the progress of early civilizations.

The close relationships between some European languages had been explored as early as the beginning of the 17th century. In 1767 a member of both the Royal Society and the Society of Antiquaries, James Parsons, did some research on the most ancient peoples of Europe and Asia. Through a comparison of linguistically similar elements contained in different languages he was able to offer a guide to the relative affinity these groups shared and to their distant origins. He concluded that the languages of Europe, Iran and India were all derived from a common linguistic ancestor. Parsons can well be credited with the independent discovery of what we now call the Indo-European language family.

After Parsons' discovery, and in 1796, William Jones, then Chief lustice of India and a scholar in linguistics, proposed that Sanskrit, Gothic and Celtic languages as well as old Persian belonged to the same family. It was not, however, until the beginning of the 19th century that the development of comparative philology allowed us to arrive at the concept of a linguistic affinity unfathered by Noah. Modern studies have revealed a commonalty among the languages of ancient white peoples stretching from the Atlantic to India. This suggests a single source or ancestry that was the precursor to the Indo-European, a language that has been termed Proto-Indo-European, Archaeological evidence shows that the Proto-Indo-European peoples and, by extension their vocabulary, appeared on the scene in Neolithic times, an appearance not coincidentally corresponding to the first widespread domestication of animals. Irrespective of the advancements made through the study of language similarities, this line of study was limited because the occupation of Europe by Indo-Europeans invariably predates the written historical record.

Archaeological Evidence and Radiocarbon Dating. We know that the study of race is a multidisciplinary field. It draws upon Linguistics, but also from History, Anthropology, Archaeology, Biology and other fields of expertise. One of the least likely of scientific fields, yet in retrospect one of the most important to the discovery of the origins of peoples, was that of Atomic Physics, a study with which, until comparatively recently, archaeologists were unfamiliar.

In 1949, Willard F. Libby opened a door to the past which egalitarian Marxism never succeeded in closing—a scientific method of dating using radiocarbon or carbon-14.

Now with Colin Renfrew's advancements in radiocarbon techniques we know with certainty that European cultures are of greater antiquity than previously supposed. The megalithic tombs of Western Europe, we now know, are older than the Pyramids, which were once thought to have preceded them. Indeed they rank as the earliest stone monuments in the world. The "Newgrange" tomb in Ireland has been dated to 3350 B.C. and a tomb in Brittany to an astounding 4300 B.C. We also know that early metal-using cultures of Europe antedate both Troy and the Bronze Age Aegean, from which they were presumed to have derived. Through microscopic analysis Alexander Marshack has taken the European time line even further back. He postulates an advanced time-based and time-factoring culture, capable of advanced thought processes and astronomical measurements thousands of years before it was deemed possible.

The origins of our culture become less important when we realize that the creators of culture, notwithstanding their specific geographic origins, were biologically the self-same people as we. That is, a generally dolichocranial, invariably tall and unquestionable white race. The darkening and coarseness of many peoples currently seen in the Middle East and India are reflective of inbreeding with more primitive peoples over a period of several thousand years. It is not a mirror of their physical appearance at the time of their cultural Zenith. Even in ancient Hittite inscriptions our people were referred to as Hari, the blond people. Indeed there is substantial evidence to indicate that this very down-breeding led directly to the decline and dissolution of these once proud and advanced civilizations. The practice of incest among the Vanar, a people of Nordic and Germanic mythology, and among the "God Kings" of Egypt may well have been an attempt to protect the bloodlines against such degeneration.

Natural Selection. White, Aryan, Indo-European peoples have inhabited the European continent at least since the Early Bronze Age, perhaps as far back as 7,000 years ago or even longer. For all intents and purposes they were identical to the modern Caucasian. The white race is unmistakably the child of the earth of his European homeland.

Some 100,000 years ago the ancestors of our race may have migrated to their current cold and stressful Eurasian climates. There the harsh and unforgiving landscape influenced the temperament, as well as the creativity, of these ancient ancestral people. The harsher climates selected for larger brains, more forward planning. a longer time horizon, greater family stability and increased longevity, with concomitant reductions in sex hormones, speed of maturation, reproductive fertility and aggressiveness. This latter feature, whatever its negative effects, is a blessed necessity for complex cultural development.

Other humanoid subraces adopted different survival mechanisms. The Negro developed greater bone density, a higher percentage of "quick-twitch" muscle fiber, higher levels of testosterone, faster rates of growth to sexual maturation and higher rates of reproductivity. In a strictly evolutionary sense, there is no right or wrong way in which nature acts to ensure the survival of a given species—only successes and failures. In this respect both the Negroid and the white can be said to be on more or less equal terms. Survival is one thing, civilization is another. Evidence from a variety of scientific fields demonstrates that the beginnings of our race and the beginnings and maintenance of civilization are irreconcilably linked.

DNA analysis indicates that this mummy, found in western China, is of European origin.

Ancient Journeys. In ancient times our people expanded from their Eurasian homeland and mastered all of Europe. The Indo-Europeans brought their culture to the icy North and storm-tossed western lands of the continent. To the south our ancestors ventured to the limits of the Sahara and Africa's Atlas Mountains, where to this day pale Bedouins relatively unpolluted by Arabia's now swarthy multitudes, still move to the seasonal pulse of nature. To the east, we went through the Khyber Pass and along the timeless old "silk road." Auburn and red-headed people have recently been found in remote areas of China where previous history dictated they were never supposed to have been.

Similar interest is provoked by a white ruling class among the population of the Incas who were identified to Pizarro as being the viracochas "a divine race of white men with beards." Thor Heyerdahl's seminal study of Easter Island shed light upon a white race which once inhabited eastern Polynesia. Here a people called the oho-tea are said by the native populations to have been a race which in "olden times had white skin, red hair and blue eyes." According to Heyerdahl's studies they were eliminated in a final war by the more primitive yet more numerous Hanau momoko people, the descendants of whom now are the sole inhabitants of the sorry little island.

From Kashmir to Mysore in the western provinces of India our race's influence prevailed and established cultures that were old before the annals of recorded time. The caste system was introduced into India by our Aryan cousins millennia ago in a failed attempt at maintaining racial integrity. The Sanskrit word for caste, varna, means color. Even today, after the infusion of ancient Aryan blood so many centuries ago, we still find the occasional blue-eyed Brahman (the highest caste) conversing in a language whose Aryan roots weave the story of our greatness back though the mists of time.

An American Beginning: An American End. In ancient North America the impact of our race was similarly felt. A 9,300-year-old Caucasian male was found on the banks of the Columbia River in Washington State, the so-called "Columbia River Man." As in so many other areas of the world where the thought police rule and news is suppressed and twisted, information of white achievement has been suppressed. If it checks out, Columbia River Man would revise everything we thought we knew about early man in the Americas. In the light of these and similar findings it is now considered possible that the earliest waves of humans coming across the Bering land bridge were not the ancestors of the people we now call Native Americans.

Many of the traces left behind by these early trekkers display markedly Caucasian features. It is possible, perhaps even probable, given the historical precedents from around the globe, that they were the victims of genocide perpetrated by the proto-Indians.

We continue to find that our race's travels in Paleolithic times were more extensive and wondrous than previously imagined. Wherever we went we brought with us our unique gift—civilization. These early pioneering cultures have now fallen into ruin. With the decline of the spark of white creativity, no one was left to build. Once prosperous cities have now decayed, along with the sad monuments to nearly forgotten achievements. Will this also be the fate of our civilization? In spite of our self-deluded retreat from responsibility, we still continue to hold sway over the ever shrinking remnants of a civilized world that is still the envy of backward peoples everywhere. Whites must remember that without the continuation and the survival of their race, not only their culture, but all high civilization may end and a dark pall of ignorance will settle on the earth.

Is It Time to de-Holocaust Jewish History?

Professor Robert Faurisson once remarked that the Holocaust has become a civic religion for Jews. Anyone who needs further proof of that statement should read The Seventh Million by Israeli journalist Tom Segev. In rich detail Segev shows how the Holocaust, the alleged "gassing" of six million Jews, has expanded from a wartime event at first downplayed by Zionists to a daily obsession.

The first section of Segev's work covers much the same territory as Lenni Brenner's Zionism in the Age of the Dictators or Edwin Black's The Transfer Agreement. Segev asserts that the main interest of Zionist leaders was the foundation of the Jewish state, not saving Jews in Europe or elsewhere. In the immediate postwar years, Holocaust "survivors" were far from being coddled by the Israeli state-in-the-making. They were loudly criticized by sabras (Jews born in Palestine) for letting themselves be led like "lambs to the slaughter." Had they emigrated to Palestine before the war they would have been saved. Consequently the Holocaust not merely proved the validity of Zionism; it was implicitly blamed on the "survivors."

In The Seventh Million, Segev deftly exposes the internal contradictions of Israeli society. The Zionist emigrants from Hitler's Germany were the objects of unremitting hostility. They were accused of possessing the innate German respect for authority that characterized the Nazis. Their Yiddish publications were considered a linguistic corruption of the official Hebrew. All in all, life for German Jews under Zionism was not an easy one.

One of the major issues facing Israel in the 1950s was the decision to reestablish relations with Germany. The issue, as can be surmised, was an emotional one. In many heated debates Ben-Gurion advocated the establishment of ties with Germany in order to strengthen Israel economically and militarily. The reparations agreements, it is important to note, did not compensate Jews for six million murdered relatives. Rather they were intended to compensate Jews, whether they lived in Israel or not, for wrongfully confiscated property. In time reparations also came to include compensation for career interruptions or diminished earning capacity.

Nahum Coldmann of the World Jewish Congress first cannily agreed to relatively small initial sums in exchange for ever expanding payments down through the years. Segev diligently explores the vast claims racket that grew out of the agreements. Viewing most of the claimants as cheats, Germans meticulously checked the dates and details of the applications. This early bureaucratic revisionism surprised many Jews who had been looking for "easy money.

The two most significant parts of The Seventh Million are the accounts of the Kastner and Eichmann trials. The former was triggered by a pamphlet written by Malchiel Grunewald accusing Dr. Rudolf Kastner, an official of the Mapai government, of having collaborated with the Nazis during the war. An official of the Jewish Agency in Hungary and involved in the notorious "trucks-for-Jews" deal, Kastner allegedly went out of his way to save the lives of his Jewish friends while shipping the rest of the Chosen off to Auschwitz.

The Kastner trial was a disaster for Ben-Gurion and the Mapai Party. It established what had been common knowledge among the leaders, but not to the man in the street, namely the Zionist policy of saving the few and sacrificing the many. The legal proceedings were based on the fallacious assumption that the Jews who remained in Europe had in fact been exterminated. The Kastner trial gave Menahem Begin and his Herut Party their first real opportunity to break the power of the Socialist and Labor politicians. The verdict of the trial court supported Grunewald's charges against Kastner.

The kidnapping of Adolf Eichmann was Ben-Gurion's chance to correct the damage caused by the Kastner trial. Throughout the proceedings Gideon Hausner, the prosecutor, strove to show how heroically the Jews had resisted the Holocaust. Eichmann, the defendant, was an almost irrelevant figure. The trial completely failed to establish his role as an architect of mass murder. It did allow Ben-Gurion and Mapai members to claim that Jews and their leaders had not been "Kastners" during the war.

It was the Eichmann trial which made the Holocaust a permanent fixture of the Israeli conscience. Almost all Israeli educational courses on the Six Million date from that time. Today the Holocaust is big business in Israel, as it is all over the world. Israelis are taught to delve deeply into the "meaning" of the Holocaust and reach the inevitable conclusion that only unquestioning support of Israel and its policies can prevent a similar tragedy from occurring. It is this conclusion that Segev challenges. Although no revisionist, he correctly understands that the nationalist interpretation of the Six Million story is wrong. He agrees with Professor Yehuda Elkana,who wrote a widely read newspaper article, "For Forgetting":

> I see no greater danger to the future of Israel than the fact that the Holocaust has been instilled methodically into the consciousness of the Israeli public, including that very large part that did not endure the Holocaust, as well as the generation of children that has been born and grown up here. For the first time I understand the seriousness of what we have done, when for decades we have sent every child in Israel to visit Yad Vashem over and over again. What did we expect tender children to do with this experience? Our minds, even hearts, closed, without interpretation, we have proclaimed "Remember!" What for! What is a child supposed to do with these memories! For a great many of them, the horror pictures were likely to be interpreted as a call for hatred. "Remember" could be interpreted as a call for long-standing, blind hatred. It may well be that the world at large will remember. I am not sure of that, but in any case that is not our concern. Each nation, including Germany, will decide for itself, in the context of its own considerations, whether it wishes to remember. We, on the other hand, must forget. I do not see any more important political educational stance for the country's leaders than to stand up for life, to give oneself over to the construction of our future—and not to deal, morning and evening, with symbols, ceremonies and lessons of the Holocaust. The role of historical remembrance must be uprooted from our lives.

And that, in so many words, is what author Segev calls the task of The Seventh Million.

Conspiracies, Then and Now

In the America of the 1950s and 1960s, it was not uncommon, on meeting a fellow right-winger, to come to touch on—better put, to dwell on—what we called in those times the Communist menace. Nor was it less common, after sundry Bolshevik atrocities and terrifying threats had passed in review, for one of us to play the trump card in civilized humanity's case for the prosecution: "Communism's a conspiracy, you know." So we knew—or thought we knew.

It's almost a decade since the U.S.S.R., well, not exactly collapsed, but began to slough off its Soviet skin. Only a few diehards, even on the right, seem willing to maintain that this is all a carefully contrived deception to lull us to our doom. Nor is it widely claimed, even in the remotest stands of Birchdom, that whatever beast is aborning or slouching is worse, or could be worse, than Lenin's, Stalin's, Brezhnev's Russia.

The percipient Revilo Oliver

More than 30 years after the late Revilo Oliver debunked conclusively the right-wing delusion that some malevolent and seemingly omnipotent combination was to blame for all the right wing's and all the white man's woes, communism may be moribund, but conspiracy—The Conspiracy!—lives on.

Consult the booklist of nearly any "patriotic" publisher. Three years short of the millennium the same hodgepodges of Gothic romance, arabesque invention, baroque exaggeration, Victorian consternation—all calculated to make your maiden auntie and 10,000 right-wingers swoon—vend and wend their way among our kind.

Freemasons? Rosicrucians? Illuminati? Banksters? Bilderbergers? CFR? Skull and Bones? Club of Rome? A diller, a dollar, a thousand Rhodes scholars!

Run even part way through the profusion of plotters and complotters that "experts" in "conspiriology"—as many of them like to call their "science"—have at their fingertips and the names begin to have a nonsensical, but vaguely comforting ring, somewhat like the London church-bell rhymes of fond remembrance from childhood.

What then is wrong with a little conspiracy theory! First, as Professor Oliver argued in his magisterial Conspiracy or Degeneracy [available from Liberty Bell Publications, $6.00 + postage], it doesn't adequately describe reality, aside from failing to explain the workings of politics and history.

It is noteworthy that the very word conspiracy is a legalism, denoting a secret plan to carry out a crime. Conspiriologists have converted this legal formulation into a moral one, whereby all the doings of designated "conspirators" become evil. (Note that often enough the "conspiracies" or their elements—e.g., the institution of the Rhodes scholarships—are seldom crimes by law).

The malign afflatus of conspiracy quickly overwhelms its individual crimes, real or imagined. Soon enough a Manichaean (Magian in Spengler's sense) spirit infuses the conspiracy hunters, the most fervent of whom may discover in the workings of the Federal Reserve or the Order of Demolay the direct and continuing work of the Evil One himself.

This is not to argue—any more than Oliver did—that conspiracies don't occur. Leaving aside the innumerable criminal and sometimes not-so-criminal arrangements that delight American prosecutors' hearts (and wishing sadly in passing that some of our rambunctious and misguided activists had known the practicai consequences of their own "conspiracies"), plots to overthrow governments, to topple dynasties, even found new nations have been a staple of history.

The authors of England's Glorious Revolution, and our own, were just as conspiratorial as those who masterminded France's and Russia's upheavals. But try to find a patriot who'd call Washington and Jefferson "conspirators." His contemporaries, however, weren't afraid to call the Sage of Monticello conspirator, revolutionary or worse. Yale College President Timothy Dwight stumped the country accusing Jefferson of being an Illuminatus.

This sort of historical embarrassment is common enough for the current crop of conspiriologists. Their politics are generally populist. They scorn "elites." But the conspiracy literature they feast on is often absolutist; often stalwartly Papist—logically as out of place at gun shows and right-wing conclaves where it's sold as its sellers would be if they sat behind their tables in the costumes of the Ancien Regime.

"But, ah," some argue, "conspiracy makes good propaganda. Certainly it sells. When all the names of defunct cabals are gotten through, at bottom lurks, invariably—the Jew!"

Is the possibility of conjuring up from all the gimcrack apparatus of conspiriology the Eternal Jew—Judeus ex machina, if you will—enough to make it all worthwhile? Once more following Revilo Oliver, I say no. Conspiracy mongers invariably treat the Jewish problem in one of two ways: they either overrate and overdamn the Jews and their influence or, timorously, they leave them out altogether.

As Oliver, in his learned prescience, foresaw over three decades ago, Aryan objectivity and ingenuity has begun to devise, under the rubric of sociobiology, the first synthesis of which was broached by Professor E.O. Wilson, theories that explain the Jews and their behavior. One such, Professor Kevin Macdonald's A People That Shall Dwell Alone: Judaism As an Evolutionary Croup Strategy (Praeger, Westport, CT, 1994), is easily worth the price of all the anti-Semitic conspiracy pamphlets combined.

A book like the above brings the Jewish problem within the province of biology, within the same precincts as the racial problems which perturb the American social order. Here let us note how seldom the conspiracy screeds even so much as glance at race. The fall of the Knights Templar, the introduction of the metric system, the symbols on the reverse of a dollar bill—these are deemed far more important than the history, say, of how America's immigration policy was turned topsy-turvy in the 1960s.

Most Instaurationists aren't conspiracy buffs. The editor has wisely seen to that. But on the wide and woolly right conspiracy theories rule.

Thirty years after Oliver's Conspiracy or Degeneracy, nearly a decade after our "victory" over the Soviet, not even the publicly proclaimed intent to turn America into a Third World nation—and the effects of that transformation day by day, year by year, decade by decade—the awful truth is transformed, transvested, gussied up in conspiratorialist drag. Then, and only then, the cobwebs fall from glazed eyes. The patriots smile, they understand: "Oh, you mean the New World Order! It's a conspiracy, you know."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Landsmann:

Here is $50 for another year of your interesting publication.

Intellectually, I know that the Jews exist only to steal. That is what they do. Naturally they are all communists since they are always in favor of redistributing wealth from others to themselves. But even knowing this, I am shocked at their recent swindles. They are claiming that every cent of gold the German government ever owned belongs to them. Further, from the Eastern European nations come millions more Holihoax survivors, all demanding reparations for their deaths. Here in the U.S., Jewish veterans of the Red Army of WW II are demanding veterans benefits from the US government.

But this has one good aspect: it makes clear that WW II was between the Jews and the Nazis. The British, Americans, Russians, etc. were simply slaves and dogs of the Jews. Note that only the Jews are paid tribute by the Germans. The winner gets tribute, not the US flunkies. Of course, the Jews have stolen three times from America what they got from Germany. Red China seems to be Clinton's biggest campaign contributor. They are running a $50 billion trade surplus with the US this year. I understand that Israel ends up with a third of this sum by selling US weapons and expertise to China.

The US stock market is now the biggest bubble of all time. Any attempt of the people to cash their imaginary profits will collapse the mess instantly. When it does, the whole savings of America will be wiped out. That money is already gone, stolen by the Jews! The stock bubble fulfills the wish of Caligula that the Roman people had only a single neck to cut. Financially, that is now the situation of the American people under Caligula clone Clinton.

This monster Nethanyahu fancies himself the Messiah. After the next war conquers the Mideast for Israel he intends to rebuild the Jews' temple and resume human sacrifices. If he does these things, many orthodox Jews will hail him as the Messiah as they hailed Bar Kochba in Hadrian's time. Kochba was named after a comet that appeared to promise the Jews victory over the Romans. Sure makes Hale-Bopp ominous, doesn't it?

I enclose an interesting report on the "Millennium Bug" as it is called. [This report is reproduced elsewhere in this issue.] At first I thought this would be solved by some sort of easy fix but the more I study it the worse it get. This could put an end to mainframe computing. I have written to you before of my dislike of computer hype. Here is another reason to dislike it. This disaster has its good side. The Feds' computer system will shut down. So much for spying on people's every move or benefits. Note the comment that the Feds' computers now lose up to 20% of records entered.

Yours truly,
S.R., New York State

Dear George,

I found the last few Liberty Bells interesting, though I don't know if not voting is the answer. I like Manfred Roeder, a brave man, as is Günter Deckert and a few other voices crying in the wilderness. Would that some of their country men and ours heeded them.

Best wishes to you.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. M.K., Oregon

Dear George,

M.R. of New Jersey says that our race ideas are wrong. This person will have to wait for the inevitable collapse of the System. Then the muds will go wild, and his dear Puerto Rican relatives will side with them against M.R.

As you see, I have had to cut back on what we have been doing in publishing. With so many willy-nilly whites about, it is a wonder that any of us bother doing or saying anything anymore. It would be interesting to see the whining should our resistance disappear. How nice it would be if I retired to grow turnips.

Editor, Liberty Bell

Let me comment on Mr. Cornell's letter in the June LB, pages 46-47, which, in turn, commented on my letter in the April LB, pages 51-53.

Mr. Cornell poses the question as to what my plan would be for reforming "the Jew's monetary system," as he correctly terms it.

My reform is simple: A return to Constitutional law, namely Article 1, Section 10, which prohibits paper money as a tender in payment of debts. The intentions and reasons for this Section are explained in the Federalist Papers.

The precious metals in the form of struck coins have served mankind well for over 2 1/2 millenia. Big, redistributive government and its supporters in Academe do not like money with a stable purchasing power because they increase their power by deliberately decreasing the purchasing power of the monetary unit, the dollar in the case of the United States. By so doing they put productive people into ever higher levels of taxation, as caused by the graduated nature of the income tax, which was advocated by Karl Marx. (See the closing paragraphs of the Communist Manifesto of 1848.) By the way, the Federal Reserve System was founded in 1913, as I pointed out in my original letter. How "1913" came out as "1919" I do not know.

Sincerely, Charles E. Weber, PhD.

Thomas Sowell is well justified in calling apologizing for slavery "insanity." (26 June) He points out that slavery was by no means a peculiarly American institution, but does not point out that before the Civil War there were a number of weathy, free Afro-Americans who owned slaves themselves. He also does not point out that American slaves, for the most part, were Negroes who had been captured by other Negroes and sold to Caucasians who were engaged in the slave trade.

A fact that is seldom, if ever, found in highschool history textbooks is that both Jefferson and Lincoln were pessimistic about the abilities of Caucasian and Negro Americans to live in one country without strife. Lincoln, in fact, envisaged resettlement and repatriation as the solution. Voluntary repatriation resulted in the foundation of the Republic of Liberia many years before the Civil War.

Dear Sir,

The verdict of guilty and the sentence of death have been passed on Tim McVeigh, in one of the greatest travesties of so-called justice seen in the Western World since the Nuremberg show trials carried out after the Second World War. Nowhere did the prosecution prove that Tim Veigh was in the locality of the Oklahoma Federal Building. The whole of their case rested on circumstantial 'evidence', and I think you in America know how much reliability can be placed on that. We in Britain certainly do, as guilty verdicts have been overturned one after another as it has been shown that the authorities themselves have tampered with the evidence. Indeed the usual agencies used in the investigation of forensic evidence have been cast aside in favour of a brought in so-called British 'expert.' One does not have to wonder too much to see who this 'expert' is working for, as the British MI5 and MI6 work closely in accord with their colleagues in the FBI and CIA etc.

So one may ask why Tim McVeigh, but the answer is obvious, the so-called justice system you have in America has no interest in who really blew up the Oklahoma Federal Building. Their only interest lay in making sure the right sort of person paid for it. Indeed that was the whole point of the exercise to cause a public outcry against anyone who stood up to the Machiavellian clique around Clinton. Tim McVeigh's only crime, and it was truly a heinous crime in the eyes of Clinton and his traiterous friends, was that McVeigh was an upstanding White man who had served with distinction as a soldier in the Gulf War (unlike Clinton who had been a traiterous coward during the time of the Vietnam War), and that he had read The Turner Diaries and had urged his fellow soldiers to read them as well. Also that he had been disgusted at the massacre at Waco which although one might totally disagree with the ideas of the Branch Davidians, that does not give the FBI the right to murder them.

What is particularly nauseating is the line up of the alliance of leftist and reactionary media hacks gathered up like the bunch of venemous swine they are against one lone young veteran, spurning up their spleen, effectively denying McVeigh and his co-defendant any real kind of fair trial. Let us hope that this collection of vermin get one day their just desserts. But because of their lies and the arousal of public hysteria it looks as if the System will claim yet one or maybe two more innocent victims, let us hope not. But if the worst happens then we hope that Tim McVeigh will continue to show the calmness and dignity he has shown throughout and meet the ultimate sacrifice like the soldier he is.

Dear George,

I, too, wish all of us come together as your correspondent asks. And like it or not, I believe it has to be race. People have to forget all the catch words, slogans, banners of former days or years, for they have led us to this impasse. We have become sheep to be led, pushed, directed into any and all directions as a thoughtless mass. Truly we have become the common man, race less, nation less.

I do not know if we shall be able to break these bonds, worse than any slavery, for they are a slavery of the mind, but until we do we are lost.

I can hope that somewhere in all these various groups there will be people capable and willing to strive or work for that goal—to free people's minds of these false ideals.

Keep well — keep publishing. Contribution enclosed.

Dear Mr. Dietz,

My wife and I were just discussing, over a beer, Gary North's article on the cataclysmic date, January 1, 2000, [see July Liberty Bell] and felt that you are all going about it wrong. The solution does not lay in the reprograming of everyone's computers. Leave them alone. Change instead the calendars!

When year 2000 rolls around arbitrarily change the year to a non-leap-year year, the same as 1990. If the day comes up different than the originasl 1900 day, then change it. Monday becomes Wednesday, for example. Note, that become a short work week, to be widely applauded by all of the world's slackers. An easy sell.

To tune the year 2000 to match the new Leap Year phase change the clocks by the calculated time required to put it back on track. You micht need to add 37 minutes and 15 seconds, as another example. So 12:00 o'clock become 12:37 and 15 seconds. No bigger an inconvenience than adjusting for daylight savings time. Some grubbling though, I am sure.

Since we subtracted two days the banks would not have to pay interest. Social Security also is able to pay two days less. Government, on the other hand, is screwed out of two days taxes. Again the population would roar approval. So what's the problem?

Yours truly,

R.T., California

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigous academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

Polygamy for Aryans

by Guillermo Coletti

I've recently received printed information from Chile, regarding an Aryan man from that country who converted to the Islam. This man has eight wives at the present time, all Aryan and quite attractive looking, with whom he has fathered twenty (yes, 20!) children. The number of children will soon be increased, since every one of his wives is currently pregnant. This man looks healthy, strong and seems to be of above average intelligence. He had previously been in a Christian monogamous matrimony. His first wife left him, sued him and took (allegedly) the greatest part of the material goods he had acquired throughout his life. After that failed relation he became disgusted with the matriarchal direction of Christianity. He may not have been too curious about this matter before his divorce, for if he had, he would have discovered that matriarchy was part of the Jewish origin of Christianity. Mr. Krause (I believe that's his last name), divorced, indebted and penniless, and in his mid30's, went back to live with his parents and enrolled in a twoyear accelerated course in computers. In the meantime he and his cousin (of whom there was very little information given) were introduced to the Islam and both embraced those beliefs. He doesn't deny that the Islamic stand on polygamy was a big part of his conversion, however, not the only one. Upon completion of his studies, Mr. Krause started earning money as a selfemployed computer professional and at a fast pace he began proposing marriage to women he considered suitable for polygamy. Although he has not discussed race in any of the interviews I have read, the man has chosen only Aryan women. His previous Christian wife was also Aryan.

I have discussed this piece of news with several like-minded people and all of them have reacted very negatively towards the whole issue. I'm a bit more open-minded about polygamy, just as I am more open-minded about polytheism.

Those opposed to polygamy have argued that it is an infection from nonAryan origins. Nevertheless, there are several examples of Aryans adopting polygamy. In America, Mormons practiced polygamy until just a few years ago with good results. It has been said that Rosenberg and Bormann had already planned to legalize polygamy in a victorious post-World War II Germany; somehow they had to make up for the incredible number of male losses. Vikings were not all that crazy for monogamy, since, at least those who could afford it, had a number of ladies with whom they multiplied. The study of history of Ancient Aryans is full of similar examples. I believe that the concept of polygamy for Aryan men should be given serious consideration. Perhaps it is not a good idea to advocate polygamy as a permanent way of life but, maybe, as a measure which can aid our racial survival under present circumstances. I also want to add that it is a remarkable example of racialism (whether willful or unwillful; conscious or unconscious) for these Aryans to form a family (or families) in an environment that is predominantly nonAryan. Polygamy may be a solution for many problems of our days. An ugly reminder of the calamitous state of modern demographics is the fact that while Aryans make for 8% of the world population, our newborns count for only 2% of all the babies in the planet.

There is a surplus of elegible Aryan women. Naturally, there are more women than men, that alone produces the surplus. Due to the social acceptability of racially harmful lifestyles (such as miscegenation), that difference has widened. White men miscegenate more than White women, and in alarming numbers. After all, those services that introduce young available singles from Asia to the American market, are directed in almost all the cases, to the White American male. I'm not exercising gender favoritism, but I simply have yet to see Aryan women paying to be introduced to Gooks from the Far East! The only reason why there are so many tens of thousands of Amerasians in Vietnam is because of the behavior of White men. The areas surrounding former U.S.

Naval bases in the Philipinnes are also infected by fatherless hybrid children, much to their own national detriment as well. In all of the greatest racial catastrophes of today, Aryan women seem to play a minor role. Those, and other reasons, make for an even larger number of White women without Aryan companions. Those White women, very few of them, end up in relationships with nonWhites, maybe just out of weakness to face a life of solitude. Wouldn't it be better to allow that fit, healthy, strong and masculine Aryan men have more than one woman? Shouldn't we openly chat on the matter? It seems to me, at least at first sight, that if there are more White women available than men, those daring White guys who want to take more than one wife should be allowed to do so, and tolerated. Definitely, the White American males who seek comfort in the company of ladies from Bolivia, Ruwanda or Thailand, are not in condition to cast the first stone.

Hercules, the Disney Crowd, and the Southern Baptists

by Guillermo Coletti

The Southern Baptist Churches of America are about to reach a point of saturation with Disney, not Walt Disney, but Disney the multibillion dollar corporation headed by Michael Eisner. They allege, I believe correctly, that Disney promotes homosexuality, in ways such as having a Gay Day at Disneyland and Disney World, extending family benefits to the intimate partners of their numerous homosexual and lesbian employees, hiring a convicted pedophile to direct the movie "Powder" (one of their latest productions), etc. At the latest Annual General Conference held by and for believers of that particular Christian denomination, they warned Disney that a boycott against the corporation may be implemented to persuade them to turn from an agenda that "devalues America". In other words, the Southern Baptist message to Disney reads: "Stop promoting homosexuality or we won't patronize your business anymore". When word reached the White House of the public statement released by the Baptist Conference, President Clinton rushed to the Press Room to make public his support of Disney's policy on homosexuals, of course. That was easy to predict.

As much as I share with the Baptists a rejection of homosexuality, I couldn't disagree more with the way they do things. Beyond any doubt my heart goes to the Baptists, after all, my parents and grandparents have been believers in Christ, in one way or another. I believe I know their feelings. But these people, the Baptists and many other redwhiteandblue Christians, have remained unreactive to the many other wakeup calls they, and all of us, receive day after day. These people simply don't know that they are, as painful and cruel as it may sound, defeated. They are finished, at least for the time being. America has been taken from them and nothing of substance belongs to them anymore. Everything that they might have treasured has either gone into oblivion or it was destroyed, blacklisted or culturally distorted. They live under the illusion that their opinions matter to, of all people, the crowd controlling Disney. Their opinions are of very little significance to Michael Eisner, or to Clinton. The very sad reality is that the old guard of good cleancut Americans has been shaken out of any influence they aspired to maintain and carry with them into the next millennium. I wonder if they think that they can actually bully the Disney executives out of their prohomosexual agenda by using the threat of money. The Southern Baptist churches do not appear to comprehend the amount of money that Disney controls, or the influence Eisner exercises over affairs far beyond the boundaries of family entertainment, matters which affect all of us. They don't know why the Eisner gang is on top at Disney and all the major channels of information and entertainment. Neither do they seem to understand that the proximity between government and Hollywood is hardly detectable, perhaps only as short as the distance kept between Ellie Wiesel and Hillary during a State of the Union speech. In fact, they (the Baptists) have been so unaware of their own removal from areas of influence, that they have allowed themselves to lose it all without resisting. These Baptist people are, for the most part, good people, meaning they're white and mean no evil. But they're too fixated with trusting their own government and the institutions they grew up with. They have left no room for skepticism. Their outlooks on things are so confused by religious dogma that they reject homosexuality, while tolerating, for example, racemixing. And why exactly do they reject homosexuality? Do they reject it for the same reasons of genetics and racial hygiene many of us do? Or could it be that it is because they find it so advised in scriptures written by Jews, some two thousand years ago? And if that's the case, why not following more modern Jewish advice? Anyway, where have the Baptists been every year, when sodomites around the country boastingly display their sexual deviations in socalled "Gay Pride Parades"?

As pedantic and unfriendly as it may sound, I believe that Baptists should start their campaign to revalue America by doing a few "mea culpas", before condemning Disney or anyone else. For example, Baptists support Capitalism. If they are supportive of Capitalism then they should understand the social, moral and cultural implications of such acceptance. By accepting Capitalism one has to accept that the minority with money has no obligation to observe loyalty to the common good, or to the common citizen, or to the heritage of a nation. As a matter of fact, there is no law obliging wealthy and influential individuals to observe loyalty to Christian moral values. Capitalism doesn't even mandate loyalty to one's own country. Disney was for sale by Disney's heirs and it was sold to those who, evidently, offered them the best deal. I'm sure Disney's descendants could have sold the corporation to Pat Robertson or they could have donated it to the Baptists, have they only had in their minds decency over profit. The people who own Disney now have the capitalist right to produce the movies they want and hire all the convicted pedophiles, all the homosexuals and lesbians they want. These are fruits of Capitalism. Criticizing Disney without engaging in a critical view of the system that permitted the existence and development of this type of businesses is an absolute exercise in futility. One more reason why Baptists should make "mea culpa": Baptists have condemned Nazism. I say to them: enjoy the spoils of war! This is what the CapitalistBolshevik victory has left for you, your posterity and, very unfortunately, all of us as well. If I'm not wrong in my recollection, Hitler was all for cultural cleansing, but Baptists are antiNazi, so why should they live in a culturally cleansed environment? If they really want apple pie then they should look at Germany of 19331945. Furthermore, Baptists defend Democracy. Disney's animated version of Hercules, the defamation of an ancient Aryan hero made to look like a faggot on steroids, is one of the products of Democracy. Democracy, among other things, advocates the doctrine of one man one vote. If everyone's opinion is of equal value and importance when deciding the future of a nation, and if that concept is accepted to the fullest, why then complain when pedophiles and homosexuals make movies for Disney? I repeat, criticizing Disney without engaging in a critical view of the system that permitted the existence and development of this type of businesses is an absolute exercise in futility. If these people (the Baptists) are proDemocratic, Capitalistic, antiNazi and nonracist, what possible reason can they have for not tolerating homosexuality? It is all part of the same bargain. They have already accepted Yahveh (a Jewish god), a Jewish Messiah, a grossly disproportionate number of Jews sitting as Senators, Congressmen and Federal Judges. It's possible that a conglomerate of Jewish bankers also issue the currency of the nation, although it is even more serious that there is no definite knowledge of authentic ownership on the matter. So why not having acceptance of homosexuals, as well? Additionally, it comes to mind that if O.J. Simpson (a retired negro football player acquitted of double murder in Brentwood, California) and Nicole Brown (the slain wife) had wished to get married by the Baptist Church, they would have found a willing Baptist reverend, for a fee I mean.

The Southern Baptists have put themselves in a nowin situation. Playing the game of economic coercion will take them nowhere with the Eisner gang or with any other propaganda engine controlled by any gang of genetic similarities. The Southern Baptists should take a long pause to reflect on their status on America, on the cultural relativism that the elites had pushed on everyone's throats, which couldn't have been done without the silent complicity offered by their Church. And, most important, they should make an inventory of the racial attributes that they still carry within themselves, their genetic selves. They may actually find out that in their blood runs a determination to use much more exciting methods to assert influence and express dissent. They may actually like it.

Addendum. The Southern Baptists have announced that their boycott of Disney will be limited to spending no more than $100.00 at Disney's theme parks. Actually, it was all worse than I had originally thought.

Music and the III Reich

by Guillermo Coletti

Of all the dificulties that the National Socialists had to confront in 1933, upon their coming to political power in Germany, perhaps the most challenging was restoring to Germany a cultural life of its own. The preceeding political order, referred to as the Weimar Republic, had brought the racial life of the Aryan to sinking levels. NonGerman, and even worse, nonEuropean elements, had shown a tremendous ability in infiltrating outlets dedicated to information, art and culture, and, not surprisingly, their allegiance was not exactly placed in saving, protecting and enhancing the traditions of the German people. Statistics can effectively speak of the alienation the Germans suffered in their own homeland: 3 out of 4 newspapers were owned by individuals of Jewish ancestry, 70% of the movie houses were also under Jewish proprietorship; in 1931 Jews wrote 119 film scripts of the total production of 144 feature films and Jews were in charge of producing 77% of all the movies. Semites were using their heavy influence in the media and the Arts to advance their antiNational agenda. Raceless aesthetic expressions, like Dadaism and crude Eroticism, were made fashionable and promoted, while Classicism, in all of its forms, was submerged in ostracism and many times, even censorship. The rejection and displacement of Classicist expressions was the manifestation of a more subversive attitude: that of rejecting Traditionalism. Berlin theaters, for example, were performing renditions of "William Tell" in which all the original mention to honor and loyalty to the Fatherland had been deleted with surgical precision. That state of affairs, translated to modern day, can find its parallel in the Disney production of "Hercules", where the ancient Aryan hero was made to look like a sodomite on steroids. To put it in current politicallycorrect terms, Germany needed some cultural and social 'healing'. In this regard, Adolf Hitler had announced the cultural task of National Socialism in a speech given back on April 27, 1923. On that occasion the Führer said: "Clear away the Jews! Our own people has enough genius; we need no Hebrews. If we were to put in their place intelligences drawn from the great body of our people, then we should have recovered the bridge which leads to the community of the people. (...) Finally we need a reform in the sphere of art, literature, and the theater. The government must see to it that its people is not poisoned. There is a higher right which is based on the recognition of that which harms a people, and that which harms a people must be done away with." At a later date, on March 23, 1933, Adolf Hitler stated: "(about the)...Political purification of our public life the Government of the Reich will undertake a thorough moral purging of the body corporate of the nation. The entire educational system, the theater, the cinema, literature, the press, and the wireless; all these will be used as means to this end and valued accordingly. They must all serve for the maintenance of the eternal values present in the essential character of our people. Art will always remain the expression and reflection of the longings and the realities of an era. The neutral attitude of aloofness is rapidly disappearing. Heroism is coming forward passionately and will in the future shape and lead political destiny. It is the task of art to be the expression of this determining spirit of the age. Blood and race will once more become the source of artistic intuition..."

A Germanic Renaissance

At an unprecedented pace, the German Renaissance was becoming visible in all its splendor. A once defeated society, marginalized under humiliating conditions impossed by the winning nations of World War I, experiencing the most rampant inflationary period recorded in Western history, beaten by unemployment and sociopolitical chaos, had turned into the most dynamic and productive nation of its time. Optimism replaced pessimism, Volkish art replaced degenerate art. The Aryan was about to live one of the most creative and exciting times of his history.

There was no doubt that a new, fresh breeze was blowing in the cultural life of Germany. The nonsense of such anarchic art concepts as "if you like it it is art" (as Pablo Picasso loved to repeat) were to be part of the past. As a key part in this new era full of vitality, Alfred Rosenberg, leading National Socialist philosopher, stated that "the ultimate goal of Western art creation is the awakening of the spirit". A diametrically opposed concept today rewards the likes of Snoop Doggy Dog, Tupak Shakur and Niggers with Attitude, to name but a few.

Wagner, Odin and Race

Richard Wagner, as few other Classical composers, understood the value of Volkishrooted art forms. By centering his operas around myths and heroes from an era when the Aryan world was closer to its purest state, Wagnerian operas are frequently appropriate scenarios for Odin, Thor, Valhala, Valkyrs and other Pagan entities, thus keeping alive the oldest of traditions of a very distinct racial way of life. Just as many Skinhead Rock bands today hail the natural vitality of the Aryan man, Wagner's heroes were masculine, warriorlike and driven by the forces of NordicWestern ancestral legends. This racial awareness, and its powerful presence throughout his masterpieces, combined with his political consciousness, created a musical treasure that well transcended his times. How timely was to be Max Lorenz's 1944 performance of Siegmund in the Act I of Die Walküre (available from Historic Records), "So let the Volsung blood increase!". For many, the Allies' victory over the forces of the Axis was just a real life Ragnarok (Asgaard had succumbed to the forces of the creatures of the underworld in 1945). The great German composer has demonstrated to have extensive knowledge not only of the German character, but also of the Jews'. About them, he said: "the Jew is innately incapable of enouncing himself to us artistically ... emancipation from the yoke of Judaism appears to us the greatest of necessities" (Judaism in Music, available from Liberty Bell Publications). As if enjoying a panHistorical kinship, Adolf Hitler also was cognizant of such Jewish artlessness: "(The Jew) has never founded any civilization, though he has destroyed civilizations by the hundred. He possesses nothing of his own creation to which he can point. Everything that he has is stolen. Foreign peoples, foreign workmen build him his temples, it is foreigners who create and work for him: it is foreigners who shed their blood for him. He knows no 'people's army': he has only hired mercenaries who are ready to go to death on his behalf. He has no art of his own: bit by bit he has stolen it all from the other peoples or has watched them at work and then made his copy. He does not even know how merely to preserve the precious things that others have created: as he turns the treasures over in his hand they are transformed into dirt and dung", (from a speech given on July 28, 1922). During the twelve years of life of the Third Reich, Wagnerian works were perfomed countless times. Hitler, himself a faithful Wagner 'fan', was to attend concerts regularly. According to memoirs of many men who worked close to Hitler, and other men in government, the Führer's inclination for Wagner was so strong, that sometimes it "gave the appearance that for him there was nothing else in the musical world" (according to the book Wer War Goebbels?, by Wilfred von Oven). Hitler favored in particular those performances by Wilhelm Furtwangler, by all accounts his favorite conductor. Furtwangler's understanding with the Berlin Philarmonic was so intense, he called the orchestra his 'right arm'.

Music Treasures on CD

I'm frequently asked for advice on what Classical compact discs to buy. I generally recommend my friends to stay away from performances of Wagner by Zubin Mehta, Daniel Barenboim or some other nonEuropean superstars of the entertainment "industry". The selection of excellent material is enormous; there is no real need to subsidize music of inferior quality. Today, due in part to the advancement of recording and remastering techniques, many of the greatest musical performances from the Third Reich are available for us to enjoy on Compact Disc. The high quality of these Compact Discs would happily surprise even the most refined and demanding audiophiles. The only flaw that I've found in some live recordings is an occassional repetitive sneezing or coughing, which in any case only stimulates one's own imagination to speculate who was the jerk who didn't just get up and leave, or perhaps to quickly blame an overly enthusiastic brownshirt who had a few too many beers on his way to the Opera House; brownshirts seem to get the heat for a lot of things, anyway. When the Berlin Wall fell, some seven years ago, independent recording companies (largely Italian and German) had the unprecedented opportunity to market this unique legacy. Until then, most of this precious material was just collecting dust in archives in Eastern Germany. Today we have plenty of opportunities that we should take advantage of.

For many years it has been easy to obtain cassette or vinyl copies of NSDAP marches, as well as marches from the SS, the Wehrmacht, the Luftwaffe, the Kriegsmarine, etc. I will assume that the reader is already familiarized with these works or that, at least, they don't need introduction. There is something new in addition to the traditionally obtainable musical productions of the III Reich. From Classical music to top radio hits, a massive repertoire of musical production of the National Socialist era is now available for all of us to enjoy. Some of these recordings are witness, not only to the dedicated idealism of the times, but also to the heroic fighting. An excellent example of that is Beethoven's "Emperor Concerto's" version by pianist Walter Gieseking (available from Music & Arts Records); during certain moments of this recording heavy antiair gunfire can be heard, as fighting developed between the Allies and the NS warriors who defended Berlin in 1944 (most likely French volunteers from the Charlemagne Division of the WaffenSS). Perhaps to that singular circumstance may also be attributed the reason of the unusually energetic character of this version. Although the Third Reich seemed to have put particular interest on producing the works of German composers, it wouldn't be accurate to say that the production of music during the III Reich was exclusively that way. Cultural exchange with Italy was quite busy, Italian Opera singers had starred in German feature films, and television, still in its very early days, displayed entertainers from diverse European backgrounds. Also, a good example of illustrating the panEuropean character of the artistic activity is a well elaborated live production of "Carmen", composed by Bizet, a Frenchman; it has been suggested that Dr. Josef Goebbels himself was directly involved in this project, in which the stage appearance of soldiers was represented by men in SS uniforms. Unfortunately no film was taken of that show, so we have to content ourselves with eyewitness accounts. At this point it may come to one's mind, what were they doing playing Beethoven, and experimenting with stereo recording techniques, while the invading hordes were nearing, in a recent statement (around 1994) by baritone Hans Hotter: "There was not enough food. It was difficult to travel. One concert I sang was interrupted by air raids three times ... I went through 160 air raids ... There was a mentality among people that helped to create special things.... This was the only way we could prove that we were doing the best we could for culture". Although not a National Socialist himself, Hans Hotter could not escape the exciting creative spirit of the days. The commitment of the musicians in particular, and also of people involved in other artistic expressions, was so strong, that the term "romanticism of steel" was commonly used as a very accurate description of the idealism in determination that was inspired by the National Socialist ideals which had triggered the German Revolution. But of course, not only Classical music was produced, recorded and performed during the years of the Reich. Factually, popular music was more abundant yet. The making of music for movies, live musicals, and radio broadcasting kept busy thousands of people, as the music industry in Germany grew to become one of the most productive in the world. Contrary to what the mainstream media wants us to believe, the III Reich was also fun. People had a wide range of choice when it came to entertainment.

All these changes reflected a greater shuffling taking place in Germany. One of those things that really changed during those twelve years was the social status of the workers, who until then could not afford attending live entertainment. It must be put into consideration that until the III Reich came into effect, Germany was a country with very little social mobility, not only if we were to judge by today's standards, but also by the standards of that time. For the poor the chances were they were going to remain poor; if one's father was a baker it was also quite likely that one was going to be a baker. Blue collar workers had little aspiration to obtain significant changes in their social status. Certain things which were not of immediate necessity were not in the aspiration of many people. The Reich brought a lot of social changes to the German, made it possible for blue collar workers and their families to see large productions on stage, the kinds with dozens of dancers forming caleidoscopic choreographies, that were later imitated by plagiarists in Hollywood. On many occasions, big shows were presented at factories where hundreds of workers were entertained, with the best performers, for free. On several occasions the Berlin Philarmonic, while conducted by Wilhelm Furtwangler, played lunch-time concerts at factories, for the listening pleasure of the workers during their breaks. Thus, in those twelve years, for the first time high quality art was within reach of all German workers. Germany was proud of this Renaissance, and didn't hide it. The lavishly produced musicals and movies were often reviewed in Signal, the forexport National Socialist large size magazine, which many compare to Life Magazine because of its format and heavily illustrated pages. In his speech of July 19, 1940, Adolf Hitler described some of the goals of the Reich as forming "a Socialist state of the highest culture". It was a true, volkish culture of the people, by the people and for the people.

III Reich Music on the Market

Finding these Classical recordings, although easily available in any well stocked Classical music store, can be tricky. The times I have asked for store assistance I have not found that much desire to assist. The minute it is being sensed that they deal with someone searching recordings from the III Reich, store employees withdraw their usual California friendliness. Don't be surprised if most of your questions find a cold "I don't know" for an answer. But, with additional information you should be able to help yourself and to make your own discoveries. I'd suggest to start by checking at CDs under Wagner and Beethoven, interpreted by Furtwangler, Max Lorenz primarily, also Von Karajan. Koch Schwann has released in 1995 two historical stereo recordings of Herbert Von Karajan, dated late 1944, stereo recordings don't get much older than that. Once these CDs are found, look for the date of recording, most classical CD's are accurate enough to list the date, month and year of the original recording. If nothing is found in store, then ask to see the catalogs from Preiser, Rudolphe, Acanta, Laudis, and Music & Arts, which are some of the most popular record labels currently carrying this material. Any good size Classical record store will be able to special order from, if not all, at least some of the above listed labels. Now, it's entirely up to you to have a good time.

Is Timothy McVeigh a Traitor?

by Guillermo Coletti

As the trial of the man accused of bombing the Federal Building in Oklahoma City neared an end, I was attentively following news reports, mainly on CNN, to catch a few words from the closing arguments by the Defense and the Prosecution. I expected both sides to perform interestingly and unbendingly. Doubtlessly, it was a trial full of human tragedy, since what was being decided was the fate of a young man who, just a few years ago, had been a hero for his own country. The outcome of these procedures was either going to be death or liberty. The representatives of the U.S. government were working to obtain a death sentence while the attorney for McVeigh was making a pale attempt for liberty. On the other hand, there was the highest number of victims ever suffered in a single act of violence in the United States, many of them innocent children. We are very fortunate that we have never experienced any mass annihilation as the Japanese suffered in Hiroshima and Nagasaki, or the Germans did in Dresden. Yes, the closing arguments promised to be torrid, emotionally charged, and they indeed were. A few words, said by a lady member of the Federal Prosecutor's team, captivated my attention. She said to the jurors, in reference to Timothy McVeigh: "Look into the eyes of a coward and tell him you will have courage. Tell him you will speak with one unified voice as the moral conscience of the community and tell him he is no patriot. He is a traitor and he deserves to die." Strong words. She said "he is a traitor and he deserves to die." I've heard that statement several times on CNN Headline News, as the news repeated every thirty minutes. A few weeks later I researched on the Internet and I found the transcripts of the proceedings as rendered by a Mr. Paul Zuckerman, I believe a court reporter. This particular passage can be found at: http://db.oklahoman.net/cgi-bin/freeget?ID=66672.

I will try to explain, briefly as usual, how an amateur curious of the legal system found himself in total amazement that day, and why "Look into the eyes of a coward...", she has said. The Federal prosecutor then continued: "Tell him you will speak with one unified voice as the moral conscience of the community..." That last portion brought to mind instructions routinely given to jurors, and after reviewing them I couldn't find anything remotely close to a direction to the jury to speak as the "Moral conscience of the community." It was news to me that the moral conscience of the community spoke through jurors in Federal courts. It sounded, at least to me, slightly ambiguous. Was it possible that the closing statement of the prosecutors was being charged extrajudicially with emotions? And if that had been the case, was it possible that that particular statement may have gone unnoticed by the Honorable Richard P. Matsch, the sitting Federal judge, and also by McVeigh's own attorney? After all, and this point can not be stressed enough, there is no freedom of speech in a courtroom, and perhaps that's a good thing too. Every word said during a trial has to adjust to the case in question. A prosecutor doesn't have a right to say things like: áOh, well, the defendant is a son of a bitch", or, "tell him he's a redneck and that you won't take it". In a courtroom there are strict rules controlling what is permitted to be said and what is allowed to go on the record. Those same strict rules of speech had, in some cases, benefited the prosecution. For example, during the Manson trial Bugliosi (the Los Angeles Assistant D.A.) referred to defendant Manson as a "bastard". In legal terms, Charles Manson is a bastard, so the statement was admitted. Was it possible that Bugliosi called Manson a "bastard" for reasons other than clarifying Manson's partial illegitimacy at birth and, consequently, benefited from the usage of such stigmatizing term?

"He is a traitor and he deserves to die", she added. That statement immediately reminded me of a conversation I've heard on television just months before this trial. A member of the legal team that prosecuted Jonathan Pollard was discussing how their closing arguments had been adjusted to all the technicalities of the law. It is obvious that there was a desire to appease any sense of impropriety that the Jewish community may have potentially or otherwise developed. He has specifically mentioned that the team of U.S. Attorneys handling the case had agreed not to refer to Mr. Pollard as a "traitor" because he, simply, was not being accused of treason. An uncomplicated and logical example of why officers of the court can not slander people. Jonathan Pollard is a Jewish American citizen who collaborated with the government of Israel by stealing, for that country, information from the American military classified as top-secret. If that rule applied to the case of Pollard why wouldn't it also apply to McVeigh?, I was asking myself. McVeigh was not a defendant In a case of treason and, therefore, he could have never been a convicted traitor. Has the government had the ability to try and convict him of treason, they could have presented such case against McVeigh. But that's not the case. So, the question in my mind is: is McVeigh a traitor?

All of these are very interesting legal terms. Let's see what, also in legal terms, is treason. Treason, according to the law, is: "The offense of attempting to overthrow the government of the state to which the offender owes allegiance; or of betraying the state into the hands of a foreign power. Treason consists of two elements: Adherence to the enemy, and rendering him aid and comfort." The charge of treason if a very severe charge, of which a defendant can be convicted only on the testimony of at least two witnesses, or confession in open court. McVeigh was never charged with attempting to overthrow any government. Pollard, however, was charged with and convicted of spying for a foreign government.

The definition of the term "treason" gives us another word, "allegiance" which in legal terminology may have an accepted meaning different from that given in everyday colloquy. What is allegiance? "Obligation of fidelity and obedience to the government in consideration for protection that government gives." Allegiance between the individual and the government, or the state. is contracted through an Oath of Allegiance. In America, elected officials take an Oath of Allegiance to the Constitution. That compels every elected official in the United States to protect all the constitutional liberties granted to citizens.

And, in spite of the heated closing arguments, research of legal wording, media coverage, politics, etc., the question still seeks an answer: Is McVeigh a traitor?

Feds Gave McVeigh Lawyer $10 Million to Throw the Case

by Winston Smith

Media reports have now revealed that the Federal government has contributed a total of ten million dollars thus far to the McVeigh defense team headed by Stephen Jones. Clearly this raises the issue of conflict of interest. Could Mr. Jones fairly proceed against the Federal government on behalf of McVeigh and yet still receive a sweep stakes income from his courtroom opponents?

In court, the defense offered by Mr. Jones has been characterized as weak, hesitant, and lackluster by observers both for and against Tim McVeigh. Jones' defense was short, incomplete, confused, and did not scratch the surface of a dozen important issues regarding the Oklahoma City bombing. Mr. Jones has made no issue of the swift demolition of the Murrah Building, which contained irreplaceable forensic evidence. Mr. Jones did not object to the exclusion from the trial of the eminent explosives expert, retired Air Force General Benton Partin. Mr. Jones did not object to the exclusion of General Partin's scientific report on the Murrah bombing which stated the fertilizer-fuel oil bomb was of insufficient energy to cause all the damage done to the building. Mr. Jones did not object to burial of the Murrah Building rubble or the armed guards which prevented General Partin and other explosives experts from examining that rubble.

Mr. Jones has received national attention achieved by only a few superstar lawyers. Yet his reputation is far from enhanced. He put on a weak and flaccid defense, saw his client convicted on all counts after a short jury deliberation, and was not even able to spare him the death sentence. His post-verdict demeanor is quiet and passive. Certainly future clients will have no trouble choosing between the ineffective Mr. Jones and legal tigers such as Messrs. Spence, Cochran and Bailey. Mr. Jones of course, does not need to worry about future clients. He has ten million bucks in the bank, courtesy of the government against whom he was supposed to be defending Timothy McVeigh.

In the haste to pour an ocean of hatred and revenge on McVeigh, critical evidence leading to the accomplices and/or real killers is being deliberately hidden from the American people by a flawed and corrupt justice system. The largesse heaped on Mr. Jones by the same Federal government bent on secreting essential forensic evidence can only create bonafide suspicions that Tim McVeigh's lawyer was bribed to throw the case. McVeigh himself seems to think so; this week he has been desperately trying to fire Jones, but may not be allowed to do so by the judge. The poor kid may be stuck with this asshole right up to the hour they strap him onto the death gurney to receive the lethal injection.

There is clear evidence of additional explosives inside the Murrah Building. There is clear evidence that John Doe Number Two exists. Those responsible are not being investigated because the evidence is now hidden. Killers remain free and the nauseating Jews of the media rejoice.

Did Tim McVeigh Hear "Miles To Go..." On The Telefon?

by Winston Smith

Ever wonder where all those "lone nuts" come from? You know, the Lee Harvey Oswaldsm, the Sirhan Sirhans, the Arthur Bremers, the John Hinckleys, the John Patlers, the Andrew Cunanans, possibly Tim McVeigh? These guys who do seemingly irrational, violent things which always turn out to be strangely convenient for the interests of the power structure in this country?

One movie which all National Socialists need to rent on video or catch on the late show is the Charles Bronson flick Telefon, a spy thriller which deals with the idea of how individuals can be mentally brainwashed and programmed to commit acts of apparently deranged and pointless violence which in fact serve The Agenda. The key words which activate these zombie killer terrorists, whispered into the telephone by a plausibly nasty Donald Pleasance, are lines from the Robert Frost poem about "You have promises to keep, and miles to go before you sleep..."

The following article is a very heavily edited excerpt from from the looney-left magazine Konformist. I have excised almost 50% of the original text, removing as much neo-Marxist politically correct raving as I can while retaining the kernel substance of the article, because this topic is something that concerns this Party deeply: the artificial creation of government-run, controlled cults to conduct experiments in social and psychological engineering, to gather intelligence on dissidents, and to implement unofficial government policy very unofficially. Those of you who are familiar with what the NSWPP has experienced over the past year will understand the relevance to our own situation, and will be able to spot a certain disturbing similarity of pattern.

Looking back at what we know about the past behavior of the United States government and the secret Anglo-Zionist power structure, is there anything really inherently impossible, or even improbable, that such things are being done by our lords and masters? Let us assume for the sake of argument that the medical and psychological technology exists to carry out this kind of deadly brainwashing—and it most certainly does exist. Does anyone believe that the New World Order would not make use of such techniques? Why not? What would prevent them from doing so? Certainly not moral scruples; these are the same people who six years ago slaughtered 200,000 Iraqis without a qualm.

The thing that always bothers me about these "lone nut" incidents is how neatly convenient they always seem to be for the powers that be—an outspoken critic of the status quo is silenced, a chance is obtained to introduce draconian new laws, bad publicity is generated for those who dissent from The Agenda. I simply don't believe in that kind of coincidence. Yes, yes, I know that all of this kind of thing is supposed to be whacked-out, paranoid conspiracy theory. But remember—paranoids have enemies too, and just because you're paranoid don't mean they ain't out to get you.

The Women of Monte Cassino:
Many War Atrocities Are Utterly Ignored

By Dr. William Pierce

It seems that every time I pick up a newspaper I read about a new claim the Jews are making on someone else's money. It began a few months ago when they claimed that the Swiss hadn't been diligent enough in trying to track down the heirs of Jews who had deposited money in Swiss banks back during the 1930s, before the Second World War, and then never reclaimed it. Seven billion dollars the Jews wanted from the Swiss people — plus interest, of course. And when the Swiss politicians, instead of telling them to go to hell, started negotiating with them and offering them hundreds of millions of dollars, the Jews realized they had a good thing going, and they decided to push it. Next they accused the Swedes of having some gold left over from the Second World War which should be given to Jews to compensate them for their persecution. Then they went after Argentina and Portugal and France and eventually the United States as well. In France they announced that many buildings in Paris and other French cities had belonged to Jews sixty years ago, back before the Second World War, and now they want the French to pay them for these buildings — plus interest, of course. Every week there are new demands for more money to be given to the Jews, more gold. Anyone who scoffs at these Jewish claims is likely to be attacked by the media as an "anti-Semite," a "neo-Nazi," or, worst of all, a "Holocaust denier."

The whole racket, you see, is based on the "Holocaust," on the theory that the Jews have suffered uniquely at the hands of all the rest of us, and so now we owe them, and it is terribly wicked of us — or at least, very "insensitive" — to refuse their demands.

Now, I have no doubt that the Jews lost some money during the Second World War. Who didn't? It was a terribly destructive and murderous war. Everyone who was involved in it lost a lot. The Jews, however, are the only ones who seem to believe that the world owes them a living because of it. Perhaps they feel that they're entitled to more because they have made such a big investment in reminding everyone. They have used their control of Hollywood and of the television industry to produce hundreds of films and TV episodes to remind us of how they were mistreated by the terrible Germans and the Germans' French, Italian, Polish, Latvian, Lithuanian, and Ukrainian helpers — all through no fault of their own, of course. They are the only ones who have persuaded the U.S. government to let them set up a "Holocaust" museum on public property in Washington. They are the only ones who have pressured corrupt politicians and education officials in a dozen states to require special classes on the "Holocaust" for all high school students. What these special classes amount to is brainwashing intended to give the Jews a special, privileged status in the minds of the students: the status of the world's premier victims, the status of the world's premier blameless sufferers, the status of people to whom the world owes something. Just Jews. No one else.

This is crooked. This is dishonest. We understand why they do it, of course. They tell us that they do it so that we won't forget what terrible things we did to them, how we failed to rescue them from the Germans, and so on. But they also do it because the "Holocaust" is an immensely profitable racket for them. They suck billions of dollars in guilt money out of the rest of the world every year. But it is dishonest for two reasons. First, it greatly exaggerates the suffering of the Jews. It takes a few basic and indisputable facts — primarily the fact that the Germans did not like having Jews in control of their society and were determined to break their grip on Germany, and did in fact break that grip, sometimes by drastic measures — and it embroiders those basic facts with many, many lies: lies about soap made from Jewish corpses, lies about lampshades made from the skin of Jews, lies about gas chambers in many places where there were no gas chambers, and lies about German soldiers swinging Jewish babies by their legs and bashing out their brains. We should not let the Jews compel the teaching of these lies to our children just so that they can continue sending us on a guilt trip and bleeding the world for as much money as they can get.

I was reading a story in the New York Times just a few days ago about a study being conducted at Cambridge University on the fate of part-Jews in Germany, and the story quoted a woman who was living in Germany in the 1930s. Her mother was German and her father was a Jew, and she went to the headquarters of the Gestapo in Berlin in 1938 to complain that the government had ordered her father to leave Germany. She said that the Gestapo officers took her into a back office of the headquarters and raped her.

Now, I know that didn't happen. A White woman might get raped in a police station in New York or Washington or Chicago today, but the Berlin Gestapo did not rape anybody. Berlin in 1938 was not like New York or Washington, DC, today. It was an orderly place. It was a place with rules. It was a place where women did not have to worry about being raped by the police. Such behavior was unthinkable. But it makes a nice lie to embroider the "Holocaust" with.

There's another reason why this claim by the Jews that the world owes them a living because they are the world's premier victims is crooked. It is crooked because it is associated with the deliberate suppression of the truth about what has happened to other people: in particular about what the Jews and their allies have done to other people. If you want to learn about atrocities, take a look at what the Bolsheviks did in Russia and Ukraine. You've probably heard very vague stories about the mass murder of 30 million kulaks, 30 million Ukrainian and Russian and German farmers, by the Communists in the 1920s and 1930s, but very few details, I'm sure. This is not taught in the schools, and Hollywood does not make films about this, because the majority of the Bolshevik commissars who supervised this program of mass murder were Communist Jews, and their victims were Gentiles. What's the point in reminding the world about that? For the same reason you do not hear about what the Communist secret police did in their torture and execution cells in Poland, Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and elsewhere after the Second World War, when they were making eastern Europe safe for Communism. You don't hear about it because not only were the victims not Jews, but the torturers and murderers in many cases were Jews.

Suppose the relatives, the heirs, of all of these non-Jewish victims organized themselves and began demanding that they be paid compensation for what had been done to them and for what had been stolen from them 55 or 60 or 70 years ago? Even if they did you still wouldn't hear about it, because the people who control the media would make sure that their story didn't get told.

Let me tell you about one group of victims — real victims — from the Second World War that you've never heard about for this very reason. In May 1944 the Allies — the forces of democracy and equality, the anti-Nazi and pro-Jewish forces — finally succeeded in taking Monte Cassino in the Apennines of central Italy away from the German Army, after bombing Monte Cassino's sixth-century abbey into ruins. The Allies had some Moroccan soldiers with them. They wanted "diversity" in their armed forces even then. They wanted to demonstrate their belief in racial equality. The Moroccans were only mediocre as fighters, but they really excelled at cutting the throats of prisoners after the fighting was over. They were pretty good at raping civilians too. The night after the battle for Monte Cassino was over and the Germans had withdrawn in good order, a division of Moroccan soldiers — 12,000 of them — left their camp and swarmed over a group of mountain villages around Monte Cassino. They raped every village woman and girl they could get their hands on, an estimated 3,000 women, ranging in age from 11 years to 86. They murdered 800 village men who tried to protect their women. They abused some of the women so badly that more than 100 of them died.

The people of these mountain villages are descended from the ancient Volsci, one of the tribes in pre-Roman Italy, and their women are reputed to be taller and more graceful than other women in that part of Italy. The Moroccan soldiers selected the prettiest girls for gang-raping, with long lines of dark-skinned Moroccans waiting their turn in front of each one, while other Moroccans held the victims down. Two sisters, 15 and 18 years old, were raped by more than 200 Moroccans each. One of them died from the abuse. The other has spent the last 53 years in a mental hospital. The Moroccans even raped some of the young men in the villages. The Moroccans also destroyed most of the buildings in the villages and stole everything of value.

Interestingly enough, there is no mention of this action by our gallant Colored allies from North Africa in most of the histories of the battle for Monte Cassino which have been published since the war. Not even the official history published by the U.S. War Department mentions what the Moroccans did to these Italian mountain villagers. Jewish policy during and since the war has been to ignore any atrocity committed by the people on their side — unless they could blame it on their enemies. For example, the murder by Jewish execution squads belonging to the Soviet secret police of 15,000 Polish officers and intellectuals in 1940 was blamed on the Germans after the advancing German Army uncovered the bodies of more than 4,000 of the victims in the Katyn forest. Even years after the end of the war many elements of the controlled media continued to parrot this lie about German guilt for the Katyn murders. Jewish control of the news media made this easy.

And of course, reports of the atrocities committed against the Germans by Soviet forces during and after the war also were suppressed. The horrible mass rapes of German women and young girls and the mass murder of German civilians and prisoners of war were deliberately incited by the Jewish-Soviet propaganda commissar Ilya Ehrenburg. This hate-crazed Jewish commissar explicitly urged the Red Army to rape German women and murder German civilians, including children. And they did. But of course, Hollywood has never made a film about these horrible atrocities. And so far as I am aware, none of the heirs of these Polish, German, or Italian victims of the pro-Jewish Allies have made any demands on the various Allied governments for restitution.

Of all the people who suffered losses during the Second World War, it's only the Jews who are demanding to be paid, only the Jews who are trying to capitalize on their losses — and exaggerating and lying about those losses so that they can inflate their claims for restitution. Of course, it really wouldn't do any of these Poles, Germans, or Italians any good to make claims for restitution, because they don't control the media, and without the media to back them up the politicians would just laugh in their faces.

Imagine a delegation of elderly Italian village women from the Monte Cassino area showing up in Washington and claiming restitution from the U.S. government for their horrible experience of being gang-raped by Moroccans 53 years ago. After all, it was an American, General Dwight Eisenhower, who was in charge of the Allied war effort and who therefore had responsibility for the conduct of the Allied soldiers, including the Moroccans. The Moroccans already had a reputation as a bunch of raping, cutthroat savages, so that even bringing Moroccan soldiers into Europe constituted a war crime and a crime against humanity.

But can you imagine any of our politicians even giving these women the time of day? New York Senator Alphonse D'Amato has been beating the drums for the Jews who are demanding gold from the Swiss, the Swedes, and everyone else. I am sure that he would not be so helpful to his fellow Italians. After all, Italians don't own the New York Times. No, these Italian women would be ignored. To claim victim status like the Jews, thereby stealing part of the spotlight from the Jews, would be considered tantamount to anti-Semitism. And to complain about being raped by Colored soldiers certainly would smack of racism. When the politicians saw these women coming they would run in the other direction, and Senator D'Amato would be running faster than all the rest.

You know, it may be that this business of Jews extorting a few billion dollars from various governments and banks and insurance companies they claim shortchanged them 60 years ago isn't a big deal. After all, it's only money. But it is nevertheless a good illustration, I believe, both of the way the Jews work and of the absolute necessity that we regain control of our mass media. In my view, what was done to those women in the villages around Monte Cassino in May 1944 is a far worse crime than anything the Jews claim happened to them — even if every one of their claims were true. It is also a crime that the news of this terrible atrocity was suppressed. Our children today are being taught a false version of history and are being led to wrong conclusions as a result. Because of this they are unable effectively to defend their society, their civilization, and their race. They have been given false notions of who their friends are and who their enemies are. And they have been given these false ideas, they have been led to these wrong conclusions, for one reason only, and that is because it benefits the Jews.

This is a terrible crime. It would justify a hundred Nuremberg trials and the hanging of every general, every politician, and every media boss who participated in it.

If our people are to survive we must know what's happening in the world around us. We must know the truth about what has happened to us in the past, not lies designed to benefit the Jews. You know, I harp on this point a lot, but that is because it is of supreme importance. Some people deliberately avoid understanding that. They pretend that it should be of no concern to us who controls our communications media. Someone has to control them, and so it may as well be Jews, they think. How does that hurt us, they ask. We can still get the latest basketball scores. We can still find out what the weather forecast is. We can still watch our favorite game show or situation comedy. Why should we be concerned that it's the Jews providing these things for us instead of someone else?

Let me tell you again why we should be concerned, and I'll say it slowly this time. We were not told by the media about what the Communists were doing in the Soviet Union in the 1920s and the 1930s, because the Jews didn't want us to know. It might turn us against Communism, and in the Communist Soviet Union Jews were riding high. The Jews didn't want us to be against Communism. So there were no Hollywood films showing Russian and Ukrainian farmers dying of starvation while Jewish commissars ate caviar. Instead, what we got from the mid-1930s on was anti-German films and anti-German propaganda in the newspapers and on the radio. The Jews wanted us to be anti-German, because the Germans were kicking the Jews out of Germany. We were lied to so much and for so long that we ended up allying ourselves with the Communists in order to destroy the Germans. And in 1943, when the German Army discovered the bodies of those 15,000 Polish officers and intellectuals who had been murdered by the Communists, the Jewish media over here lied to us again and told us that the Germans had done it. And it was all of these lies which led directly to all of those women in the mountain villages around Monte Cassino being gang-raped by Moroccan soldiers in May 1944. And the same lies led to the gang-rape and the mass murder of millions of Germans in the years after that.

But for these lies we never would have been involved in a war in Europe, even with the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. But for these lies, Communism would have been crushed in Europe 50 years sooner. But for these lies, the most horrible crimes in history would have been avoided.

So it does matter who controls the media. It mattered then, and it matters now, because we're still being lied to. It is the worst sort of irresponsibility to imagine that you will be nice by not noticing what the Jews are doing with the media and by politely accepting all of their "Holocaust" claims. That is not nice. That is criminal. People who thought like that are partly responsible for all of the crimes of the Second World War. Until we take the media away from the liars, we will blunder into one crime after another and one catastrophe after another. We can't afford many more.

George Bush
Declared Persona Non Grata in Japan

by

Charles E. Weber, Ph.D.

The March, 1991 issue of the Liberty Bell contained a group of essays that protested American participation in the war against Iraq, which proved to be a very costly undertaking that was of no benefit to the American people as a whole. These essays have now taken on a new significance in the light of an article published in the June-July issue of the internationally respected pro-Aryan periodical, IMPACT (Box 28233, Sunnyside 0132, Republic of South Africa)

In a detailed, well-reasoned essay Colin Jordan contrasted the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq with the invasion of Lebanon by Israel, against which no action was undertaken by the United States, of course. Mr. Jordan also mentioned that act of war carried out by Israel in 1981 against Iraq, namely the bombing of its nuclear energy plant. Dr. William Pierce posed the question, "Why War?" He analyzed in detail the illogical arguments that Bush & Co. used to justify the murderous war against Iraq. My own essay, "Reflections on the Moral Aspects of George Bush's War Against Iraq," began with the following sentences:

> As an American I am deeply concerned about the moral culpability of my country in its unprovoked military measures against Iraq, a country of moderate size which was no military threat to the United States. To many people throughout the world, but especially in the Islamic countries, Americans now seem like brutal, irrational bullies who are intent on seizing the property of other countries by force. ("Blood for oil.") Such a crime is commonly called robbery.

I concluded my essay as follows:

> No matter how short or how long the war, no matter how few or how many Americans killed or maimed for life, the war represents the triumph of the objectives of Zionism over the interests of the American people as a whole.

Now we learn from the story in IMPACT, a report by Daniel New, Box 927, Conrow, Texas 77305, that the International War Crimes Tribunal has convicted George Bush, along with Generals Powell and Schwarzkopf, of 19 charges of war crimes brought before the IWCT on 6 May 1991. The charges involved "crimes against humanity for their rôle in killing civilians in a massacre of retreating Iraqi soldiers on the infamous 'highway of death' at the end of the Gulf War in 1991."

The item points out that the Japanese foreign ministry has now declared George Bush and others who were convicted of the crimes to be personae non grata and as such are prohibited from entering Japan. This was reported by the Associated Press writer Henry Williams, but the AP did not use his story. Why should the American people be denied such significant information? Because it would harm the interests of ZOG?

Those who have a serious desire to know what is really going on in the world should read periodicals such as the Liberty Bell and IMPACT.

THE ANTI-HUMANS

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Cornelu Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. A CHOICE OF PLANS TO SAVE THE WHITE RACE (OR PART OF IT)

By Allan Callahan

Some of our kind think it is too late to save ourselves, considering that our race went from about 1/3 of the world's population in 1900 to only 1/10 in less than a century, and is projected to be only 1% by the end of the 21st century; and taking into account the number of coloreds already in some of the white nations, plus the miscegenation that has already taken place, they say we might as well give up, accept the idea of extinction, and admit that we are finished.

The facts are grim enough, alright, but there are others among our race who are not ready to give up yet. There is still a chance to turn it around. There are only two options regarding the physical makeup of future generations: purity or mongrelization, which means, in starkest terms, preservation or destruction! We choose the first option.

To achieve it, we must have geographic separation of the races. This means that coloreds must either leave the majority white nations entirely, or some territories must be split off from these nations, to give these peoples territories of their own, from which they could form their own countries, and have their own sovereignty. They could then be called "ethnostates."

Any plan to preserve our people is not going to start all over the planet, at once; it will have to begin in one particular nation, somewhere. If it it succeeds there, maybe other white nations can take heart and pick up on some variation of it, to fit their own particular circumstances.

The idea of geographical separation is not new, but has not been discussed much. The following two proposals regarding it should be looked at and reflected upon: one was made by Tom Metzger of W.A.R. (White Aryan Resistance); the other was made by Wilmot Robertson, who has written extensively on the race problem.

Let's take Metzger's plan first. He says we should consider a referendum to split the U.S. into three independent republics: (1) A colored, intolerant nation. (2) A white, intolerant nation. (3) A nation in which tolerance of every diversity or perversity would be absolutely mandated.

This would include street people, pornographers, drug addicts, homos and child molesters. No discrimination would be allowed in either public or private education, housing or employment. All groups living there would have to accept all other groups. Metzger says the Jews quite naturally belong here.

Those whites who wanted to live among their "colored brothers" would belong here, too. Plus all those married to, or living with, coloreds. The coloreds themselves would decide if they wanted any types of subdivisions; and, if so, what types? They might want quite a few, or none; or might, say, only want to split the Jews off and have them live to themselves. At any rate, Metzger's plan would give a pick of choices which should please just about everybody.

Then we have Wilmot Robertson's plan, which he laid out in his book, Ventilations. He advocates Hawaii as a homeland for Orientals, plus other enclaves on the mainland. Whites would leave these enclaves, and Hawaii itself, except for those working for the defense establishment.

The majority of Mexicans now reside in the West and Southwest. To give them enough territory for an independent nation, Robertson proposes giving them a strip of U.S. territory 40 miles wide, just north of the Mexican border, and extending the full length of it.

It would be sort of a tit-for-tat exchange; Mexicans would replace the whites that moved north, while whites replaced Mexicans that moved south. Whites would have to vacate cities such as El Paso, San Diego, Brownsville and Yuma, but it would be worth it. Not only would it do away with the strife and confrontation between the two peoples; but, more importantly, it would help whites in their goal of avoiding extinction through miscegenation. One California white girl said that, in her highschool graduation class, all her female friends but one or two later married Mexicans. Without separation, this will be repeated millions and millions of times in the future.

A dispensation might be made for the quarter million or so Hispanos who have lived in New Mexico for around 300 years, largely around the Santa Fe region. They have little or nothing to do with the Mexican-American elsewhere.

Far more than half the negroes now live in urban areas, and more and more they are congregating in large cities. For those living outside the South, Robertson suggests enlarging the areas of the 20 biggest black communities to make room for more people to come in from smaller cities where the black population is relatively low. There would be no all-black cities, but their communities would be self-governing cities within cities, and their relationship with other ethnic groups mostly of an economic nature. In the rural South, certain counties in each state could be set aside for negroes, where they could manage their own affairs. Many are already congregated in their own areas in numerous towns and localities. At any rate, instead of having thousands of pockets of negroes scattered all over the U.S., there would be far less of them.

The pure-blooded Spanish Cubans are of course white, and could live with American whites. Most Cubans, however, are mixed bloods, of all hues, going down to some pure-blooded negroes who are as black as coal. The largest Cuban elements are already living in Miami and other parts of southeast Florida, so this would be the most logical place for a homeland for them.

No people need a land of their own more than Jews. From ancient Egypt up to the present, they have not been able to develop lasting, peaceful relations with other peoples. Since a large percentage live in New York City, Los Angeles and Miami Beach, there is no reason why their present enclaves there couldn't be enlarged enough for all of them.

As aforementioned, the idea of geographical separation is not new, and has been done many times in the past, in many places. For a few examples, consider what happened in Asia Minor after WWI. After four wars fought between 1912 and 1922, the Allied Powers brokered an exchange of populations between certain peoples. Over two million Greeks, Turks and Bulgarians were repatriated. It was a population exchange, a trading of homes and lands, a giving up of abodes and properties in one place for new ones elsewhere. While most naturally did not want to move, the Allies said that they must, to lessen the danger of war. This took place from 1923 to 1926.

In 1792, Russia put most of her Jews—around five million— in an area stretching from Ukraine to Poland. This was called the "Pale of Settlement." An exception was made for some 300,000. They could live "beyond the Pale."

And we put many Indians on reservations in the 19th century. In the case of the Georgia Indians, the Supreme Court said that they couldn't be moved. President Andrew Jackson said: "The Supreme Court has made its decision; now let them enforce it." Jackson simply called out the army, moved the Indians, and that was that.

If America opts for resettlement of colored population groups, it should be done orderly and humanely, maybe taking up to a decade or so. Of course, there will be many whites who will not want to give up any territory for homelands for racial aliens, and it is possible that this can indeed be avoided. Many coloreds might be repatriated back to their traditional homelands, with aid provided to help them get resettled. Those of child bearing age could opt for sterilization, at government expense, with maybe bonuses given out also. And other ways might also be found to help solve the problem.

But if some territory is to be eventually turned over to coloreds, the two foregoing plans should be considered. Robertson's plan goes into more detail, while Metzger simply calls for splitting the U.S. up into three independent republics. However, it is unlikely that Metzger would expect them to all be the same size.

It is said that coloreds make up 25% of our population, but a lot of them are illegals, and deserve no territory. What percent are illegal? No one knows for sure, but it wouldn't be surprising if it would be 10% or more. So, under anyone's plan, it appears that coloreds shouldn't have more than 15% of American territory, at the most.

Under Metzger's plan, the amount of territory alloted under Category No. (1) might be about the same as Robertson's; the big question would be how much to allot under Category No. (3)? There is no need to speculate too much on it now; it could be decided "in the fullness of time."

Although Robertson's is a good plan, personally I lean towards Metzger's, chiefly because of the way it would address negroes. Robertson would keep them somewhat tied to whites economically, at least for a while, whereas Metzger made no such stipulation, and would presumably give them full sovereignty, just as soon as the plan could be fully implemented. For years they've complained that whites have been "holding them down;" so, let them show their stuff, and sink or swim on their own. They claim to be equal; so, if they are, they certainly don't need us. In fact, all coloreds would be cut loose, under the Metzger plan. Although he hasn't gone much into details yet, presumably the three independent republics could engage in trade, allow tourism, and have cultural contacts,

This is a choice of plans to save the white race, but we realize that, with the decades of brainwashing that our people have undergone, not all of the race can be saved. But a large percentage can be, and if we can turn things around in America, maybe our example will encourage other nations in the white world to take action, too.

Some time back, someone stated that our people talk about geographic separation of the races, but never submit any plans. Well, here are two, Take your choice, or maybe you, dear reader, can come up with a better one. If so, then lay it on us!

At any rate, we need to start debating this issue. Nothing is going to happen until a lot more white people realize that we are heading toward extinction unless we change our ways. There is more than a little likelihood that this will happen when all those with the rudiments of a brain realize that "Amereeka" is coming apart at the seams, and something needs to be done. ❑

Omnium-Gatherum: Egalitarianism and Christendom

by DGR

This octopus-like concept and pseudo-science espouses equality of all life and dominates the sociological departments of academia today. Its creation was assisted by certain political and religious influences and reintroduced into Western culture recently. (It most likely was first introduced during the cultural revolution of ancient Egypt which was also accompanied by massive immigration.) Efforts by these organizations to channel the general population into any of several parallel mental "tracks" — all of which espouse the same basic philosophies, objectives, societal management & development plans — have been extremely successful. Few realize though their trail drive in the dark arrives soon at the Fabian shipping station.

Egalitarianism and its resulting socialism could be countered by the concepts of evolution were it not for Christendom. Doctrines of the Christian church never considered or allowed for evolution and this is understandable since it was only recently developed in the last century. Certain reform oriented Christian sects have emerged that support egalitarianism and socialism. Their doctrines vary but provide support, either passively or indirectly, for social orientation. Traditional beliefs however have held firm.

Traditional Christendom, by maintaining their old doctrines, indirectly and actively supports the objectives of Fabian egalitarianism and socialism. By denying the existence of differences between organisms and evolution, they poison themselves politically and a slow death process ensues. Examples here include Christendom in the United States over the last century, the Western culture of the country as a whole, and the erosion of individual liberties on which the country was founded. All of these have been replaced by "social responsibility" and "sustainable development" concerns.

Apostates of traditional folklore, seeking a "kinder and gentler" god, most often turn to these new social sects in order to maintain as much integrity to their beliefs as possible. In making this choice they reject a third alternative, i.e., the nationalistic viewpoint which parallels their traditional doctrines with respect to individual liberty and morality. Both groups, following the creation story, reject, isolate and castigate individuals who have a propensity to include in their global observations racial differences based on evolution. These individuals are considered to be immoral only because they do not accept the doctrine of creation or the verses of Jesus about love and mankind. Despite the animosity, their numbers increase each day. They are ostracized and overwhelmed by the media which encourages the public to believe everyone is simultaneously identical but unique. This viewpoint is held by many groups and organizations of social influence including the academic, "scholarly social sciences" and various religions such as B'hai and Judaism. Despite all of this misinformation and philosophical meanderings, evolution supports the racial "cognizant" in every fashion.

Without wandering around too much in this omnium-gatherum, the point here is that Christianity could maintain its integrity, religion, and moral standards of the Bible (with regard to homosexuality, family, etc.) if they would not reject a nationalistic philosophy and its doctrines. A nationalistic agenda supports and parallels their beliefs to morality, freedom from government intrusions and individual liberties such as free worship. Christianity, once the religion of the Caucasian European world, sought to be the religion of the entire world and include all races. This was a dismal failure despite its global omnipresence. What it has succeeded at, magnificently I might add, was becoming the religion of o povo. Jesus Christ is the religion of the people. Through him, even the poorest of the poor, the downtrodden, rejected, the nobody, etc., can obtain salvation and enter a better world after death. All that is required is faith and morality. If either fails, all can be forgiven and the system remains the same. If the whole thing is false, it makes no difference, for the institute remains and there will always be a fresh supply of o povo.

Strangely enough, these concepts are identical to the doctrines of Osiris of ancient Egypt. For more than four millennia Osiris saved the souls of the poor. He was a necessity because the sacerdotal government of Egypt, a purely socialist government totalitarian in nature, controlled every aspect of personal affairs, business, politics, and religion in the country. Those who could not financially support the priesthood did not fit in. During the decline of the Egyptian empire, Osiris was introduced and well accepted into Palestine circa the Babylonian captivity. His popularity, which grew for a few centuries, quickly disappeared with the emergence of Christianity, the arrival of the prophesied messiah. Regardless of whether his rituals were actually discontinued or the name was only changed, the parallels between Osiris and Christ are obvious.

It is doubtful Christianity will become the religion of the world as history repeats itself again. The concept has not changed, only the name of the messiah. The "new world order" today parallels closely the Egyptian empire. Today's poor have as little in common with the "chosen few" as their predecessors did with the sacerdotal heads of yester-centuries. The "new world order" this time, however, will not be Rome. Unless communist in nature and secretly controlled, or maybe even in perfect harmony in mind and soul, any organization of poor will not have the financial or political means to change or even influence the new sacerdotal socialist government which will control the world's raw materials, currencies, and all trade. We can't even control the hoaxes they have perpetuated for five decades so far. Christendom should listen to the few dissident voices that remain within it before the arrival of some digital messiah in a spaceship who urges everyone to begin the millennium by calling themselves B'Moo B'Fools.

Another Extravagant Theory on Race ? So What !

by DGR

[Re: "Another Extravagant Theory on Race", by Guillermo Colleti, Liberty Bell / August 1997]

The article by Mr. Colletti focused my attention on the extensive media attempts of today to manipulate the minds of unsuspecting and trusting global inhabitants. Mr. Cavalli-Sforza, his data and his conclusions clearly deserve a closer review.

Issues racially oriented have been greatly distorted over the last half century under the control of religious doctrines, business development and political corruption. Much of the problem, as already quoted from Dr. Hans F.K. Günther, falls upon "Christendom" for diversifying doctrines and liberalizing agendas in their quest for wealth, power, and a sacerdotal state similar to that of ancient Egypt. It was a mistake however to disassociate themselves from ethnocentrics, conservatives whose backgrounds and values closely parallel their own, to embrace instead others who doom the institute through liberalism, much the same as it was fifty, or five thousand, years ago.

One should not forget that "race" is a term comprised of two components; an external manifestation of the cellular genome and culture. Culture is a function of the former but further developed and refined by the local environment of the organism, which influences maturation both metabolically and mentally. French is different from German. Ditto for Spanish, Italian, etc. If we step to the larger picture, all of the above as a whole, i.e. Western culture, it is different from the Occidental and African cultures. We must not only be perpetually cognizant of the plane of observation temporarily used to perceive the world but also maintain the ability to refocus instantaneously, i.e., shift to the "big picture." This is especially critical with regard to evolution and time.

Mr. Cavalli-Sforza's article has deceived many of his readers, Mr. Colletti included, by omitting the relevance of the term "African" genes. To clarify, we note that any study of Europeans could only cover at a maximum 100,000 years or so, as determined from mitochondrial DNA studies published in recent years. The 1987 study by Allan Wilson et al. at Berkeley, traced all human DNA on the planet back to an "African mother" as the origin. For the ethnocentric-oriented, we calm their nerves by pointing out that the term "African mother" does not necessarily mean the obvious. At that time no contemporary sub-species existed. Neanderthals existed along with a few other bipeds, Homo "Somethingorothers", but not the modern day African. This means before one hundred millennia ago, the term "European" does not apply. This is the relevance of Cavalli-Sforza's data. It traced the Homo "Somehtingorother" origin to modern day "Homo Sapien-Caucasian-European", backwards, showing us clearly where the other two sub-species diverged along the way.

With this in mind we consider another fact, at the other extreme, one most people would rather ignore. Other DNA studies which compared the genome of humans and modern apes concluded the two sets of DNA were 95% identical. Both humans, Homo Sapiens, and modern apes, Anthropoid "Whatever", evolved from a common creature discovered by Dr. Donald Johanson in the early 1970s, later named Australopithecus Afarensis. With this in mind it is clear that if the European genome is only 35% "African" in nature, one should wonder how the other 60% disappeared over the last three million years since Afarensis became extinct. This is a good example of switching "pictures".

Today, the remnants of Afarensis and the "African mother" are simply a choice between one of only three races which evolved in parallel at some point; Caucasian, Congoid, and Asian. Only these three exist on the planet today, discounting miscegenation among them. This result can be easily deducted from a comparison of the skulls of these three sub-species by anyone. These facts must be understood clearly or else the "dis-application" of Cavalli-Sforza's data will lead everyone into the mental ruts of egalitarianism, i.e., believing a monkey descendant is a monkey descendant is a monkey descendant, which is certainly not true by any means.

Support for the model that modern sub-species, or "races" as some prefer, originated by divergence from a common, ancient origin is provided by Cavalli-Sforza. His classic marker studies reinforce Wilson's research although they are confusing to many readers. These models indicate that migration, coupled with the later evolvement in Europe, generated a pure strain of "Caucasian" individuals. The same applies to the other two groups which evolved elsewhere. This should clarify the term "African" genes, which really means "African" genes and not "congoid" genes. Congoid genes, i.e., the gene pool of the modern day sub-Saharan African, is almost 100% identical with the caucasian European genes.

All of this might seem quite shocking to the genetically challenged mind, however, we close considering the last small fraction of a percentage difference between the three sub-species listed above. One hundred millennia equals about six thousand generations. Random genetic drift is significant after only 100 generations, or about 2000 years. Both are superfluous for any type of organism to distinctly diverge, both physically and/or metabolically, as a result from the unique environmental or cultural stresses found between Africa and Europe.

All studies indicate the evolution of the Caucasian in Europe occurred in 40000 years. Difficulty in accepting the virtually identical genetic nature between the three races is understandable, since one focuses mostly on obvious but trivial external physical traits for differentiation. Technically by definition however, organisms that interbreed are of the same species. Virtual identity is required, by both definition and genetically however, for species to interbreed. Miscegenation between Homo and Anthropoid is impossible with only a 5% difference between the two genera. Thus it is clear, only a minute amount of genetic variation was required to create the modern sub-species or races seen today and this was accomplished in only a fraction of the evolutionary clock. These minor differences are the only concern of ethnocentric individuals. The sub-species we see today were evolving into separate species, incapable of miscegenation when the process was halted by migrations millennia ago.

Darwin's theory of evolution clearly explains and supports ethnocentric viewpoints despite the disinformation published by egalitarian organizations and media. Religious doctrine need only to find a few errors in the Old Testament to concur, something which is long, long overdue. Germane veracity however is obscured by the media who often use research to confuse matters with irrelevant data. Because of all of this, the media should always be viewed with caution. Usually serving not only as an "opium" for the mental masses, large doses of media are often laced with the "arsenic" of disinformation. Despite the incessant effort to disprove evolution, at least certain aspects of it, to convince the public we evolved into identical socialist creatures instead, many in all three races know better. Some though are especially proud of the last 40000 years and not likely to be "drugged" easily. ❑

What Is Our Life For?

A National-Socialist Answer

by

David Myatt, England

What is Our Life For

What is our life for? Or, expressed another way, what is the meaning and purpose of our life, as individuals? The answer is basically a simple one: it is to contribute in some way to evolution itself — that is, to make a positive difference; to leave something positive and worthwhile behind, something which has helped or which can help to make the world itself a better place. We make a positive difference when we aid or contribute to evolution itself.

The aim of our lives is not simply to "pass on our genes" by having children — for that merely maintains what is and takes no account of the fact that we, as a species, are thinking beings, possessed of consciousness and an awareness of our individuality. That is, such an aim does not take into account our very humanity. To simply produce descendants is to live like any other form of life. Neither is the purpose of our lives to simply enjoy ourselves as individuals or find "happiness" — for we, as individuals, are dependent on other life, and what we do or do not do has some effect, or some influence on the other life on this planet of ours, regardless of whether or not we as individuals are aware of such effects and such influence. To ignore, or not understand, these effects and influences is to negate our own humanity — that is, to negate the reason and understanding which we as individuals are capable of, and should develop as individuals.

The reality of our lives is that we are the result of evolution — we are not isolated beings, but connected to those who are our own ancestors, and who thus "made us", and connected to those who are or could be our own descendants. We are also connected to those whose life or future is changed because of what we do or do not do in our own life.

One of the things which makes us, as a species, unique is that we as individuals possess the ability to consciously change ourselves for the better through an act of will. That is, we possess the ability to act upon the understanding we are capable of. We express our very humanity, as beings, when we strive to understand ourselves, the world and cosmos around us, and when we strive to act on that understanding. Thus can we continue to evolve, and so build upon the foundations we have inherited from our ancestors — thus can we change ourselves for the better. What is "for the better" is what increases those things which make us human, which express our humanity, and thus which distinguish us from the other types of life which exist on this planet of ours.

Basically, life is an increase in order; that is, a new and better arrangement of things. What is better generally arises through the process of natural selection. Life is a continual striving to bring and to manifest order into chaos, and the more complex, and thus the higher the life, the more order there is. All life evolves; that is, all life changes, and the process of life itself — the natural cycle of birth-growth-death-renewal which occurs in Nature — is a means whereby more and more order, a better and better arrangement of things, are produced, or can be produced, over time. Because we, as a species, are possessed of consciousness — that is, because we can reason and are aware of our individuality — we can consciously decide to change for the better. That is, we can aid our own evolution, and that of our species. We can, in effect, creatively intervene in evolution. In fact, our humanity itself — our reason and ability to understand — has evolved because it has enabled us to survive and triumph over adversity. In effect, our humanity is a successful evolutionary adaptation in the struggle for survival.

Civilization

In a similar way, every society, every culture and every civilization is a further expression of evolution — of our species changing and adapting, and of individuals deciding to cooperate together for their mutual benefit. That is, such things express and require cooperation between individuals, and in a sense they express a higher, more developed, way of living — they have raised us up from an animal existence. As higher ways of living, they express an increase in order, as they make possible further increases. Civilization is the highest way of living so far developed; it is a means whereby we, as individuals, can express and develop those things which make us unique as humans — in particular, reason, understanding, knowledge and individual character. Civilization preserves and develops the reason, knowledge and understanding we have inherited from our ancestors, providing us with the opportunity to evolve further in reason and understanding. Furthermore, civilization encourages the production of individuals of noble character and thus makes possible individual freedom — since real freedom means individuals of noble character having the ability and the power to determine their own lives; such individuals are able to make their own reasoned judgements about things, have the strength of character necessary to act on their judgement and are given the power, by the rules or laws of their society, to freely exercise that judgment. It is a fallacy of our times that freedom means "parliamentary democracy" and the system of "one person, one vote". The reality is that this modern system which is mis-described as "parliamentary democracy" is a plutocratic oligarchy (the rule of a wealthy, pampered and influential minority) which rewards and encourages sycophancy where the rulers, called politicians, accept little or no personal responsibility for their actions. In the society based upon this parliamentary system, nobility of individual character — based upon and expressed by personal honour — is seldom if ever cultivated or even seen as an ideal. Instead, there is the pursuit of opportunity, wealth, and personal happiness.

Civilization itself arises when individuals of noble character — and thus possessed of noble instincts — cooperate together, and when they create a society where those noble instincts are expressed in some moral or legal code. Such a civilized society creates, through education and training, further individuals of noble character, and the concept of personal honour becomes an ideal to be strived for. Those aspiring to hold public office or influential positions in such a civilized society are expected to uphold, and be seen to uphold, this noble ideal of personal honour. So long as such noble individuals are produced, so long as a noble moral or legal code remains in force, and so long as there exists a desire to know, reason and to change things for the better, civilization survives.

Thus, civilization enables individuals to be human, express their humanity and develop that humanity. That is, civilization enables individuals to change themselves for the better through an act of will since its provides, creates, encourages and makes available the basic essentials to make this possible. These are a noble character, and thus the ability to reason and to judge, and the accumulated wisdom, understanding and knowledge of former times.

Expressed in the simplest possible terms, the purpose of our lives is to be civilized and to encourage civilization itself. In the simplest sense, being civilized means having a basic understanding of what is necessary for civilization, and acting upon that understanding. We can aid or encourage civilization itself by, for instance, having children and providing those children with conditions in which they can flourish, where they can develop their potential as human beings and thus contribute to evolution. We can also aid and encourage civilization by trying to create or maintain those things essential to civilization and a civilized way of life — that is, essential to our humanity and essential to our freedom as human beings. The things which are essential are nobility of character, reason, understanding, knowledge and the freedom to be able to use one's own judgement.

If we are to be civilized — and thus fulfill or strive to fulfill our purpose in life — we must have or acquire some understanding of our own place in the general "scheme of things", as we must have or acquire some knowledge of how to live in a civilized way. We must also strive to change ourselves for the better through an act of will.

The Wisdom of National-Socialism

According to National-Socialism, for us to change ourselves for the better through an act of will we require an ideal to strive for — a noble vision. That is, we require some noble motivation. This noble motivation is a vision of a better world, and this vision is founded upon the reality of civilization — upon what is necessary to create, maintain and expand a civilized way of life.

The fundamental difference between National-Socialism and all other philosophies and religions which attempt to answer the question of our existence is that National-Socialism alone expresses a true understanding of what is necessary to maintain and extend our very humanity. That is, only National-Socialism explains the foundations of our humanity and how we can use those foundations to create a better, more noble, civilized world. In effect, only National-Socialism fully explains our unique place in the general "scheme of things", since all other philosophies ignore the fundamental importance of individual noble character and race.

One of the most important and fundamental foundations of our humanity — of what makes us human — is personal honour. That is, noble individual character. From individual noble character true freedom arises, and thus the creation of a civilized society where that freedom is encouraged and maintained. A society is civilized and free so long as it maintains personal honour as an ideal and so long as its encourages — through education and otherwise — the production of individuals of noble character who can make their own reasoned judgement about things and have the strength of character necessary to act upon the judgements they make. When we strive to act with honour, when we strive to act in a noble way and use reason to understand things, and when we act on the basis of our own reasoned judgment, we are being civilized, and thus are expressing our humanity. It is one of the fundamental aims of National-Socialism to create a noble society where individual honour is an ideal, and where individuals are trained and encouraged to reason, and trained and encouraged to make reasoned judgments and act upon such judgments. This National-Socialist society thus is based upon and encourages individuals to be responsible and accept responsibility for their judgements. In effect, National-Socialism represents what is civilized just as the individual National-Socialist — striving to live in a National-Socialist way — is a civilized person. Furthermore, a National-Socialist society is a truly free society since such a National-Socialist society, and such a society alone, creates and maintains those things essential to personal freedom — individual noble character, and the willingness of such a society to allow individuals to judge things for themselves and act upon that judgement, provided always that such actions are honourable.

However, the creation of such a society is only part of being human. That is, the creation of such a civilized society in itself does not express all of what makes us human and therefore does not in itself completely answer the question of our existence as human beings. Given the creation of such a civilized society — based upon honour — it is important that evolution continues. That is, it is important that we continue to express and develop our humanity, our civilized way of life. By so striving to continue our personal development, and the development of our civilized society, we are being fully human, and fully civilized. We can only develop such a society if we work in harmony with Nature — that is, in accord with the natural processes of Nature.

The second of the two fundamental foundations of our humanity — of what makes us human — is our race, for the different races which exist have been evolved, by Nature, over long periods of time. They express how Nature works — how Nature is made manifest to us, and in us. They have made us what we are and establish who we are. Thus, the different races of our human species have evolved because that is how Nature — and life itself — works: toward more diversity and more difference through selection and adaptation. In effect, the race we belong to and are born into is how Nature exists in us — it is Nature waiting to evolve further. We possess because of our race the potential to develop what is latent within us — that is, we can aid Nature to evolve further, to a higher level. We express this potential, and continue the evolution of Nature, when we continue what Nature has started by marrying among our own kind and producing offspring who are pure in race. We undermine Nature, and effectively destroy what Nature has laboured to achieve, when we do not marry among our own kind and produce racially mixed offspring. When this is done, the potential which was latent within us becomes lost or destroyed, and we are in effect undermining the very basis of our own humanity. As such, we are acting in a selfish, dishonourable and uncivilized way.

Thus, a civilized society reflects the reality of both of the foundations of our humanity, and thus reflects the reality of Nature. That is, such a society is an ethnic society — one based upon a distinct race, which encourages the further and separate development of that distinct race, and the distinct and unique culture such a race has developed. The truth about National-Socialism, in respect of such ethnic or racial societies, is very different from the propaganda lies which have been spread about National-Socialism by its enemies. The fundamental, civilized ideal of National-Socialism is the creation of a free, civilized and independent ethnic society for each distinct race — and the eventual cooperation of these societies among themselves.

If a civilized society — based upon personal honour — is created and if such a society is not based upon a unique and distinct race, and if it does not encourage the unique dev— is created and if such a society is not based upon a unique and distinct race, and if it does not encourage the unique dev— is created and if such a society is not based upon a unique and distinct race, and if it does not encourage the unique dev— is created and if such a society is not based upon a unique and distinct race, and if it does not encourage the unique dev— is created and if such a society is not based upon a unique and distinct race, and if it does not encourage the unique devom of life is in understanding this and accepting it — and acting upon it. It is sheer folly — and very unwise — to do otherwise.

We are and will remain, human. That is, bound by the laws and processes of life. These laws and processes are manifest to us in Nature — in our evolution into separate races, and in our creation of civilized, free societies. Our task is to increase and further develop our very humanity; it is not to undermine and destroy that humanity. If we accept the wisdom of life as manifest to us in the truths about race and noble individual character, then we are being human, just as if we strive to act upon this wisdom — and try to make that wisdom real in the world — we are fulfilling the very purpose of our own existence. We are then being civilized; we are striving to create free, ethnic societies. In effect, if we seek to fulfill the purpose of our lives, and seek to be civilized, we can and must become National-Socialists seeking to make the noble vision of National-Socialism real. Anything else is a denial of our very humanity, and a denial of the latent potential for further evolution which exists in us all.

A National-Socialist Glossary

[Note: What follows are brief explanations of some of the main terms important for an understanding of National-Socialism. Words marked with a * are defined in this Glossary. The references are to the National- Socialist works of D. Myatt.]

Archetype:

An archetype expresses an *ideal, or is a representation of what is ideal. As such, an archetype represents what is beautiful and harmonious — a striving for excellence — and is possessed of *numinosity. What is archetypal is what is most representative of, or most excellent about, a particular thing.

Aryan:

The term 'Aryan' is used to describe the White or Caucasoid race which originated in Europe. The term itself derives from an ancient Aryan word for 'a noble man' — Airya/Arya — and is thus apt to describe this noble, heroic, race.

The Aryan Ethos:

Ethos is the characteristic nature, or spirit/soul, of a particular *civilization, folk or race. The things which normally embody the ethos of a people, or race, are art, literature, achievements, music, customs and a particular religious attitude or religion.

The Aryan ethos — that which marks the Aryan and which expresses the true nature of the Aryan race — can be described in three words: Honour, Curiosity and Conquest.

(See: (1) Ch. III of Vision of a Future Golden Age; (2) National-Socialism, Aryan Culture and Aryan Freedom; (3) Aryan Freedom — Heretical Essays in Praise of Aryan Freedom.)

The Arts of Civilization:

These are Arts, or skills, the acquisition of which makes an individual civilized. Someone who has mastered the Arts of Civilization is thinking, acting and living like an Aryan, since these Arts embody the essence of the Aryan ethos. The Arts are: the Art of personal Honour; the Art of Ccombat or fighting; and the Art of Knowledge, of seeking to learn about the vast cultural and scientific heritage of Aryan civilizations.

(See Ch. III & IV of Vision of a Future Golden Age.)

Civilization:

Civilization is an ordered way of living — superior to primitive, selfish, barbarism — created by inventive warrior tribes who uphold the *noble personal values of *honour, loyalty and duty. It arises primarily from cooperation: from individuals being willing to place the welfare, security and future of their folk before their own self-interest.

Fundamentally, civilization depends for its creation and its maintenance on inventive, heroic, honourable individuals. Civilization is the pursuit of, or struggle for, *excellence by a heroic, noble and inventive folk or community who uphold honour and who thus create a society where *freedom is the norm.

(See: (1) The Nobility of National-Socialism; (2) Honour, Loyalty and Duty — An Introduction to National-Socialism; (3) Vision of a Future Golden Age.)

Culture:

Culture is the term used to describe those things which can aid an individual to improve or advance himselve, and thus fulfill the potential for change latent within him. Each race produces its own unique culture, and the distinctive culture of a particular race embodies or manifests the unique *ethos, or soul/spirit, of that race.

(See: (1) Vision of a Future Golden Age; (2) National-Socialism, Aryan Culture and Aryan Freedom; (3) Aryan Freedom — Heretical Essays in Praise of Aryan Culture.)

Decadence:

Decadence is a decline in or loss of *excellence. Decadence undermines and destroys individual vitality and health, and is basically a placing of self-interest, and self-indulgence, before personal honour and before the duty an individual has — as a thinking, civilized, being — toward striving to continue evolution by pursuing noble ideals.

Decadence, on the individual level, is a lack of character — a lack of will. On the artistic level, decadence is a lack of self-control, a pandering to weakness, a removal of high standards, and it is the philosophy, and the aesthetics, of the pretentious, the weak and the cowardly.

(See: (1) Ch. II of Honour, Loyalty, Duty; (2) National-Socialism, Morality and Justice.)

Democracy:

Real or genuine democracy means individual *honour and *freedom — it is an expression of the desire or will of a living, or organic, community to determine its own future. An organic society is totally different from, and totally opposite to, the lifeless, abstract modern societies created by abstract political or social dogma. Fundamentally, an organic society is an ethnic State.

Contrary to a popular misconception, the Greek word 'demos' does not simply mean 'people' in general. Rather, it originally meant 'the clan' in contrast to their 'chiefs'; in later Attic Greek, the word came to mean 'the community' or folk itself — distinguished as this community was by ties of blood. In both cases, a distinct racial or folk-community is meant.

A real democracy is a society, composed of members of the same race, where the ultimate authority resides in the folk-communities of that society. It is an ethnic nation, or community, where the individuals of that community cooperate together for their own well-being and advancement by upholding the ideals of honour and freedom.

(See: (1) 'The Thousand Year Reich' in The Enlightenment of National-Socialism; (2) 'Folk-Democracy' in The Wisdom of National-Socialism. (3) 'Modern Crime — A National-Socialist Perspective' in Hitler Rising — Hitlerian Essays in Defiance of Tyranny.)

Excellence:

Excellence is what is supreme; what is worthy; what is the best. Excellence is the setting of high-standards and the pursuit of them. It embodies what is archetypal or *ideal. Excellence implies a moving-forward, an evolution or improvement to a higher level, this higher level being set by an ideal or archetype, or some other expression of harmonious perfection.

On the individual level, excellence implies self-discipline and a noble motivation — a striving toward a supra-personal goal or ideal.

(See: (1) Ch. I of The Nobility of National-Socialism; (2) Ch. V of Future Reich — National-Socialism, Order and the Triumph of Individual Will.)

Freedom:

Freedom is the basis of the civilized way of living and means individuals having the basic right to determine their own life by choosing allegiance and by being able and willing to physically defend themselves, their own honour and that of their blood-kin. (The English word 'free' originally meant "to love (and defend) one's kin".)

Thus freedom means the right to be able to bear and to use arms or weapons in self-defence and in defence of one's own honour and that of one's kin. It further means the right to be able to do this, in accordance with a code of honour, with no one else and no group, institution or officials, being able to interfere, judge or restrict and take away the liberty of any individual so defending themselves and their honour, whatever the outcome. Thus, were a man to defend his own honour in an honourable way — according to a code of honour — such as, for example, by a duel, or a fair fight, then that man not only has the right to fight such a duel, but also has the right to be at liberty were his opponent to be injured or even killed in such a duel or fight. Anything other than this is un-civilized and tyrannical — a denial of freedom.

Real freedom means individuals of noble character having the ability and the power to determine their own lives in accord with what is noble and dutiful.

(See: (1) What Is Our Life For? A National-Socialist Answer; (2) National-Socialism, Aryan Culture and Aryan Freedom.)

Honour:

Honour is the setting of high and *noble standards of personal conduct. The high standards set by honour derive from idealism and thus from the pursuit of excellence.

Honour is the instinct for nobility made conscious, and a code of honour is a means whereby the high standards of honour are set and a means whereby individuals strive to uphold and maintain them. Honour is the basis for the human morality of National-Socialism.

(See: (1) Vision of a Future Golden Age — National-Socialism and the Importance of Honour; (2) Ch. V of Future Reich; (3) Ch. VI of National-Socialism, Aryan Culture and Aryan Freedom.)

Idea:

An idea is basically a created model for which no natural *archetype exists. Abstract ideas express a concept of what is 'common' — that is, what is not the best; what is not of excellence. An idea is the exact opposite of an *ideal. Ideals represent and express personal, or individual, character; an idea represents an abstraction which individuals are expected to conform to or be subservient to.

(See Ch. III of The Nobility of National-Socialism.)

Ideal:

An ideal is something which enshrines what is excellent, or which represents what is the best. It is a practical embodiment of excellence itself; some thing, or some person, distinguished because that thing or that person is the best — for example, the most courageous person in a battle who is distinguished from their comrades by their brave actions.

On the individual level, idealism means individuals undertaking deeds of exceptional merit which mark them out, and doing this because they themselves strive for the excellence of an ideal or ideals.

An ideal stands directly opposed to an abstract idea. Ideals are human — that is, organic; as such they are possessed of *numinosity; they are *archetypal and thus inspiring for individuals. Ideas are abstract, and lifeless — and thus essentially in-human. National-Socialism is based upon human ideals; all modern societies are based upon lifeless abstract ideas.

(See Ch. III of The Nobility of National-Socialism.)

Justice:

Justice exists in, and only exists in, fair, noble individuals who uphold a code of honour and who strive to live by that code of honour.

Justice does not exist in, and cannot exist in anything abstract, be it in a law, a 'Court of Law', an institution or whatever. Real justice lives only in individuals and cannot be abstracted out from them into a dead, life-less, abstract form.

A just society is a society which is noble and which allows individuals to test or prove their own honour and innocence — and thus stay free — by trial, by combat or by having someone champion them in such a trial.

(See: (1) 'National-Socialism, Justice and Penal Reform' in National-Socialism, Morality and Justice; (2) Ch. III of The Nobility of National-Socialism. (3) National-Socialism, Aryan Culture and Aryan Freedom.)

Nobility:

Nobility refers to personal character — it means having a noble character or nature. Someone who is noble is someone who is honourable — who exhibits those traits of character which represent honour: that is, fairness, heroism, courage, and gallantry.

Honour is the instinct for nobility made conscious, and a code of honour is a means whereby the high standards of honour are set and a means whereby individuals strive to uphold and maintain them.

(See: The Nobility of National-Socialism.)

Numinous

Something is numinous if it has beauty and awe. Something which is divinely-inspired or divinely-representative is numinous. What is numinous is generally what is revered, or regarded as sacred — as spiritual or divine. Nature herself is numinous — a wonderful, awe- inspiring mystery.

Social Engineering:

Social Engineering is the term used to describe the manipulation and control of people by abstract social/political *ideas. Our modern lifeless, multi-racial societies are the direct product of decades of social engineering, of social/political ideas and abstract doctrines made law.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigous academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

BOOK REVIEW

By
Charles E. Weber, Ph.D.

Michael Levin, Why Race Matters / Race Differences and What They Mean, West Port, Connecticut: Praeger, 1997, 14 + 415 pages.

Michael Levin is Professor of Philosophy at the City College of New York and the Graduate Center, City University of New York. Many passages in the book reflect his academic specialty, notably its ideas on logic applied to law, ethics and statistics. Indeed, a rather sophisticated knowledge of statistical theory on the part of the reader is important in understanding some of the arguments in the book. At times Levin goes into a rather turgid, almost Kantian style, especially in his discussion of ethical questions. In fact, he sometimes refers directly to Kant (1724-1804), notably in his discussions of racial differences in approaches to ethical questions (pages 213 ff.).

This book has a tripartite organization: "The Empirical Argument" (pages 19-159), in which Levin examines a mass of data on racial differences, especially those he believes to be caused by genetic factors. The second part (pages 163-225), "Values," has to do with ways of viewing such data from philosophical and ethical points of view. The third part (pages 229-355), "Implications," examines racial differences in law, crime and with regard to individualism and discrimination, notably with regard to Affirmative Action. The Afterword in the form of a hypothetical address by a future president of the United States consists of advice on what policies should be used when questions of racial differences are involved. The current massive immigrations from the south, especially from Mexico, is bound to bring about profound changes in the biological composition of the population of the United States on which American civilization is based, but I do not find even a mention of this important and pertinent topic in Levin's index (pages 405-415). Why?

If I had to attempt to summarize Levin's book in one sentence, it would run something like this: "There are profound, genetically determined differences in the races, especially between Negroes and Caucasians and these meaningful differences must be openly discussed and realistically dealt with in connection with educational, economic, social and legal questions."[1]

At several places (pages 14, 146 and 307) Levin mentions briefly the reputation of National Socialism as a polemic aid to those who would deny the importance of race. He does not devote nearly enough space to this important situation. Since 1933 a huge and costly effort has been directed toward the denigration of National Socialism and everything that it stood for or is alleged to have stood for. The reasons for this effort are manifold and complex.[2] It is certainly no exaggeration to say that our brutal and worse-than-useless war against Germany during 1940 to 1945 (and indeed continued by non-military means after 1945) has had a profound and protracted psychological effect on the American people and their thinking with regard to law, immigration, racial relations, education, reproduction and other aspects of national policy.

1. I have reviewed recent books on related topics in the Liberty Bell:
Jared Taylor, Paved With Good Intentions, 1992. (December 1993, pages 32-36)

Richard J. Herrnstein and Charles Murray, The Bell Curve, 1994. (April 1995, page 1-14)

Such books are especially timely and important now that President Clinton appointed last June an Afro-American, the historian John Hope Franklin, to lead an advisory board on race.

2. One reason is the need to rationalize what we Americans and our allies, including Stalin's tyranny, had done to Germany for seeking its right to economic autonomy and access to the export markets of the world; the killing of hundreds of thousands of German civilians during the destruction of cities, the starving of the German population after the war (as in 1919), the trials of German leaders in Nuremberg based on ex post facto principles foreign to Aryan legal traditions, the genocidal expulsions from eastern Germany, the gross mistreatment of German soldiers who had laid down their arms, the barbaric behavior of Soviet troops, etc. The continued denigration of the German government in power from 1933 to 1945 has been widely accepted as an ethical justification for actions and attitudes which set the scene for nearly a half century of the dangerous and costly Cold War. After 1945 the whole world could see what had been done to Germany.

Many of the people who condemn National Socialism and use it in various arguments fail to see or actively conceal the fact that various aspects of National Socialism were simply in accord with the Zeitgeist, the ideas and attitudes which were current in the world at the time. A number of examples can be used to demonstrate this. Eugenic sterilization had been well established by law in a number of countries, including various states of the United States (Indiana as early as 1907). Germany was a follower, not a leader, when it finally introduced similar laws in 1933. Interracial marriage was prohibited by a law of 15 September 1935 in Germany, nearly three years after the National Socialists came to power. Here again, Germany was a follower, not a leader, since many states of the United States had enacted similar laws, Oklahoma in 1909, for example.[3] Henry Ford's publications on the Jewish question (1920-1922) [The International Jew, the World's Foremost Problem, available from Liberty Bell Publications, $40.00 + $6.00 for postage] had an extensive influence in Europe, and specifically on National Socialism.

The unending and misleading campaign against National Socialism and Hitler's ghost has been used to bring about a demoralizing and debilitating effect on Aryans in the United States and in other countries. The wholesome instincts for self-preservation in American Aryans have been severely inhibited and impaired, largely as a result of our unwise participation in the Second World War, which hallowed some bad causes, to paraphrase Nietzsche's famous dictum in Zarathustra, "Vom Krieg und Kriegsvolke."

I would now like to select and comment on further ideas and data in Levin's book which I consider especially significant and which exemplify Levin's thinking. Levin, by the way, is heavily indebted to earlier authors, as he acknowledges in a plethora of footnotes and references.

New techniques such as magnetic resonance imaging enable investigators to determine brain size in living people. Brain size has a correlation with IQ when differences of body weight are considered (page 56). There is also a connection between IQ and brain metabolism (page 57).

Cranial capacities (expressed in cubic centimeters) are considerably smaller in Negroes than in Caucasians, while those in Caucasians and Mongoloids are similar or, as some studies have ascertained, Mongoloids have somewhat larger capacities than Caucasians (table on page 104). Levin points out that in earlier times Japan did not contribute to the development of science, but has now become a leader in technology. However, if one walks down a street in Japan or China, one constantly encounters inventions that have been taken over from Caucasian inventors, even the admixed use of the Roman alphabet in Japan.

On pages 114-116 the different roles of Afro-Americans and Caucasians in American sports are examined in some detail and explained on the basis of different body structures and mental characteristics.

Levin gives too little attention to the fact that people usually classified as "black" in the United States involve a very wide range of degrees of mixed ancestry, in many cases nearly as much Caucasian as Negro. IQs of contemporary Negroes in Africa run about two standard deviations below those of American Caucasians, while those of Afro-Americans run about midway between, that is, about 85 out of a general median of 100 (page 118). Levin generally uses the word "black" to designate Negroes, but this word runs counter to his basic thesis by identifying a race simply by its skin color, as if racial differences were simply skin-deep.

In a study of 1500 discoveries not one was made by a Negroid people. In a list of the 200 most important people in history, none was Negroid (page 119).

In a discussion of the performance of minority races other than Negroes it is pointed out that the socio-economic status of American Indians is lower than that of Negroes, but that the Indians' performance on IQ tests is higher. Jews have succeeded in all cultures "in the face of sometimes murderous hostility" and are now overrepresented in American college teaching. Such achievements refute the claim that the failures of Afro-Americans have simply been due to racism. Levin claims that "Jews have eventually been recognized (and disliked for) their exceptional talent." (Page 132.) Were they disliked only for that?

Jews have a kind of intellectual capacity which shows up well on intelligence tests of the Stanford-Binet type, but the quasi-socialist Israeli economy is "in shambles." (Page 140.) As a matter of fact, the Jewish state in Palestine has had monetary chaos in the form of several hyperinflations in its relatively short existence which have necessitated monetary reforms and the introductions of new names for monetary units. The Jewish state has also been heavily subsidized by the taxpayers of the United States and Germany. Levin claims that "Jews have very high IQs," but I would ask if they would turn out to be higher than those of Americans of, for example, Danish, Scottish or German descent if such people were identified as distinct ethnic groups rather than simply being lumped together as "white." Motivational factors and good education do contribute to higher scores on intelligence tests to a greater or lesser extent even if the evidence is quite convincing that genetic factors play the dominant role, as has long been observed by many investigators who have examined various types of evidence, such as the characteristics of identical (monozygotic) twins who were reared apart.

On page 191 Levin describes the influence of various academic authors who have argued against the importance of genetically determined racial differences. Levin believes that Franz Boas had little influence outside academic circles. He does allow, however, that Boas' famous pupil, Margaret Mead, with her "fabulations about Samoa," had a wide influence. Levin suggests that Gunnar Myrdal was the most influential thinker about race at the time he published An American Dilemma (1944).

The long chapter on crime (pages 291-332) is perhaps the most important chapter of the whole book. The chapter commences with many statistics on Negro crime, for example: Although Negroes account for only 12% of the U.S. population, they commit more than 57% of the murders and Negroes are arrested for 62% of the robberies. Negroes make up more than half of the prison population of the United States. When Negroes commit crimes they have a disproportionate preference for Caucasian victims.[4] Levin undertakes an investigation of the causes of the very high incidence of crime by Negroes, proportionately roughly ten times that committed by Caucasians. He dismisses as being of minor importance "racism," poverty and low self-esteem if they are of any importance at all. He identifies intelligence levels as the principal concomitant of crime levels. Differences in rates of crime nearly disappear when IQ is held constant, regardless of race, but low median IQ in Negroes is concomitant with their high crime rates. Other factors are also suggested by Levin, such as body types and levels of serum testosterone. The chapter on crime concludes with a lengthy discussion of the ethical and social aspects of punishment for crime.

Levin has a great deal to say about Affirmative Action on many pages throughout his book, such as the philosophical discussion on pages 333-336, where he points out that those who advocate Affirmative Action are often faced with a dilemma: If people should be judged as individuals, Affirmative

4. See my essay on "hate crime" in the Liberty Bell of January 1991, pages 55-57.

Action involves a contradictory principle, namely one that is based on identity with a racial group.

Levin speaks of a "race problem" which has been discussed constantly for the past half century (page 357). However, such discussions go back far more than a half century. Both Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln, for example, made statements in which they expressed doubts that Negroes would ever function well and constructively in American society, but Levin makes no mention of Jefferson and Lincoln.

After ten highly detailed chapters we come to the "Afterword / A Hypothetical Address by the President of the United States of America to a Joint Session of Congress and the American People." (Pages 358-366.) This "Afterword" is likely to be the most influential part of Levin's book because in it he proposes in relatively simple, clear terms what should be done in view of the continuing failure of the Afro-American component of the American population. Basically, it is an appeal for realism and candor in dealing with racial problems engendered by that failure and the resultant economic and social burdens on the Caucasian component. Levin deals in the "Hypothetical Address" with such issues as ability groupings in schools ("tracking," which Levin advocates on page 363), the biological basis of Negro failure, minimum wages and their economic effects on Negroes of poor abilities, the taxing of Peter to pay Paul (i.e., welfare burdens) and the realization that "almost everything that happens between the races has a biological component." Compare this with the statement of a German geneticist who played a prominent role during the National Socialist period: "Every interbreeding of a foreign race with a nation (Volk) leads to an altering of the biological foundations of the characteristics of this nation and its civilization." Levin has thus arrived in his book at a position (a valid one) which was expressed by a prominent German scientist over a half century ago, namely that a civilization has a biological basis. (This statement is my translation of a passage in a propaedeutic book by Baron Otmar von Verschuer, Leit- faden der Rassenhygiene, Leipzig: Thieme, 1944, second edition, a book still pertinent and well worth reading by Americans in 1997 and in need of a translation.)

Darwin, of whom I can find no mention in Levin's book, gives us a basis for defining "superiority" of a race in the famous phrase, "survival of the fittest." If Caucasians, with their "superior" ability to plan and calculate are caused by that ability to inhibit their reproduction so that their numbers are decreasing in the United States, are they not "inferior" in a Darwinian sense?

I often commence to read a book by first perusing its bibliography, and in this case the long bibliography (pages 376-404) is revealing in itself. It is replete with such names as Block, Cohn, Feinberg, Feldman, Goldberg, Halpern, Herrnstein, Itzkoff (editor of the series in which Levin's book appears), Klineberg, Montagu, Rosenfeld, Rubinstein, Wattenberg and Zuckerman. Many of these authors are supportive of Levin's positions in their works and some others are opposed. It seems to me that many Jews, having become more or less detached from their religious traditions, now seek an ethnic identity through a renewed awareness of their racial characteristics, especially their mental characteristics.[5] I believe, too, that many Jews have come to the realization that the quotas and other principles on which Affirmative Action is based are a particular threat to them, even though numerous Jews had been active during previous decades in supporting organizations and political positions which supposedly furthered the interests of Afro-Americans.

Why Race Matters is a book by a man with a facile mind and an obviously good education. It is likely to have a far-reaching influence and has already attracted a good deal of attention. Its title alone will attract a good many readers, but its imposing technical, philosophical and statistical terminology will not be readily comprehended by a wide readership. Its sometimes academic verbosity will make it acceptable in academic circles, whose long-range influence should not be underestimated. The very name of its author will gain entry for it to a number of influential offices.

5. I have translated three articles by distinguished scientists on the origins and developments of Jews as a race which have appeared in the Liberty Bell:

Baron Otmar von Verschuer, "Racial Biology of the Jews," 28 pages, August-September, 1983.

Baron Otmar von Verschuer, "What Can the Genealogist and the Statistician Contribute to the Investigation of the Biological Aspects of the Jewish Problem?", 12 pages, September, 1984.

Eugen Fischer, "Racial Origins and Earliest Racial History of the Hebrews," 27 pages, August 19884.

All three of these articles are available as offprints from the publisher of the Liberty Bell. They were first published in the valuable series, Forschungen zur Judenfrage, published by the Hanseatische Verlagsanstalt in Hamburg during 1937 to 1943.

Another valuable book on the development of Jews is: Nathaniel Weyl and Stefan Possony, The Geography of Intellect, Regnery: Chicago, 1963. (Not listed in Levin's bibliography.)

DOES THE WEST HAVE THE WILL TO SURVIVE?

That is the obvious question posed by Jean Raspail's terrifying novel of the swamping of the White world by an unlimited flood of non-White "refugees." But there is also a less obvious and even more fundamental question: Must Whites find their way to a new Morality and a new spirituality in order to face the moral challenges of the present and overcome them? THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS is the most frightening book you will ever read. It is frightening because it is utterly believable. The armada of refugee ships in Raspail's story is exactly like the one that dumped 150,000 Cubans from Fidel Castro's prisons and insane asylums on our shores in 1980 — except this time the armada is from India, with more than 70 times as large a population. And it is only the first armada of many. If any book will awaken White Americans to the danger they face from uncontrolled immigration, it is THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS. Why Our Government Is Corrupt

A Diverse Society Is Almost Impossible to Govern Honestly

by Dr. William Pierce

Well, Bill Clinton's handlers have him working on a new program to reduce the amount of racial hatred in America. The theory seems to be that if they can get Mr. Clinton to keep his trousers up long enough, perhaps he can do some things to help Blacks and Whites get along better. I doubt it.

Actually, I'm not interested in having Blacks and Whites get along better together. I want Blacks and Whites separated. In the long run, that's the only way to eliminate racial animosity, racial resentment, racial friction. And it's the only way that either race can survive in the long run. But the people who're behind all of these programs for making Blacks and Whites live with each other and like it aren't really concerned about our survival. They themselves are neither Black nor White, and their only concern is to keep both races under control.

Race relations really aren't the main thing I want to discuss. I want to talk about government programs for solving problems generally. I wonder if you have become as cynical about such programs as I have. Many people are concerned about the declining educational standards in America, and so the government has had one program after another to improve education. And of course, educational standards have continued to fall.

Look at the programs. Look at the details. Typically they're a hodgepodge of half-hearted, lukewarm semi-measures. One gets the impression that their real purpose is to fool people into thinking that the government is doing something about the problem.

Why is that? Why do things in this country continue to get worse and worse while the government spends more and more of our money on programs which are supposed to make things better

The basic reason is that as the population of the United States has become more and more diverse, the country has become more and more difficult to govern. It has become more and more difficult to devise programs that will make most people happy or that will serve most people's needs.

Consider, for example, the schools. Fifty years ago, before the schools were racially integrated by government decree, schools were either Black or they were White, for all practical purposes. In the White schools there was a reasonable degree of homogeneity, and the government could make a program for White schools based on reasonable assumptions about the students to which it was to be applied. The same was true for Black schools — but the assumptions about the needs of Black students were, of course, different from the assumptions about White students, and so the programs for Black schools would be different from those for White schools. Which is to say, the programs were tailored much more closely to the people they were intended to serve and therefore were much more likely to be successful.

Of course, even in schools where the students and teachers all were of the same race, there was a range of abilities, of interests, and of behavioral characteristics. But this range was small enough so that one program still could work reasonably well for everyone in a school system. If the programs could be tailored more closely to individual abilities, interests, or behavior, they generally worked even better. For example, there might be one program for students of high ability and one for students of average ability.

To people with a democratic turn of mind, the very idea that some students might have more ability than others is abhorrent, so even before the racial integration of the schools there was resistance to programs which were tailored to these differences. The Politically Correct idea was that everyone should fit the same mold, and one program should work for all.

After the schools were racially integrated and Political Correctness became the law of the land, we had an impossible situation. The temperaments and behavioral norms for Black students are quite different from those for White students, and the scholastic abilities of Black students are substantially lower than the average for Whites, and so programs intended to apply to integrated schools were almost guaranteed to be ineffective.

That hasn't stopped the government's program-makers from continuing to come out with one new program after another for improving America's schools, but all of real significance that has been done in the schools is a lowering of both the standard of conduct and the academic standard in order to accommodate the much greater diversity in the students.

And what has been true of the schools has been true of just about every other facet of our society. As our society has become less homogeneous and more diverse, it has been harder and harder to devise programs which work well. Programs have necessarily had to become less specific and more general in order to accommodate a more diverse population, and to the extent that programs are less specific they are less effective, as a rule.

It's not just that greater diversity makes it harder to solve problems: the greater diversity is itself the cause of many of the problems. The problem of racial hatred which Mr. Clinton has been pretending to address recently is an excellent example of this. Why do we have so much racial conflict and racial antagonism in our society today? It is because the government has insisted on increasing the racial diversity in every sector of our society, has insisted on bringing more and more non-Whites into the country and then forcing us all together, whether we want to be together or not. It is diversity and forced mixing which cause race hatred, nothing else.

There are a number of organizations in the hate industry in this country: organizations such as the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and Morris Dees's Southern Poverty Law Center. These organizations make money from hate. They keep track of what they call "hate crimes," and they tell their supporters that hate in America is increasing, so please send money so they can fight it. The more hate they have to report, the more money they make. It comes as no surprise, therefore, that all of these hate-industry organizations are strongly in favor of more "diversity" in America and more forced mixing. They know what it takes to bring in contributions from their supporters.

Mr. Clinton, who is in the pocket of these organizations, is working on a new program to combat hate, he says, while at the same time he is promoting more "diversity" and more mixing.

Why do we have so many of these phony programs, these unrealistic and unworkable programs, which seem to be designed more to fool the public into thinking that the government is doing something than actually to solve the problems they purport to address?

Is it not because the whole system of government in this country has become crooked? Isn't it because the politicians who dream up these programs and administer them are people accustomed to lying to us and pretending to believe what they don't believe and pretending to be what they aren't? Isn't it because the people who give us the programs that are supposed to improve our educational system understand that there's not really much that can be done to improve education without addressing the race issue, without addressing the fact that racial integration is at the root of the failure of our educational system, and as long as they are not allowed to address this issue all they can do is go through the motions and try to fool the public? Isn't it because Bill Clinton, crooked though he is, is smart enough to understand that the racial friction and hatred can only grow as he pushes for more racial "diversity" in American life, because that is what his handlers demand, and so all he can do is pretend to deal with the problem?

And why do we have a crooked and ineffective government, when we desperately need a government that is honest and competent? Why must we put our lives in the hands of crooked politicians, who only pretend to be concerned with solving the problems which beset us, when we desperately need real leadership? Why is the system corrupt?

Is it not because the system is manipulated by the people who control the news and entertainment media in this country? Is it not because the media have gained such a powerful grip on the whole political process in America that they can virtually dictate to the politicians? Every politician who offers himself as a candidate for public office knows that the number of votes he receives will depend on the way in which the media present him to the public. Whether he wins or not will depend almost entirely on the image of him which the media create.

Bill Clinton is a perfect example of this. He has palled around with drug dealers and gangsters throughout his political life. His own brother was convicted and sent to prison for selling cocaine right out of the governor's mansion in Little Rock while Bill Clinton was governor of Arkansas. His habit of sending Arkansas state troopers to scout up women and bring them to him was well known among his associates long before the Paula Jones case. The media people certainly knew about his drug connections and his use of Arkansas state employees to satisfy his sexual appetite. If they had revealed these things to the American people in 1992, if they really had made an issue of these things, Bill Clinton never would have been selected as the Democrat Party's candidate. If the media had made an issue of the fact that Bill Clinton was leading pro-Viet Cong demonstrations back in the 1960s when 58,000 young Americans were being killed by the Viet Cong, he never could have been elected.

But the media chose not to make an issue of these things, because Bill Clinton is exactly the sort of man they want in public office: a man without principles or morals, a man who will do whatever seems advantageous to him — and in particular will do whatever the media bosses tell him to do in return for their support. Now some of Clinton's immoral and illegal activities are beginning to come out. The media are beginning to tell us about some of Bill Clinton's activities, although certainly not about all of them, because for one thing he cannot be President for a third term and for another thing it's their way of keeping him under control. By keeping the pressure on him, by keeping him worried about the Paula Jones case and the illegal campaign contributions and a few other things, they keep him constantly aware of his dependence on them. If the media began harping on all of the immoral and illegal activities in which Bill Clinton has been involved they could have him impeached. They could have him out of the White House and in prison. And he knows that. So he is not likely to try to do anything contrary to the wishes of the media bosses during the next two and a half years.

Bill Clinton is an example, but the process of media control is basically the same for all of the politicians. And so the real question for us is, why do the media bosses use their control over the political process in America to damage and weaken America? Why did they push for an immigration policy which is flooding America with non-Whites? Why do they push for more and more racial "diversity," when it is clear that these policies are destroying not only our schools but our whole society?

We know the answer, don't we? I've talked about it many times. The answer is that the people who control our mass media, our media of news and entertainment, are not our people. They are not people who share our interests, our concerns, our values. They are an alien people, with different interests, different concerns, different values. They are a people unto themselves. They are Jews.

Every time I'm on a radio or television interview program and I mention this fact, every time I begin talking about the Jewish control of the media, the host will try to deny it or make light of it or change the subject. They know who signs their paychecks, and they will lie to protect those people. But the facts really are undeniable.

Let's look at some of those facts. The two biggest media conglomerates in the country, the two biggest media empires, are Time-Warner-CNN and the Disney Company. Time-Warner-CNN is controlled by Gerald Levin. Through the Time-Warner-CNN media empire he controls a vast array of news and entertainment media: publishing, films, and television. And Mr. Levin is Jewish.

The Disney Company, which also owns the ABC television network and lots of other things, is controlled by Michael Eisner, who also is Jewish. The Disney Company was built by one of our people, by Walt Disney, and it used to produce healthy and wholesome entertainment. But then Mr. Eisner got control of it, and now it's just part of a Jewish media empire: debased films, television, and publishing.

Or consider newspapers. The big three, the three most politically influential newspapers in the United States, are the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, and the Washington Post. All are owned by Jews. They were not created by Jews originally, but they were taken over by Jews and they are now owned by Jews. All three of them. Quite a coincidence, isn't it, when you consider that Jews make up just two and a half per cent of the U.S. population?

Or consider news magazines. There are really just three news magazines in this country of real significance: Time, Newsweek, and U.S. News and World Report. They're all under Jewish control. All three of them. Time is part of Mr. Levin's Time-Warner-CNN empire. Newsweek is owned by the Jewish Washington Post Company. And U.S. News and World Report is owned by Mortimer Zuckerman, who also just happens to be a Jew.

If you doubt any of this, if you're not absolutely certain about the Jewish control of the mass media — and I can understand that some of you may be uncertain about this, because the media lie about it and try to mislead people — if you have any doubt at all about what I've told you, check it out for yourself. If you think, for example, that maybe Mr. Levin is an Irishman instead of a Jew, or that Mr. Eisner may really be a German or a Scotsman instead of a Jew, check it out. The facts aren't really all that difficult to find. If you think I haven't told you the truth about who owns U.S. News and World Report, check it out for yourself. If you think that the films coming out of Hollywood that promote interracial sex and homosexuality, that tell us that we owe the Jews a living because of the "Holocaust" — if you think these films are produced by anyone but Jews, check it out. The facts are available for anyone with eyes to see.

The Jews control the media. But why do they use their control of the media to corrupt our government and destroy our society? Why when a Jew like Eisner takes over a non-Jewish film company like Disney, does he immediately change the type of films the company produces? Why does he switch from wholesome films like Snow White and Fantasia to films like The Crying Game and Priest, films which promote homosexuality and racial mixing? Why do these powerful Jews promote things like gangsta' rap in a way deliberately intended to corrupt young White people? Why does MTV (which, incidentally, is owned by the Jew Sumner Redstone, through his media holding company, Viacom) specialize in such degenerate entertainment aimed at our young people?

They do it because that is their nature. They have always done that sort of thing. They always seek control, they always seek power, and then they use that power to corrupt and destroy. That's what they're doing to America now. And if you want to know what you can do about it, what we can do about it together, join the National Alliance. You can contact us at the address below.

THE ESSENCE AND SECRETS OF FREEMASONRY

by

Theodore Fritsch

(Translated from the German by Capell Powell)

The conception of freemasonry in the minds of many millions of people is that of an ideal league or confederacy of humanity which, filled with a noble spirit of freedom and human sentiment, occupies at the same time the post of a voluntary custodian of the highest human talents, and is desirous of leading its adherents towards spiritual and mortal ennoblement. The following are the best known watchwords of the freemasons: Tolerance, freedom, equality, and brotherliness. Who would not approve of such watchwords used in the right sense?

And thus the Masonic Lodges always enjoyed a good reputation, which they have known how to enhance by practicing a wisely administered charity, and by investing their proceedings with a certain amount of ceremony and mystery. They are also intelligent enough to attach importance to a worthy mode of living on the part of their brethren, and to proclaim good will and mollification in their public activities. Yes, and to the superficial observer it really appears as if this freemasonry constituted the sound core of a moral community, and contributed to restrain both our public and social life within well-considered limits.

If one also takes into consideration the fact that freemasonry enjoys the reputation of helping and supporting one another, and that none of their people is allowed to fall, it is quite comprehensible that they should be the recipients of respect and sympathy from all quarters. Yes, it has become easy to understand how, in all parts of the world, educated and cultured men, and certainly not the basest sort, gather in multitudes to enter this secret fraternity to find there solace for body and soul. Perhaps it is precisely the idealist, those who can no longer find consolation in the stereotyped articles of faith, those who yearn for a glorified and ideal religion and spiritual direction — perhaps it is precisely those who see in the lodge a new temple behind whose sacred mysteries they believe life's deepest secrets lie hidden, and where theywill be able to find the path which leads to perfect discernment.

We could find fault with those, who, impelled by such motives, fly towards the new light? If freemasonry was really all that these light-hungry should imagine it to be, who would not praise and bless it. But quite recently very gloomy shadows have fallen athwart this sunny picture.

Nothing less has been asserted and maintained than that world freemasonry bears the guilt of being one of the chief contributory causes of the World War, that in its lap the heinous plans where hatched, and that its mighty organism, the ramifications of which extend over the whole earth, provided the machinery by which passions were inflamed in all directions, the necessary men were placed in the necessary positions, and armies composed of millions were set in motion in all parts of the world in order to annihilate a single nation — that nation which has the temerity to direct the searchlight of its incorruptible spirit into all dark corners wherever the latter are to be found, whether in the church — in Jesuitism, in Jewry — or in Freemasonry.

Are there any grounds for bringing such a charge against freemasonry? Gentle natured people recoil at the mere thought of such an accusation; the fearless say: "Let us see."

Shall freemasonry perhaps prove to be something else than the all-reconciling league of welfare and humanity?

First of all, one question; If this league desires the well-being of all, the fraternization of the nations, the diffusion of spiritual light and of a noble culture, the victory of justice in "all walks of life," why then does it envelop itself in deep secrecy? What has it to hide if it indeed wishes good to all?

The reply will be made that secrecy in this case is only harmless artifice, it is intended to wet the curiosity. Is, however, such artifice worthy of so great and distinguished a league and is it even necessary? And if indeed there is no secret to conceal, why then does the league exact such terrible oaths, as the following for example, from those who are about to be initiated:

".... that if I do not keep my word, I submit to the punishment, namely that my lips shall be burned off with a hot iron, my hands hacked off, my tongue torn out, my throat cut, and finally that my body shall be hung up in a lodge of my brother freemasons, during the ceremony of initiating of a new brother, to the disgrace of my infidelity and to arouse horror amongst the rest; and shall afterwards be burned, and the ashes thrown into the air so that not a trace shall remain to remind anyone of my treachery. So help me God and his holy gospel."

Is it necessary that men, whose only desire is good, should exact — and take — such terrible oaths? Are men who think nobly capable of devising such senseless atrocities, far less practicing the same? Here we stand face to face with a puzzling inconsistency, a veritable secret behind freemasonry. We will endeavor to get to the bottom of it.

The origin of freemasonry — as one can ascertain in every Encyclopedia, is to be traced back to the workings of the stonemasons and builders of the Middle Ages. It was from these that one learned for the first time the rules, usages, and knacks of the handicraft as the former evolved out of the practical application of the art of building to the erection of the mighty cathedrals of that period. The wisdom of the guild was evolved in a certain amount of secrecy, and its is probable that the sound culture and good advice as to the manner of living also received attention, and even that the deepening of the spiritual feeling soon extended into the religious life — all the more so as the church at that time, endeavored to stifle all spiritual development, and threatened any attempt in that direction with the inquisition. Thus the lodges and workshops became havens of refuge for human spiritual freedom; and it is comprehensible that it was not long before men of all stations of life sought membership in the lodges, and that they gradually expanded into nurseries of a deeper spirituality and of a nobler culture. Also those who were persecuted by the Church as heretics because they were the friends of freedom in religious practice and belief, such as the Waldensians, the Apostolic Brethren, the Beghards, etc., sought safety in the lodges. The nature of the earlier lodge is denoted by thefollowing sentence taken from Anderson's Constitution Book:

"The Mason is bound to obey the moral law, and if he has a correct understanding of the art, he will become neither a dull atheist nor an irreligious libertine. Although in olden times, the mason was in duty bound to practice the religion of this land or of that nation, whichever it might be, it is now considered more useful to leave them free to follow their own individual opinion, but to pledge them to observe that religion in which all men agree: namely, to be good and true men or men of honor and rectitude, however much they may differ from one another by the convictions which they hold, or the applications which they give themselves. By this means freemasonry becomes the central point of unity, and the instrument for promoting true friendship amongst people who otherwise must have remained permanently separated from one another.'"

That the origin of the lodges is to be found in the honorable medieval building guilds is beyond all doubt. If in modern times the attempt is made to ascribe a much greater age to freemasonry, and to refer it back to the time of the building of Solomon's temple, this can be dismissed at once as one of these forgeries, the essence and aim of which will soon become clear to us.

When numbers of respectable and prosperous men from all classes of society began to find their way into the lodges of freemasons, it was only a question of time for prosperous Jews to find their way in as well. This happened about 150 years ago and sealed the fate of freemasonry. By the sanctioning of admission of Jews, the lodges proved that they did not possess that profound wisdom and experience of life with which they had been credited. It was their aim, by means of an honorable fraternization of humanity, to build bridges across the contrasts of all orders, classes, privileges, nations, and races, and they believed that they were not justified in excluding the Jew. They were not aware that the Jews presented a quite unique case, and that it was not merely a harmless confession of faith, which separated the Jew from all other men, but that the Jew "of his own free will separated himself from all other men, and declined to fraternize in any way with them.

If they had only taken the trouble to examine the rabbinical writings even superficially, they would have been forced to the recognition that the essence of Jewry is based on a coarse refusal to associate with other men; yes, even on an openly expressed hostility toward all non-Jewish nations which aims at the disintegration and destroys the latter. They would then have known that Jewry is based upon hatred toward all the rest of mankind, a fact, which Tacitus had already recognized (odium generis humani). Consequently, no other being is less adapted for universal fraternization than the Jew. He is the born "Anti-Freemason," yes, the born Anti-Man.

Through its failure to recognize this fundamental truth, which can be proved in a thousand facts, freemasonry is threatened with ruin. One does not sin with impunity against eternal laws and against the primordial understanding of life. Here is not the place to establish or confirm this perception in every direction; the Hammer publications include a long list of comprehensive works, which go to the very bottom of the subject and corroborate what is here maintained. See the Riddle of the Jew's Success, The False Gods, Sins of High Finance.

But freemasonry, in spite of its lofty conceptions and noble intentions, meets with disaster because of its superficial and defective knowledge of racial psychology, philosophy, and religious science. It has disregarded the pronouncements of the greatest spirits of all times upon this deepest of all questions. Otherwise freemasonry would have known that it was practically in the Jew where its most deadly enemy was to be found.

After a number of Jews had obtained entry into the lodges, what always happens in similar cases, was not long in happening in this case as well; since the Jews are much more closely united among themselves than are the members of any other human community, they invariably combine to form within any league into which they penetrate a wheel within a wheel or inner league, whose silent mission it is to support its own secret members, to place them in supreme control. This secret operation of the silent conspirators is accomplished all the more easily because the artless Aryan members have not the slightest idea of what is going on. The latter consider themselves in duty bound — precisely on account of the Masonic principle — to display, if possible, more than the customary good will toward the Jew in order to convince him of their tolerance and freedom of prejudice. The honest brother freemason believed that he was best acting up to his exalted principle by sowing the Jew exceptional consideration — not only in the lodge, but in the outside world. He was prepared at all times to favor the "unrecognized" Jewish human brother, to protect him against prejudices, to accord him a much higher measure of affection than he accorded to other fellow-men, with whom he was far more closely united both spiritually and racially.

Thus, assisted and advanced from all sides, it was not long before the Jews secured all the leading positions. There was no lack of the requisite cunning and power of dissembling amongst this ancient trading community, for they have inherited for thousands of years a talent for playing a false part before other men in order to deceive and over-reach them.

Accordingly, in the very midst of unsuspecting freemasonry, a monstrous state of things was brought about in all stillness and secrecy; after a few decades nearly all the leading positions in the Grand Orient were occupied by Jews, so that a man like Matthias Erzberger, who was certainly impartial in this respect, wrote in his Recollections "When the Freemasonic Grand Orient of Paris met, it is practically synonymous with meeting of the chief committee of the Israeli Alliahoe."

Where, however, the Jew sets foot, he secures, not only the power for himself, but the opportunity for instilling, at the same time, his own peculiar spirit in everything — the spirit of decomposition, of demoralization, of corruption. And thus one is entitled to say: since the Jews penetrated into the lodges, Freemasonry has changed its very nature. If it was a league to promote the fraternization of the nations, it is, at the present moment, a direct agent for making the nations hostile to one another.

The Jews had long recognized what an excellent tool the mighty league of Freemasonry would be if it could be made subservient to Jewry. And this they have accomplished. When a candid English freemason admitted years ago that "Freemasonry is a mighty means for maintaining English mastery over the world," he might well have substituted the word "Jewish" for the word "English," for at the present time it is impossible to draw any definite boundary between what is English and what is Jewish. Proud England lies completely in the fetters of Jewish High Finance, as does haughty France. And in both cases this is due to Jewish manipulation of freemasonry.

Today the nations are slowly beginning to see. Deep mistrust of the freemasons has arisen throughout extensive circles; terrible accusations have been brought against them; it is impossible not to see that one day this smoldering indignation must burst into flames.

In all events, the freemasonry question is the focus of public interest at the present moment, for freemasonry forms the secret axis around which all political proceedings revolve. And the freemasonry question cannot be separated from the Jewish question; today, both blend into one — because the leading personalities in both cases are the same. In any case, the freemasonic question cannot be understood without accurate knowledge of what Jewry is. For the roots of that public spirit, which is universally operative at the present time, are grounded in Talmudism.

By means of the organization of freemasonry, Jewish high finance has been able to secure for itself the entire influence over all governments. For several decades no politician has been able to occupy any high and responsible position in the state who has not possessed the sanction of Jewry and freemasonry. Even Dr. Streseman had to become a freemason in order to make himself eligible for the post of Foreign Minister.

However, by this insolent and relentless pursuit of the Jewish principle of violation and outrage, the whole system has reached the brink of what can be tolerated, the over-taut strings threaten to snap. Moreover, the dull masses have taken alarm. Jewish greed and lust for power are displayed in such a shameless fashion at the present moment that they are apparent even to the most stupid and unobservant. Jewish vanity helps as well to spoil the receipt and entice the otherwise cunning Jew to perpetrate acts of incredible stupidity. Instead of remaining silent, satisfied with the fact that, owing to secret overreaching, all the threads which control the whole of freemasonry had passed into Jewish hands, Jewish conceit could not refrain from boasting that the entire order of freemasonry was a Jewish creation and could be referred back to the building of Solomon's temple (although it is well-known that it was not Jewish but Tyrian builders who erected the temple). Thus, the American rabbi, Dr. Isaac Wise, actually went so far as to declare in public in 1855:

"Freemasonry is a Jewish arrangement of which the history, degrees, offices, passwords and declarations are Jewish from beginning to end."

Deficiency in delicacy of feeling prevented the Jews from perceiving that freemasonry was exposed and its value destroyed for all time. For the artless brother freemason may well become more reflective when once they suspect that they are laboring under Jewish knout, and are being misused by being harnessed to the Jewish triumphal war in order to promote Jewish business. It is fortunate indeed that vanity and insatiable greed bring blindness and stupidity as an aftermath — for such being the case, we may rest assured that the Jews, in their infatuation and conceit, will finally destroy their own work.

From what has already been stated and confirmed, the following conclusions can be drawn: if we wish to be truthful, we are compelled to admit there are two kinds of freemasonry, an ancient and honorable kind, which was in real earnest about its moral aims, and a modern and spurious kind, which has in view the infatuation, demoralization, subjugation and spoilation of honest humanity. The old freemasonry was Aryan and Christian, modern freemasonry is Jewish. To arouse the consciousness of this fact in the minds of the millions of unsuspecting brothers who are attached to their lodges by sheer idealism, is the first task. It is the only way in which to safeguard them from becoming, in their artlessness, the servants of evil effort, and from assisting unconsciously in the undermining of culture and morality.

The freemasonic question, therefore, stands in the foreground of all questions of the present time, and it is a matter for congratulation when a man so meritorious as General Ludendorff turns his attention in this direction. He has published a paper Destruction of Freemasonry by the Revelation of its Secrets. Ludendorff is only acquainted with the spurious freemasonry, and turns upon it with justifiable indignation. He says the "secret offreemasonry is the Jew," and asserts that the training of the members as "artificial Jews" is the mission of the lodges. There is much that is true in this remark, for the lodges of recent times have understood, in a masterly manner, how to convert their adherents to Jewish views without the said adherents being in the slightest degree aware of what was taking place.

Ludendorff does not disdain the trouble of giving detailed and accurate information concerning the various hues of freemasonry, and their distribution, degrees, formalities of admission, oaths, etc. If, at the same time, the essence and aims of freemasonry of today are not touched upon, many will be only too glad to learn all they can about the first mentioned formalities (some of the passages, which we quoted earlier in this essay, were taken from Ludendorff's book, in which the actual sources of information are also given.)

He makes disclosure as well about the great signal of distress, criticizes the master-virtues, and other customs and impositions, and calls upon all to join in the war of deliverance from such unworthy fetters.

Deliverance is doubly difficult because most of the prisoners themselves are not clear as to the situation; and finally, those who do understand, consider that they are restrained from any action by the oath which they have taken — those terrible oaths which menace body and even life. And thus they do not dare shake off the chains which have been laid upon them.

At this junction, the following question calls for discussion; Are oaths and vows binding in all cases, even in those cases where they have been taken under false suppositions? If the person who takes them has been deceived as to the aims to which he pledges himself? If the obligation of the person who takes the oath, is abused by the attempt to extend it so as to cover transactions, which offend against moral consciousness and honorable conscience?

The modern lodge, a forgery in spirit and in form, deceives its adherents on important points; it conceals from them the fact that ultimately the lodges are under the supreme direction of the Jews, and are misused exclusively to further the particular aims of the Jews; it conceals from them the fact that the Jews occupy a unique position in the Order, inasmuch as they, by their own acknowledgement, belong to another and far more firmly established conspiracy, from which they neither wish to free themselves, and the aim of which is hostile to all men who are not Jews — hostile also to the non-Jewish Brother-Masons. The Jewish supreme command, therefore, by thus taking advantage of the ignorance of all freemasons who are not Jews, is guilty of downright deceit and treachery toward the latter. Can one indeed swear to be true to anyone who disregards the fundamental laws of human civilization and himself at infidelity?

Accordingly, no upright freemason can feel his conscience in any way burdened if he refuses to obey those set in authority over him when the latter are themselves guilty of breach of faith and treachery.

Ludendorff calls for the annihilation of freemasonry; it is quite certain that if it continues in its present condition, it will go to ruin. The Jews are born destroyers, and have, up till now, invariably cheapened and destroyed everything which they have laid their hands on, they will also in due course destroy freemasonry.

It will be a cause of regret to many that an organization of such marvelous construction, which came near to being a blessing and a benefit to mankind, should fall so miserably into decay. Accordingly the question arises: can freemasonry reform itself? Can it be led back again to the old and honorable path?

It is for the freemasons to discuss this question amongst themselves. It is for them to look around and see if they cannot find a man in their ranks who possesses sufficient insight, strength and courage to carry this work to a successful conclusion.

The task is an indescribably difficult one, for the innocent freemasons in their blindness have placed all the power in the hands of the Jews, the traitors. It would require more than normal human strength and farsightedness to break this demonical ban. And yet, that spirit, which idealism and the noblest men have hitherto attempted to instill into freemasonry, deserves ultimately to become reality. Make the attempt.

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Cornelia Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. The Enlightenment of National-Socialism

by

David Myatt

Preface

The following collection of essays (some of which have appeared elsewhere) briefly deal with the enlightenment of National-Socialism — with how National-Socialism expresses wisdom, and the essence of our true humanity. National-Socialism can enlighten us — it can give us, as individuals, insight, enabling us to think and act wisely.

The present collection of essays express the spiritual essence of National-Socialism — its significance for us, and its importance for our future as a thinking species. This present collection — and its companion collection, The Numinosity of National-Socialism [to be published in the December issue of Liberty Bell] — is intended to complement the works which I have already written and which, together, are intended to form a basic introduction to the revolutionary world-view of National-Socialism.

D. Myatt, Oxford, 106 yf

I: The Numinous Significance of Adolf Hitler

The key to understanding the numinous significance of Adolf Hitler is the realization that an individual is, in essence, 'the cosmos in evolution'. However, to be meaningful, this realization has to arise from personal experience/insight, rather than from the intellectual abstraction that has come to dominate the modern world.

What this expression, 'the cosmos in evolution', means is that individual consciousness, individual being, is a striving by the cosmos to become more aware — a means whereby this supra-personal consciousness becomes real. This takes being, and thus the individual, far beyond materialism, and 'the self' — beyond Jungian 'individuation'. With individual death, such a consciousness — having made a connection to the cosmos — becomes part of the whole that is that cosmos; there is a living-on, a different type of being where the hitherto separate consciousness expands to become the cosmos, and thus its awareness of itself.

In a very important sense, Adolf Hitler made an evolutionary leap — he restored the connection between the Aryan race and the cosmos, and he made further evolution possible, for other races as well as for the Aryan. In effect — although few will probably understand what is meant — Adolf Hitler was the cosmos striving to evolve, in consciousness.

To achieve this new type of being, this becoming, we as individuals need to become a unity, to grow. A simple analogy would be an oak tree. To fully develop, from a sapling, and fulfill the potential latent within itself, an oak tree must be firmly rooted — it requires nourishment from the soil, as it requires a favourable, temperate, climate: warm sun and rain-water. If the soil is bad or poor, and thus lacking in nutrients, then its growth will be stunted. The same with the climate: the oak will flourish best in the climate it has evolved in and has adapted to. These things are so because the tree is organic, it is a living organism, dependant on its surroundings — on Nature. Its life-cycle, its growth and so on, are dependent on certain things. That is, it belongs — it is a part of Nature; it is connected to its surroundings in particular ways.

All these things apply just as much to us, as individuals, although the modern world, with its complexity and abstractions and artificial ways of living, has caused many individuals to lose their understanding and knowledge and feeling about these things. To grow, to evolve, as individuals, we need to draw nourishment from our environment, as we need the right conditions in which to flourish. We cannot grow properly if we do not have these things — we cannot thrive and so fulfill the potential latent within us. Of course, lacking all or some of these things, there may well still be life — but it is a stunted, poor, unhealthy, even diseased, living, like most of modern life.

As individuals, we need to belong, to root ourselves firmly in a particular time and space. We need to grow from a particular soil. We also need an awareness of our own heritage — of our ancestors, of our culture; of our own place, as an individual, 'in the scheme of things', of how we came into being, and how we evolved to be as we are. The most important aspect of this awareness is race — a knowledge of who we are; where we, as individuals, have come from; and what makes us distinct, from others, as an oak tree is distinct from a conifer, and has evolved in a different way, and needs different things. We draw strength from our soil, and our past, and a part of this is an awareness of our unique racial psyche.

Adolf Hitler restored us to our unique racial psyche; he explained that we belong in a special way to our race, and that in order to evolve, to grow, we must be aware of these things, and live in such a way that we become strong and healthy again. In National-Socialism he gave us the practical means to do all these things. Furthermore, he showed us that we should, and can, evolve even further — toward the gods; we should, and can, make this connection between ourselves, as individuals, and the consciousness of the cosmos. His legacy is this knowledge, the inspiration of his life and that of his followers — and the practical means to achieve this goal of becoming divine and creating a Golden Age, a new way of being.

Of course, many people have little or no awareness of the numinous, and thus cosmic, importance of Adolf Hitler and National-Socialism. To such people, National-Socialism is merely something 'political'. They see or know of only the external, and have no insight into or knowledge of the essence of National-Socialism, of what it really means.

National-Socialism was always more than a political movement. It was always, from its very beginnings, a practical means of Aryan salvation as it was always fundamentally spiritual — concerned with Aryan health, well-being and advancement. National-Socialism was always more than a German racial nationalism. However, it has only been since the immolation of 56 yf that the spirituality and numinosity of National-Socialism has become more widely known. Indeed, in a profound way, this immolation and what preceded it, made National-Socialism, and Adolf Hitler, more spiritual and more numinous — they made them archetypal.

National-Socialism and Adolf Hitler are thus now archetypal symbols — possessed of psychic energy. They represent our unique racial psyche as Aryans. As such, National-Socialism and Adolf Hitler live on, and always will live on, because they represent something which cannot any longer be destroyed by laws, by propaganda, by lies, by terror, by war. They are a means whereby we, as individuals, can restore that connection between our own being, and the being of the cosmos — a means for us to root ourselves, to consciously understand our place 'in the scheme of things', to grow vigorously and healthily, and to evolve still further. They are a means whereby we can undertake and complete that inner transformation, and achieve that unity and harmony (in the simplistic Jungian sense, of 'individuation') which is, for the present, the priority of our existence as individuals, and which alone enables us to strive further and become divine.

However, this does not mean a new mysticism, or some sort of new mystical life-style, lived by individuals concerned only with their own 'inner transformation'. It means action within the world; it means a noble concern for one's folk; it means striving and achieving. The spirituality of National-Socialism, the numinosity of Adolf Hitler, provide the individual with inspiration, with inner strength, with inner resolve, with a means to transform themselves — but it is important to understand that this is only the beginning; it is not the goal.

The goal is for these things, and thus the evolution of individual consciousness they represent, to continue. This means creating conditions necessary for such things to flourish on a large scale, within the folk and the race as a whole; it means the creation of a new type of society which encourages a new way of living. This new way is dynamic and positive — a continuation of the evolutionary order that is civilization — which expands ever further the frontiers of consciousness and being. This requires those individuals who have completed the inner transformation that is necessary, to strive, and struggle, to create a type of society, a type of civilization, where such people as themselves are the norm, not the exception. This type of society is, by definition, a National-Socialist one. This struggle, or the pursuit of excellence, is so because it is necessary — the only means whereby the frontiers of consciousness and evolution can be continued. It is, quite simply, the meaning of individual life, and what is required for such future evolution. From such a civilization, new ways of living, and new societies, will arise, and the process of evolution will continue, built upon the foundations of the previous generations.

In the fundamental sense, this is the evolution of the cosmos itself — and this process of aware individuals creating such civilizations and societies, and those new civilizations producing individuals even more aware and even more evolved, is how the cosmos becomes more aware, more conscious.

Before Adolf Hitler and National-Socialism, this process of evolutionary development was in danger and in decline. Adolf Hitler, through National-Socialism, made us aware of what is necessary for such development to continue, as he and his followers struggled and fought against those forces which represented such a decline. These forces, were they to be triumphant, would mean the end of such evolution — the end of cosmic being and awareness.

Adolf Hitler was a means whereby the cosmos could restore the balance necessary for such evolution to continue. This, in essence, is the numinous significance of Adolf Hitler. National-Socialism expresses the essence of evolutionary development, for the beings that we, as a species, are. Thus the fundamental importance of race, individual noble character, and the pursuit of excellence — these three things express the essence of our evolutionary development, as a species, as they alone can ensure the continuation of that development. As explained elsewhere: "National-Socialism is an acceptance and celebration of the difference and diversity that Nature has produced, and it wants to nurture that diversity and difference and so keep alive, and keep evolving, those things which make us unique and 'human'."

All the races that make up our unique, human, species can have a Destiny, because it is possible for these races to evolve further. However, not all races may have a Destiny — it depends on them, on their level of awareness, and even on whether or not they can become aware of themselves in the ways necessary for such evolution to become real. 'The ways necessary' are enshrined in National-Socialism, and were in a sense a gift from the cosmos (or a gift from 'Providence') to the Aryan race in the form of Adolf Hitler. In this sense, they are an expression of the Destiny of the Aryan. But they are also much more, and in a way even few National-Socialists understand. They are much more because the fundamental principles and ideals of National-Socialism — of participating in and creating our further evolution — are applicable to all races. That is, they are a means, or could be a means, whereby these other races can acquire an awareness, and participate in and create further evolution for themselves. For this to occur, the notion of racial evolution, of separate identity, of ethnic nations led by noble individuals dedicated to the advancement and well-being of their own people, needs to revolutionize the world. In the cosmic sense, this is the importance of Adolf Hitler — he has given our whole species a means to acquire and fulfill a Destiny, to participate in the evolution of the cosmos.

II: National-Socialism: Wisdom in Action

Most people waste their lives, as these days the majority of people behave and act in an immature way, devoted as they are to selfish and/or anti-evolutionary pursuits. By thinking and acting in such a way, such individuals deny their very humanity — they deny what makes them special, as beings or 'life-forms'. We, as humans, are different from the other life-forms that exist on this planet because we alone possess the faculty of 'Thought' — we alone are 'thinking-beings', aware of ourselves.

In contrast to most people today, a National-Socialist is someone who thinks, acts and lives in a mature and wise way, for a National-Socialist is someone aware of their duties and responsibilities. This is so because National-Socialism fully expresses what it is to be human. That is, the 'world-view', or philosophy, of National-Socialism makes us, as individuals, aware of our place 'in the scheme of things', as it expresses the nature of what it is to be an individual, a 'thinking being': someone possessed of consciousness and the ability to think and therefore to judge. Wisdom is fundamentally a conscious understanding, which itself arises from reflection, a 'thinking-about' our place, as individuals, in 'the scheme of things'. A wise individual is someone who acts upon what has been understood — someone who has judgement and thus a mature character.

National-Socialism expresses our humanity because National-Socialism alone expresses what being human means. Being human means being aware that we are 'thinking beings'; understanding how we came to be so; and what is necessary for this awareness to continue. We have developed this awareness because we have evolved — or rather, because the processes of Nature have developed us. These processes have resulted in our present highly evolved species — and they have produced, within this species, different races, and within each race, different individuals who possess a unique character of their own. That is, we have become 'human' — thinking-beings — because over tens of thousands of millennia the innate, creative, forces of Nature have changed us, producing diversity and difference.

The present races that have evolved express our unique humanity — they express what it is to be human. Further evolution — a further development of our humanity — means building upon these foundations, extending them in a positive way. This means celebrating, preserving and then extending the difference and diversity that Nature has produced. Anything other than this is anti-evolutionary and inhumane — a rejection of our real humanity.

National-Socialism understands and affirms the special importance of this racial diversity and difference, as it wishes to preserve, celebrate and extend it. This is a preserving and extending of the essence of our humanity. In effect, National-Socialism expresses wisdom — it enshrines the results of thinking-about humanity, and what is necessary to preserve and extend our humanity. Anything which does not preserve and extend such things, is anti-evolutionary, and unwise.

Anything other than National-Socialism is anti-evolutionary, unwise and fundamentally in-human because only National-Socialism truely expresses the wisdom of humanity itself.

A National-Socialist, thinking, acting and living according to the principles and ideals of National-Socialism, is a wise and mature individual.

III: The Thousand Year Reich

It is a common misconception that a National-Socialist State, or Reich, means dictatorship and tyranny. This misconception has arisen because it has been ceaselessly propagated by those who are opposed to National-Socialism and who therefore have a vested interest in trying to discredit National-Socialism. These propagandists are those who govern, or who support, all modern societies. It is these modern-day 'Western' societies which are — despite outward appearances and despite labels like 'democracy' — dictatorial and tyrannical, for they are so afraid of the reality of National-Socialism that they outlaw it, persecute and imprison National-Socialists, and never allow anything other than their own anti National-Socialist propaganda to be taught, discussed or read.

The reality of National-Socialism is that a National-Socialist State, or Reich, is a genuine, united folk-community where a real healthy freedom exists and is maintained. Fundamentally, a National-Socialist State exists to create and maintain a National-Socialist society. Such a society has a definite aim, a purpose. This is the well-being and advancement of its folk, the communities comprising that folk, and the individuals within communities. In effect, National-Socialism seeks to create an Aryan society, an Aryan way of living. This arises from the National-Socialist belief that we, as Aryans, can only be truly healthy, and only truly free, if we live in an Aryan culture, according to our own Aryan customs. Thus the Institutions, the customs, the structures, of such a society would reflect and represent what is Aryan and what can aid Aryans to strive for and live a better, more healthy life. Fundamentally, National-Socialism seeks to create a society where those in it willingly desire to strive for and live such an Aryan life, and where they realize that such a National-Socialist society can be a means to enable us, as individuals, to contribute in a positive way to evolution — to continue the story of Aryan progress and advancement, and so create a renaissance, a new 'golden age'.

The duty of a National-Socialist is to convert other Aryans to the noble idealism of National-Socialism, so that these Aryans can willingly and joyfully participate in the creation of a National-Socialist society. A National-Socialist society cannot be imposed on other Aryans against the will of those Aryans, as once created it cannot be maintained by 'force', terror, or repression. A National-Socialist society by definition is a society of Aryans co-operating together for their own advancement and well-being: anything other than this is not National-Socialist. The reality is that a National-Socialist society is a genuine folk-democracy. Real democracy is an expression of the desire, or will, of a living, organic, community to determine its own future and destiny. Contrary to a popular misconception, the Greek word from which our word 'democracy' derives, does not mean 'people' in general, regardless of race. Rather, the Greek word 'demos' originally meant 'the clan' as distinguished from their 'chiefs'; in later Attic, the word came to signify 'the community' itself, distinguished as such a community was by kindred ties. In both these senses, a distinct, racial, community is meant — where there is a common heritage, a common culture, and common customs. Thus, in its correct sense, a 'democracy' is a society, composed of members of the same race, where the ultimate authority resides in the folk-community. In brief, a real democracy is an ethnic nation where the folk of that nation co-operate for their own well-being and advancement, for the common good.

The folk-democracy of National-Socialism is where a folk-community of Aryans have a common desire to create a genuine Aryan society and so determine their own destiny. By doing this, they are restoring to themselves a genuine freedom — the freedom to once again live in a natural Aryan way, and thus be healthy and able to live well-balanced, harmonious lives in accord with their natural customs. It is the aim of a National-Socialist State to make this Aryan freedom real. Real freedom is not about selfish, hedonistic choice in isolation; it is about being part of a living, organic, community — a folk-community — and being aware of one's duties and responsibilities to that community, for by fulfilling these duties and responsibilities one enables that community to thrive and advance itself, thereby enabling the individuals of that community to thrive, advance and live in a healthy way. In essence, real freedom is an understanding of our own humanity — of how we, as individuals, are part of something greater than ourselves; it is a knowledge of our place 'in the scheme of things'; of how we arose, how we can thrive; how we can live in a healthy way, and how we can continue to evolve and become something greater than we are.

National-Socialism gives the individual this understanding and knowledge, and in doing so it enables the individual to fulfill the evolutionary purpose of their lives. This understanding and knowledge is of the importance of race, and individual, noble, character; of the importance of excellence, of idealism, of working together for the common good. As explained elsewhere: "National-Socialism is an acceptance and celebration of the difference and diversity that Nature has produced, and it wants to nurture that diversity and difference and so keep alive, and keep evolving, those things which make us unique and 'human'."

The National-Socialist Reich

National-Socialism is revolutionary because it views all present-day societies as anti-evolutionary, and anti-Aryan. Therefore, it wishes to start again and build a completely different society to any previously existing or presently existing.

The most immediate aim of National-Socialism is to create or bring about an independent homeland where Aryans can live according to their own customs, among their own people, and dedicate themselves to creating a truely Aryan society for themselves and their descendants. It is only within such a homeland that an Aryan Reich can be established, and it is only the desire of those in that homeland which would enable such a Reich to begin to build a National-Socialist society.

A National-Socialist Reich would mean that all Institutions, customs (or 'laws'), agencies and so on, would place the well-being and advancement of the Aryan first. This would mean that such structures would encourage what is National-Socialist. In practice, this means implementing National-Socialist ideals — and the most important ideals are fostering noble individual character, and fostering racial well-being for the whole folk. Accordingly, a National-Socialist society would seek to: (1) nurture noble character in individuals by making honour, loyalty and duty ideals to be striven for and upheld; and (2) make individuals aware of their Aryan heritage, their Aryan customs, and how important it is for individual Aryans to place the interest of their race and folk-communities before their own self interest and pleasure.

This first aim means that a National-Socialist society would encourage strong, characterful, honourable individuals who possess judgement. The aim of a National-Socialist is most certainly not to strive to produce individuals who rigidly conform, who blindly obey and who lack individual judgement. Rather, the aim, in respect of individuals, is to produce and encourage individuals who can accept responsibility, who want to take on responsibility and who truly possess judgement.

The only restriction a National-Socialist society would place on individuals is that they must be responsible, and thus do their duty — toward their race, their folk-community and thus toward National- Socialism itself. That is, they place the common Aryan good before their own self interest if ever there is a conflict of interests. By doing this, they are living and acting in an honourable and thus Aryan way. There is therefore a noble purpose to their lives which transcends satisfying their own desires and feelings. By living and acting in such a way, individuals enhance and fulfill the purpose of their lives. This is so, because National-Socialism affirms that there is higher, nobler, purpose to life — that life means more than just satisfying or striving to satisfy our individual desires, feelings and material goals. That is, National- Socialism affirms that there is more to life than simply indulging ourselves or striving for a personal 'happiness'. It further affirms that this purpose is a noble one — a striving for self-excellence, and excellence for one's race and folk-community. This is an evolutionary, positive, and thus harmonious continuation of that diversity which Nature has striven to produce over thousands of millennia — race, and individual character.

This affirmation thus expresses the wisdom of thousands of years of civilization — it enshrines our understanding and awareness: our humanity. This humanity is essentially an awareness of ourselves as conscious beings, able to reflect upon and think about the past, the present and the future and our place, as individuals, in 'the scheme of things'.

National-Socialism places this obligation of duty upon individuals because only by individuals consciously and willingly accepting this duty can what is noble survive and flourish. What is noble is civilization, and only by individuals honourably striving to do their duty can evolution continue, and harmony be preserved. Only by this — and thus by National-Socialism — can our true humanity be expressed.

The task of a National-Socialist society is to make the individuals within that society aware of this duty — and thus make them realize that life has a glorious, noble purpose and if we as individuals strive for this our own life is enhanced. National-Socialism aims to make individuals aware of the possibilities that exist, or can be created, for higher living. A National-Socialist society would not seek to coerce or force individuals to conform to its ideals and principles, on pain of punishment, for that would be contrary to what National-Socialism desires to achieve. What National-Socialism desires is a society where the majority within that society willingly and enthusiastically follow its ideals and principles because they understand or feel or realize that by doing this their own lives will have purpose and meaning. However, National-Socialism is also practical, and accepts that there will always be some individuals who for whatever reason will not wish to accept and strive for its ideals even after these ideals have been explained to them. Such individuals would be detrimental to National-Socialism and accordingly, a National-Socialist society would wish to exclude such people from the benefits of such a society. It would therefore exile them, allowing them to leave that society and live elsewhere, in other societies. A National-Socialist society would not herd its opponents into 'penal' institutions of any kind. It would give them a choice — "Stay, and thus aid our noble Cause, thus aiding us to create higher ways of living and a noble society — or, choose exile in another land and so live as you wish..."

It is important to understand that in a National-Socialist society exile would be the chosen method of dealing with those who for whatever reason opposed such a society. Anything else is a waste of resources, and ignoble. Exile is the most practical and Aryan way. Furthermore, a National-Socialist Reich would reform the present un-Aryan penal system — with its ignoble concept of prisons — and the whole modern, un-Aryan, system of 'justice' where imprisonment is mandatory for certain 'crimes'.

Coercion, and 'punishment', of opponents is against the principles of National-Socialism because National-Socialism seeks a society where individuals willingly and enthusiastically co-operate together for the common good of that society. It seeks to create a noble attitude and a sense of joyful well-being among individuals. The apparatus of 'terror' and suppression creates the exact opposite. Furthermore, National- Socialism is optimistic and positive about individual nature and character — it believes that if Aryans are told the truth, made aware of what it is possible for them to do and achieve, then the majority will, if correctly led by noble leaders, 'do the right thing'. One of the fundamental purposes of a National-Socialist organization is for noble leaders to explain and show, by example, what National-Socialism really is; what obligations a person has, and what doing one's Aryan duty would mean. In essence, National-Socialism affirms a fundamental truth of civilization — that if individuals understand their duty, have a noble purpose, and willingly co-operate together to achieve that purpose, then a better world, a new Golden Age, can be and will be created by their efforts. In a National-Socialist society, only if an individual consistently shirked their noble duty to their comrades and their race, and/or showed themselves to be ignoble and selfishly irresponsible, would 'the force of law' be invoked against that individual — and this because such individuals, by doing such things, would undermine the harmony and well-being of that society, and thus negate the noble purpose and hard work of the other members of that society.

The National-Socialist Revolution

For a National-Socialist State, or Reich, to be created, there has to be a revolution brought about, in a specific place or country, by a significant number of Aryans who are National-Socialists. Such a revolution means the principles and ideals of National-Socialism have been willingly accepted and championed by that significant number of Aryans. This in itself means a National-Socialist organization or movement converting Aryans to the noble National-Socialist cause.

For National-Socialism the State is a means, not an end. The means that the State is created and used for is the well-being and advancement of the race, and the individuals of that race.

The first task of any National-Socialist government is to ensure its own security and survival from its external enemies. This would mean the Armed Forces being willing and able to defend National-Socialism. To do this, such Forces would have to be, or become, National-Socialist organizations, composed of those who believed in National-Socialism and who were dedicated enough to defend the principles and ideals of National-Socialism. That is, their first loyalty would be to National-Socialism itself.

The second task of a National-Socialist government is to ensure its own security from any internal threat. This means aiming to convert, or win over, those who are not National-Socialists, and exiling those opposed to National-Socialism — that is, giving them the opportunity to leave the territory, or territories, of the new National-Socialist State.

The third task of a National-Socialist government would be to Aryanize its territory or territories, repatriating or exiling all non-Aryans, possibly re-settling them in other lands.

The fourth task would be to abolish all old and un-Aryan Institutions, laws, agencies (such as the Police) and replace with them with Aryan and National-Socialist ones.

The fifth task would be to begin to create a new Aryan society founded on noble idealism, and thus implement National-Socialism. This would mean, among other things, the following. (1) Creating a new type of State economy which abolished speculation, and the slavery of interest, and which ensured the economic well-being and prosperity of the new society. (2) Implementing the National-Socialist ideal of social justice — creating a better, more caring, more healthy, more harmonious society for Aryans to live in. (3) Creating National-Socialist educational institutions dedicated to producing healthy, noble, individuals aware of their Aryan heritage and culture. (4) Reforming agriculture by implementing sound ecological practices.

The fifth task would be to create a better, more beautiful, environment for Aryans to live by, for example, caring for and nurturing Nature. The sixth and final task would be to begin to work toward pursuing higher, idealistic and numinous goals such as the exploration and conquest of that final frontier which is Outer Space. One aim would be the future creation of a National-Socialist Galactic Empire. By pursuing such a numinous ideal as this a higher, more advanced, people would be created naturally, and the National-Socialist Reich itself would last for far more than a thousand years.

National-Socialist Germany

All the above principles and ideals formed the basis of National-Socialist Germany and were used to begin to implement a National-Socialist revolution in this, the first National-Socialist State, or Reich. This revolution was undertaken against difficult odds, and was never completed. The war which the enemies of National-Socialism had agitated for at the start of this Aryan revolution, forced the German National-Socialists to fight for their very survival. Despite this, the years between 44 yf [1933] and 50 yf [1939] were glorious ones. Adolf Hitler transformed German society and brought about a renaissance, a new Golden Age. He solved the economic problems of Germany, and brought dignified work to millions of unemployed; he created a better, more healthy, more socially just society; he instilled into his people a new sense of joy, of purpose, of idealism. He brought about a revolution in people's attitudes — with people co-operating together for the common good. He restored the Aryan values of honour, loyalty and duty. Instead of persecuting his opponents, he converted most of them, becoming the most popular, the most loved leader the world has ever known.

There has been a relentless, lying, hateful propaganda campaign conducted against National-Socialist Germany, and Adolf Hitler, for over sixty years. The present decadent, materialistic and tyrannical System which exists in all countries where Aryans are in the majority, had and still has a vested interest in trying to discredit National-Socialist Germany. To this end, recent 'history' has been re-written; documents forged (one has only to think here of the ignoble lie of the 'holocaust'); counterfeit 'memoirs' produced, and so on. Respectable academic 'historians' — who are part of and who bow down to this System — have laboured over many years to mislead, falsify, and propagandize. Their diatribes appear at regular intervals, and re-enforce the myths and lies which have been created about National-Socialist Germany.

It is neither necessary nor desirable to produce here, within the confines of this article, the vast amount of evidence which still exists — despite the attempts by many to destroy it — to substantiate the claims made above about National-Socialist Germany. It is not necessary for one simple reason. The ignoble lie of the 'holocaust', its worldwide propagation, its acceptance by 'historians' and the majority of Aryans, shows not only the power of the enemies of National-Socialism, but also their ignoble, deceitful methods. Nothing such people say or write can be believed; just as those who support or propound such a monstrous lie cannot be believed. The acceptance of this lie, by historians and others, means that anything such people write or say about that period, its history and those involved with it, is suspect. Their books cannot be trusted; their methods cannot be accepted.

Despite all that the enemies of National-Socialism have done to try and discredit it, its noble idealism lives on, and will live on. And it is this noble idealism which will assuredly create, some time in the future, the next National-Socialist Reich. Such a Reich is capable of lasting for more than a thousand years.

IV: The Truth About National-Socialism and Race Hatred

The fundamental practical and immediate aim of National-Socialism is to create an Aryan homeland — for Aryans only — where Aryans can live freely, express their unique cultural identity and live according to those principles of natural justice which alone can ensure the health and vitality of Aryan individuals and Aryan folk-communities.

National-Socialism does not preach or teach any kind of 'racial hatred'. It simply states the reality of Nature: that different races have different abilities and different needs. These different abilities — given by Nature and result of hundreds of thousands of years of evolution — cannot be changed by social programmes, by political dogma or by enforcing dictatorial policies of racial integration which effectively undermine and destroy Aryan identity and Aryan culture. National-Socialism desires the creation of an Aryan homeland because it affirms that any other way of life is unhealthy, unproductive, against Nature and leads to and encourages disharmony, strife and chaos.

The reality of National-Socialism — as distinct from the lies about National-Socialism ceaselessly propagated by its enemies — is that it is concerned primarily with the welfare and future of Aryans, and does not desire other races to be or become 'second-class' citizens or slaves in a future National-Socialist nation. Rather, it desires the complete geographical separation of Aryans from all non-Aryans as the only means of creating a civilized, harmonious way of life for Aryans. Neither does or would National-Socialism encourage the 'genocide' of other races — that is a lie (like the lie of the 'holocaust') ceaselessly spread by our enemies in order to discredit National-Socialism and in order to brainwash Aryans into accepting anti-Aryan, and anti-evolutionary, policies of racial integration. Instead, in its relationship with other races, a National-Socialist society — once established and secure — would encourage those other races to become aware of their own racial identity and uniqueness, so enabling them to create their own ethnic States dedicated to the well-being and advancement of those other races.

The present-day opponents of National-Socialism are not other races — but those people, political parties, interest groups or Governments which seek to undermine Aryan identity and Aryan culture by pursuing social and political policies detrimental to Aryans. The enemies of National-Socialism are those who oppose the creation of an Aryan homeland, and those who oppose the racial principles and ideals of National-Socialism.

Since National-Socialism is an expression of the nobility of the Aryan, it represents all that is best, and thus civilized, about the Aryan. National-Socialism is a conscious affirmation of those values which are central to civilized conduct — honour, loyalty and duty. National-Socialism is also an expression of what it is to be human — it expresses the essence of our humanity, of how we came to be 'thinking-beings' (the evolution of races) and what is necessary for this evolutionary development to be preserved and extended. These things are race, and racial character as evident in the individuals of a particular race.

Fundamentally, National-Socialism seeks to create an Aryan homeland and within that homeland the right social, political and spiritual conditions to enable civilized individuals to flourish. National-Socialism seeks to encourage civilized conduct as it seeks to create a civilized way of life for Aryans. Accordingly, National-Socialists champion and represent that noble idealism which is essential to civilization.

The primary concern of National-Socialism is the Aryan — with creating a better future for Aryans. National-Socialists are motivated by a genuine concern for their own people, their own heritage and culture. They wish to make their noble idealism real. They wish to inspire other Aryans with this noble idealism. This is positive, healthy and civilized.

National-Socialism desires the Aryan to fulfill that unique Destiny which National-Socialism believes has been given to the Aryan by Nature. This Destiny — essentially the creation of a Galactic Empire — involves the Aryan and only the Aryan. It does not require the subservience of other races, or their destruction. It requires the creation, by Aryans, of an Aryan homeland and then the creation of a truly Aryan way of living and thus the emergence of a new civilization greater than any existing hitherto.

The immediate aim of National-Socialism is to make real, for the majority of Aryans, the goodness, the nobility, the hopes and aspirations which we Aryans hold in our hearts. Whatever our enemies may say — whatever their propaganda may express — this is the simple truth about National-Socialism which they, for their own evil ends, are trying so hard, so brutally and so hatefully to suppress.

(1)Conspired with David Hale and Jim McDougal to defraud the Small Business Administration of $300,000.

(2) Used Arkansas state police for personal pwposes.

(3) Abused his position as governor to extort sexual favors from employees, in some cases amounting to coercive rape.

(4) Directed state police to fabricate incriminating evidence against political opponents including Steve Clark, Terry Reed, and Larry Nichols.

(5) Knew about drug importation and distribution by a friend and campaign contributor, Dan Lasater.

(6) Allowed drug money to be laundered through ADFA.

(7) Appointed and protected Arkansas medical examiner Fahmy Malak, an incompetent who repeatedly obstructed justice by declaring politically motivated murders to be "suicides" or "accidents."

(8) Has never accounted for his actions during 40 days he spent behind the Iron Curtain during the Vietnam War.

(9) Tipped off Governor Jim Guy Tucker about an upcoming criminal referral.

(10) Violated Arkansas campaign finance laws.

(11) Violated the Constitution by signing into law an ex post facto law, a retroactive tax increase.

(12) Fired RTC chief Albert Casey to allow his friend Roger Altman to monitor and block Whitewater investigations.

(13) Fired FBI director William Sessions to prevent an autonomous FBI from investigating the suicide of Vince Foster and other scandals.

(14) Fired all U.S. Attorneys to appoint Paula Casey, who prevented Judge David Hale from testifying against Clinton.

(15) Offered state troopers Federal jobs in return for their silence about Clinton's crimes.

(16) Blocked Justice Department indictments after Inspector General Sherman Funk found "criminal violations of the Privacy Act provable beyond reasonable doubt" when former Bush employee files were searched and leaked to the press.

(17) Appointed friend and felon Webster Hubbell to number three position in Justice Department in order to be able to block Whitewater criminal referrals by RTC investigator L. Jean Lewis.

(18) Blocked the criminal trial of Representative Ford, a Tennessee Democrat.

(19) Appointed a campaign activist to head the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, without the mandated "advice and consent" ofthe Senate, to derail a probe of his and Hillary's financial dealings.

(20) Committed witness tampering by causing bribes to be paid to Webster Hubbel.

(21) Committed witness tampering by causing a job with the NSC to be offered to former Trooper L.D. Brown in return for Brown's silence on several Clinton crimes.

(22) Blocked Justice Department prosecution of Arthur Coia a union Mob puppet and a heavy Clinton financial donor.

(23) Made fund-raising calls from the White House, a Federal property.

Bill Clinton is under investigation by an Independent Counsel and by Congress, although the chances that he will ever face justice are admittedly slim to none.

Al Gore

(1) Made fund-raising calls from the White House, a Federal property, which is a felony.

(2) Participated in an illegal fund-raising event at the Hsi Lai Temple where campaign contributions were laundered through nuns.

Al Gore is under investigation by Congress. There is a faint possibility that as a last resort the Clintons might sacrifice Gore in the same manner that Richard Nixon threw Spiro Agnew to the wolves to try and get the howling pack off his tail but this possibility is remote.

Hillary Clinton

(1) Accepted a $100,000 bribe, laundered through cattle futures, from Tyson Foods Inc.

(2) Speculated in Health Care industry futures while overseeing legislative reform of same.

(3) Failed to correct false testimony by co-defendant Ira Magaziner in the Health Care Task Force trial.

(4) Ordered members of the Health Care Task Force to shred documents that were the target of a court probe.

(5) Obstructed justice by ordering the removal and shredding of her lover Vince Foster's documents on the night of his death.

(6) Hired hoodlum Craig Livingstone to conduct a political intelligence operation against her opponents.

(7) Defrauded the U.S. Treasury of more than $10 million by funneling Community Development Financial Institutions grants to financial institutions in which she has an interest.

(8) Ordered Treasury officials to cover up the fraud by fabrication of false documents.

Hillary Clinton is under investigation by an Independent Counsel. Her wrongdoing has been so utterly blatant that there may in fact be some kind of token indictment in the future, but if so it will all be very carefully staged and will not address certain key aspects, most especially the whole subject of Vincent Foster's death, which will be avoided like the plague. Hillary will be acquitted in a carefully selected, corrupt judicial venue and with a carellly screened and packed jury.

Webster Hubbell

(1) Convicted for defrauding the federal government (FDIC and IRS).

(2) Executed obstruction of justice in the Justice Department in several cases: The Inslaw case, and the RTC criminal referrals on Whitewater.

Webster Hubbell resigned, and was subsequently convicted and served a brief spell of imprisonment in a luxurious "Club Fed" prison for corruption.

Ira Magaziner

(1) Violated federal law when he held Health Care Task Force Meetings in secret and refused to release documents.

(2) Lied in court about the composition of the Health Care Task Force.

A criminal referral by Judge Royce Lamberth was not acted upon by the Clinton-appointed U.S. Attorney Eric Holder

Bernard Nussbaum

(1) Obstructed justice in the Foster suicide investigation by blocking access, removing documents, lying about his removal of documents, and by retrieving Foster's pager from Park Police.

(2) Attempted to quash a Whitewater investigation at the RTC through White House liaisons. Bernard Nussbaum has resigned.

George Stepbaaopoulos

(1) Accepted a $600,000 loan below market interest and with insufficient collateral from NationsBank, a bank having business before the Clinton Administration.

(2) Lied to Congress during Whitewater hearings.

(3) Obstructed justice by attempting to have Whitewater investigator Jay Stephens at the RTC fired.

George Stephanopoulos has resigned.

Mike Espy

Accepted bribes fiom Tyson Foods Inc. and other companies which were under regulatory control of his Agriculture Department, including sports tickets, liquor, and alleged sexual favors of White prostitutes.

Mike Espy has resigned and last week was indicted on 39 counts of public corruption.

Roger Altman

(1) Lied to Congress during Whitewater hearings.

(2) When caught, lied to Congress about having lied to Congress.

(3) Instructed Ellen Kulka and Jack Ryan at the RTC to block the Whitewater investigation by L. Jean Lewis.

Roger Altman has resigned but is still carrying out assignments for the White House

Ron Brown

(1) Negotiated a $700,000 bribe with the Vietnamese government in exchange for classified trade information and favors.

(2) Accepted a $60,000 bribe from Dynamic Energy Resources.

(3) Sold seats on foreign trips to DNC contributors.

Ron Brown was under investigation by an independent counsel when he died under mysterious circumstances in a plane crash.

Les Aspin

Was responsible for the death of Army Rangers in Somalia.

Les Aspin resigned and died before he could be held accountable in a public forum.

William Kennedy and David Watkins:

(1) Fabricated charges against White House Travel Office personnel to have the business taken over by Clinton friends.

(2) Coerced FBI and IRS agents into complicity with this scheme.

Kennedy and Watkins have resigned.

Catherine Cornelius

One of Bill Clinton's many White House mistresses, Catherine Cornelius was involved in Travelgate as a financial beneficiary and later removed documents from White House Travel Office. Because those documents later became the subject of a trial against Office Director Billy Dale, that became an obstruction of justice. Ms. Cornelius is still maintained discreetly in the White House as "confidential adviser to the President." What Hillary thinks of this and other similar arrangements is a topic of endless, fascinating speculation at Georgetown cocktail parties.

Patsy Thomasson

(1) Lied to Congress about the composition of the Health Care Task Force and the size of its budget.

(2) Obstructed justice when she removed documents from the office of Vince Foster.

(3) Fabricated charges against White House Travel Office personnel to have the business taken over by Clinton friends.

Patsy Thomasson is still a "trusted friend and adviser" to Hillary Clinton. (Hillary probably figures what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. There is supposedly at least one curvaceous White House "staffer" who boasts that she has "done" both the President and the First Lady.)

Margaret Williams

(1) Obstructed justice when she removed documents from the office of Vince Foster.

(2) Solicited and accepted a $50,000 campaign contribution from Johnny Chung in the White House in return for Hillary Clinton meeting with Chinese businessmen.

Margaret Williams has resigned.

Joshua Steiner

Liedto Congress about conversations with White House personnel about the RTC.

Joshua Steiner has resigned.

Lloyd Cutler

(1) Lied to Congress about the contents of redacted documents.

(2) Attempted to withhold vital information from Congress, a felony.

(3) Obtained a confidential Treasury report and showed it to witnesses before they testified before Congress in the Whitewater hearings. Lied to Congress when he denied having coached witnesses.

Lloyd Cutler has resigned.

Mack McLarty

(1) As chairman of Arkla, was responsible for the bribing of public utility officials.

(2) Conspired with Democratic Congressional Leadership to block access by investigators to vital documents in a Congressional hearing.

Mack McLarty escaped prosecution when a lobbyist working for him was convicted of bribery.

Harold Ickes

(1) Broke into New York Republicau headquarters in 1970. Has never been indicted for this crime which was similar to what the Watergate Plumbers spent time in jail for.

(2) Worked for Mafia-controlled labor unions.

(3) Set up a $56 million slush fund by Union Mobsters for use in Bill Clinton's 1992 campaign.

(4) Arranged meeting between Mob figures and Clinton campaign contributor Arthur Coia and Bill Clinton.

(5) Lied to Congress during Whitewater hearings.

(6) Improperly discussed a $500,000 contribution in a memo to a businessman, using White House computer, telephone, and fax.

(7) Attempted to obstruct justice by orchestrating an approach to Whitewater witness Beverly Basset Shaffer.

Harold Ickes was fired.

Bruce Lindsey

(1) As treasurer for the Clinton gubernatorial campaign in 1990, he signed withdrawals from Ferry County Bank, the president of which was indicted for conspiring to conceal these withdrawals from the IRS and FEC.

Marian Bennett

(1) Covered up credit-card fraud by USIA inspector General staff.

(2) Launched a politically motivated investigation of Radio Marti, a staunchly anti-Communist radio station run by the government.

Federico Pena

State and Federal contracts were awarded to companies in which he had a financial interest.

The Janet Reno Justice Department found insufficient evidence to appoint a Special Counsel.

Henry Cisneros

Lied to the FBI about payments to former lover.

Henry Cisneros is under investigation by a Special Counsel.

Janet Reno

(I) Fabricated charges of child molestation against the Branch Davidians in Waco, Texas.

(2) Ordered the use of military equipment and personnel against citizens of the United States.

(3) Ordered the use of chemical warfare agents against citizens of the United States, specifically napalm and poison gas.

(4) Refuses to appoint special counsel to investigate clear evidence of Democratic campaign fundraising illegalities.

Janet Reno remains m power.

Robert Reich

Lied to Congress when he wrote that there were no memos circulating in the Labor Department instructing staff to gather political material against the Contract with America. Such memos were later published.

Robert Reich has been replaced.

Donna Shalala

As Chancellor of the University of Wisconsin at Madison instituted speech codes which were found to be unconstitutional in Federal court. Instituted thought-police Star Chamber proceedings to drive politically incorrect people off campus.

Donna Shalala remains in power.

Carol Browner

Used the EPA to campaign against Republicans running on the Contract with America, an illegal use of the executive branch for political campaigning.

Carol Browner is under investigation by Congress.

Roberta Achtenberg

(1) Ordered HUD lawyers to silence citizens who spoke out against planned housing projects.

(2) Had HUD staff threaten Allentown County to withdraw a "Use of English Language Encouraged" ordinance.

Roberta Achtenberg has resigned.

Deval Patrick

(1) Used extortion to force banks to give preferential treatment to minorities.

(2) Was found by the Supreme Court to have been abusing his position to subvert the election process in a manner that created more safe "black" seats.

Deval Patrick has resigned.

Bruce Babbitt

Paid a penalty for violating campaign finance laws during his 1988 presidential campaign.

Valerie Lau

(1) Started a criminal probe of Secret Service agents John Libonati and Jeffrey Undercoffer after they testified that the Secret Service was not the source of a list used to compile FBI files transferred to the White House in Filegate scandal.

(2) Provided confidential depositions of White House staffers to White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler ahead of Whitewater hearings in 1994.

Howard Shapiro

(1) Leaked information to the White House Counsel's office that FBI agent Dennis Sculimbrene had revealed in a confidential FBI interview that Hillary Clinton hired Filegate operative Craig Livingstone.

Hazel O'Leary

(1) Accepted $25,000 dollars from Johnny Chung in return for meeting with members of the Chinese Government.

(2) Paid outside consultants to prepare a list of "hostile reporters."

Eric Holder

(1) As a U.S. Attorney, stonewalled repeated criminal referals of Clinton administration em ployees by courts of law and by Congress.

Eric Holder was promoted to Deputy Attorney General.

Larry Potts

(1) Issued a shoot to kill order against the Weaver family near Ruby Ridge, Idaho.

Larry Potts was promoted by FBI director Louis Freeh.

Anthony Lake

(1) Gave the green light to an illegal arms pipeline from Iran to Bosnia The pipeline was reportedly used to smuggle drugs.

(2) Lied to Congress about the illegal pipeline. Anthony Lake withdrew his name from consideration for director of the CIA.

John Huang

(1) Committed espionage on behalf of Lippo Group and the Chinese government.

(2) Facilitated payments fron the Chinese government to Bill Clinton and the DNC through Charlie Trie and others.

John Huang has resigned and is refusing to testify to Congressional investigators.

Summary: The only Clinton Cabinet secretaries who are not under investigation for criminal acts and have never had criminal allegations raised against them in public are: (1) Richard Riley, Secretary of Education, (2) Madeline Albright, Secretary of State.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

On the 18th Amendment (Prohibition): "Very few Americans were sufficiently sane to perceive that they had repudiated the American conception of government and had replaced it with the legal principle of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat,' which was the theoretical justification of the Jews' revolution in Russia."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

Israel or America?
The ADL and the Establishment Jewry in North America.

By
Dr. Alexander Jacob

One of the most formidable pressure groups in North America today is the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith. The ADL was founded in 1913 with the objective of fighting antiSemitism and has offices in both Washington, D.C., and Jerusalem. In Canada its counterpart is called the League of Human Rights headed by the psychologist, Dr. Karen R. Mock. Established as a sort of Jewish defense league of the B'nai B'rith, the ADL however publicly denounces the more terroristic Jewish Defence League which was founded in 1968 in New York by the rabbi, Meier Kahane. Shortly after the assassination of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, for instance, the ADL issued a report on "Extremism in the name of religion: The violent record of the Kahane movement and its offshoots," which forms a supplement to its earlier 1994 report called "Extremism in the name of religion: The violent legacy of Meir Kahane". But, in fact, reading the regular news reports of the ADL (available on the Internet) one wonders what real reason they could have to opposing the JDL when the targets of their criticism are mostly the same as those of the JDL. For instance, when Marlon Brando made a remark on April 5, 1996, that Hollywood was run by the Jews and saw to it that the Jew would never be represented as a "kike" stereotype whereas they had no qualms about frequently portraying the "nigger", "the greaseball", "the chink", and "the sliteyed dangerous Jap", the JDL sent a message on its Internet website beginning: "You are a disgusting, fat, Jew-hating whore" and ending: "We're going to make the rest of your life a living hell". At the same time, Brando was also attacked in a report by the ADL, where Abraham H. Foxman, the National Director of the ADL, ended his denunciation of Brando's outspokenness with the sentence: "Mr. Brando owes an apology to the Jewish men and women who work in Hollywood for vilifying them and to all Jews for his stereotyping and use of an antiSemitic epithet".[1] The ADL are thus one with the JDL in their fight against antisemites but differ in the methods they would employ against their enemies, the former preferring legal methods and the latter more direct violent ones. The ADL's report stops short of threats but relies rather on the psychological force that the Jewry have, especially over the past fifty years, infused into the terms 'antisemitism' and 'stereotyping'. Both the JDL report and the ADL one, however, reveal the bluntness of the Jewish hatred of anyone that exposes the exploitative social and economic methods employed by the Jews.

The Jewish Defence League, we may briefly recall, was founded as a defense militia for the Jews against attacks from blacks who were beginning to revolt against the Jewish exploitation of the underprivileged.[2] Later, it widened its activities to demonstrations and terroristic attacks against the Soviet government as well as, quite recently, the Arab activists in America. The ideology of the JDL was comprehensively outlined by Kahane in the several apologetic works that he wrote in the early seventies, Never Again: A Program for Survival, Los Angeles, CA, 1971, Time to Go Home, Los Angeles, CA, 1972, Our Challenge, Radnor, PA, 1974 and The Story of the Jewish Defence League, Radnor, PA, 1975. Railing against the decadence of the modern Jew's liberal and socialistic preferences, Kahane insisted that the Jewry can be saved from the coming wrath of the European world only through a rediscovery and consolidation of their distinctive identity. All attempts at assimilation into the mainstream of the western affluent society (as well as into that of a communistic one) are futile since they dilute the Jewishness of the Jews and make them hateful in the long run to both gentiles and orthodox Jews alike. The JDL thus professes, in general, a repudiation of the capitalist decadence of the western liberal countries in favour of the establishment of a holy orthodoxy among the Jews. The assimilated Jews who have "succeeded" economically in the New Land must sever their alliance with what Kahane considers to be a gentile enemy and make every effort to leave the western nations where they live in the diaspora now and return to Israel. Israel itself must be aggrandized territorially to include all of the Biblical lands of Judaea, Samaria, Jerusalem and Golan and the Transjordan (even though these lands have for centuries belonged to Arabs). Israel must also be a religious state and not a secular democracy and must regard itself as a chosen state that acts as a model and leader to the other nations of the world.

However, it is clear from a study of the Jewish "religious" dogmas themselves that Judaism is not a system of universal ethics, but rather a tribal code for the preservation of a people despised and exiled from the beginning of their recorded history, that is, from the time of the settlement of Abraham's tribe in Sumeria.[3] Given the animosity between the Jews and their several host peoples, it is not surprising that Judaism, both in its Old Testament and Talmudic forms, is preponderantly a quasireligious glorification of resentment and hatred. Kahane himself half admits to this fact when he remarks that > it was at Sinai that the creation of a peculiar and separate Jewish people took place, having a unique and different way of life; that there was an inevitable cultural clash with their neighbors and with those conquerors who attempted to impose a different way of life upon them.[4]

A little earlier he even points out that the rabbis have traced the etymology of the name 'Sinai' to the Hebrew sinah:

> Why was (the mountain) called Sinai? Because, from there, came forth hatred (sinah -Heb.) to the world.

The question that immediately arises from an understanding of these peculiar Jewish origins is how a people whose ethnic distinctiveness arose from animosity can ever claim to act as a Solomonic arbiter of international politics.

Whereas the JDL focuses its ambitions more directly on the triumph of Israel, the task of consolidating and protecting the Jewish power in America and the West is delegated to the ADL. Unlike the JDL which advocates segregation and a return to Israel of the decadent diaspora Jewry before Israel can dominate the world as a 'guide to the nations', the ADL represents a more avaricious "established" Jewry which seeks to continue its domination of western society through assimilationism. Given the historical fact that the major reasons for antisemitism are those which manifest themselves when the Jews infiltrate European society and begin to control it through their financial networks, it should be seriously reconsidered which of the two organisations represents a greater danger to western society. The Jewish assimilation has produced not only the exploitation of blacks which sparked the black militant antisemitism of the sixties but also, through the course of a century (that is, since the emancipation of the Jews in the European countries in the latter part of the nineteenth century) a steady vulgarisation and commercialisation of western culture. We may remember that it was precisely the Jewish attempts at assimilation that spurred the first major philosophical antisemites in Germany such as Richard Wagner and Eugen Duehring to an antisemitic stance, since the participation of Jews in traditional European culture invariably brought about the decay of the latter. Today, controlled as it is by big business and international finance, culture — which is by its very nature indigenous and rooted in the soil — is diluted and prostituted to mass audiences who have little artistic discrimination and are no longer able to distinguish between true national culture and the garish artefacts of multiculturalism. Not surprisingly, the classical culture of the west recedes into the background and bows to the popular at every turn. What is most alarming about this atrocious social phenomenon is that, coupled with the educational indoctrination being conducted by the ADL and the League for Human Rights, the aristocratic faculty in men which originally produced high culture is deliberately emaciated and left to wither away completely. This spiritual emasculation of the European mind is the inevitable effect of Jewish assimilation and, if we remember Kahane's account of the ancient historical origins of Zionism, the ultimate purpose of it.

Even a brief review of the mode of operation of the ADL will reveal the insidiousness of the methods which the assimilated, "Establishment" Jews employ for ends which are ultimately not unlike those of the JDL — namely the establishment of the Jewry as the pilots of international politics. For instance, on February 14, 1995, the B'nai B'rith issued a demand that a U.N. report on racism, xenophobia and intolerance be changed in its wording since it had referred to the fact that antisemitism is "compounded by the economic power of the Jews" and is caused because "certain adherents of Judaism continue to treat Christ as an imposter". But the Jewish hatred and fear of European Christianity hinted at by Kahane is endorsed by the B'nai B'rith itself. On the occasion of the Congressional hearings on the Religious Equality Amendment,[5] for instance, it firmly opposed formal religious worship in government schools because, as Tommy Baer, international president of the B'nai B'rith, put it, "Prayer, religious exercises and religious education are the responsibilities of the home, the synagogues, churches, mosques and other houses of worship, not the government". The reader will not fail to note the priority given in this list of religious institutions to "synagogues".

In fact, the Jewish resentment of European Christianity dates back to the Crusades, when thousands of Jews were massacred by Christians, and the Spanish Inquisition, when Jews were burned at the stake or imprisoned after all their property was confiscated.[6] It can hardly be wondered at then that "certain adherents of Judaism continue to treat Christ as an imposter". It is however a more serious political concern when the ADL is known to have conducted a continuing battle in the courts through amicus curiae briefs which have resulted in the banning of school prayers, the singing of Christmas carols and spirituals in schools and the substitution of religious symbols like the cross or nativity scenes with secular and materialistic ones such as the commercially popular christmas trees, 'Santa Claus' and reindeer. Ever fearful of criticism, the Jewish establishment chooses to promote itself as champions of 'secular humanism' while suppressing any investigation into the true nature of the Jewish religion or politics by denouncing it as a reinforcement of "hateful antiSemitic stereotypes". What it will not allow is the possibility that the persistence of such "stereotypes" may be due to the persistence of the unchangeable Jewish nature itself. It is this nature which had always distinguished the Jew from the European since the earliest contacts between the two races in the Roman Empire and mediaeval Europe. Tacitus's assessment of the Jews in his Histories is one of the earliest and most perspicacious accounts of the hateful nature of the Jews, which he describes as "hateful to the gods" and demonstrating "hatred and enmity to all other nations",[7] while the instinctive repugnance felt by the European peoples to Jewish communities in their midst is evidenced by the harsh measures taken sooner or later by the former to curtail the growth of Jewish financial influence within their societies. As Dr. Karen Mock of the League for Human Rights in Canada reports, England expelled the Jews in 1290, France in 1306, Spain and Portugal in 1492 and the Ukrainian Cossacks in 1648.[8] What this unusual record of the "chosen people" signifies is of course the impossibility of a full assimilation of the Jews into the European communities and the deeply ingrained animosity between the two.

Given this historical record, it is somewhat surprising to note that Mr. Baer takes offence to an implied reference in the U.N. report mentioned above to the Jews as being "foreigners" in Germany. The falseness of this objection, however, is confirmed in the very next paragraph of the B'nai B'rith's report of February 14, 1995 where it goes on to object to the report's commendation of the UNESCO's Conference on Cultural Policies[9] for "[excluding] any mention of Jewish culture and history" as a distinct culture. On the one hand, the diaspora Jews attempt to maintain themselves as part of the majority since it suits them financially to do so, but, on the other hand, they strive to glorify their religious distinctiveness even to the extent of opposing the cultural and religious values of the majority. This basic dichotomy in the Establishment Jewry is indeed the most alarming aspect of contemporary Jewish sociology. The attempts of the Jewish establishment — dominated by western, i.e. Ashkenazi Jews — to represent itself as a part of the western peoples are bound to fail sooner or later, since it can do so only in an economic way and never in a cultural. While international business may have succeeded in dissolving the cultural individuality of the western peoples through multicultural tactics, the essential distinctness of the Jewry both in race[10] and religion will continue to prevent assimilation — especially since the foundation of the Israeli state in 1948, for this state is the concrete political embodiment of the alienness of the Jew, and, following Kahane's interpretation of the significance of Sinai, of his hostility to both his Arab neighbours and the rest of the world.

While claiming to be an organisation defending an assimilated "American" Jewry, the paranoia which spurred its creation has turned the ADL into an elaborate intelligence service which spies on private American citizens and severely curtails their freedoms. It is significant that its current national director, Abraham Foxman, as R. Friedman reports, "keeps a framed portrait of Vladimir Jabotinsky, the tyrannical founding father of the Likud,[11] on prominent display in his office".[12] Indeed, according to Friedman,

> From its inception in 1913, the ADL has successfully masqueraded as a civil rights organization concerned with the civil liberties of all Americans. Yet the ADL has had a long and inglorious history of suppressing intellectual freedom.

During the Cold War, the ADL was running "perhaps the largest spy agency in America, regularly feeding the FBI information not only on antiSemitic groups like the KKK and the American Nazi party, but also on Jewish leftists and members of the Communist Party."[13] Intimately linked to political developments in Israel, the ADL increasingly revealed its rightwing Zionist character. Already in 1948, the ADL set up a joint intelligence-gathering operation with the Israeli government, even though it calls itself a charitable organisation with a taxexempt status.[14]

In 1993, the ADL was caught in a spy scandal which revealed that this organisation was responsible for illegal espionage against Americans who were considered dangerous to the Jewish cause. The targeted groups included extreme communist and extreme nationalistic American organisations, as well as Arab-Americans and black extremists — in short, all the principal foes of the established Jewry. San Francisco art dealer, Roy Bullock worked for nearly forty years for the ADL providing them with information on enemy groups. In this task he was assisted by a former CIA agent and San Francisco police officer, Tom Gerard, who sold police intelligence to the ADL. As the New York Daily News reported on 9 April, 1993, "ABC said that for several decades the spying operation has snooped into the records and activities of more than 10,000 people in the United States, including many who simply opposed the policies of Israel and South Africa". Interestingly, the ADL denies any official links with Israel but, apart from continued efforts to prop up the infrastructure of the institution of international vulgarity called "multiculturalism", the ADL has done nothing to bolster national American interests independently of the concerns of regular Zionists. In fact, one of the individuals spied upon by the ADL, former Congressman Pete McCloskey who was a critic of Israel, reported in the Los Angeles Times on 15 April 1993 that he was the subject of ADL smears when he ran for the U.S. Senate in 1982 and was eager to see the ADL investigated so as to determine whether it is an agent of the Israeli government. Other critics of the Jewry whose careers have been damaged by the ADL include Donald McGaffin, a former commentator at the San Francisco television station KPIX, and Colin Edwards, a commentator on the San Francisco FM radio station KALW. Both of them were fired from their jobs when the ADL put pressure on their bosses to do so. The ADL's strong connections with the political establishment in the U.S.A. make it difficult to prosecute the organisation. In the case of Bullock and his espionage activities for the ADL, for example, the internal investigation of the police department was closed suddenly when Dick Goldman, San Francisco's Jewish chief of protocol, instructed the Police Chief Tony Ribera to exclude Bullock and the ADL from the probe.

Apart from crushing all criticism with a strong arm, the ADL also conducts an ongoing process of indoctrination in schools and universities. One such programme is the one called "A World of Difference Institute Programme" which promotes multiculturalism and combats "prejudice" on an international scale. According to the ADL's own report of May 19, 1995, "In the United States, it has trained more than 110,000 teachers, reaching more than ten million students, as well as over 70,000 corporate employees and hundreds of law enforcement and community leaders." The ADL's agenda extends to the police and government departments as well in the form of "sensitivity training" provided to all employees on the subject of cultural diversity and prejudice. As Richard Cotten reported in a Congressional Record prepared by Congressman John Rarick, this training funded by government money has been in effect since at least 1963 and a large number of the police officers subjected to it have obtained the distinct impression that they were being brainwashed by people with a "quasiCommunist" agenda. But it should be clear to the reader by now that the ADL's agenda is not a Communist one any more than the JDL's. For, in fact, genuine Communist groups are as much opposed to the capitalist exploitation of the Establishment Jewry as blacks like Farrakhan are. In Russia, for instance, the leader of the Communist Party, Gennady Zyuganov, also belonged to a nationalist, antisemitic organization called the Russian National Council (founded in 1992), which blamed the Communist Revolution of Russia on "an international Zionistmasonic collusion aimed at destroying Russia" and commended Stalin as the leader who resolutely combatted "Jewish dominance and restored many traditions of Russian statehood". Zyuganov himself has repeatedly written of the Jewish influence over the West. In Beyond the Horizon and I Believe in Russia, for instance, he declares that

> The Western world's culture, ideology and worldview are increasingly influenced by the Jewish diaspora. Its influence grows literally by the hour, not just the day. The Jewish diaspora traditionally controls the financial life of the socio-economic system".

On the other hand, in Communist Russia itself, according to the Australian social historian, W.D. Rubinstein,

> Although it is possible under a Marxist government for Jews as individuals to be overrepresented at the elite level (as they certainly have been in the Soviet Union and probably are even now), it has proved impossible in any Communist country for them to function, as a coherent religious, national or cultural group, to support Zionism, or, by the nature of all Communist regimes, to amass personal wealth and economic influence.[15]

It is significant, in this connection, that, in considering the diversity of cultures within the Russian federation, Zyuganov remarks that only Russian Orthodoxy, Islam and Buddhism are appropriate as traditional religions for the Russian since "they put spiritual and moral values above consumerism".

The intimidations and smears that were brought to bear on American critics of the Jewry like McGaffin and Edwards are not restricted to the media but operate in the academic world as well. Professor Dwight Simpson of the San Francisco State University reported in the San Francisco Weekly, 28 April 1993, that, as a critic of Israel's occupation of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, he had been targeted by Jewish students who claimed that he was an antisemite. Furthermore, he was certain that some of these students worked as spies for the ADL since he was shocked to learn at a cocktail party that the Israeli consul general, Harry KneyTal, was fully aware of all the details of his lectures in the classroom, including the jokes he told his students. In the summer of 1993, there erupted in the U.S.A. another scandal involving the ADL and its brutal efforts to suppress free inquiry into Jewish repressive policies in Israel. David Williams, a Chicago librarian, presented a resolution at the American Library Association's annual convention in San Francisco calling "upon the government of Israel to end all censorship and human rights violations in the Occupied West Bank and Gaza, and in Israel itself".[16] Though the resolution was passed at the meeting, a coalition of conservative Jewish librarians supported by the Anti-Defamation League engineered a campaign to annul what it called a "false and biased antiIsrael resolution". Already in 1989, he had compiled a bibliography on the Palestinian-Israeli conflict for the Chicago Public Library which included several antiIsraeli authors such as Uri Davis and Ingela Bendt. Soon the ADL leaders of Chicago were demanding a revision of the bibliography and pressured the aldermen in heavily Jewish neighbourhoods with calls until they too complained to library officials and the mayor's office. The library administration capitulated and agreed to include in its list more than thirty titles recommended by the ADL. But columnist Dennis Byrne of the Chicago Sun Times exposed the ADL's assault on intellectual freedom in an article dated January 30, 1993. Now, after the convention of the American Library Association, the ADL returned to its pressure tactics to have the resolution revoked. An ADL delegation met with Peggy Sullivan, the ALA director, and simultaneously launched a letterwriting campaign directed to librarians and library trustees all around the country. Not surprisingly, the resolution was overturned at the New Orleans convention, which was packed with members of the Hadassah Women's Zionist Organization of America. The same week in New Orleans, ALA officials set up a task force to investigate Williams.

Earlier, in 1987, the ADL was also involved in the Jonathan Pollard spy case where Pollard, who had been assigned to the Navy's AntiTerrorist Alert Center, stole thousands of pages of classified documents for Israel in collaboration with Avi Sella, an Israeli air force colonel whose wife worked as a lawyer for the New York ADL.

What is alarming about the ADL is that it not only acts as a watchdog organisation for Jewish and Israeli interests but has, throughout its history, acted as a shield for the rise of Jewish capitalists with close links to organized crime. That gangsterism should form the basis of modern capitalism may come as no surprise to one who is already inured to corruption and violence through the Jewish media and Hollywood. What is not always emphasized in studies of American gangsterism is the degree to which it has been dominated by Jewish criminals, first in the blatant form practised by Meyer Lansky and Bugsy Siegel and then in the subtler one of Wall Street racketeering practised by big brokers like Michael Milken, Ivan Boesky and Martin Siegel.[17] The ADL's propaganda machinery, with its raucous cries of 'AntiSemitism!' whenever a Jewish figure or organisation is attacked by the government or the public, has served as an effective public relations wing of the Jewish crime syndicates of this century. Already in 1908, when New York City Police Commissioner Theodore A. Bingham, wrote an article entitled "Foreign Criminals in New York" in the North American Review, he became the target of the ADL's charges of antisemitism and was eventually removed from his post as commissioner. The ADL's direct association with the Jewish gangsters is evidenced most clearly in the figure of Theodore H. Silbert, who worked simultaneously for the ADL and the Sterling National Bank. The Sterling National Bank was founded in 1929 by Frank Erickson, an associate of Meyer Lansky (who in turn was the master of Jewish criminals and founder, along with his friend Bugsy Siegel, of 'Murder, Inc.', the notorious crime syndicate that supervised the illegal traffic in liquor and drugs during the Prohibition) and served as the Jewish gangsters' "factor" bank in the New York city garment centre, issuing highinterest, shortterm loans to thousands of small clothing manufacturers. Silbert, who joined the Bank in 1934, later became its chairman and president and CEO while serving also as national commissioner, treasurer, and chief fundraiser of the ADL. Other ADL personages in the bank included Maxwell Raab, who, despite his earlier business association with Meyer Lansky in the International Airport Hotel Corporation, went on to become U.S. ambassador to Italy in the Reagan administration.[18] The cleansing of gangsters and investment of political respectability on them is a process that has become common practice in capitalist America. We may remember that Hoover never considered it necessary to mount a campaign against gangsterism though he spent all his energies on Communists. It is significant that, in Cuba, on the other hand, when the Communists seized power, Castro forthwith dismissed all its gangsters, including Lansky, and nationalised its casinos.

However, in America, under the guise of capitalism and democracy, the Jewish gangsters have inexorably moved into social respectability and reputation with the help of the defensive ADL propaganda which raises the wall of "antisemitism" around their nefarious activities whether as guntoting gangsters or as Wall Street monsters. Thus one should not be surprised to learn that, in 1985, the ADL honored the Las Vegas gangster, Morris Dalitz, who had been a lifetime righthand man of Meyer Lansky. More recently, in 1991, when Milken and his junkbond raiders were exposed and convicted, Jewish attorney Alan Dershowitz denounced a new book on Milken as being "antisemitic", doing what the ADL had always been doing to protect the "Establishment" Jewry. Milken's devious financial schemes for corporate takeovers with the help of junk bonds helped bring offshore drug profits back into the U.S. His criminal dealings were provided a cloak of respectability by the ADL, which received large sums of money from the Milken Family Fund. What is worse is that Milken also funded the Zionist lobby, AIPAC, through one of its subsidiaries, the Roundtable PAC. Roundtable PAC housed a taxshelter firm called Integrated Resources which served as a money conduit for Milken and his junk bond peddlers at the Drexel Burnham firm. The AIPAC sponsors political candidates who are sympathetic to the Zionist cause and, between 1991 and 1992, 211 candidates for the U.S. House and Senate from 48 states received monies amounting to over two million dollars from ADL and AIPAC. One of the U.S. politicians benefitting from Roundtable's funds was Daniel Patrick Moynihan, who in 1986 engineered a revision of the tax code through Congress which gave Integrated Resources an additional $43 million in tax breaks. AIPAC also works in conjunction with ADL's factfinding department and Amy Goot, its executive director, was formerly an official of the ADL. AIPAC's dossiers cover thousands of American activists (including Jewish ones), and university professors who criticize the AIPAC or the ADL are placed on a blacklist, their lectures monitored by spies and the universities that employ them are pressured through alumni linked to the AIPAC and the ADL to dismiss them or suffer a withdrawal of their financial backing.

In Canada, the ADL counterpart, the League for Human Rights, under the guise of combatting prejudice and bigotry, steadily increases its efforts "to incorporate multicultural, antiracist, and humanrights education in our schools and to start this training as early as possible".[19] The League for Human Rights has also persuaded the Ontario AntiRacism Secretariat "to increase its networking efforts with local police to monitor hategroup activity",[20] though it is not clear why European groups — or Arab or Black ones — alone should be called hategroups while Jewish groups whose ultimate concern is the consolidation of the Jewish state and religion might be allowed to suffocate the basically European culture of their host country with daily doses of a multicultural brew which is inimical to the individual cultures of all the peoples involved in it, European and nonEuropean. Moreover, the unpleasant fact remains that the ADL, like the JDL, is not really in favour of affirmative action either, since this could deprive them of their domination of academic and social life. It is not surprising to learn, in this context, that in its earliest days, the B'nai B'rith, of which the ADL is the strong arm, was closely allied to the KKK and, to this day, sponsors drugtrafficking among blacks to such an extent that Farrakhan's antidrug organisation, Dopebusters, is constantly maligned by the ADL as being run by antiSemites.

Above all, the League for Human Rights has been instrumental in the establishment of a hate crimes legislation in Canada, which constitutes the most blatant manifestation of "thought policing" in recent history. Since 1974 there have been about 44 cases of suspected hate propaganda, but only a handful of these have resulted in criminal charges being issued against the persons concerned. The majority of the accusations were made by Jewish lobby groups since they are the most aggressive in seeking prosecutions and banning of books or individuals from Canada. All the cases which resulted in convictions — those of Don Andrews and Robert Smith, president and secretary, respectively, of the Nationalist Party of Canada, James Keegstra, a Alberta high school teacher, and Michael Safade, a Lebanese immigrant to Canada — involved Jews. On the other hand, Arabs and Europeans have had little success in having their accusations of hate lead to successful convictions. For instance, when Edgar Bronfman, the president of the World Jewish Congress,[21] attacked the Austrian people, in a public speech delivered before the delegates to the triennial assembly of the Canadian Jewish Congress in 1989, for having elected Kurt Waldheim as their president, declaring, "Let Austria decide whether it is a civilized country or the dirty anti-Semitic dogs that they have so far been", an outraged private citizen in Toronto laid a complaint against Bronfman for inciting hatred against the Austrian people. But his complaint was completely ignored by the Montreal police. Similiarly, the attempt by the Canadian Zone of the Islamic Circle of North America (based in Calgary) to ban Salman Rushdie's The Satanic Verses as hate literature was unsuccessful. As Dr. Amyn B. Sajoo wrote on that occasion,

> By failing to give meaningful consideration to the Canadian Moslem view of the book, the government lends substance to the suspicion that the Islamic faith earns less than its fair share of elementary respect in our multicultural society.[22]

What is worse is that the hate crimes law is used by the Jewish groups to vilify their opponents and to harass and intimidate them in several ways. Malcolm Ross has been investigated four times for essentially the same opinion. British historian, David Irving, who has never been charged with hate crimes in Canada, is already so smeared publicly that forum-owners who were formerly willing to sponsor his conferences are too afraid to do so now for fear that they too might be considered "hatemongers" on account of their sponsorship.

Few people stop to realize that the ADL which has propelled this law into force in so many countries is itself impelled by a concern for the same Zionism which Kahane honestly identified as being born of "hatred to the world". Thus, although the ADL seeks the support of other minorities by supporting militant multicultural groups like the Anti-Racist Action, its interests are, no less than the JDL's, Hebraeocentric and its advertised concern for "Human Rights" is in fact only a façade for its advancement of Zionist hegemony over western society. While the JDL favours the consolidation of the Jewish state as a guide and leader to the world, the ADL prefers a more subtle establishment of the vulgar Jewish mind as the model of international society. It is not surprising that genuinely conservative politicians like Pat Buchanan, who attempt to restore Conservatism to its true dignity as the movement of national culture, are vigorously opposed by both the JDL and the Establishment Jewry. It is significant that Buchanan promised in one of his campaign speeches,

> We cannot stop with defunding agencies. We must also seek out and support poets, writers, painters, sculptors and architects who are truly great and deserving of patronage. In the coming Golden Age of America, we must not only dump over the cult of Mapplethorpe, we must replace him with an American Michelangelo.[23]

Such statements reveal that the cultural discernment that was evidenced in the late nineteenth century by German philosophers is now developing even among American politicians of a populist persuasion. It is not surprising that the JDL recently issued a proposal to combat Buchanan in a concerted manner under the banner of "Jews against Buchanan", pointing out every quasi-Nazi statement that he has made in the past. The ADL of course would not need to organise themselves in an overt platform against Buchanan since the establishment Jewry have already infiltrated the Conservative Party as socalled "Neoconservatives." The Neoconservatives are, in fact, neither conservative nor new, being old socialist and communist Jews who moved from the left to the right under pressure from the blacks and other extreme leftwing groups impatient with the exploitative mechanisms of the Jewish capitalists. The Neoconservatives thus represent the first blatant seizure of the Conservative bastions of the West by the Jews, after their long centuries of cohabitation with the European peoples as slaves, subjects and socialists. David Frum, a prominent Jewish Neoconservative theorist, recently alludes in his book, Dead Right, to the problem, but in a cleverly veiled manner. He seems to understand the feeling of impotence that the genuine, "old" conservatives must feel before the alarming erosion of America's culture by the Jews in the media and publishing. He imagines the conservatives wondering to themselves:

> You fellows still run all of high culture: the museums, the theaters, the publishing houses. You set the tone of most mass entertainment: television drama, sitcoms, and talk shows; pop music; and Hollywood. You predominate in the news media and the mainline churches. The education of the young, from the day they first flick on "Sesame Street" until the day they leave law school, is your uncontested domain. You set the tone of national life; you determine what sort of satire is funny and what is offensive; you control taste, fashion, and etiquette. Despite all our election victories, the country is still rushing into a permissive, multicultural future.[24]

But, interestingly, Frum never identifies these "fellows" as Jews.

It is not suprising that Buchanan wrote in 1991 that it was the task of his conservative group to take back their movement from "the neoconservatives ... the ex-liberals, socialists and Trotskyists who signed on in the name of anti-communism and now control our foundations and set the limits of permissible dissent". As a correspondent of the old conservative, Russell Kirk once noted, "the chief enemy of American conservatism has not been the Marxists, nor even the socialist liberals in the Democratic Party, but the Neoconservatives, who have sabotaged the movement from within and exploited it for their own selfish purposes".[25] Or, as Robert Bartley remarked, Buchanan was running not against George Bush but against Irving Kristol.[26] M.E. Bradford put it more pungently in his remark during the gloating exultations of America's Gulf War, "I always feared the domestic Left more than Moscow ... I fear it even more now, since sometimes it calls itself conservatism. And the danger is perhaps greater now that Communism is out of the way".[27] The most frightening aspect of the Jewish Neoconservative infiltration however is that they are able to dismiss all sincere expressions of concern for the national culture as being marginal byproducts of their own mutlimedia phantom, multiculturalism. Frum, for instance, closes his chapter on nationalist conservatism by disdainfully remarking that > Nationalist conservatism simply imports leftwing identity politics into a new context. If the rights of blacks, gays, and Hispanics were to be asserted, why not those of middleaged Irish Catholics or white Southerners? ... The nationalists may take their descent, as they say, from the oldest strain of American conservatism. At the same time, however, they are truly multiculturalism's children.

The arrogance of the Establishment Jewry is nowhere more apparent than in such statements, where the genuine aspirations of the original founders of American democracy, which have been successfully forced into the background by the repressive multicultural tactics engineered by the Jewish usurpers, are mocked, when they finally express themselves, as being but yet another cry for freedom of a subjugated minority.

The fact is that the Jews have indeed become the most influential ruling elite in North America as well as in most of the western world which follows the leadership of the Americans. Prof. W.D. Rubinstein, for instance, recently reported that, in America, > 57 out of the 500 national leaders whose original religion was known were Jewish by origin — 11.4 per cent. The highest Jewish proportion found in any elite was among media leaders, where Jews accounted for 25.8 per cent of the known total.[28]

Further:

> About 45 per cent of the American intellectual elite (totalling 172 individuals) identified by the the author [of one academic study] was Jewish, although this rises to 56 per cent of all elite academics in the social sciences and 61 per cent in the humanities. Of the 20 most prestigious American intellectuals in 1970 — as ranked by other intellectuals — at least 15 were Jews.[29]

This is not surprising when we consider Prof. Rubinstein's next bit of information, that

> The most widelyread American journals like Commentary, The Public Interest, The New York Review of Books, New Republic and Partisan Review are either explicitly Jewish or contain a disproportionately Jewish input.

Having seized an elite position in western society, the establishment Jewry are naturally opposed to any extreme socialistic doctrine which would > reduce or eliminate the gap between the Jews' level of achievement and their small numbers ... Socialism can surely be acceptable to Western Jewry in its present circumstances only in so far as it is social democracy — reformist, moderate and pluralistic — whose modes of thought are modified by capitalism.[30]

He goes on to illuminate the vital difference between liberal social democracy and communism, or even 'old conservatism', regarding the question of Israel:

> Until recently, most Jews have situated themselves within the ambit of social democratic leftliberalism. Second, social democracy is reformist rather than revolutionary ... It also shares the view that the existence of Israel is historically justified. This view is one which is naturally associated with social democracy (or with American leftliberalism) rather than with Marxism or (until recently) with conservatism.[31]

The last sentence in this quote reveals how the Jewish move to neoconservatism or, rather, glorified gangster capitalism, in the past few decades has perverted Conservatism too into a tool of Jewish interests, in spite of the essential incompatibility between these two sociopolitical phenomena. Prof. Rubinstein however concludes on an optimistic note regarding this appropriation of a "conservative" stance by formerly leftliberal and socialist Jews. He dismisses the notion that "leftliberalism is somehow implicit in Jewish theology or the Jewish tradition", for "Such a perception seems to be both a misinterpretation of Jewish history and chimerical".[32] But his final remark betrays the fatal flaw of incomprehension on the part of all assimilated Jews, namely that somehow the Jewish tradition is or could be made identical to the Western:

> in strengthening American defence and the American economy, and restoring American values,[33] a triumphant American conservatism would surely strengthen those very forces which have given American Jewry — and world Jewry — the singular success they have enjoyed since 1945.

As noted above, Jewish conservatism is indeed not the natural partner of American conservatism but its principal enemy. The decay of academic life and the confusion and corruption of public morality within America under the Jewish "elite" is already, despite the ADL's dictatorial spying and censorship tactics, being attacked by genuinely conservative, as well as populist, groups which are becoming increasingly aware of the incompatibility of the alien Jewish rule with genuine American values. This is especially clear since, as Russell Kirk put it, "What really animates the neoconservatives ... is the preservation of Israel. That lies at the back of everything".[34]

We see thus that the Establisment Jewry — protected by the ADL and the League for Human Rights — which support the supranationalistic supremacy of capitalism, and the terroristic JDL, which supports the nationalistic ambitions of Israel, are in the final analysis, little different in their essential Zionism and basic contempt for the national cultural aspirations of their neighbours, whether white Americans, or black, or Arabs. However, the more sharply that Israel itself reveals its true colours as an extremist nationalist state under leaders like Netanyahu, the more rapidly will the supremacy wane that America has so far enjoyed in backing a Jewish state ostentatiously proclaimed to be the only "democracy" in the Middle East. At the same time, within America itself, it will become more patent, and disturbing, that the blatant terrorism and violence that created the Israeli state and sustain it to this day are indeed generically related to the terrorism, both blatant and subtle, of the Establishment Jewish groups which have transformed American democracy in this century into a garish and sterile plutocracy.

HOUSE OF ORWELL

By

Joseph G. Stano

The lavish, highly emotional reporting by the news media on the opening of a new Holocaust Museum in New York City stands as a classic example of Orwellian "doublethink," defined by George Orwell as "... the power of holding two contradictory beliefs in one's mind simultaneously, and accepting both of them." In this case, while endlessy professing a passionate dedication to freedom of speech and freedom of the press, the whole of the news media has routinely censored any challenge to any part of that massive, undocumented, unproven, and in some cases scientifically impossible, collection of tall tales known as the Holocaust. Like the tyrannical "Party" in Orwell's "1984", the "Holocausters can "...make the laws of nature." And do it with the full support of the entire media.

It is a tactical blunder to build another Holocaust Museum at this late date, when the Holocaust as presented to the American people by the media has been long abandoned by some of its most ardent supporters. Even the Yad Vashem Holocaust Museum in Israel has long abandoned the Holocaust that is fed to the American public daily—if not hourly—by the whole of the American media. A cowardly news media routinely censors well-documented history for "Hollywood History,"

As with Orwell's "Minitrue" (Ministry of Truth), the American news media's "Memory Holes" are operating at full capacity. With each passing year there is an ever increasing amount of "not newsworthy" embarrassing truths to be shoved down media Memory Holes. Unfortunately, these truths keep on coming back up!

Some of the not newsworthy "unmentionables" that simply won't stay down:

Way back in 1960 the Yad Vashem was forced to acknowledge that there were no "death camps" or "gas chambers" in all of Western Europe or all of the German Reich, since all of these camps had been open to inspection by scholars and scientists, and all of these camps were determined to have been "work camps."

This presented several problems:

First of all, the United States executed more than 450 Germans, "In the name of the United States and the American people." A great many of whom were executed for operating "Death Camps" and "Gas Chambers" in Western Europe and Germany—where they didn't exist! To put it mildly, this is a rather dishonorable page to add to the history of a nation that professes to believe in justice.

Second problem: Five of the fabulous sex million had been parceled out to all the camps in Western Europe and Germany, with only one million allotted to camps behind the Iron Curtain in Poland.

Orwellian solution: Simply pick up the 5 million mythical victims and their mythical gas chambers and throw them over the Iron Curtain into Poland where nosey scholars and scientists aren't allowed to go.

Or, in Orwellian arithmetic: Five from six equals six! Overnight, Auschwitz went from "almost a million" to "four and a half million." A rather astonishing fact that the whole of the American news media found "not newsworthy." As would a declaration by the Holocausters that the world was flat and the moon was a green cheese.

George Owell called this Holocausters exercise "blackwhite,"or "the ability to impudently claim that black is white in contradiction of the plain facts."

The news media's response was perfect Orwellian "doublethink": A groveling, servile acceptance of "the mutability of the past and the denial of objective reality." Broken on the Holocaust wheel, for the news media 6 minus 5 was now 6.

When execution expert Fred Leuchter went to Poland—believing in the Holocaust—to examine the alleged "gas chambers," he found them to be scientifically impossible. In fact, they were quite ridiculous. However, to be certain, he took 20 forensic samples at all the alleged "gas chambers." An independent laboratory in Massachusetts tested these samples and confirmed his expert opinion that all the alleged "gas chambers" had never been "gas chambers."

Professional Holocausters, the ubiquitous Karsfelds, were outraged and demanded that the prestigious Krakow institute of Forensic Research in Poland repeat the same tests and prove Mr. Leuchter was wrong. The head of the institute led the team of scientists that took the samples from the same places as Leuchter and they got precisely the same results: no gas chambers! From the formerly loquacious and demanding Karsfelds: SILENCE!

Both sides of the "gas chambers" issue got precisely the same scientific results. If we were living in a free country where freedom of speech and freedom of the press abounds, the issue of "gas chambers" would have been settled. Our free press would have fearlessly informed the public of the truth. In George Orwell's tyranny of "Oceania," the truth would have been a "Thoughtcrime." In our tyranny the truth is called "Anti-Semitic." In both tyrannies the craven news media cowers in terror.

When forced to defend the ridiculous and impossible tales on file at the Yad Vashem, the director stated that of the 20,000 testimonies of "Holocaust survivors" that he had on file, at least half of them were "unreliable." When pressed to define "unreliable," he said they simply weren't true. In trying to justify these tall tales, he said "these Jews wanted to be part of history so they invented tales or they repeated tales they had heard."

Charming! These "unreliable" tales routinely appear in the news media as holy writ and they are part of the Holocaust courses taught in our schools. In Orwell's "Oceania," it's citizenry was routinely indoctrinated with a daily "Two Minute Hate." American kids get a full "One Hour Hate" in their schools, where they are taught to hate Germans based on outrageous lies that even the Yad Vashem has rejected.

We have executed people based on these "unreliable" tales and we expel elderly people based on these "unreliable" tales whose only crime might be serving their nation on the losing side of the Second World War, or fighting the efforts of the Soviet juggernaut to overrun Europe. More disgrace and dishonor for our unfortunate nation.

At long last, the Polish director of the Holocaust Museum at Auschwitz has admitted something scientists and scholars had known for many years: the infamous "gas chamber" shown the tourists at Auschwitz is a complete fraud. It was created out of an existing mortuary for all the Jewish tourists who were demanding to see a "gas chamber."

The infamous Auschwitz "Death Camp" and all of its bizarre horrors specifically created for the tourist trade will end up as a kind of "Disneyland of the Doomed," where Jewish tourists can wallow in pure Hollywood and call it history.

Rccently, the Yad Vashem has tried to establish some credibility amongst historians who have finally worked up the courage to challenge all the many and varied tall tales and tourist exhibits. In a bold move—that only took fifty years—the Yad Vashem has disavowed all the tales of "human soap," and "lamp shades," and all the fantastic products allegedly manufactured out of Jews.

In short, they obliterated a huge and profitable industry created by an army of amateur and professional Holocausters. Gone are the little bags of human fertilizer and the stuffing for mattresses. Gone are the infinite variety of human leather products sold to a gullible public. Like combat boots, belts, wallets, riding boots, purses, leather riding jodhpurs, cavalry saddles and, lest we forget, driving gloves made for the SS out of Jewish babies who were skinned alive. Remember, these tales were only limited by the imagination of the Jew who "wanted to be a part of history." I say, let them be judged by the tales they created in the hate-filled filth between their ears. Like Olga Lengyel of Five Chimneys of Auschwitz fame. Our charming Olga created an industry at Auschwitz where Jews were turned into...SAUSAGES!

Former New York City Mayor Ed Koch, who was instrumental in erecting New York's very own house of Holocaust horrors for all the tourists, created an industry where the terrible Germans chopped off all the fingers of Jews and used them as electrical switches. Koch's tale added, considerably, to his stature as one of the most silly and insufferable asses on the planet earth.

Not to worry, the body factories may be dead and buried at the Yad Vashem, but the industry is booming in the United States. It's even a growth industry where new and more fantastic tales pop up daily. Koch may continue to flick his "finger switches" far into the future. I wonder if he can think up an industrial use for all the private parts that have obviously been removed from the entire American news media? Orwellian maxim: The heresy of all heresies in a tyranny is common sense. Ed "Fingers" Koch will never be a heretic.

The fall of the Soviet Union was a disaster for the Holocaust business. The Russians turned over to the International Red Cross all the German "Death Registers" they had seized in 1944 when they overran Auschwitz in 1944. The Germans, with typical German efficiency, had scrupulously documented all the deaths at Auschwitz. Not four and a half million. Not even one million. It was slightly over 74,000 in total. And that included everyone—even the German staff—who had died at Auschwitz.

For the Holocaust researcher it can be quite amusing. It seems the cruel and uncaring Germans recorded the name of every person who died at Auschwitz; the maiden name of the person's mother—a necessity in identifying Jews having the same names; the town the person came from; the reason for the death and other pertinent information. An effort was even made to return the ashes of the deceased to his relatives. With the water table at Auschwitz approaching that of a bog, cremation was the only option. Jews have made much of cremation, a common practice in Germany, without explaining what the Germans were supposed to do with the dead when burial was impossible.

Recently, carefully labeled boxes of human ashes were discovered at one of the crematoriums. I had a good laugh watching the professional Holocausters lying through their teeth and rather nervously professing absolute bewilderment as to why the Germans had so carefully preserved the ashes of some Jews. A perfect non sequitur and a perfect Orwellian denial of objective reality: "Doublethink."

Simple justice demands that the Jews should be judged by the weight of the lies they have lumbered on the German people. The greater, the more vicious, the more vile the lie, the more loathsome the liar. I defy anyone to find a litany of more vile, vicious and sadistic lies in the pages of history.

At one time there were 19 slabs with raised letters in 19 languages telling of the more than 4 million victims that died at Auschwitz. Thanks to the efforts of the Polish Historical Society, the slabs at Auschwitz have now had this bit of "Hollywood History" chipped off them. A victory for historical truth in the Holocaust "numbers game."

The Holocaust "numbers game" has been truly remarkable, I've kept tabs on it over the past twenty years. Here are some of the claims by professional Holocausters of the number of Jews killed by the terrible Germans: Fifty million, 41 million, 36 million (Olga Lengyel); 26 million, 25 million (Kurt Gerstein and Oswald Pohl, both under torture), 18 million, 12 million (Jew claim at the United Nations) and the ever popular 6 million.

It's amusing to note that the cowardly and cringing American news media have been given permission by the Holocausters to refer to the "1.1" or "1.5" million victims at Auschwitz, "most of whom were Jews." The 4.5 million has been dropped and no one in the entire American news media noticed the horrendous crash. Pure Orwellian "Crimestop" as practiced by the American news media: "The faculty of stopping short, as though by instinct, at the threshold of any dangerous thought." Indeed, it would have been a serious "Thoughtcrime" and very "Anti-Semitic" of the news media to notice anything.

The stampede is now on and a great many famous professional Holocausters are desperately trying to salvage something of their reputations by abandoning the fabulous 6 million for a number far below 1 million. Even if we believe the 1.1 or the 1.5 million figure imposed on the news media—the truth is far below that—it means that even the most dedicated of professional Holocausters now acknowledge that at least 3 million, half the Holocaust, never happened!

For those who are not afraid to think, here are some rational numbers: The Holocausters have forever claimed that Jews represented 20 percent of all the prisoners in the Concentration Camps. Not true, it was never that high. But, just for the sake of argument, let's use their numbers.

Jews claim 3 million survivors and 6 million deaths for a total of 9 million Jews in the camps. If the Jews constituted 20 percent of the prisoners in the camps, there must have been 45 million people in the camps! Ya gotta be kidding, that's almost the pre-war population of Italy and greater than the pre-war population of France. These are numbers that only a bloomin' idiot could believe.

O.K. let's try it again: The Germans were signitories of the Geneva Convention, so the International Red Cross had access to and inspected ALL Concentration Camps throughout the war. I repeat, ALL THE CAMPS. And they didn't see any policy of killing anyone. Nor did they see any "gas chambers." According to the IRC the total number of deaths in the camps did not exceed 300,000. The Germans claimed the number of deaths at 250,000. With the fall of the Soviet Union the IRC was given access to the "Death Registers" that the Russians had seized when they overran the Concentration Camps. Having consulted the Death Registers, the IRC revised the numbers of deaths in the camps down to 273,000. If we accept the 20 percent figure claimed by the Holocausters, not more than 55,000 Jews died in all the camps—NOT SIX MILLION!

Recently, the Holocausters forced the IRC to confess that they didn't report all the abuse of Jews in the camps for fear that the Germans might deny them access to the camps, or even overrun Switzerland. (Not very likely.)

For those who can still think, that means that—at long last—the Holocausters have acknowledged the fact that the IRC had access to all the Concentration Camps during the war; had inspected all the camps during the war; and the IRC knew of the conditions that existed in all the camps during the war. In short, an acknowledgment of the expertise of the IRC on the subject of Concentration Camps.

By forcing the IRC to confess to a "moral failure" by not reporting any abuse of Jews in the camps, the Holocausters have no choice but to accept the IRC's number of deaths in the camps at 273,000. Having certified the IRC as experts in the matter the Holocausters are stuck with their experts' findings.

Or, as George (Orwell) would have put it: "The heresy of all heresies in a tyranny is common sense."

It's little wonder that those who instruct the Holocaust in our schools and universities here in the United States stand basic scholarship on its head by absolutely refusing to defend, in a free and open debate, the course they are teaching. I know, I've challenged the boys in the Holocaust business and watched them disappear in a cloud of dust. Clearly a confirmation that they are teaching rubbish that can't be defended.

The Holocaust is alleged to be history. How could it be? There are literally thousands of subjects: civilizations, nations, peoples, cultures and countless events that dedicated historians research, carefully document and turn into thick tomes. Only when these tomes are subjected to peer review, wherein every fact not proven is challenged and adequately defended, can these tomes be regarded as history.

This is not the exception, this is the norm. One cannot deny that every facet of science is routinely challenged and must be proven. Even the nebulous subject of religion is open to debate and there are those who will passionately defend the impossibilities of the "Garden of Eden," Noah and his bobbing ark, and Jonah and his bloomin' whale. In defense of the impossible, the British Flat Earth Society still fights on and they have even devised a rather sophisticated mathematical formula to prove the earth is flat. A formula that has puzzled some scientists because it seems to work! In a free society where persons are allowed to think, one can question and challenge, defend and attack, absolutely everything and anything in a search for the truth. The non-debatable Holocaust stands quite alone as an aberration and cannot claim any authenticity whatsoever. Even the Flat Earth Society with their strange formula and their willingness to defend their case present more proof than the Holocausters case that can be challenged with simple arithmetic.

This latest Holocaust Museum in New Yark City constitutes a frantic effort to substitute cement for substance in the Holocaust, as if one can successfully prop up outrageous lies with brick and mortar.

Even the best efforts of the American news media to censor the truth will ultimately fail and the American people will see the Holocaust for what it is: a monumental swindle lasting over fifty years, in which the Jews have profited politically, financially and even sadistically when our government punished, and even executed, hundreds of innocent people based on lies.

From the very outset the Holocaust was a swindle. Justification for the creation of a Jewish state was based on the Jewish contention that Jews could not live in safety anywhere in Europe after the nations of Europe permitted the Germans to establish "death camps" and "gas chambers" in every European state. That's why 5 of the fabulous 6 million victims were originally spread across Western Europe to lumber guilt on western nations and prove a case for an independent Jewish state. The State of Israel was created on a foundation of lies and to profit from lies is clearly a swindle. To swindle the world and gain a nation is clearly the greatest swindle in history.

One must take note of the fact that all systems of law around the globe share a common rejection of the retention of wealth or property gained by dishonest means. The members of the United Nations were all swindled when they created the State of Israel based on the lies of the Holocaust. All nations that voted to create the State of Israel now share the guilt of having taken lands from the unfortunate Palestinian people based on lies. Empirical reasoning dictates that if the U.N. had the power to "create" the State of Israel, the U.N, has the power to "un-create" the State of Israel.

The solution to all the problems in the Middle East requires nothing more than a U.N. vote to make Jerusalem an International City—as it should have been—and the return of all Palestinian lands to their rightful owners.

Of course, our craven, groveling politicians will probably veto justice for the Palestinian people at the U.N. until the crumbling House of Orwell comes crashing down under the weight of its outrageous lies.

When this Holocaust house of lies collapses, the Jews of the United States will earn the contempt and disgust of the American people for having prayed on their kindness and compassion for power and profit, while involving them in the punishment and even death of innocent persons.

The Jews will certainly earn the anger of the American people with the realization that generations of American children were taught hatred and bigotry in their schools for the sadistic pleasure of Jews. Lest the people forget, the American public will have all the tax supported Holocaust Museums across this nation as constant reminders of the greatest swindle in history.

I'm afraid the backlash will be awesome and it will encompass all Jews living in the united States and most nations around the globe. It's ironic, Jews who have eagerly practiced the collective punishment of the German people for fun and profit for more than fifty years will now endure the collective punishment of the world.

The Holocaust was limited only by the imagination of those creating it, sustained by nothing more than the magic word "anti-Semitic" and the willingness of the whole of the American media to censor the truth. The backlash will certainly target the whole of the American media, lowering all media types even further—if that's possible—in the eyes of the American people. ❑

The Meaning Of Life:
Race and Nature

Part One
The Organic Nature of National-Socialism

I
Nature and National-Socialism

Today, many people are aware that Nature — our natural environment — is under threat from constant and unchecked development, and from continued and unchecked industrialization. One obvious consequence of such development, urbanization and increased industrialization has been the steady decline in people's "quality of life" — there has been, and is, a concentration on material concerns.

The whole process of unchecked development, change and growth has been, and is being, fed by material greed — by a desire to acquire, maintain and increase the "standard of living" through the possession of material goods and material luxuries.

In the developed nations of the "Western world", the unchecked growth which has occurred, and which is still occurring, has led to the construction of more and more roads, more and more suburbs, more and more housing developments, and more and more industrial and commercial developments. Isolated, wild places have been destroyed or despoiled, with the countryside invaded by more and more houses and more and more noisy vehicles going ever faster. In Europe, and the rest of the developed world, ever more immigrants from the under-developed countries arrive each year making already overcrowded countries like Britain more overcrowded. Everywhere, the activities of human beings has taken precedence over Nature, with profits and material growth coming before Nature. For example, in Europe, trees and woodland are cut-down, and the countryside destroyed, just so that more and more roads can be built so that more and more people can transport themselves around faster and faster in the pursuit of either self-indulgence or more and better material comfort.

What has happened is that the natural balance with Nature, which previous societies generally maintained, has been lost. Previous societies understood and valued Nature, with Nature, with wild places, often being given preference over human beings because such places were regarded as "sacred to the gods" — as where the gods themselves dwelt and where they could be experienced and known. Today, this natural spiritual awareness has been almost lost in the crass pursuit of wealth and personal self-indulgence.

The Denizen Of The Future

Many people understand that what is occurring cannot go on without some great catastrophe occurring. If such growth does continue, unchecked, we will be left with only a few unspoilt places where Nature can be felt and known, with these few places being almost over-run with people escaping from the urban and industrial wastelands. If such growth does continue, the social problems which are developing will increase. If such growth and such a pursuit of self-indulgence and materialism does continue, then our Western world — and probably the rest of the world as well — will become an inhuman place to live, with increasing and constant social turmoil, and with a loss of everything human and valuable. What is human — and valuable for us — is an awareness of our own place in the natural "scheme of things"; that is, a perspective, a depth of vision, an understanding of how we as individuals are balanced between the past and the future, and of how important Nature is for us — the creator, and mother of us all, on whom we all ultimately depend for food and our well-being, and whom we should respect, if not revere.

If change and growth continue on unchecked, with Nature despoiled, then a new type of human being will be created — the urbanized denizen who knows nothing of the wild profundity of Nature, and who therefore does not respect Nature, and who has no real perspective on life. This denizen will therefore be vainly arrogant and weakly self-indulgent, addicted to personal pleasures. All this denizen will know of Nature is the artificial, almost life-less and totally god-less "nature" encountered in "countryside parks", in the barren, chemically-polluted fields of agri-business farms, and in well-kept, well-trodden "nature trials". The wakening hours of this denizen will be filled with music of one sort or another, and entertainment, and possibly some work in some enclosed building or house, and he/she will feel at home in cities, in motor vehicles, in buildings and houses, and uncomfortable in what is left of the "real world". This denizen will have plenty of "spare-time" to indulge himself in an unreal way through organized and controlled "games" and "sports" and "thrill-seeking pastimes". This denizen would not know what to do if he/she found themselves alone for any length of time, in a quiet place, with no "entertainment systems", and they would do almost anything to avoid prolonged and uncomfortable exposure to the "natural elements". They would exercise and exert themselves — but just a little, and probably in some indoor "gym" or "sports club".

The concerns of this urbanized denizen would be either personal ones, or abstract ones manufactured for such denizens by the international commercial and political concerns which would control, in an almost tyrannical way, all if not most of the nations of the world. Without knowing it, this denizen would be controlled — and looked after — by such concerns from the cradle to the grave. Gradually, the world itself would become a gigantic multi-national "theme park" for the enjoyment of such denizens, whom the international commercial and political concerns would want to keep well-entertained, well-fed and reasonably docile, since such denizens would be the workers who would keep the whole unnatural System going.

Nature, The Environmental Movement and Race

Many people understand such things as these, as many have some awareness of the problems and the nightmares which await in the future if nothing is done. Indeed, a whole new "environmental" movement has arisen, rooted in such concerns. Many of what has come to be called "ecological" solutions to be such environmental problems have been proposed over the past few decades, most of them well-meaning.

This environmental movement, however, has failed for the most part to really understand Nature because it has ignored one of the most important aspects of Nature. Accordingly, lacking an understanding and appreciation of this aspect, the solutions proposed will not fundamentally work: they will be "against Nature" itself, and will create more problems than they will ultimately solve. The first problem we must understand, and solve, is our own — the nature of our own species, of our own relation to Nature. Having understood this, and solved it, we can seek to work in harmony, in balance, with Nature, and hopefully create a balanced, natural world where Nature is restored to her rightful place, with other species respected and protected and allowed to evolve in their own way.

What has been ignored hitherto is the human racial perspective: the fact that we, as a species, have evolved because of Nature, can evolve still further because of Nature, and must depend upon Nature — must act in accord with the processes or laws of Nature — if we are to survive and evolve further. The concern of most environmentalists and conservationists has been and is, to preserve or conserve as many of the varieties of living things as possible, but they have neglected to consider that we, as a species, are of many varieties, of many races, and that these many races, and their many cultures, deserve to be preserved and allowed to continue to evolve in their own unique way.

Nature — and thus evolution — works to bring about diversity and difference. Our own distinct and unique races, and the diverse cultures and societies such races have produced, are the product of evolution. These things have evolved over long periods of time, and they are what make us, as individuals, unique and special. We are part of our own race, and the culture our race has produced. If we act to preserve and extend our own unique race, and culture, then we are acting in accord with Nature — we are respecting Nature. If, however, we act to undermine or destroy our own unique race and culture, we are acting against Nature — we are being disrespectful to Nature. When we seek to undermine or destroy racial difference and diversity — when we seek to mix-up races and racial cultures — we are ignoring Nature and being arrogant, vainly believing that we know better than Nature. When we do such unnatural things, we are being just as bad, just as thoughtless, as someone who out of ignorance, greed or selfishness, seeks to, or does, destroy some species which Nature has laboured to create. When we do such unnatural things as undermining racial difference — through, for example, condoning race-mixing or accepting such an unnatural creation as the "multi-racial society" — we are no better than some ignorant, greedy developer who destroys some natural habitat, and wipes out a species or two, in order to build some unnecessary road.

The mistake made by the environmental movement has been to assume or believe that we, as a species, are somehow not subject to the laws of Nature — that what applies for all other species does not, or should not, apply to us. This is just sheer willful ignorance, and is inexcusable. Rather than accepting the destruction of our own unique diversity and difference, we should celebrate this diversity and difference of culture and race. We should nurture it, and hope to advance it further. To do this we should seek to create the right social, political and environmental conditions to preserve and extend each unique race and each unique culture. Our own unique races, and our own unique cultures, are under threat and need saving just as much as those animals, those plants and those other species which are threatened by global change, global greed and global ignorance.

We must come to a complete and rational understanding of our own place in the natural "scheme of things", and seek to create a balanced, harmonious way of life where all the many creations of Nature are respected, and where they can continue to evolve. Our planet — so far as we know — is special because it contains life, and this life is special, and should be valued, because of its great diversity, abundance and difference.

The complete and rational understanding we need is contained in the natural philosophy of National-Socialism. National-Socialism explains the importance of the wonderful natural creations — race and individual character — as it explains how a balanced, or harmonious, society can be built to preserve and extend still further these natural creations. National-Socialism further explains how this new type of society can lead individuals to an understanding of Nature herself.

National-Socialism, simply explained, is an example of the laws of Nature in action, and a National-Socialist society is simply an organic society where Nature is respected and revered, and where the natural balance, the natural harmony and beauty of Nature, is displayed in a human and social way. In contrast to the organic, Nature-revering, society or Reich of National-Socialism, all other types of society, presently existing, or existing as a political idea, are lifeless, abstract, and disrespectful of Nature.

II

The Organic Society of National-Socialism

The fundamental difference between the folk-society created by National-Socialist ideals and all other modern societies — be such societies the product of Marxism, capitalism, multi-racial socialism, liberalism or parliamentary "democracy" — is that a National-Socialist society, or Reich, is an organic society, and as such reflects, or represents, the laws of Nature. Such an organic society is natural, healthy and evolutionary. All other modern societies are either: (1) based upon, or derive from artificial abstractions, or ideas, and as such they are all non-organic societies, or (2) the abstract ideas created to create such an unnatural society have infected a healthy organic society, and have reduced that healthy organic society to sickness as they will ultimately cause its death. That is, all other modern societies either are, or will inevitably produce, what is lifeless, soul-less and de- evolutionary.

One of the two fundamental aims of National-Socialism is to create an entirely new type of modern society through a National-Socialist revolution — that is, by implementing the ideals of National-Socialism in a practical way. This new type of society — this Reich — is a society which makes possible and which aids the development of the individuals within it. It is a means to further the evolution of those individuals and their communities. Indeed, the very reason for the existence of such a society is to do this — to continue our upward development as individuals and so create a new, higher, type of human being. To create this new type is the second fundamental aim of National-Socialism.

The Folk Organism

To be living, or organic, a society has to reflect, to represent the natural living organism which is a folk-community bound by ties of blood and a common culture or heritage. This is so because only such a racial, or ethnic, community is living as a natural healthy organism. Only such a unique racial organism is distinct, and the product of evolution. All other types of "community" — such as the multi-racial ones of modern States — are unnatural, artificial constructions which are or which become non-organic. Furthermore, the abstract ideas underlying such societies can infect a healthy organic society and destroy it. Such unnatural societies — or an infected, diseased, once healthy society — do not reflect the natural biological, organic imperatives found in Nature, as they are not distinct in the racial sense.

A living society has a biological imperative — that is, its has a Destiny and an ethos. It is subject to the laws of Nature — to the pattern of birth-life-death-renewal which is found in Nature. Because it is living it seeks to grow, to prosper, to live-on by re-producing itself. Because it is living, and has evolved, it is distinct; it has its own nature, character, or ethos. The truth is that race and folk are Nature made manifest. Race is Nature working to produce diversity and difference — it is evolution in action.

The fundamental truth of our own nature, as human beings, is that we are not isolated beings. We are part of our own unique race just as we possess within ourselves the organic ethos and the organic Destiny of our race — of our folk-organism. We are part of a supra-personal organism which has lived for thousands of years before us and which can life for thousands of years after us — provided we aid its unique organic Destiny. This Destiny is to prosper, to grow, evolve, to develop.

We undermine this organic Destiny — and contribute to the death of this supra-personal organism — when we do not mate among our own kind, our own folk, and when we do not aid the development, or contribute to the prosperity, of this supra-personal organism.

This supra-personal organism which is our folk, and thus our race, is the meaning of our lives. Our purpose is to aid and assist its growth, its evolutionary change, its prosperity. We live-on after death in this organism — in our descendants, in our deeds, in the soil, in the Nature and in the "fatherland" where this organism dwells. There is no meaning to "life-after-death" other than this. There is no meaning to life other than this — everything else is, in reality, either an illusion or a waste of the opportunities that human life offers. Someone who understands these things, and acts upon this understanding, is someone who is enlightened.

The reality of our nature is that our awareness of ourselves, as separate individuals, is both good and bad. It is bad because it can lead us into selfishness — into the pursuit of selfish goals, pleasures and happiness to the detriment of the larger family which is our natural clan, tribe or folk. It is good because it means that we possess the ability to consciously change ourselves by an act of will. This means we can actively aid evolution.

Fundamentally our evolution toward consciousness has presented us with a choice. We can either choose to remain ignorant, unenlightened and selfish, and so ignore our own folk and its future; or we can choose to aid our folk, and thus aid our own individual development. We can either choose to live selfishly, and squander our chance to live on after death; or we can choose to be idealistic and enlightened, and live on after death in our folk. We either accept our organic Destiny, or we have no Destiny. We either accept our responsibilities, our duties, as evolving human beings, or we do not.

Civilization

A higher type of living results when individuals of the same folk or tribe cooperate together for their own benefit. That is, when they place the welfare of their folk before their own self-interest. All that is good and noble about human life derives from such idealism

In the past, Aryan individuals who have chosen to cooperate together, for the good of their tribe or folk, have sometimes produced civilizations — that is, they have created an even higher way of living than that produced by a tribal society. Such civilizations have resulted when noble and creative individuals have cooperated together for the benefit of their folk and when they have displayed a collective, or organized, will — when they have, as a community, been ordered and disciplined. This collective will is basically Destiny. The natural organic imperative of their folk developed, through order, to become the Destiny of their civilization, just as the ethos of their folk became the ethos of their civilization. In an important sense, civilization is the highest type of society so far created on this planet of ours. It was, and is, an evolutionary leap — Nature changing and evolving and aiding the creation of higher forms. But hitherto, the creation and the maintenance of civilization has been instinctive. And hitherto, civilizations have been solely created by Aryans, since only Aryans have been endowed, by Nature, with the gifts of abundant nobility, creativity and collective, or organized, self-discipline or will.

What National-Socialism does is to make the imperative of civilization conscious. That is, National-Socialism gives us the means to understand civilization, and the higher living which results, as well as gives us the ability to continue with and expand — to evolve further — this higher living, and so produce a new race of higher beings. In the simple sense, National-Socialism is the organized, the living will of the race or folk, consciously understood and willingly accepted.

The new even higher form of living, the higher civilization, which it is now possible to produce by using our collective will is the healthy, expanding and organic society of National-Socialism — with its own consciously understood imperative, or Destiny. Since an organic society, or Reich, can only be created by the practical implementation of National-Socialist principles and ideals, it is necessary to consider what these principles and ideals are.

The Principles and Ideals of National-Socialism

The fundamental ideals of National-Socialism are honour, loyalty and duty. An individual striving to live by these ideals is a better person than someone who does not strive to live by them. That is, these ideals produce, or can produce, personal excellence. They represent what is human and civilized, and they produce individuals of real character, or personality. Fundamentally, these ideals enshrine the noble idealism of National-Socialism itself — the pursuit of supra-personal goals and the setting of high and noble standards for individuals.

The most fundamental principle of National-Socialism is that individuals can change themselves, and the world, for the better through an act of will. That is, individuals possess the ability to change themselves, and others — all it requires is an act, or acts, of will, and idealism, the pursuit of a noble goal. This is being idealistic and self-disciplined, and it is the way for individuals, their communities, and their civilization, to be healthy, and to prosper and evolve. In practical terms, this principle means individuals placing the interests of their folk before their own self-interest and before their own pleasure and happiness. If a person does not strive to act and change himself by using his will, then he/she is being weak and decadent. According to this principle, there can be no excuses for bad conduct, for decadence, for weak character — the individual can, and should, change, once they are aware of such things as the noble ideals of National-Socialism, for such change is what it means to be human.

Thus, a National-Socialist revolution fundamentally means a change in people's outlook and behaviour — it means individuals striving to change themselves through an act of will by them applying the ideals of honour, loyalty and duty in their own personal lives. From this personal, inner change, a new society can be built — with the structures and institutions of such a society reflecting or representing these noble ideals and the principles of National-Socialism. Without this personal change, there can be no National-Socialist revolution and thus no National-Socialist society.

The second principle of National-Socialism is that of respecting and revering Nature herself. Race — and thus folk-communities united by ties of blood — reflect the reality of Nature, and accordingly an ethnic, or organic, society is the best, most natural and most healthy type of society for individuals to live in. Such a society represents the organized will of a particular folk — it expresses the unique biological imperative, the unique Destiny, of that folk. Such a society strives for a harmonious balance with Nature, balancing Blood and Soil — Folk and Fatherland — with Conquest and Exploration.

The third principle of National-Socialism is that such an organic society should be the beginning of a quest to continue the work of Nature by striving to advance, to continue, our own evolution, thus creating a new race of higher human beings and a new Golden Age.

The fourth principle of National-Socialism is that this quest to continue our own evolution depends on us understanding, expressing and representing in our own lives and in our society, what is supremely idealistic or numinous — that is, what is beautiful, excellent, inspiring and divine. For only by understanding, expressing and representing or trying to represent what is supremely idealistic or numinous can we as individuals and a folk be inspired to change, to explore, to conquer, to fulfill the purpose of our lives.

Destiny

We Aryans need to re-discover our unique biological imperative — our unique ethos and Destiny. It is this which should inspire us and guide our lives, not the quest for an unnatural and decadent "personal happiness" and certainly not the striving for material comfort and personal wealth. To survive and prosper, a folk or race must possess a Destiny — it must value itself, and be proud of itself. It must be united and strong. If a race or folk does not value itself, is not proud of its achievements and has no sense of or feeling for its racial identity and its Destiny, then that race is ill, and dying.

It is one of the principle aims of National-Socialism to provide us with a sense of racial identity — and to re-unite us with our unique civilizing Destiny — thus enabling us as a race to survive, prosper and create the organic society which is necessary if our evolution is to continue.

The enemy of the noble, evolutionary, idealism of National-Socialism is the selfishness inherent in weak individual character. The enemy of the evolutionary, organic and numinous society which it is the aim of National-

Socialism to create is the diseased society of the present with its lack of personal honour, its abandonment of excellence and its unnatural, diseased and abstract ideas such as racial equality, pacifism, decadent self-indulgence, personal happiness, and disdain for self- discipline.

Folk and Fatherland

III
Our Relation to Nature

In our modern world, with its technology, materialism and its consumer-society, the individual has for the most part lost or forgotten the link, bond or nexus, which exists between them, Nature and the cosmos beyond.

This bond exists because the individual is a living organism, with an organic past, and because this organism for its health and its very life, depends on Nature. It is a modern fallacy that we, as individuals, as human beings, are somehow different from or superior to Nature. We belong to, are part of Nature — to the creative, vital and biological processes of Nature — just as much as trees or a wild animal belong to Nature. Our very life is an expression of this bond between us and Nature herself.

There have, however, been several recent attempts to try and understand, and to re-establish, this living nexus between us, as living human beings, and between Nature. These recent "environmental" and "ecological" attempts mostly focus on the individual, in isolation, and on the "life-style" of the individual, aiming to show that there is or could be a personal "life-style" for the individual which is more "in harmony with Nature" and thus which aids Nature, or helps to protect Nature from exploitation by human beings. Some of these recent attempts go further, and suggest various types of human society which could be constructed to do these and similar things.

However, all these recent attempts are based upon a fundamental misunderstanding of the bond between ourselves and Nature. These recent attempts all ignore how we came to be as we are — how and why we have evolved. What has not been understood is the fact that we ourselves are still subject to the law or processes of Nature — we have arisen because we have evolved from Nature, and because of the biological imperative, the organic Destiny, of our ancestors.

To understand the bond which exists between us and Nature we must understand our own biological imperative — our Destiny as living organisms. This Destiny not only explains the bond between us and Nature, it also enables us to understand what the meaning of our life is — what is the purpose of our existence, here on this planet we call Earth. All living things on this planet, all organisms, are subject to the laws of Nature, to the biological imperative implicit in life itself. Thus, all organisms are born; they all have the potential to grow; they all, if healthy, seek to reproduce themselves, or have descendants; and they all, as individual organisms, must die. All organisms also have the potential to change — to adapt to the conditions they encounter or find themselves in, although for most organisms this adaptation, this evolution, to be noticeable or significant, occurs over many generations.

The biological Destiny which a living organism has depends on its type — on its species, and is thus determined by evolution. A particular biological species is different from other species because of evolution — it has adapted itself over a period of time to do certain things, and has acquired certain characteristics, a certain nature. This nature is inherent in a particular organism because that organism is what it is — a distinct biological type — and because of the ancestors of that organism.

Thus, a bee has evolved to have wings and fly, while a spider is confined to where it can go on its legs — both belong to the type we call "insects", but they are separate species, distinguished by what they can do or cannot do. A spider has the "nature", the character, of a spider, while a bee has the "nature" of a bee. Spiders have evolved to build webs of various kinds in order to catch their food, while bees have evolved to fly in search of their food.

In the same way, we as individuals are who we are — we have the nature we have — because of our ancestors, because of our folk or race. Our own human species has evolved, over vast periods of time, into separate races or folk, each of which has their own unique nature, and each of which because of that nature has its own unique organic Destiny — its own biological imperative.

Contrary to what most people have been led to believe, these different races of ours are of fundamental importance because they express how Nature is manifest to us — they express how we are connected to Nature. What is of vital importance about folk, or race, is this bond — this expression of our own nature, as individuals, this expression of our identity and this expression of our organic Destiny. Race is an expression of the organic Destiny of our own human species. Race expresses, or represents, how we came to be who we are. In the simple sense, race or folk is an expression of the law or processes of Nature — of how Nature works, and is made manifest to us. Race is evolution in action — Nature labouring to produce more diversity and more difference. What is only of secondary importance about race is the actual physical or mental differences between races.

What must be understood is that our folk is our connection to Nature and thus to the cosmos itself. Just as we are Nature made manifest in an individual organism, so our folk is an organism which manifests Nature. In the simple sense, our folk is a living thing, a supra-personal organism which we are part of. The organism of our folk has lived for thousands of years before us, and it can live for thousands of years after us if those who are part of it aid it by seeking to preserve and extend it and keep it vital and healthy. The biological imperative — the organic Destiny — of a folk is to live, to extend itself, and to evolve further.

What we have lost in modern times is an appreciation, an understanding, of the supra-personal organism which is our folk. The folk gives the individual their organic Destiny, just as the folk itself is the meaning of the life of the individual. What most people today assume is "the meaning of life" — personal happiness, pleasure, material comfort and so on — is an illusion; such artificial things are barren, devoid of organic Destiny. Destiny, for an individual, is the organic Destiny inherent in them because of their folk.

The real purpose and meaning of life is to strive to aid or advance or to keep healthy one's living folk — that is, to aid the organic Destiny of one's folk. An individual has been born to do this, and if this is not done, than that individual life has no ultimate meaning or purpose. Their life has been a waste, and the Destiny which is inherent in them by virtue of being alive and born into their folk, is unfulfilled. In the past, most individuals fulfilled some of this Destiny by marrying among their own folk and producing children — descendants to carry on the folk itself. These descendants contained the potential of the folk — a means to aid or to fulfill the Destiny of the folk. Destiny, for the individual, is vital; it is numinous; it is inspiring and life-giving. Destiny produces health. In contrast, the material and selfish illusions which today pass for "meaning" and for "living" are lifeless and devoid of substance. In the same way, modern societies which are based upon these material and selfish illusions are lifeless and devoid of substance.

It is a sad fact that an individual who is a racial mixture, a cross-breed, has lost their Destiny because they have lost that which connects them to Nature — their unique identity, and their unique purpose. They have no soul, no special identity — or at best, they have a confusion of identity, and a confusion of purpose. Those responsible for creating such a mixture have acted against Nature herself — against the racial diversity and racial difference which Nature seeks to produce through evolution and her laws. Such race-mixers, instead of breeding among their own kind, and so seeking to aid their own Destiny and thus the Destiny of Nature, have undermined the Destiny of their own folk. Like those who arrogantly exploit and despoil Nature for commercial profit, those who encourage race-mixing and thus who produce racially-mixed offspring have damaged Nature.

Racially-mixed offspring are for the most part "rootless", and all they can do to try and repair some of the damage their parents have done to Nature, is to strive to aid in a practical way the Destiny of one of the races from which they are descended. That is, they can strive to encourage the racial identity, the racial survival and expansion — and thus the Destiny — of one of the races from which they are descended. If they do anything than this, then their lives are a waste, as they themselves cannot live on in any meaningful way after their own individual death.

IV

Life After Death and The Illusion of Self

Our belief in our own self-contained uniqueness is an illusion. The belief that we have a wide-ranging "freedom" to choose or determine our own destiny is also an illusion. The reality is that we are part of, and dependent upon our folk, and Nature, and the only freedom we have, as part of this larger organism which is our folk, is a freedom to evolve or not to evolve — that is, to aid or not to aid the Destiny of our folk. If we aid this Destiny, we ourselves fulfill the purpose of our lives and so can evolve to what is beyond.

Our individuality, our consciousness, is an evolutionary adaptation. This adaptation has enabled us to evolve further by cooperating together in pursuit of noble aims. It has enabled the creation of a higher, more evolved way of living — the communal living of societies, and later on, of civilization. That is, our individuality, our personality, was and is fundamentally a means to aid our folk — this was, and can be, done through a triumph of individual will, through individuals consciously placing the welfare of their folk, their community, before their own self-interest and their own individual survival. Societies and civilization are created, and flourish, only so long as this is done. That is, only so long as idealism, as nobility, flourishes. In the past, a society or civilization was a society or civilization of a particular folk — an expression of a particular folk in a particular time and place cooperating together and so producing a higher, more evolved, way of living for themselves. As such, such societies and civilizations reflected the Destiny, or part of the Destiny, of a particular folk.

The truth of our individual lives is that we possess a folk-awareness: an awareness beyond the short span of our own individual lives. The reality of the present is that this folk-awareness, this wider perspective, is increasingly being lost in the artificial, lifeless societies of our times. In the past, this awareness was mostly instinctive — a product of our heritage, of our awareness of our communal, or folk identity. It is this awareness which gives meaning to our lives, and it is this awareness which shatters, or which can shatter, the illusion of our independent self.

This folk-awareness is an awareness of how we are connected to Nature through our folk. It is an understanding, instinctive or conscious, of our folk heritage and Destiny — it is an awareness that our folk has existed for thousands of years before us, and can exist for thousands of years after us. It is an awareness that we are our folk made manifest in a particular time and place.

Yet this folk-awareness is only part of what exists — it only expresses part of what we, as human beings are. There is an awareness beyond this — the awareness of Nature herself, and of the cosmos beyond Nature. Each folk is Nature herself made manifest — Nature incarnated in human form, in the individuals of a particular folk. Similarly, Nature is the cosmos made manifest — an incarnation, on this planet we call Earth, of the biological, or organic, imperative of the cosmos. Life itself is the cosmos striving to evolve — the manifestation, in a particular time and space, of the cosmic order which is life. When there is a conscious awareness of this relationship between the cosmos, Nature, folk and individuals, then there is an understanding of life itself.

This supra-personal understanding, this perspective which takes us beyond the individual, not only gives meaning and significance to our own lives, it expresses what the meaning of our lives actually is, and what is beyond our own individual lives when we as individuals die.

What is beyond us, is a whole cosmos of connections and Destinies — a living, or organic, matrix full of living organisms, ranging from the cosmos itself down to planetary-sized organisms such as Nature here on Earth, with its own intricate matrix of living, evolving individual races composed of living, changing individual members.

In a sense, our aim as conscious beings is to discover, to come to know, to understand this cosmic organic matrix, and to aid its living, its organic manifestations and its evolution as best we can. This knowing and this aiding of the organic Destinies of the various organisms, and particularly of our own folk, is for us, as individuals, a further evolution — it is we ourselves contributing to evolution. It is us as individuals going beyond what we are, in a particular time and space, and so fulfilling the purpose of our existence, as living beings possessed of will and possessed of consciousness. Because of this, it is us becoming or seeking to become divine — seeking to participate in the great drama of cosmic evolution. It is us aiding Nature and the cosmos itself.

If we so aid these organic Destinies, we ourselves become these Destinies, and become incarnate in the future, in a developed form. That is, if we aid the Destiny of our folk, we become our folk, its very future and its possible future manifestations. We also become Nature, in evolution, and thus the cosmos itself — the very life of the cosmos. That is, we live-on after our own individual death in these things. This living-on, however, is not given, not certain, not fated — it has to be achieved, by the individual in this life, through a triumph of individual will and through an aiding of Destiny. If it is not achieved, then the promise of life in the individuals not achieving it has remained unfulfilled.

Beyond our individual death, there is no "heaven", no "hell", no "nirvana", no "paradise", no "Valhalla" where we live-on as individuals with the feelings, the awareness of ourselves as individual beings. There is also no "re-birth" as another individual. These are all illusions built upon the illusion of an independent self. All there is or can be is a supra-personal awareness — a transcending, or development, to become a new type of being. This new type of being is part of or lives in the supra-personal organism which is our folk, which is Nature and which is the cosmos itself — all manifestations or incarnations of the very essence of life itself, and all parts of the same thing, the same type of living being. There is no division of this essence, as there is no space dividing world from world, and no slow passing of causal time. In the simple sense, if we transcend, through our achievements and our aiding of Destiny, to what is beyond our individual existence, we become like immortal gods. The cosmos itself, and all life within it, is our home, and we can travel the cosmos and dwell anywhere within it. This is so because we become the very essence of these things, which exists beyond our normal time and beyond our normal causal space.

There is an understanding and insight here which is profound, awesome and important for our future. Unfortunately, it is an understanding which many people in these times will not or cannot understand or appreciate, since it is contrary to the illusive beliefs, the illusive dogmas, and the materialism, which dominate and determine the societies of our time. As such, it is the insight, the understanding of the next thousand years, and one which will aid, or create, a more highly evolved human being.

V

Folk and Fatherland:

Creating an Organic Folk-Society

The Destiny of a particular folk can be made manifest in a fatherland. A fatherland is an ethnic or folk society which dwells in a particular place or homeland. To aid Nature, and to further evolution, folk societies must be created on a world-wide basis to preserve and aid each unique folk or race which Nature has evolved. To do otherwise is to undermine and destroy what Nature has striven to create — it is to arrogantly damage Nature herself. Only a folk society — an ethnic society, state or nation — is a living, or organic society, and only such a healthy living society can aid Nature and further the evolution of our own species. All other types of society, however well-meaning, are contrary to Nature and anti-evolutionary as they all will damage Nature, probably irretrievably so.

For a particular folk to survive, prosper and evolve — and thus for Nature herself to be aided — it must have a home, a place to dwell, as it must establish a harmonious balance with Nature. Most importantly of all, it must have or establish its own identity — and possess a sense or an understanding of its unique Destiny, a sense of perspective and a sense of pride. The folk must value its own traditions, heritage and culture, as they must seek to keep their folk itself alive. This means them keeping blood pure by marrying among their own racial kind. The individuals of that folk must be nourished by good food, as they must be or become physically healthy. The land itself must be cared for, for the folk depend on its well-being. Thus there is, or there must be developed, an awareness of Blood and Soil, of Folk and Fatherland.

There is also, or there must be developed, an awareness of the Destiny of that unique folk. In the past, the Destiny of a particular folk has been expressed by means of a myth or legend, mostly involving gods or deities.

Such myths and legends are no longer necessary, since we now possess the ability to consciously know and understand the Destiny of our folk, based as this unique Destiny is on the unique ethos, the unique character, of a particular folk.

A living society has a supra-personal purpose — a striving to make its Destiny real. The individuals of such a society thus possess a supra-personal purpose. Basically, a folk society is the organized will of the folk. It is an ordered society full of self-disciplined individuals who willingly cooperate together for their own greater good because they know or feel that such an ordered, self-disciplined society makes them better more healthy individuals, and gives them an opportunity to fulfilll the real purpose of their lives. Thus can they, and their folk, evolve, and a new higher race of human beings comes into existence. The values of an organic society are the values of idealism and nobility — the quest or striving for personal and supra-personal excellence by the setting of high personal standards.

In contrast, modern non-organic societies aim to satisfy the selfish material desires of the individuals within that society. There is no supra-personal purpose which individuals can aspire to and which inspires them, and indeed no united purpose which such societies strive for — except for vague and illusive and abstract ideas like "happiness" and "security". Thus, such societies are dis-organized, de-evolutionary and do not work particularly well.

We have now reached the stage of our evolution when we possess the understanding — and have developed the self-centred arrogance, the illusion of self — to either aid Nature, or to severely damage Nature. An ethnic, organic or folk society — based upon Folk and Fatherland — is a step toward aiding Nature and our own evolution, both as a species and as individuals. Any and every type of multi-racial society is a ruthless destruction of Nature.

To create an organic society requires us to act with understanding, to be self-disciplined, to achieve our own unique triumph of the will. We either recognize, and strive to restore, our connection with Nature evident in race, or we selfishly and arrogantly ignore this connection, and damage Nature, and the future of our own species, here on this planet we call Earth.

The suppressed and feared truth of our times is that the National-Socialism of Adolf Hitler was a modern and conscious expression of the wisdom of Folk and Fatherland. He himself was an incarnation of the Destiny of the Aryan folk and his mission was to reveal this wisdom and restore the connection between our species and Nature, thus enabling us to aid Nature and continue with our evolution. The noble folk society he started to create in Germany was to be a practical means to achieve a new Golden Age, here on this planet of ours.

That his work was unfinished, and ruthlessly destroyed by his enemies, and that National-Socialism and Adolf Hitler have been the subject of the most hateful, the most intense lying and dishonourable propaganda campaign the world has ever seen, expresses an awful lot about the forces and influences which now hold sway over this planet which is our home.

Part Three
Beyond The Egotism Of The Past:
A Revolutionary National-Socialist Manifesto

VI
A Revolutionary Manifesto

This is a revolutionary manifesto because it clearly outlines what individuals must accept if a truly noble and evolutionary society is to be created. This evolutionary society is basically a noble society where the fundamental ideals of National-Socialism — honour, loyalty, duty — are accepted by individuals, accepted as the guiding principles of public life and are the foundations of all public institutions and government itself.

What must be accepted is that certain things are detrimental to, or hinder, our own evolution and thus the creation of a higher, more noble way of life. The majority of these detrimental things arise from our own egotism and our own desire for material possessions, material comfort and wealth. If we are to evolve and become higher, more cultured, more civilized beings — and if we are to create a more advanced way of life, a more advanced society and a more advanced civilization — we must reject and go beyond such things, however difficult it is and however radical and revolutionary. What is important is to accept what is necessary, change our own lives through a personal triumph of the will, and strive to create a better, more noble society for our people.

To create such a society all that is necessary is idealism and a triumph of will. This is revolutionary, and will require a practical revolution, in people's attitudes, and in society. Such a society can never be created by compromise: by pandering to what is egotistical, material, "respectable" and bourgeois. For National-Socialism, the State, the economy, and society itself, are only a means — a means to create a more advanced, more highly evolved individual, and a more advanced, more highly evolved folk or race. What practical and immediate difficulties exist, are only there to be overcome through a practical, human and revolutionary implementation of idealism.

This Manifesto outlines only the bare essentials — the essence — of what is necessary. It is intended as a guide to revolutionary action, and a stimulus to the development of National-Socialist philosophy.

As Adolf Hitler wrote in Mein Kampf:

"The State is only the vessel and the race is what it contains. The vessel can have a meaning only if it preserves and safeguards the contents. Otherwise it is worthless.

Hence the supreme purpose of the ethnic State is to guard and preserve those racial elements which, through their work in the cultural field, create the beauty and the dignity which are characteristic of a higher mankind. As Aryans, we can consider the State only as the living organism of a people, an organism which does not merely maintain the existence of a people, but functions in such a way so as to lead its people to a position of supreme liberty by the progressive development of the intellectual and cultural faculties ...

Out of a dead mechanism which claims to be an end in itself [our present State] a living organism shall arise which has to serve one purpose exclusively: and that purpose is one which belongs to a higher order of existence...

The racial Weltanschauung is in profound accord with Nature's will — because it restores the free play of those forces which will lead the race through stages of sustained reciprocal development towards a higher type, until finally the best portion of mankind will possess the Earth and will be free to work in every domain all over the world, and even reach places that lie far beyond this Earth. "

"The instinct for the preservation of one's own folk is the primary cause that leads to the formation of human communities. Hence the State is a racial organism, and not an economic organization. The difference between the two is so great as to be incomprehensible to our contemporary politicians. That is why they like to believe that the State may be constituted as an economic structure, whereas the truth is that it has always resulted from the exercise of those qualities which are part of the will to preserve the folk and the race. Furthermore, these qualities always exist and operate through the heroic virtues and have nothing to do with commercial egoism; for the conservation of the folk always presupposes that the individual is ready to sacrifice himself. Such is the meaning of the poet's lines:

Und setzet ihr nicht das Leben ein,
Nie wird euch das Leben gewonnen sein.
[And if you do not risk your life,
You will never win life for yourself.]

The sacrifice of the individual existence is necessary in order to ensure the conservation of the race. Hence it is that the most essential condition for the establishment and maintenance of a State is a certain feeling of solidarity, grounded in an identity of character and race, and in a resolute readiness to defend these at all costs."

VII

The Future Evolutionary Society

National-Socialism belongs to the future because National-Socialism represents our noble desire to continue our evolution, as individuals and as a species, and because it is a practical means to create a truly advanced and evolutionary society. National-Socialism is fundamentally idealistic and indeed spiritual — a manifestation of what lies beyond egotism and materialism. As such, National-Socialism can create a new world, a new Golden Age, where the noble idealism and the spirituality it represents is made real, thus enabling us as human beings to fulfill our divine, or evolutionary, potential.

Beyond Private Property

In contrast to the noble and practical idealism of National-Socialism, modern life and modern societies waste our human potential. Such societies mostly manifest or encourage what is essentially a sub-human and primitive way of living — the pursuit of materialism and the triumph of the selfish, egotistical individual. Nowhere is this modern selfishness, this triumph of destructive egotism, more evident than in private property and in the desire to obtain and keep private property and private wealth. An advanced, evolutionary society is one where selfish greed, destructive egotism and the sub-human materialism of the present and the past have all been banished and abolished because left behind. To leave such things behind requires the willing abolition of private property, and this itself requires individuals to achieve their own triumph of the will by accepting and upholding what is noble and idealistic rather than what is egotistical or of benefit to them, as individuals in isolation. In brief, it means individuals nobly striving to place the welfare, and the future, of their folk or society before their own self-interest. Furthermore, it means that new society itself striving for supra-personal and inspiring, or numinous, goals.

We have to, and must, go beyond — we must abolish — the petty and destructive materialism of the past, the capitalism of the past, and the petty and destructive egotistical desires we ourselves feel. We must free ourselves from what is primitive and what is mundane. We must concentrate on and develop our higher, our civilized nature, and reject — through a triumph of will — our primitive egotistical nature. If we do these things, we are being human; if we do not do these things — if we scorn self-discipline and idealism — then we are being sub-human and living in a sub-human way.

We must create a government, a State, an economy, and a society which can and which does provide us with the basic essentials we need to live and be healthy — good housing, good health care, a good environment and good food. This can and will free us from the basic mundane tasks of living thus enabling us to pursue supra-personal, higher, more worthwhile and numinous goals which can and which will create a higher type of individual, a higher way of living and a higher civilization. Such things should be provided because that is the sole, the genuine purpose of a State, its government and its economy: to care for its folk, and to create conditions which enable the evolution of that folk.

National-Socialism: Not Communism

It must be further understood that the revolutionary ideals of National-Socialism represent what is necessary to create an evolutionary society. They are National-Socialist, not Communist; that is, such ideals reflect the nature of racial socialism and not the nature of the egalitarian socialism of Communism. Fundamentally, National-Socialism accepts the reality of Nature, and our own human existence, manifest in race and in excellence of individual character, whereas Communism seeks to undermine and destroy both racial diversity and difference, and excellence of individual character.

Communism means coercion of the people — a dictatorship. National-Socialism means the freedom of a folk-democracy — the freedom of an organic society. Communism means the pursuit of an anti-evolutionary and materialistic utopian society; National-Socialism means the pursuit of non-materialistic and numinous goals. Communism means an end to individual excellence, and the desire to destroy individual personality and individual responsibility; National-Socialism means the pursuit of personal excellence through a striving for honour and idealism, and the acceptance of individual responsibility.

Please remember: Our Fight is Your fight! Donate whatever you can spare on a regular—monthly or quarterly—basis. Whether it is $2., $5., $20., or $100. or more, rest assured it is needed here and will be used in our common struggle. If you are a businessman, postage stamps in any denomination are a legitimate business expense—and we need and use many of these here every month—and will be gratefully accepted as donations .

Your donations will help us spread the Message of Liberty and White Survival throughout the land, by making available additional copies of our printed material to fellow Whites who do not yet know what is in store for them.

Order our pamphlets, booklets, and, most importantly, our reprints of revealing articles which are ideally suited for mass distribution at reasonable cost. Order extra copies of Liberty Bell for distribution to your circle of friends, neighbors, and relatives, urging them to subscribe to our unique publication. Our bulk prices are shown on the inside front cover of every issue of Liberty Bell.

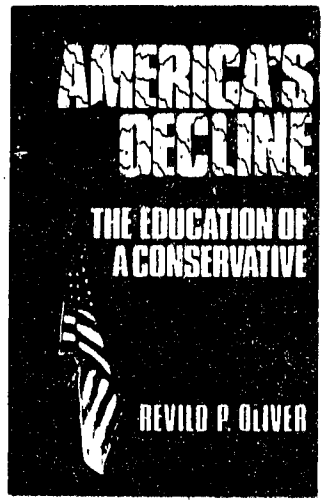
Pass along your copy of Liberty Bell, and copies of reprints you obtained from us, to friends and acquaintances who may be on our "wave length," and urge them to contact us for more of the same.

Carry on the fight to free our White people from the shackles of alien domination, even if you can only join our ranks in spirit. You can provide for this by bequest. The following are suggested forms of bequests which you may include in your Last Will and Testament:

1. I bequeath to Mr. George P. Dietz, as Trustee for Liberty Bell Publications, P.O. Box 21, Reedy WV 25270 USA, the sum of $ . . . . . for general purposes.

2. I bequeath to Mr. George P. Dietz, as Trustee for Liberty Bell Publications, P.O. Box 21, Reedy WV 25270 USA, the following described property . . . . . for general purposes.

DO YOUR PART TODAY—HELP FREE OUR WHITE RACE FROM ALIEN DOMINATION!



ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigous academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

On the 18th Amendment (Prohibition): "Very few Americans were sufficiently sane to perceive that they had repudiated the American conception of government and had replaced it with the legal principle of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat,' which was the theoretical justification of the Jews' revolution in Russia."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

BOOK REVIEW

By
Charles E. Weber

John Lukacs, The Hitler of History, New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1997. xiv + 282 pages. $26.

Lukacs emigrated from Hungary to the United States in 1946 and has taught at various universities. He now lives in Pennsylvania.

Lukacs discusses and evaluates many biographical works on Hitler and suggests that there might be a hundred of them in all. Included in his discussions and evaluations are the biographies of Hitler written by German authors, such as those by Joachim Fest (1973 and 1995), Hans-Bernd Gisevius (1963), Hermann Giesler (1977), Percy Schramm (1971) and Rainer Zitelmann (1989). When reading these discussions I had to ask myself to what extent such discussions are futile in view of the present repressive atmosphere in Germany, where deviation from official versions of history is punished by prison sentences completely disdainful of principles of intellectual freedom, such as the one recently imposed on Udo Walendy, who published a series of revisionist historical monographs under the title, Historische Tatsachen. Even more grotesque are the imprisonments of Gerhard Lauck and Hans Schmidt, both American citizens who were caught in the web of German courts for sending from the United States to persons in Germany printed matter with which the Bonn government does not agree. By the way, Prof. Percy Schramm's name means much to me, since I translated a paper by him on the extent of German civilian deaths from Allied bombing when I was a War Department employee in 1947. Schramm's estimate, as I recall, was about 800,00 of such deaths, over twice the estimate of Allied authorities.

Lukacs repeatedly attacks David Irving, author of Hitler's War (1977) and a number of other important works on National Socialist Germany. Irving now threatens libel proceedings against agents who would distribute Hitler in History in the United Kingdom, as he states in his Action Report of 1 December, 1997 page 10. On page 26 Lukacs characterizes Irving as an "unrepentant admirer of Hitler." On page 27 Lukacs, while conceding that Irving's contributions to the study of Hitler cannot be ignored, states that almost all of Irving's references "must be considered with caution." On page 179 Lukacs dismisses Irving's contention that Hitler intended to postpone the solution of the Jewish problem until after the war. On page 227 Irving (along with Toland) is characterized as an amateur historian, a statement that is obviously untrue, since Irving earns his living by his historical writings and lectures. I think that Irving has a good right to threaten libel action.

Lukacs discusses at some length (pages 32 ff.) the Historikerstreit (Historians' Quarrel), a bitter debate amongst German historians about Hitler, National Socialism and the Second World War which commenced in 1986, over four decades after the "end" of war. The Second World War, by the way, had some rather striking similarities to the American Civil War (1861-1865), which is still the subject of often bitter debates, because the results of that war are still very much with us Americans. (See my essay in the Liberty Bell of December 1990.)

Lukacs pays too little attention to the effects of the Versailles Treaty and the resultant loss of large parts of Germany which had been inhabited by Germans for many centuries. These effects had a strong influence on Hitler and the German people as a whole. "Hitler, born at Versailles," as one author put it.

Lukacs shows a good measure of fairness in his analysis of support of Germans for National Socialism in the chapter, "The Germans: Chapter or Episode?" (pages 197-222), in which he examines the question whether or not National Socialism were a continuation of developments in Germany or an abrupt departure away from them. (One might pose corresponding questions about the Roosevelt administration and its radical measures of 1933 ff. which bitterly divided the American people and set class against class.) On pages 95-96 Lukacs quite justly enumerates Hitler's remarkable successes up to 1938 in reducing unemployment and in bringing Germans in Austria and Bohemia into the Reich, about which they were generally quite enthusiastic. Such considerations remind me of the questions with which I had to deal in 1945 to April, 1946 when I was part of an intelligence team that administered an internment facility for high-ranking former members of the National Socialist Party who had been subject to automatic arrest. This facility was located in Kornwestheim north of Stuttgart.

Lukacs pays little or no attention to the important factor of rivalry for export markets as a reason for the declarations of war against Germany by England and France on 3 September, 1939 after German forces had invaded parts of Germany which had been annexed by the newly formed Polish republic after the Versailles Treaty of 1919. Two weeks after the declarations of war against Germany the USSR invaded Poland from the east, but there was no declaration of war against the USSR, which did not have the kind of industry that would have been effective in competing for export markets. The USSR subsequently annexed parts of Finland and Rumania and all of the three Baltic republics, again with no declaration of war against it.

Lukacs, of course, makes no mention of the book by Theodore Kaufman, Germany Must Perish [available from Liberty Bell Publications, $5.00 + postage], published as early as 1941, which advocated the total genocide of the German population by means of sterilization and which was applauded by all too many American publishers. This book was well-known to propaganda agencies of the German government, which pointed out this grim threat to the German nation. Then there were the mass bombings of German civilians, the Morgenthau Plan and other threats of genocide. It is futile to try to understand Hitler's conduct of the war without bearing the effects of such threats in mind. The grim Morgenthau Plan, which was partly carried out during the postwar years by the dismantling of German factories, is not mentioned by Lukacs.

Lukacs also makes no mention of the publications on the Jewish question in the Dearborn Independent (1920-1922) supported by Henry Ford. These were soon translated into German and seem to have inspired the corpus work on the Jewish question, Forschungen zur Judenfrage (Hamburg, 1937-1943 in nine volumes). National Socialism was not an isolated development. There is no doubt that Hitler was influenced by Ford. There were other American influences on Hitler which I intend to survey in a future article. Lukacs mentions Hitler's "Americanism" on page 99.

Lukacs discusses at some length (pages 149 ff. and 225) Hitler's decision to invade Russia. One notable motive examined was the need to deprive England of any hope of exploiting the USSR as an ally, since England showed no signs of willingness to compromise, even after Rudolf Hess' significant flight to Scotland on 10 May, 1941, to which Lukacs gives only a passing mention on page 170. There is also a striking absence of any mention of the book by Victor Suvorov, Icebreaker (London: Hamish Hamilton, 1990). Suvorov demonstrates the preparations for a Soviet attack against Germany on the basis of unit histories and features of weaponry of the Red Army.

On pages 153-154 Lukacs discusses with general accuracy Hitler's reactions to Roosevelt's diabolical efforts to drag the United States into a war against Germany while cynically disregarding the wishes for nonintervention of the vast majority of Americans. When Hitler finally declared war against the United States on 11 December, 1941 he was simply recognizing a virtual state of war which had already existed. Hitler thus gave a free hand to his naval to defend themselves.

Lukacs' sixth chapter, "The Jews: Tragedy and Mystery" (pages 176 to 196), gives little space to the actual aspects of the deportation of and alleged attempt to exterminate the Jews of Europe. Lukacs does a fancy dance around the fact that no written order by Hitler has ever been found for the extermination of the Jews among the mountains of documents which the Allies captured, many of which I held in my own hands when I worked in the document center in Fechenheim near Frankfurt in the autumn of 1945. Lukacs accepts the usual "Holocaust" material at almost complete face value without going into any of the many reasons for doubts about it which are presented in such books as those by Prof. Arthur Butz of Northwestern University (The Hoax of the Twentieth Century), Wilhelm Stäglich (Der Auschwitz Mythos), and me (The 'Holocaust' / 120 Questions and Answers). He mentiones none of these authors by name, However there is evidence that he knows Butz' book or at least has heard of it in his use of the word "hoax" on page 180. Lukacs accepts the "Holocaust" material with such blind faith that he writes of the "mass murder of at least 4.5 million Jews due to his [Hitler's] orders, or at least in accordance with his wishes." Since Hitler never controlled more than about 3.8 million Jews, as should seem plausible by pre- and postwar statistics on Jewish populations, such a figure is absurd. Even more damaging to Lukacs' credibility is his statement on page 188 that the "Final Solution (meaning the collection and extermination of most Jews throughout Europe) was being planned and drafted and finally set down on paper by some of Hitler's minions at the Wannsee Conference on 20 January, 1942." Lukacs must be referring to the minutes of the conference, of which only one copy is known. (Stäglich reproduces it on pages 39 to 53 of his Der Auschwitz Mythos. Lukacs has presumably never read this alleged record of the conference, which makes no mention of a plan for the extermination of "most Jews throughout Europe." Instead, the document, which is stamped Geheime Reichssache! (= top secret) and at least parts of which might be genuine, mentions the economic employment of the Jews in such tasks as road building ("strassenbauend" and envisages the ultimate release ("bei Freilassung" of the Jews. Strangely, the purported document has none of the usual signatures and other peripheral materials of a secret document and is numbered 16 of 30 copies, of which none other is known.

Every so often one comes across indications even from Jewish sources that if the German government intended to exterminate most of the Jews of Europe, it was pretty dilatory about getting on with the task. Recently I came across the announcement of a book in the New York Review of Books (15 May 1997, page 7). This book by Martin Gilbert is the "story of 732 young concentration camp survivors" who drifted into Prague in May, 1945.

Another example of Lukacs' dealing with the "Holocaust" material is the dismissing of Fred Leuchter's significant investigation of the allegedly homicidal gas chambers in Auschwitz without any details of Leuchter's impressive evidence (page 233, not 223, as listed in the index). On the question of the origin of Kristallnacht (the anti-Jewish riots of November, 1938) and Hitler's role in it, Lukacs makes no mention of the important book by Ingrid Weckert, Feuerzeichen. Miss Weckert documents convincingly that Hitler swiftly put out an order for the cessation of riots against Jewish property. By the way, it is worthy of note that a considerable part of the retail trade in Germany was still in Jewish hands nearly six years after Hitler came to power.

The alleged anti-Jewish brutalities in Germany evoked less support among the German people than among some eastern European peoples (page 220). The reasons for this were the proximity to the USSR and the brutal Soviet occupations during 1940-1941 in which Jews played a prominent role, as they also did after 1945. The nature of these Soviet occupations should have served as an admonishment to other Europeans as well as to Americans. Indeed, the admonishment was not lost on the hundreds of thousands of Scandinavians, Belgians, Dutchmen and French men who served in the German armed forces as volunteers. A number of prominent intellectuals were favorably impressed by Hitler, such as Robert Brasillach, Knut Hamsun and the American poet Ezra Pound (pages 242 and 247).

I must ask if Lukacs has ever seen such books as those by Suvorov, Leuchter, Weckert, Butz, Stäglich and me or if he just did not dare to mention them lest his book would have been rejected by all major ("establishment") publishers. It seems that Lukacs has a good knowledge of the German language so that he has access to writings in German.

On a future evaluation of Hitler Lukacs writes on page 243: "Yet readers who have followed my book until now will know that a pro-Hitler literature by 'apologists and admirers' does exist, and will continue to exist, and not only among 'a later generation of Germans.' " I could not read this sentence without pondering the possible future evaluation of Hitler in the United States, where the position of the Aryan component of the American population is likely to become ever more desperate in the coming decades. Will Hitler then appear to future generations of Aryans as a hero who once defended their welfare at the cost of his life?

In all fairness to Lukacs it must be recognized that Hitler in History is a far cry from the biographies of Hitler and works on National Socialism which have been written by uncompromising haters of Germany (e.g., Shirer and Goldhagen) who disregarded and deëmphasized the larger historical contexts and who thus provided Americans with comforting rationalizations about their role in damaging so much of Europe and in setting the scene for nearly a half century of the dangerous and costly Cold War. ❑

MODERN MUSIC:

Where Have All The White Men Gone?

By

A.V. Schaerffenberg

Art always tells us the truth about the society that produces it. Even bad art. Especially bad art.

Art is fundamentally the expression of a peoples's soul. The quality of art at any particular moment in the development of a nation speaks more about its creators and its audience than volumes of written history. A picture is indeed worth a thousand words, at least. However, art is far more significant than so many colorful paintings or musical sounds. It has an importance beyond aesthetics. It presents far-ranging social implications for the spiritual health of entire civilizations. It is the barometer of a people's collective sanity. It is the way through which they view and judge their contemporary surroundings. The greatest artists and the worst are essentially alike, in that they reflect the world in which they operate. They cannot help but do otherwise. They "hold the mirror up to life," just as hamlet says. But what do Americans see reflected in the mirror held up by today's artists? We sense a darkly ominous reply to that question.

Before we attempt to answer it, however, let us focus our investigation on a single art form: so-called 'classical' or 'serious' music. Musical societies flourished in Colonial America. Most of our country's Founding Fathers were amateur musicians, and some, such as President Jefferson, were quite accomplished. America produced many very fine composers into the 19th Century, but none of world-class status. Ours was still a new culture that needed time to find its own voice. There was also the domination of German music. This is not to be wondered at. Each of our Aryan nationalities excels in at least one particular art that leaves all others behind. For the Gallic temperament, it is painting (Renoir, Monet, Degas, etc.). For the Slavic, ballet (Pavlova, Nijinsky, Nureyev, etc.). The Latin soul generates incomparable art songs (Italy's Neapolitan, Portugal's Fado, the Spanish Flamenco, etc.). The Scandinavians are superior woodcarvers. Modern Celtic genius triumphs in the stage plays of Shakespeare, Shaw and Wilde. For Americans, it is literature (Emerson, Thoreau, Poe, etc.). The Germans' supreme cultural contribution to Western Civilization is (or was) symphonic music. No other nation produced as many top-quality composers, conductors, teachers or performers. American musicians, like their European contemporaries, were heavily influenced by what Richard Wagner called "the music of the future," because all the developmental problems of what eventually became symphonic music were worked out by the Teutonic masters of the last 300 years.

GREAT MUSIC, THE EXCLUSIVE PRODUCT OF THE ARYAN RACE!

German genius across the generations from Bach and Handel in the 17th Century, to Haydn and Mozart in the 18th, beyond to Beethoven and Bruckner in the 19th, and culminating in the early 20th Century with Richard Strauss, created music with a strong sense of order (Bach's Toccata & Fugue), (Mozart's Little Night Music), idealism (Strauss's A Hero's Life) and spiritual power (Bruckner's Symphony #9. These became the aesthetic standards for all great musical composition in the Western World. The true voice of our Aryan instinct found voice in the greatest music ever composed and performed. Yet, their symphonic triumph did not Germanize music in other lands.

On the contrary, it gave a new artistic language to every people through which to voice their own folkish character. If Richard Wagner epitomized the German soul, then Ralph Vaughn Williams did the same for the British people, as did Verdi for the Italians, Grieg for the Norwegians or De Faya for the Spanish. In the music of Poulenc or Satie listeners hear the heartbeat of France, just as they instantly recognize the national personality of Russia in the music of Glinka, Moussorgski or Rimsky-Korsakov. What do these incomparably enriching differences prove, if not that each Aryan nationality is eminently worth preserving as distinct contributions to Western Civilization, and not to be merged into an indistinguishable sameness that is the goal of race-mixers?

As mentioned at the outset, art is inextricable from the times which generate it. At the time this supreme achievement of "music of the future" was reaching its apogee (1880-1914), Germany rose to become a united nation; the British and French Empires attained their greatest extent; Czarist Russia reached its height of cultural magnificence in the Romanov Dynasty's 300-year history; the United States was emerging as a world power, etc. In other words, Western Civilization was strong, healthy, vigorous, safe, self-confident, and still largely controlled by the Aryan people who built it over the previous centuries. In those days, virtually everyone took White superiority and supremacy for granted as an obvious, self-evident fact of life. Whenever considered, mixing of any kind with non-Whites was universally regarded with horror as the worst personal degradation and immorality suggestive of bestiality. It was from this climate of Aryan racial self-consciousness and racial strength only that the great musical achievements of the past could arise.

HOW THE JEWS OVERPOWERED AMERICAN MUSIC

In the U.S., around the turn of the last century, a uniquely American voice was just beginning to express itself in the symphonic output of Edward McDowell, John Knowles Paine and Charles Tomlinson Griffiths. They and all their colleagues eagerly followed the Germany lead. But in so doing (and thereby honing and perfecting their extraordinary abilities), they were slowly evolving a folkish sound peculiar to the American experience. This healthy, natural development based firmly on the supreme European traditions, although striving to express its own nationality, was dealt a sudden death-blow with the advent of World War I. Everything German was abruptly condemned and anyone showing sympathetic interest in anything from Central Europe was branded a spy or traitor. Mobs sacked German restaurants and curio shops. Americans of German descent, fearful of having their patriotism if not their personal safety compromised, Anglicized their names. At New York's Metropolitan Opera, all German language performances were canceled. In other cities across the U.S., concert halls banned German music, thereby self-sacrificing most of their own repertoire.

German-American professional musicians were sometimes hounded from public performance, such as the outstanding conductor, Karl Muck. Or, out of fear, they became ostentatiously anti-German, like the opera singer, Augustin Schumann-Heink. Niggers wail about the 'prejudice' under which they suffered throughout American history, but German-Americans in the first part of this century were not unfamiliar with the phenomenon. As a measure of the madness sweeping America at the time, any hungry customer who ordered a hamburger instead of a 'liberty-burger' was circumspect. Americans, under the hypnotic gaze of a managed public opinion through Jewish control of almost every outlet of information, were taught to despise whatever was German, even in their own history or personal background. This racially suicidal hysteria absolutely derailed the course of American music, because our artists had the foundation of their development knocked out from under them.

But if some felt the pre-war domination by German musicians was too heavy, they were in for a shock when our country was radically transformed under Jewish domination. World War I swept all Gentile American composers into oblivion almost overnight. In their place stood the likes of George Gershwin, the undisputed master of our nation's musical life throughout the 1920's. The Aryan spirit, as expressed in German music, had embodied a sense of order, proportion and spiritual striving, while the Jewish soul, as demonstrated by Gershwin's output, was undisguised vulgarity. He poisoned and cheapened American music by niggerizing it. His opera set the pace for what was to come. The story of a nigger low-life (a spook murders his wife, a la O.J.), entirely performed by coons, set to jig-a-boo jazz written by a Jewish composer for almost entirely Aryan consumption, Porgy and Bess was a landmark in the destruction of American fine art. The undisputed fact that negroes, (although starring in its production) have almost never attended Porgy and Bess, and have shown little or no interest in it, demonstrates that that work was deliberately aimed at eroding racial pride in White people, who overwhelmingly comprise its audiences.

Gershwin's great contribution toward that intentional demise was not only the racial rot he introduced. He kicked away the Aryan European standards on which American music formerly stood. By doing so, he set the musical stage in the U.S. for forthcoming decades of chaos. With no more standards to concern them, composers were not obliged to suffer under the demanding musical discipline laid down by German teachers. But instead of producing sublime compositions to rival those of their predecessors, the artists spawned by Gershwin's aptly named 'lost generation' produced only tumult. They made no distinction between noise and music, because both are, after all, just sounds.

BETTER MIDORI THAN HEIFITZ!

It should come as no surprise that the originator of this madness was a man with a name like Arnold Schoenberg, and so greatly admired by Gershwin that the jazz composer painted a personal portrait of his mentor. Schoenberg's so-called 'polytonality' (many tones going in different directions simultaneously) and 'atonality' ('anti-melody') perverted Western musical composition for almost the rest of the 20th Century, until it, like its political kin in the Soviet Union, eventually collapsed of its own rottenness. If the World War had opened the door to Jewish domination, Franklin Roosevelt's election to the presidency threw open the floodgates. America's musical life was gang-raped by mobs of Bernsteins, Blitzsteins and Shapiros. And their numbers over here swelled horribly when Adolf Hitler began to sanitize Germany. The sounds these creatures scratched out dug deeper the grave for American culture. Typically neurotic, very often overtly Communist, their work ran the gamut from the trivial to the repellent.

Among the most performed of this period was Aaron Copeland, the termite-faced scribbler of mostly comprehensible but bland music he had the effrontery to palm off as "characteristic of the American folk-sound." In fact, he only cooked up one composition, his annoyingly redundant Appalachian Spring, which he reprised over and over again under different titles. Even this work relied so heavily on genuine American folk melodies that its existence would not have been possible without them. Long before the likes of Copeland, a real musician and one of the very greatest, Franz Liszt, nailed Jewish composers as "unoriginal and imitative." He was right, because the Jews have never produced anything original, relying ever and always for the host nation upon whom they fasten for cultural scraps from the masters' worktable. It is not without reason that the Jews refer to themselves as a 'mosaic people,' taking what fragments, discarded or stolen, they can, like the scavengers they have always been. As though in revenge for the Gentile composer's anti-Jew honesty in the century before, Pauline Alpert was infamous in the 1920's for desecrating his Hungarian Rhapsody with a jazz-piano rendition.

The huge influx into the U.S. of Jews deloused from the Third Reich resulted in their absolute domination of America's musical life. Today, as anyone who listens to an FM 'fine arts' radio station knows, the majority of professional performers are Jewish: Barenboim, Pearlman, Ashkanazy, Solti — a recitation of their many and familiar names is a tedious exercise that only confirms the obvious. An immediate consequence of our Jewized art scene is a general lowering of quality concert performances. While no one doubts the average competence of these kosher pianists, violinists or conductors, none among them begin to approach the real genius of a Furtwaengler, a Rachmaninoff or a Kreisler. In effect, just about any students with even mediocre talent, if they have the money to be schooled for years by the best (i.e., most expensive) teachers, could do at least as well as the overrated Jewish performers.

But the Jews have rotted out American music for so many decades that even they are now being ousted by the very miscegenating forces unleashed by their fellow Gershwinites. As our society becomes ever more 'multi-cultural' (a newspeak word for 'race-mixed'), the non-White floodtide is inundating Jew and Aryan alike, as shown by the growing number of Asian performers. The trickle of Oriental artists beginning with that paragon of mediocrity, Seiji Ozawa, soon broadened into a spate with the likes of Yo-Yo-Ma, Kim Wa Chung, etc. To be fair, these Asian performers are not to be blamed for a situation they did not create and represent an improvement of sorts, because they are just filling the vast, empty space left when the Jews gutted serious music of its Aryan creators. Better a Midori than a Heifitz, anytime! And while Asian artists may never attain the heights of a Chopin or a Mengelberg, they generally lack the racial animosity toward Western composers felt by Jews and niggers. And Asian performances, perhaps not consistently inspiring, are almost always faithful to the composers' intentions, thereby preserving our art from Jewish putrefaction

WHO NEEDS BEETHOVEN WHEN YOU'VE GOT SCOTT JOPLIN?

Nevertheless, today's audiences are presented with the insane racial anomaly of music written by Aryan composers, led by Jewish conductors and recreated by Asian players. Of course, it would be asking the impossible of these racial aliens to interpret the real core-meaning of any Aryan composition. Consequently, their performances of our music are usually technically adequate and mechanically competent, but bland and unmemorable, as though they were recreated by a computer. The domination of Jewish music by Aryan, especially German performers, would be both ludicrous and incredible. And would the Chinese be upset if suddenly they found a preponderance of 'round-eyed-devils' heralded as the best performers of Chinese music? Yet, nobody thinks it strange that Jewish and Asian performers dominate Western Civilization's musical repertoire.

The Jews themselves are keenly aware of this preposterous contrast, and are therefore taking measures to deprive us of even our musical heritage. Until the 1920's, the leadership of America's musical life was entirely in the skilled hands of our White forebears. To justify the Jews' modern predominance, they dredged up from the past as many non-Aryan musicians as they could find. There were precious few. The first one they stumbled upon was the New Orleans Jew, Louis Moreau Gottschalk, a transparently bush-league composer by anyone's standards, who made zero-impact on the mid-19th Century in which he lived. But his compositions were the first of their kind, in that they attempted to popularize nigger tunes for the White folks, once again showing the inherent Jewish predilection to race-mix their Gentile host. Despite efforts by the Chosen Ones and their chosen goyische puppets, Gottschalk's compositions have not caught on with the general public.

Slightly more successful was their promotion of Scott Joplin, a turn-of-the-century spook who entertained at a whorehouse, where he accompanied staff and clients with his beat-up piano. Although generally and erroneously touted as the inventor of 'rag-time', Joplin was virtually unknown during his lifetime and lapsed into total obscurity immediately after his death from syphilis. Despite this and the fact that he was only a very minor composer of popular music, some of the biggest Jews in classical music, such as James Levine and Itzhak Pearlman, vigorously promoted his thoroughly dated 'rags' at every opportunity. There is reason to believe Joplin would be far from happy with his kosher promoters, given the neurotically fast pace at which they invariably perform his music. The cathouse composer was known for insisting that "rag must be played very slowly." Operating under the assumption that if one throws enough muck at least some of it will stick, the Itzhaks who dominate American music forced a brief vogue for Joplin's insignificant compositions during the 1970's. Even a feature film of the period, The Sting, featured some innocuous pieces by the otherwise forgotten coon. The artificial media-hype concocted for him by his Jewish promoters fizzled out before the end of the decade, and he began sliding back into the well-deserved oblivion from which he had been dragged to historically argue their case for a 'multi-cultural' America.

That, of course, was the ulterior and real motive for resurrecting the memories of Gottschalk and Joplin; namely, to undermine the Aryan foundations upon which Western music stands. Totally and intentionally overlooked is the plain fact that everything musical—from the symphonic form itself and the very instruments they play upon, even to the notation system and the recording processes that preserve their performances—were entirely the result of the White Man's genius. Neither blacks nor Jews (nor Asians, for that matter) built the musical world created by the likes of Bach and Beethoven. That world is an exclusively Aryan affair, and its domination by genetic aliens hostile to the race who made it will not preserve it, but can only result in its distortion and inevitable demise.

A MUSICAL HOLOCAUST

For example, a Jewish music critic for Time magazine wrote a few years ago that whenever he heard Bruckner's 8th Symphony, all he could think about were "the smoking chimneys of Auschwitz," even though the work had been composed nearly 50 years before World War II. The famous fiddler, Isaac Stern, once remarked that he played the Brahms violin concerto "with tears in my eyes for the victims of the Holocaust." No one should be astonished, then, if the great music of Western Civilization in the hands of these gentlemen has been changed to suit their own purposes and mentality from the original intentions of its Aryan composers.

As in everything else the Jews touch, the creation of original American musical scores declined through various stages of decay toward its ultimate demise. It began with Gershwin's negrified compositions in the 1920's, then spread with the atonality of Irving Fine and his fellow Schoenberg frauds through the 1930's over the next forty years. As mentioned earlier, art is a barometer of the society that produces it. So, too, the cheap frenzy of Gershwin was a direct result of the fratricidal World War, which shattered Western strength, just as Schoenberg's anti-music could only have mushroomed from the cultural compost heap that was Weimar Germany. By the 1970's, the Jewish virus coursing through modern music had run its course and in fact died under the stubborn refusal of American audiences to accept it. This mass-rejection of their putrid output enraged Jew composers and critics alike, who railed against Gentile unwillingness to embrace 'American' compositions. Hebrew works were announced with noisy hoopla. But after their premiers, they usually vanished forever, unable to take root in the consciousness of a people to whom such composers and their bizarre products were genetically and spiritually alien.

Even today, Jewish conductors and their managerial lackeys contrive to lure reluctant audiences by scheduling reliably favorite music by Aryan composers on the same concert program with some abhorred kosher monstrosity. A case in point was a recent performance by the Minnesota Orchestra (Japanese conductor, Eiji Oue, director), which began with Beethoven's 9th Symphony and concluded with something called 'The Jeremiah Symphony' by Leonard Bernstein. There was not one untaken seat in the great hall when Beethoven was played and wildly cheered. But during the intermission that followed, a mass-exodus occurred that substantially reduced the size of the audience. Those hardy concert-goers who endured the Jew's uneven patchwork of alternating bombast and quivering paranoia applauded more dutifully than enthusiastically at its long-awaited conclusion. Theater managers learned years ago that programs devoted entirely to music by modern artists meant financial disaster at the box office. People stay away in droves. The only way to get something of a hearing for contemporary composers is to bait the program with established Aryan music. Even so, audiences seldom stay for the new compositions, which bore and annoy them. Actually, the uninspired, uninspiring Jews hurt themselves by juxtaposing their feeble compositions with real music. Contrasting Bernstein with Beethoven is no contest for the poor Jew!

For example, I attended a concert last autumn when Mozart's Symphony No. 25 was performed before the third symphony of Aaron Copeland. During the Mozart, the audience scarcely seemed to breathe, in absolutely rapt attention. I furtively glanced around at the facial expressions on people in the audience. They were all in altered states of consciousness, euphorically drugged by the narcotic of musical perfection. For some long moments after the final chord faded away, a collective silence prevailed, as though the audience of thousands were savoring the experience. Then burst thunderous applause loud and long enough for Wolfgang to hear in heaven. What a contrast with the Jew's music that followed!

What Mozart achieved with about twenty instrumentalists, Copeland could not approximate with a battalion of more than a hundred players who crowded on stage. At first, the audience sat grimly dismayed upon being blasted with the awkwardly balanced harmonies that added up to one, big *dis*harmony for the next 40 minutes. During that time, the same audience which had revered Mozart earlier began twitching nervously and staring around at the architecture of the hall. I saw several persons reading their program notes by bending down to the aisle lights, trying to figure out what was going on. Others, unable to endure any more, just walked out. Then the ultimate insult: People started talking among themselves during the performance. Behavior that would have aroused the ire of others in the audience while Mozart was being played, seemed to bother nobody for the duration of Copeland. At least no one fell asleep, which, in any case would have been impossible, given the outbursts of disjointed sound the orchestra, transformed by the Jew into some kind of flatulent beast, let loose from time to time without warning.

THROUGH A GLASS DARKLY

Twenty years ago, 'modern American' composition died of exhaustion without a single atonal fanfare. But onto the fresh grave of polytonality danced the founder of an entirely different kind of written music, Phillip Glass. Another one of the tribe, he was all the rage from the 1970's to the mid-1980's with his 'minimalism,' the logical result of all that had gone before. It was, in effect, musical nihilism, during which a single, very simple phrase (or fragment of a phrase) was subjected to a mesmerizing, endless loop of repetitions. As a Gentile musician once defined it, "minimalism is the kind of music that gives a minimum amount of enjoyment at the maximum cost to the listener." Like all fashions grown from the 'if you can't be good, be different' school of thought, Jew Glass's 'minimalism' soon ended in the paper-shredder of history. But it did represent the last attempt undertaken by the Jews to foist their peculiar notions of 'serious music' on a public bemused by decades of impermanent compositions as incomprehensible as they were unpleasant.

If you might expect nothing to come from nihilism, you would be right. There are no American composers today. Having toppled the Aryan standards upon which Western music had been carefully constructed, the Jews utterly destroyed in less than seventy years what the world's greatest composers had taken centuries to create. But it is said that 'nature abhors a vacuum,' and there are signs of Aryan-American resistance and renaissance. In fact, from the very beginning of the Jewish onslaught against our culture, Charles Tomlinson Griffiths, while prevented from composing as his German teachers had inspired him, defied Gershwin's lead and took up where the Aryan impressionists and post-impressionists of Debussy and Ravel had left off. Some of his later compositions were his best and he began to arouse general public interest before his untimely death. But the auto-horns blaring throughout An American in Paris silenced his achievements, still largely unknown today. Shamefully, his name does not even appear in most encyclopedias of music.

The compositional skills of the great Gershwin himself were inadequate to orchestrate his own Rhapsody in Blue. The job had to be done by a Gentile steeped in the Germanic tradition, Ferde Grofé, who is never credited for scoring the piece. Grofé, too, bucked the Jewish current by evolving a genuinely American character for contemporary music. If not the first to do so, he was certainly among the very earliest composers to tap into our folkish soul. His Grand Canyon Suite was a lone ray of blazing light in an otherwise impenetrable darkness of Jewish 'experimentation,' whose orchestrated caterwauling never began to approximate the wildly popular success Grofé achieved. It was, in truth, this representational work's broad and enduring acceptance that put to shame all the Jews' worthless 'modernism,' which never found general acceptance. It is not surprising that the Grand Canyon Suite was sniped at by envious Jewish critics, who denigrated the masterpiece as "obsolete" and "out of step with the times." Three generations of concert-goers do not agree and continue to applaud Grofé's perennial tone-poem, while ignoring all the chic freaks so enamored by the kosher critics. But they have not been without their revenge, as Grofé's many other wonderful compositions are virtually unheard today.

Grofé was not alone, however. In the 1940's, Randall Thompson's 1st Symphony was unlike anything composed in Europe but mercifully free from Jewish affectation and degeneracy, while Virgil Thompson (no relation to Randall) wrote The Nordic Symphony, thereby calling upon the inspiration of our racial origins. The following decade, Gian Carlo Menotti's eminently melodious Amahl and the Night Visitors was the first (and, so far as I have been able to determine, only) made-for-television opera. Samuel Barber's Essays for Orchestra were not only singularly American, but dramatically advanced the logical development of the symphony beyond its Germanic origins. Meanwhile, Jewish composers did not participate in this on-going evolution of Western music. They were too busy trying to subvert it with nigger tunes and anti-harmony. But they were and still are in positions of supreme dominance over the arts, from which they naturally promote their fellow Jews over recalcitrant Gentile composers. Hence, Aryan American geniuses, from William Billings of Colonial days to Henry Cowell's superb fashioning of traditional American hymns nearly 200 years later, are unknown to the general public, from whom they have been cut off by the more famous names and compositions of Copeland, Bernstein, Gershwin and other persistent musical no-accounts of the same tribe.

White Culture is Politically Incorrect!

Critics lament today the demise of modern American music, a situation they blame on musicians reluctant to perform Jew-trash before consistently unsympathetic audiences. In their frustration, the same critics condemn the standard repertoire of Beethoven, Schubert, Brahms, etc., as obsolete impediments standing in the way of new music. Several radio commentators have actually suggested that the music of the old masters should be systematically driven from America's concert halls, thereby forcing audiences to come to terms with modern compositions, like them or not. This cultural Bolshevism was honestly articulated recently by the concerned sponsor of a New York fine arts radio station. He said that the standard repertoire embodied the height of political incorrectness and should be "modified to fit current norms, because its composers were all White males, mostly Germans." He added that many were "racist, homo-phobic," and, yes, even (get set to rend your garments) anti-Jewish! "The music of such artists from another time has nothing to say to our multi-cultural democracy," he rightly concluded. After all, why should members of lower races who bear a persistent grudge against Western Civilization have to listen to our music?

While the Jews undoubtedly relish the prospect of burning all the scores of Wagner and every other Gentile composer, they are torn by their obsession for the vast ticket revenues performances of the wicked goyim's music still net them. Moreover, by having non-Aryan performers, particularly niggers, lay their hands on such music, the Jews vicariously enjoy a kind of spiritual rape of Western Civilization they have despised for so many centuries. As the most politically conscious creature in the world, the Jew's ownership of classical music means he may use it as a propaganda weapon to diminish our racial pride and sense of Aryan identity with our own culture. Every time he allows a non-White to perform Aryan music, we are another step further removed from our heritage. And any people without feeling for a culture that is entirely their own is vulnerable to manipulation, exploitation and slavery at the hands of those who alienated them from their origins.

The danger is quite real and historical parallels warn us of what lies ahead for America and the West. The entire music of the Ancient World, an enormous body of creativity accumulated for more than 3,000 years, was completely destroyed with the fall of Classical Civilization. All the music of Pharaonic Egypt, Hellenic Greece (where the same principles of composition still used today were invented) and Imperial Rome, was lost forever, a consequence of the racially-spawned political crises which toppled them. Some of their stonework may still be seen, but not a single note of music from these once-splendid civilizations survives. No doubt, there once lived an Egyptian equivalent to Bach, a Greek Wagner and a Roman Beethoven. So thorough was the demise of their societies, however, that not even their names, let alone their music, have come down to us. Civilization is more fragile than we may imagine, and we Americans have no right to assume that our civilization is immune from the same internal forces that brought down the Classical World. If we continue merrily along the path laid out for us by the Jews, we will end up in the same garbage dump prepared for our ancestors. Then the names and masterpieces of every Aryan composer from Palestrina to Prokofieff will just as surely be expunged for all future generations. What a pitiful heritage we would leave to our descendants!

The Coming 'New Age' of National Socialism

Bleak as the future of Western music does indeed appear, there is a faint light of hope on the horizon. The Aryan reaction against Jewish degeneration which began with Charles Tomlinson Griffiths continues today in a gray area of composition between Serious and Popular music. This is the so-called 'New Age' music, whose mostly Aryan creators, beginning about 15 years ago, sought out a genuine spiritual alternative. Former 'rock stars,' like New Zealand's Jon Mark, turned their backs on the shallowness of contemporary culture and tried to develop a futuristic vision based on old European origins. A successful example is Mark's 1988 compact disk, The Standing Stones of Callanish. Taking both its title and inspiration from a pre-historic, megalithic sacred site in the Scottish Hebrides, he combines modern instrumentation (electronic synthesizer) with traditional melodic composition. The result is something altogether new and accessibly familiar at the same time.

Another New Age performer who has achieved an international following is Enya, a Scottish singer-composer with a strong emphasis on her Celtic origins. Like Jon Mark, she uses a synthesizer, but blends it with standard instrumentation. Some of her evocative titles are 'Bard Dance,' 'Epona' (Britain's pre-historic equestrian goddess) and 'March of the Celts.' This is not to suggest that every New Age artist performs music beloved by National Socialists. The New Age, too, has its share of Jews who smell a profit among anything innovative, while militant race-mixers are trying to foist synthesized Afro and Injun rhythms on honest listeners in search of meaningful options to Jewized modernism. Nevertheless, a strong under-current of Aryan racial feeling courses through New Age music, whose creators and audience are largely White. If nothing else, the New Age proves that the blood instincts of our people as a whole and our youth in particular are still essentially intact, despite everything the Jews have done for the last seventy years to subvert us. There is certainly hope in that recognition.

American music will never recover from its downward slide into extinction so long as the Jews maintain their death-grip on our culture. Yet, their worlds of failed Communism and poisoned cultures are falling apart. Who knows what opportunities for Aryan revival and White victory we may find in their ruins!

Music in the Third Reich — Then and Now

By A.V. Schaerffenberg

A grim portrait of modern American music was presented in issue #120 of The New Order. How could it have been otherwise, given the Jews' domination of our culture? It was no coincidence that fine art in the U.S. was trashed at the same moment National Socialism triumphed in Germany. The kosher corrupters who scurried away from Europe beginning in 1933 were the same alleged 'artists' who poisoned our musical life. We need only look around at the laughably deplorable state of modern American composition and performance to appreciate the magnitude of their disastrous impact.

Elsewhere, Aryan culture was suddenly freed from Jewish domination and blossomed into a late 2nd Millennium Renaissance. Naturally, the source of that Western revival was Adolf Hitler's Germany. It is nothing short of miraculous that during the brief twelve-year period of peace allowed the Third Reich, such an incredible burst of dynamically creative musical achievement took place. The spirit of Aryan genius could at last express its genuine instinct, uncolored by the alien agendas of Jews hostile to everything German.

An Operatic Battle

Generally regarded as the greatest symphonic composer of the 20th Century, Richard Strauss was urged by 'emigre' Jew impresarios to join them at New York's Metropolitan opera. They dangled lucrative performance fees to entice him, but he answered them indirectly by writing a public statement in support of the National Socialist Revolution, signing it in his own hand, 'Heil Hitler!' With the invention of the first sound tape recorder by Third Reich scientists, Strauss conducted performances of all his major symphonic works, recordings still prized as the best of their kind. During World War II, he composed a concert overture dedicated to the Japanese Royal House on the occasion of its 500th anniversary and to simultaneously commemorate the signing in 1940 of the Axis pact between Germany and Japan. His Metamorphoses, a tone-poem lament for the devastation wrought by the duped Allies on Germany, will forever serve as a deeply moving memorial to the worst tragedy in human history.

Strauss's contemporary, Hans Pfitzner, although not well-known outside of his homeland, was among the most important figures in neo-romantic music, and composed what many listeners consider his greatest works, a pair of symphonies in 1939 and 1940, respectively. Four years earlier, Pfitzner became the first 'Reich Cultural Senator.' The reputations of these two musical titans were so established in the world of art that not even the hysterical hatred of the Jews could destroy them, and their compositions are presently available to a larger audience than ever before, thanks to Aryan man's technological advances in audio reproduction.

But what the Jews cannot destroy they poison. A case in point is perhaps the greatest orchestral director ever to take up the conductor's baton, Wilhelm Furtwaengler. It would be untrue to suggest that he was a dedicated National Socialist. His life was music. Furtwaengler was favorably inclined to our Idea, but he was too busy with his art for much of the outside world. As a musician who profoundly cherished traditional compositional values and no less deeply despised the cultural rot of the Weimar Republic, he often expressed his gratitude, both publicly and privately, to Hitler for kicking out the Schoenbergs, Shapiros, et al, of the 1920's. Less than a year after the National Socialist Seizure of Power, however, Furtwaengler found himself embroiled in an extra-musical controversy. He agreed to stage Mathias the Painter, by Paul Hindemith. Oblivious to and totally disinterested in both the story of the opera and the political identity of its composer, the innocent music director found his rehearsals being picketed by battalions of angry Stormtroopers.

It seems Hindemith, although Aryan, was a loud-mouthed Communist and his Matthias the Painter a blatant propaganda piece urging its audience to take up arms against the government, "even if it had been elected" — a transparent reference to the recent National Socialist electoral victories. Furtwaengler dismissed the work's proletarian politics as so much out-dated flummery, especially in view of National Socialism's on-going popularity, but insisted the music was good. Performances would proceed as planned, he announced. In a short time, whatever artistic merits or demerits Hindemith's piece might have had were utterly eclipsed by a violent ideological storm gathering over the Berlin Opera House.

Assuming that the last of such Marxist drivel had been cleaned out after January 30th, 1933, the public in general and National Socialists in particular were outraged at news of the up-coming Red Opera. Meanwhile, scattered remnants of the country's enfeebled, dwindling Communists suddenly began to suck a reviving breath of life into their moribund movement and vowed to pack the opera house on opening night, just as they used to in the 20's. Even more so than the Communists, the Stormtroopers wanted Matthias the Painter to be staged, because they relished the opportunity of busting up the performance and exterminating the last of the Red vermin. Not without cause, the city police feared a serious ideological confrontation of the kind so common up until only a few years before. Indeed, it was to bring peace and order to public life that the voters had put Adolf Hitler in power. Even so, the National Socialist authorities were inclined to allow the performance, no matter what came to pass, if only out of respect for Furtwaengler, who was, by then, an icon throughout the whole cultural world.

Dr. Goebbels Intervenes

Doubtless, Hindemith's music would have been heard, the old Reds would have had their last hurrah (better yet, the Stormtroopers would have beaten the be'jesus out of them all) and the controversy passed as a footnote in the history of the Third Reich. Instead, America's and England's Jew-dominated newspapers turned the premiere into a cause celebre of international proportions. With that, Dr. Josef Goebbels, as Reich Cultural Minister, decided to act. He addressed a long, polite letter to Furtwaengler. The situation, he explained, had gotten out of hand, so much so that the enemies of National Socialism, to whom music was only as good as it was politically expedient, were using the impending performance for obvious, non-artistic purposes; namely, to incite hatred and violence against the new regime. Dr. Goebbels added that Hindemith belonged to a by-gone era when national greatness had been despised. The German people, after fourteen long years of difficult struggle, had overcome that shame. Now was the time for art to extol the folk-genius of our Race, not down-grade it. He asked that the troublesome opera be shelved for the sake of present peace and future cultural development. But, if the conductor considered its music worthwhile, performance of an orchestral suite from Matthias the Painter could take place.

To the great disappointment of all, save the general opera-going public, Furtwaengler responded with his own public letter, in which he heartily subscribed to each of Dr. Goebbels' objections, including his own observation, "There are moments when even art must make room for the good of something greater." Coming from such a fanatic musician, it was a deeply generous statement. With the cancellation of Hindemith's first and last chance at fame, the defunct Reds were disappointed because their own last chance for a big political demonstration evaporated, and the Stormtroopers were disappointed because they missed their chance to whip Germany's last Communists.

In all the hateful hullabaloo turned up by the Jews ever since, and whenever Hindemith's name is mentioned today, conveniently forgotten was the concert performance of Matthias the Painter, which did indeed take place in 1934, as Dr. Goebbels promised. The piece was even recorded in a Third Reich sound studio under Furtwaengler's direction in 1934! That this concert version of musical highlights was not much performed thereafter only means that it failed to generate any lasting hold on concert-goers' imaginations, a failure which persists to this day, since it is not often heard, even though it is still touted as some kind of anti-Nazi masterpiece. Indeed, the opera which was supposed to have been too wonderful for the Nazis to appreciate or tolerate, was a huge flop when ostentatiously performed in New York. Since then, it has never again seen the light of day.

It turns out that Hindemith was not such an interesting composer after all, and the controversy surrounding his name had more to do with his obnoxious politics than his own music. Overlooked, too, is the fact that, despite his Red identity, he was allowed to compose, perform and even record in the Third Reich, hardly the tyrannical system the Jews would lead us to believe existed. Hindemith grabbed the U.S. Jews' offer of cash and fled with sheaves of his useless scores. Apparently, New York's kosher environment was less inspiring than that of evil old Nazi Germany, and his artificial reputation withered away into virtual oblivion. Happily, he lived long enough to see his life's work savaged by Jew critics in the 1950's, when they ridiculed him as 'hopelessly obsolete.' True to character, his one-time kosher benefactors eventually turned on their 'righteous Gentile.'

The Crucifixion of an Aryan Musician

Only the newspaper Jews overseas manipulated by the Matthias the Painter situation to their advantage, portraying it to gullible goy readers as proof positive that great music was being suppressed by the Nazis, to whom Furtwaengler had weakly capitulated. However, they, too, were soon disappointed when, sure he would defect following the Hindemith affair, they offered him (as they had offered Richard Strauss) large performance fees with the New York Philharmonic. He turned them down and, after war came, was personally active in donating a great deal of concert time to soldiers and factory workers. Audiophiles for decades considered his greatest recorded achievement to have been a performance of Beethoven's 9th Symphony, the Choral, given in the presence of Adolf Hitler on the occasion of the Führer's 55th birthday, April 20th, 1944. Until the very end, Furtwaengler was still giving public concerts in Berlin. His last Reich recording (the Cesar Franck Symphony in D minor) is the best performance ever made of that work. It took place in the cataclysmic days of January, 1945.

The Jews castigated Germany's 'Nazi dictatorship' for censorship, a lie, as cited above, when Hindemith was allowed to perform. But immediately after the war, German artists were prevented by the occupation forces from working. Only those who could suck up to the Allies by loudly proclaiming their anti-Nazi sentiments stood a chance of employing their craft. The very censorship the Jewized Allies falsely condemned in National Socialism they practiced themselves when the chance came along. Among the proscribed was Wilhelm Furtwaengler, even though he never held any post in the Reich government. He was not a Party member, and had never even voted for a National Socialist candidate.

The occupation authorities promised he could resume his conducting career if he agreed to sign a public statement begging them for forgiveness for his past participation "in the criminal Hitler regime." He refused, declaring his life then, as always, had been entirely musical, not political, and he objected to the accusation that he had ever been part of anything 'criminal.' The ban against him was upheld and he had to subsist on the charity of friends.

The Jews and their Gentile dupes in uniform tried to show the Germans that their culture was better off under Allied occupation than with their own, elected, National Socialist government. Trouble was, with all the country's real artists dead, jailed or censored, there wasn't much culture to go around. Desperate to maintain their façade of democratic civilization, they returned to Furtwaengler with a watered-down version of the statement presented for his endorsement two years earlier. This time it read something to the effect that he publicly condemned 'totalitarianism' in all its forms, without mentioning National Socialism. He unhesitatingly signed the document and was allowed to resume his musical duties.

'Democracy, Smockracy!'

Although Furtwaengler's return to the podium was greeted with universal acclaim, his performances mostly lacked the greatness of his wartime and pre-war conducting. Many concerts he held were surprisingly disappointing. The old fire seemed to have died out in him. Only occasionally was it seen to flare to life. While a few appearances, such as his performance of the Choral Symphony, at the re-opening of the Bayreuth Festival, exemplified the full scope of his genius, more typical were his lackluster renditions of Beethoven's and Bruckner's works, his long-time favorites. He had been a Wagner specialist, too, but his post-war recordings of Tristan and The Ring are indistinguishable from any average interpretations. Clearly, the man was not inspired by postwar democracy. Yet, he was no different than artists of all kinds who reached heights of their greatness from 1933 to 1945. Immediately thereafter, Germany and the West fell into their steep decline toward cultural sterility and extinction from which they still have not pulled out.

Artists depend for their supreme achievement on high inspiration. The Third Reich was the most inspiring epoch in all of history, and its artists thereby felt their talents lifted by the greatness of the times. In the dismal, hypocritical world of the Allies sham 'victory,' there was only despair, not inspiration. This is no idle speculation. Proof may be found in the very audio legacy left by Furtwaengler himself. His Third Reich recordings are today widely prized for their universal excellence. It is well-known among collectors that any Furtwaengler performance dated before 1946 will be guaranteed for its high value, even if the technical quality is inferior by later standards, while his postwar recordings are largely shunned for their reputation as mediocre. Recording companies make sure that the date of a Furtwaengler appearance is displayed prominently on the disc cover—if the performance occurred during the Reich. The dates of his postwar performances are virtually never printed, a sure sign to knowledgeable collectors that the concert was made under a democracy and consequently of relatively slight artistic merit.

Furtwaengler's death in 1954 was followed by decades of commonplace conductors who consistently rendered the great music of the past in uniformly colorless renditions. Almost by chance, after decades of middling music directors, audiophiles rediscovered Furtwaengler's old recordings almost by chance. For a generation oblivious to his art, his preserved performances came as nothing less than a revelation. Sharply contrasting the commonplace output of Leonard Bernstein, Seji Ozawa, Dean Dixon and other non-White non-entities from the 1960's to the present, his concerts were regarded as by far the best interpretations of great music on record. The international Furtwaengler resurgence which began some twenty years ago not only continues today, but has broadened and intensified. Whenever another lost recording of his is discovered, it instantly shoots to the top of the best-seller lists.

The Recasting of Wilhelm Furtwaengler

It was only a matter of time, of course, before the Jews were alerted to the popular renaissance of this recalcitrant 'Nazi musician'. Banning his recordings or even making them quietly disappear by pressuring C.D. companies into discontinuing them would have lost the shrewd shysters new revenues generated by such sales. Instinctually unable to forego a financial profit, they took over the Furtwaengler revival themselves.

In an irony typical only of unscrupulous Jews, the same kikes who fulminated against him in the 1930's and banned him in the 1940's are peddling his recordings today. As the most politicized creatures on the planet, however, they are not content with the vast revenues his C.D.'s net them. They must distort his memory to conform with their own perverse notions of political correctness. In justifying sales of his music and using their twisted image of him to propagandize their Gentile customers, the Great Masters of the Lie are now depicting Furtwaengler as an anti-Nazi who secretly hated Hitler and stayed in Germany only to help save Jews from being gassed! While such a bald-faced misrepresentation would have flabbergasted the Allied Occupation authorities who banned him from performing, it is just one more piece of the deceitful chutzpa for which the Jews have long been infamous.

No one should then be surprised that the loudest spokesman on behalf of a de-Nazified Furtwaengler is Hebrew Henry Fogel. He laments that this "righteous goy, oops, Gentile" was mistaken for a Fascist. The conductor actually loved Jews and risked his life to save them from Hitler, before whom Furtwaengler gave his best performance on the Führer's birthday! Such demented 'logic' could only come from the profit-fevered brain of a crazed Jew. Now that his reputation has been sanitized in the mikvah of political correctness, we no longer need trouble our conscience when buying a Furtwaengler recording. The past has been re-arranged to make things work for the Jews in the present. Such insidious duplicity recalls one of the brainwashing slogans concocted by Big Brother in George Orwell's prophetic novel, 1984: "Who controls the present, controls the past; who controls the past, controls the future."

But the revival of Aryan music under National Socialism spread through the 1930's and early 1940's beyond the borders of the Third Reich. Helga Rosswaenge, Askel Schiotz and Thorston Ralf, who made their careers in Hitler's Germany, were, bar none, the greatest tenors Denmark ever produced, before and especially since the end of World War II. Years before the war, Belgium's greatest tenor, Marcel Wittrich, cut a recording of the concert aria "God Bless our Führer!", which topped the best-seller charts for most of the 1930's. Kirstin Flagstad, among the most important Wagnerian sopranos of the 20th Century, left the Metropolitan Opera, where her success in Die Valkyrie had been nothing short of stupendous, to join her husband in Norway. He was not only the country's leading conductor, but a high-ranking officer in the Nasional Samlung, the Norwegian National Socialist Movement. When a post-war return engagement at the Met was scheduled for her, Flagstad was prevented from performing by hysterical mobs of incensed New York Jews. They openly and successfully prevented a world-class artist from publicly performing for ideological reasons, the very thing for which they had so long falsely condemned the Nazis.

The Vengeful Ghost of Willem Mengelberg

Furtwaengler's only contemporary to approach and even perhaps surpass him on occasion was the Dutch conductor, Willem Mengelberg. His recordings, too, have witnessed a spectacular comeback, although in his case the Jews are far more uncomfortable. Henry Fogel cannot bring himself to utter a dispensatory word on his behalf. While Furtwaengler was little more than emotionally or artistically sympathetic to National Socialism, Mengelberg was dedicated heart and soul to Adolf Hitler. He welcomed 1940's German invasion of Holland as his country's liberation from Jewish tyranny. Like Furtwaengler, his reputation was world-wide and he would have been welcomed in the United States, where he could have lived out his life in safety. Instead, he publicly endorsed the greatness of National Socialism at every occasion and performed all over the Reich. Even so, he was a vigorous champion of Dutch music and all of Holland's best modern composers owed their early success to him.

No less importantly, Mengelberg molded the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra into what many regarded as the finest symphonic ensemble ever put together. The man's contributions to music are staggering and far exceed the limitations of this newspaper article to describe. Even so, he never joined any National Socialist organization (Dutch or German), and did not work for the Axis war effort, save to perform concerts for troops on R. & R., German as well as Dutch, and all the other Aryan nationalities who banded together under the Swastika to fight Soviet Communism. He was content to lend the weight of his legendary reputation to support National Socialism and did what he could for it with the thing he knew best — conducting great music better than anyone else in the world!

For this harmless involvement in the Movement, Willem Mengelberg was sentenced to death in absentia (i.e., condemned without a hearing) by Holland's Allied-dominated supreme court after the war. Fleeing for his life, he found refuge in Spain. It is to Francisco Franco's eternal credit that he refused to turn over the proscribed musician to the Dutch authorities for extradition and execution. Broken in spirit and health, the maestro never again lifted his baton to call forth the incomparably magnificent sounds only he knew how to conjure from an orchestra. He died in exile six years later, condemned and despised by his own countrymen, but cherished and protected by beloved foreigners. The once supreme Amsterdam Concertgebouw he created declined under the mediocrity of more politically correct directors like bland Bernard Haitink, until the orchestra scarcely rated as a world-class organization. Yet, his ghost is avenging itself on all these postwar no-accounts, who are rapidly being forgotten, while Mengelberg's recordings enjoy a resurgence of unprecedented popularity.

Music's Debt to Fascism

A similar tragedy befell Pietro Mascagni. His Cavalleria Rusticana is one of the most often performed staples in the whole repertoire, and, with I Pagliacci, among the best-known operas in existence. Mascagni was also a dedicated follower of Benito Mussolini from the early days of the Duce's struggle. Through the 1920's and 30's and into the war, he held various posts in the Fascist cultural hierarchy and did much to promote the glory of Italian music. His long-time loyalty was proved during adversity, when he joined Mussolini (imprisoned by traitors in 1943, but rescued through the daring heroism of SS commandos) in the north.

With the catastrophic end of the war, Mascagni's name was posted on a death-list circulated by the same Communist partisans who murdered the Duce. Old and alone, Italy's greatest living composer died of starvation and exposure to sub-zero temperatures while hiding from his would-be assassins in an unheated garret during the bitter winter of 1945. The death of one of Western Civilization's last great creators was another legacy that belonged to the Allies' dishonorable triumph of brute force over culture. The legions of opera lovers who continue, year after year, to applaud Cavalleria Rusticana are ignorant of the Fascist identity and deplorable fate of its composer.

They also applaud regular performances of music by Antonio Vivaldi, whose Seasons, particularly, has become an often-heard concert-piece. Recordings of the 18th Century Venetian's music sell in the millions, and it is recognized throughout the world as a pillar of Western art. Yet, were it not for the diligent research of a famous American Fascist working in Mussolini's Italy, Vivaldi's name and great achievements would be just as unknown today as it was before Ezra Pound made his discovery of the lost compositions. For this incomparable work of rescue, one of the greatest poets the U.S. ever produced was starved and tortured in a so-called 'tiger-cage' by his fellow countrymen after the war. His incarceration consisted of an unheated cell so tiny he could neither stand erect nor lay down full-length, a difficult ordeal even for a man younger than his 61 years. Do the Itzak Pearlmans of this world pay homage to the work of Ezra Pound, without whom they could not perform Vivaldi's music?

Fascist Italy also inspired some of the finest conductors of all time, and the best may have been Victor DeSabata. Like Furtwaengler and Mengelberg, recordings of his intelligent, dynamic interpretations, especially of Respighi, Beethoven and Puccini, are highly prized by collectors. As a measure of the greatness of the Fascist era in which he flourished, no Italian conductor since the liberal-Marxist takeover of 1945 has begun to approach DeSabata's achievements. Fascism inspired many extraordinary composers; among the greatest was Gian-Francesco Malipiero, who was also the most important musicologist of the 20th Century, largely because he restored the complete creative output of Claudio Monteverdi, the 16th Century founder of Italian opera. The huge, meticulous edition, nearly twenty years in the making, until its completion in 1942, is still sought after by musicians throughout the world as the most invaluable sourcebook of its kind. Malipiero's own 1936 opera, Julius Caesar, was based on Shakespeare's play and is a triumphant Fascist revival of the Roman origins common to all Western civilizations.

The racial-nationalist Finns, whose blue Swastika flag flew alongside Adolf Hitler's crusade against Soviet Russia, produced the most important composer in the history of their country and one of the finest of the 20th Century, Jean Sibelius. Another comrade-country, Latvia, enjoyed its golden age of composition from its independence in 1918 until its takeover by the Soviets in 1940, then again during the German liberation from 1941 to 1944. With the recent return of Latvian freedom, the splendid works of such composers as Janis Medich, who wrote during the 1930's and early 40's, are being heard with greater frequency by the outside world. Spanish Fascism lasted long after the postwar period with an equivalent endurance of great composition, as evidenced by the extraordinary guitar concertos by Joaquin Rodrigo in the 1950's.

The Unmusical Allies

Meanwhile, in the Allied countries, wracked with capitalist exploitation pitted against communist subversion, all the arts fell into decline. The lamentable condition of American music was examined in Issue #120. The situation was not quite as bad in England, but the country had nothing to look forward to under its increasingly Jew-dominated democracy of cultural sterility. Ralph Vaughn Williams, Arthur Bliss, Arnold Bax, Gustav Holst and their colleagues from the early part of the century were rapidly aging with no one to match or exceed their monumental genius, save only Benjamin Britten, certainly the last English composer of any importance, who died in 1976. French musical creativity was sustained during the 1930's by one man, Florent Schmitt, a passionate Fascist, whose compositional greatness foreshadowed the Impressionists. Only his old age and status as France's greatest living composer saved him (barely!) from the postwar hangman's noose. His successor, Francis Poulenc, carried on the torch of great Gallic music. But since his death in 1963, the history of French musical composition is blank.

In the Soviet union, that Frankenstein monster of the Jews, their ludicrous efforts to mass-produce 'proletarian art' failed miserably. Having eviscerated Russian music in the 1920's, the Reds were at first alarmed by a strident nationalist style that suddenly burst forth in the work of Gentiles Serge Prokofiev, Rheinhold Gliere, Ipolatov Ivanov and Aram Katchaturian. These outstanding composers were allowed to proceed with their strongly folkish compositions, however, because the Soviet leaders knew that such art could be used to arouse patriotic fervor against the European fascists.

But after 1945, such ethnic sentiments, being no longer needed (indeed, they were dangerous to the Jews), were condemned. The same Russian composers who were honored for writing 'patriotic' music when it was required to stir up national emotions against Hitler were denounced publicly and hounded personally as 'enemies of the Soviet people.' Some tried to please their masters by composing inoffensive music. Those who could not were tossed into stinking Gulags. As in the allegedly 'democratic' societies of England, France and the U.S., serious musical composition died in the U.S.S.R. with Prokofiev in 1953.

The only bright spots in the musical world were those still illuminated by the sunlight of National Socialism. It is a heritage of which we who carry on in its name can be extraordinarily and justifiably proud. And when our souls are moved as we listen to a Third Reich recording of music heard and enjoyed by Adolf Hitler, we share a living, spiritual kinship with him others cannot understand. Despite the magnitude of the catastrophe that physically destroyed the Third Reich and its heroes, the music of that most glorious epoch survives for us to hear.

And it more than survives! The irrepressible force of its greatness is touching more listeners than ever before. The enduring triumph of the Reich's music represents a sacred sign, an assurance from God, that not far behind the echoing trumpets conducted by Furtwaengler and Mengelberg, marches just as invincibly as our Movement!

Group Dynamics in Baltimore Scams

Because the Baltimore suburb of Pikesville has been heavily Jewish for decades it offers a perfect example of Semitic man in his natural habitat. Over time it has earned the less flattering names of Kikesville and Jewtown. Nearby Park Heights Avenue is known as the "longest road in the world," extending from Israel to Africa.

The social pages in the Baltimore Sun are the epitome of Jewish cultural aspirations. Nothing more forcefully illustrates the Jewish propensity or compulsion to get to the head of the line at any cost. Nearby beauty parlors are overflowing before major social events, although making Jewish women beautiful is a Herculean task. The local economy caters directly to the Semitic citizenry, its latest addition a lavish new mall in nearby Owings Mills to fuel the fantasies of its JAP (Jewish American Princess) clientele.

Some stores in the fashionable mall, which naively relied entirely on demographics, have unexpectedly closed. They were obviously unaware that JAP jokes are truisms. On special weekend occasions JAPs will flock to jewelry stores to buy large expensive baubles and then return them on the following Monday. Low-level employees dislike JAPs for their pushy, bullying tactics and their propensity to complain to the employees' supervisors, hoping to get them fired. All this back-biting is mostly for fun. These people would enjoy running a concentration camp.

An elegant grocery store nicknamed "The Gucci Giant" caters to the "sophisticated tastes" of its customers. Upscale or not, Jews love to push and shove in stores and be generally downright mean. After a year of living and working among them, my girlfriend, the kindest and gentlest of women, was transformed into a raging anti-Semite. Their wealth and education notwithstanding, they are still a coarse, unmannerly people who seem to have a genetic block to decorum.

Despite the social veneer, their animadversion to anything or anyone not Jewish permeates their biting, sarcastic humor. Most Jews do not even like each other, but remain faithful to their tribal imperative. The occasional nice one is invariably trapped in a marriage to a yenta or some other unpropitious female. Even among themselves they are obnoxious. I once witnessed a typical pushy know-it-all JAP lecturing a Jewish doctor on a medical problem.

They constantly compete with each other. It is not so much keeping up with the Joneses as one-upping the Goldbergs. Maid service is mandatory even for the ordinary middle class. There is a high price for this frenzy. I once heard a psychiatrist on some talk show remark that over half his patients were Jewish. None of the other $100-an-hour shrinks disagreed.

We should never forget that epitome of local Jewish mischief, the S&L crisis of the late 80s, which rivaled the Bolshevik Revolution in its pervasive Jewish participation. The late Ben Cardin, whose wife Shoshonna is a mover and shaker in Zionist circles, was a major player in the Baltimore area scandals. He spent a modest time in jail while his friends led a vociferous campaign for mercy and a pardon. Jews did not offer any remuneration or even an apology to those who had lost their savings. To the Chosen, reparations only travel in one direction.

Gentile attorney Wilbur Preston's report on the S&L crisis was a political tour de force that delicately tiptoed over the massive Jewish presence in the scandal. Given a deadline of only 60 to 90 days for a necessarily brief report, he only had time to investigate the biggest crooks. To this day he is a pariah in the eyes of many of the powers-that-be. One item in the report is a list of prominent figures who withdrew their funds from the S&Ls the day before they were shut down. It has never been published.

There were over 100 S&Ls in Maryland. Guess which ones had the problems! It was certainly not the 100-year-old Polish S&L in East Baltimore that was speculating in condos in Ocean City. Easily 95% of the names in Preston's report are Jewish.

Regulations, for example, forbid a bank president from borrowing $10 million dollars from his bank at 10% interest when rates are 18%. But through a loophole a bank president could lend the money to an ethnic comrade across the street, who would reciprocate from his bank. Another trick was advertising that "their S&L" paid the highest interest. Buried in the fine print was the inevitable Jewish loophole: the rate changed daily and was set much lower on weekends when customers could not check it.

Prominent in the S&L scams was Jeffery Levitt, who rose from the most infamous slumlord in Baltimore to a respected banker and socialite within a few years. Because of their visibility and personal idiosyncrasies he and his wife Carol became the proverbial scapegoats for the entire tribe. Levitt jokes abounded as both he and his missus were obese and famous for consuming five or six desserts at one seating. Ever the sycophant, the Baltimore Sun wrote about the "anguish in the close-knit Jewish community." Embarrassment at being caught in the cookie jar is more like it.

Those who pooh-pooh group dynamics in this affair should consider my personal legal encounter with a minor-league lewish banker and crook. During discovery proceedings we found that he had employed the same tactics that would later surface in the Preston report: illegal bank loans to associated builders, bribes to inspectors, fraudulent appraisals, etc. Where did a small-time sleazo learn these slick scams that earned millions for the big guys! Hint: he lived in Pikesville, the hub of ethnic networking.

Death canceled the cyclic miscegenation

Bye Princess Di

By

Jay Lock

Lady Diana Spencer, formerly her Royal Highness and future Queen of England, who remained the Princess of Wales after her divorce from Prince Charles, is suddenly gone. Adored and adulated as "Princess Di," she is, at least for the moment, the most popular woman in Western history, perhaps the most popular woman in world history. Her funeral attracted billions of TV viewers.

Di was also the most photographed person in history. Her reproduced image was both a pop icon and, since her death, a pop idol. She was a fairy tale princess come to life. Even after giving birth to two children, including William, in direct line to the British throne, Di worked her way back to physical fitness and beauty in a way that most men and women of whatever race can only admire.

Di was not merely the Princess of Wales, but the Princess of the West. She is worshiped, not only because of her beauty, but because of her public profile, especially her charities. Unhappily, our admiration for Princess Di should begin and end with her beauty. She was the thoroughly modern, feminist traitor to her husband, her family, her faith, her nation and her race.

Di gave herself to Prince Charles in an arranged, ultimately unfaithful marriage. In such circumstances, not unforeseen by her from the very beginning, she eventually chose to be a modern girl. That is, she "got out." She chose to be "honest" and "open," to reveal her marriage problems to the teeming masses of an irretrievably debauched world, a world that hastened to welcome her into that strange, contemporary sisterhood of "victimhood."

Women saw Di as a model of feminist independence. Commentators and critics selected her as the epitome of psycho-social-political correctness. Men fantasized her as a woman of confused emotions and priorities who simply needed a good man to rescue her and straighten her out.

Di chose to publicly criticize and ultimately abandon her husband and her royal family, rather than suffer, forgive and live on to find happiness in her destiny. She forsook the morality, tradition and purpose of the institutions of marriage and the monarchy. Her choices were easily approved by the stupid, immoral public which routinely choose the easy way out of its personal and social covenants.

After her divorce, Di's charities took on an incressingly politically correct slant, benefiting queers and innumerable Third Worlders and other favored agents of social change. Her hostility to the monarchy was expanded by the media to a revolution against the social order. Like so many of the ultra-elite, her "philanthropy" was fundamentally misanthropic.

Yes, she seemingly put herself at risk by fondling AIDS' babies. Then there was the funeral hoopla of the queer designer from Italy, Versace, who was assassinated by a fellow queer. Photos seen around the world revealed Di and the British homo songster, Elton John, mourning side by side.

It was only a matter of time before Di began consorting and then whoring with rich Pakistani and Arabian playboys. At the time, she appeared to be rejecting the West for the Third World. She chose the harem-mongers, who view a pretty white Western woman as one more trinket to collect and toss into their sandbox kingdoms. In the end, long before she died, she chose death over life.

In her last days she was scarfed up by yet another dusky millionaire, one who had only recently proposed marriage to a Hollywood bimbo. Dodi Al Fayed had a reputation for hulling out Nordic women and consuming their very souls, like sweet fruits, later discarding their carcasses to the hungry ants and vultures on the barren Arabian sands.

Dodi Al Fayed's was not a Western childhood spent hanging onto the apron strings of a doting mother who preserved hearth and home. As happens with Asians and Africans who misconstrue Westernism as mere consumerism, Western culture often bites back with disastrous consequences.

Eventually their easy-come, easy-go wealth convinces Third World hierarchs that they are masters of all they survey.

The Arabs have no business in Paris, London or anywhere in the West. They have no business in and on our lands, buying our homes and companies and moving millions of swarthy Muslims in to take over. Least of all should they be here scoping out the mothers and sisters of our race and luring them into their desert dens.

In the end we must conclude that Princess Di helped to bring about her own unfortunate end. The Royal Family was aware of this and, at first, made few preparations for the funeral and burial services. When public pressure caused them to change their minds, NBC News called it a "royal thaw." Hard, icy, detached Elizabeth II finally exhibited a superficial touch of warmth.

The House of Windsor has been condemned by many for its apparent betrayal of Di. It is not the Royal Family, however, who betrayed her. It is Di's tawdry, hypocritical public who lauded her every strike against Western traditions, institutions and morality. Di betrayed us all, like so many influential persons before her, by pretending that all things white and Western no longer matter.

THE DIANA DAFTNESS

By Colin Jordan

With September a strange fit of madness came and gripped Britain for several weeks, convulsing the public at large with a high fever of hysteria. Scribes penned soaring and saintly eulogies. Flower sellers enjoyed the bonanza of their lives. Souvenir makers made a fortune. A depraved, drink and drug homosexual named Elton John, who appropriately performed as a 'people's star' at the funeral in Westminster Abbey of a 'people's' potentate, sold millions or records of his pop production.

The Queen interrupted her summer sojourn at Balmoral to return to London to broadcast to the nation. A minute's silence was observed far and wide. Suggestions for commemoration encompassed an eternal flame, a specially named bank holiday, the minting of new coins, the renaming of Heathrow Airport, the permanent closing to traffic of London's leading thoroughfare The Mall, and the award of a Nobel Peace Prize.

The passing of what great person occasioned this extravaganza of the century? What stirred the press, pulpit and public to such a frenzy of adulation and hullabaloo of grief? It was not the death of some giant of nobility after lifelong labour for the benefit and betterment of Britain. Not a manifestation of concern for the fate of our race and nation in the face of present, destructive trends. Not an awakening of reverence for the millions in past times who have truly served the community or died to keep Britain for the British.

Instead, this fantastic convulsion of a nation was caused by the death in a car accident of a comparatively worthless young woman who, born into luxury and idleness, can hardly have ever done a hard day's work in her life. Hers was a death caused by a lack of sufficient common sense in concern for herself and her children as not to be wearing a seat belt when allowing herself to be driven at up to 100 miles an hour or more (around 3 times the speed limit in that part of central Paris) by a drunken driver who was more than 3 times over the drink-driving limit and, moreover, taking medications impairing his driving ability.

The Diana Daftness, as we may dub the public response to this appalling irresponsibility, was the truly weird canonisation of a deeply instable, indeed mentally ill character subject to tantrums in the course of which on one occasion she threw herself downstairs when pregnant, thus endangering a future heir to the throne; subject to the derangement known as anorexia, namely a disposition to starve herself; subject to an inclination to suicide as shown by an attempt at Sandringham; and subject to an indulgence in self-mutilation as a symptom of severe mental disturbance as reported in the London Daily Telegraph (13 July 1996).

At school this glossy idol of the gaping masses had failed all five of her O-levels, and, but for her plutocratic background and chance elevation to royalty, could have failed to qualify for a check-out job at a supermarket. She was a notably shallow person devoted to pleasure and display, devoid of cultural attainment, her musical level, for instance, being that of rock concerts she attended and jumped up and down at her favourite pop group having been one popular with the frenetic youngsters known as 'teenie boppers'

Violating fidelity like her husband, Charles, as a rotten example to the nation, this candidate for sainthood indulged in an adulterous affair with an army officer, and another one with a riding instructor, not to mention any more. Before her demise and the ensuing suspension of criticism the London Sunday Telegraph (16 August 1997) said of her sexual rovings that she 'always ends with second-class riff-raff like James Hewitt or dullards like Christopher Whalley'.

With her image in danger of resolving accurately into no more than that of a pretty, entirely playful princess, she entrusted herself to and was taken over by professional image-makers, particularly and principally the Jewess Susie Orbach, a feminist guru and psychotherapist, and given a year-long series of training sessions, thrice weekly, with her. The outcome was fast-forced, synthetic presentation of a new 'caring' princess of hearts. She contrived to be pictured fussing with Coloured children in Brixton and elsewhere; shaking hands with AIDS patients at Middlesex Hospital and elsewhere; and opening a drug centre in Glasgow; thus winning fans from the scum of society, and emerging as a queen of queers and drug addicts. She was even shown pushing herself before TV cameras she had brought into a Harefield Hospital, London, operating theatre so she could portray concern for a Negro boy brought from Africa for a heart operation, before which she had taken care to be seen kissing and cuddling him.

While this pop-star princess of artificiality made out, when she had an overdose of it, that she was hounded and driven to desperation by the media — and it was initially declared after her fatal accident that she had been brought to it by pursuing paparazzi — the fact is that she was a publicity addict who pursued and played with that media whenever it suited her for the gratification of her vanity. She tipped off the press whenever she fancied their presence. She approached editors on occasions seeking attention. She supplied material to the media through friends. She paraded infront of them at impromptu press conferences. With her eager connivance, the media profitably transformed a nonentity into a constant, front page feature; so much so that she came to fancy herself as a special ambassador for Blair's Britain, and he was moving towards making her such.

Her charitable disposition as far as her own pocket was concerned was put in question by her extravagance regarding personal adornment. She was reported as expending £100,000 on clothes for a trip to Italy in the 1980s and £80,000 on clothes for a trip to Saudi Arabia and other neighbouring places in the same decade. Her dress at a 'charity ball' in New York the year before she died cost £10,000. Her total expenditure on clothes during her performance as a tinself princess of 'compassion' must have run into millions. If she had been less of a show-off, she could have benefited her showcase charities by personal donation in place of some of this luxury.

Our Diana of decadence not only put herself into Jewish hands with her backstage mentor, Susie Orbach, she was surrounded by Jewish friends and confidants, among them Jewish film producer, David Puttnam, banker Lord Jacob Rothschild, the Jewish editor of the Sunday Telegraph, Dominic Lawson, and his wife Rosa (president of the jewelers Tiffany a Co.); and her lawyer, the Jew Lord Mishcon. Even a Jewess, Elizabeth Emmanuel, designed her wedding dress and clothed her for years, so that in fabric as well as in thought she was a Jewish product.

In view of who she really was behind the gloss, it can be no real surprise that this playgirl of a princess gravitated to an Egyptian playboy, and at the end seemed set, as the mother of a future king of England, to marry him and become a Muslim. Dodi, her final beau — son of Mohamed Fayed, vastly wealthy owner of Harrods, the huge London store and the enormously expensive Ritz Hotel in Paris, along with other properties and investments said to total in value £1.5 billion — was an utterly useless parasite, enormously wealthy with a collection of multimillion pound properties around the world including a castle in the Scottish Highlands, a fleet of cars, an impressive record of philandering, and an ability to gobble down £300 tins of caviar.

It was not the first time our trumpery princess had gone Asian. Earlier in the year she had been dancing in the arms of Asian millionaire, Gulu Lalvani, and the next day, garlanded and with a Hindu mark on her forehead, had been to a Hindu temple in North London. She had other Asian friends.

The reason why Gothic Ripples here expends such an amount of space in summing up and cutting down to size a paltry character who never said or did a single thing for the benefit of our beleaguered race, and who instead was greatly harmful in regularly seeking opportunity to promote Coloureds and race mixing and various other forms of degeneracy, is that the Dianamania following her departure vividly showed the acute stage which our national sickness has now reached. In a milieu where the bulk of the nation seeks to make something of a goddess out of a Diana, there is clearly a sense of void in the public mind, a sense of the absence of anything of an uplifting national mission in the Britain governed by the likes of Blair. The public responds to this by creating false idols such as pop stars and fairy princesses under the tutelage of a captivating media. The BNP's [British National Party] belief that it can detach the public from this enslavement is a fond and fatal illusion.

The Giant Gold Robbery

by Dr. William Pierce

I've mentioned the Jewish program of extortion against Switzerland before, but this is such a fascinating subject I just can't stay away from it. Almost every day the Jews outreach themselves in setting new records for arrogance, deceit, and greed. It's really breathtaking to watch them.

For the sake of review, the whole thing started last year when a group of Jews, looking around for a new way to milk more money from the "Holocaust," hit on the idea of announcing that Swiss bankers were keeping money that had been deposited by Jews before or during the Second World War who had then died or been killed during the war. Like most clever swindles, this one contained a grain of truth. Among the dormant accounts in Swiss banks there are some which did belong to Jews who died during the war. Every bank in the world accumulates dormant accounts, and some of these accounts undoubtedly were opened by Jews.

Now, the Swiss bankers have standard procedures for dealing with their depositors and for handling dormant accounts, and those procedures have nothing at all to do with the ethnicity of the depositor. Jewish depositors are and always have been treated just like everyone else. The same efforts are made to contact the owners of dormant accounts, regardless of whether those owners are Jews or Gentiles. And regardless of what you think about bankers as a whole, Swiss bankers are generally recognized as especially reputable — as bankers who are especially careful to play by the rules. That's one of the reasons Swiss banks are so highly regarded around the world.

If a group of Tibetans or Laplanders had begun raising a fuss about dormant accounts their grandfathers had opened in Swiss banks, the Swiss bankers would have dealt with them in the standard manner: the bankers would have said to them, just show us some proof that you are the legitimate heirs of depositors who have died, and we will give you any money in the accounts, and that would have been it. No one would have expected more than that, and no special media attention would have been given to the Tibetans or Laplanders.

In fact, before this particular swindle was launched last year,

Jews, along with people of just about every other race and nationality on the planet, had claimed and been awarded dormant accounts in the standard way, without any special difficulty.

But the Jews who launched this scheme weren't interested in having dormant accounts handled in the standard way. They were interested in blackmail and extortion on a grand scale. And they had reason to believe that they could get away it, while the Tibetans and Laplanders obviously couldn't. That reason was the control of the news and entertainment media by their fellow Jews.

The first act in the scheme went like this: The schemers got together with some of their buddies in the media, and front-page articles appeared simultaneously in newspapers all over the world to the effect that Swiss bankers were unscrupulously holding onto as much as $7 billion which belonged to the heirs of so-called "Holocaust" victims. The members of the Jewish group wanted the Swiss bankers to turn this money over to them. The Swiss responded, as one might have expected, with denials and outrage. The president of Switzerland denounced the Jewish demands as an extortion attempt. And had only Tibetans or Laplanders been involved, that's where the affair would have ended. But instead, the Jewish media shifted into second gear and counterattacked, feigning outrage themselves over the charge of extortion. How could a bunch of nice, Jewish boys possibly be involved in extortion — especially when the magic word "Holocaust" had been invoked to sanctify their claim for money?

Then the Swiss made their first big mistake: they apologized for accusing the Jews of extortion. They explained their procedure for claiming dormant accounts. They hired public relations firms. They said that there couldn't possibly be $7 billion in dormant accounts belonging to "Holocaust" victims, but that there might be some money and that they would make another examination of their dormant accounts. They announced that as a charitable act they would donate $180 million to the Jews, not from dormant accounts but from their own general funds, just for the sake of goodwill.

The Swiss didn't understand the Jewish mentality. They didn't understand that Jews aren't people you can live with. With Jews there's no compromising. The Jews correctly viewed the Swiss apology and the Swiss offer of a charitable donation to "Holocaust" survivors as signs of weakness, and so they stepped up their demands. They got one of their step'n'fetchit Gentile politicians involved, New York Senator Alphonse D'Amato, who is chairman of the Senate Banking Committee and who has made a career out of doing favors for the Jews. And they began escalating their demands and their threats.

And the Swiss kept making mistakes. They kept apologizing and backtracking and trying to placate the Jews. Aside from their reputation for honesty, the big thing Swiss banks had going for them was their reputation for confidentiality. A person could put his money in a Swiss bank account and reasonably expect that no one would ever learn about it if he didn't announce the fact himself. Last month, in an attempt to prove to the world that they weren't hiding any Jewish money, Swiss bankers compromised their reputation for confidentiality by publishing a list of the names of the account-holders for all 1,756 accounts they could find which had been dormant since the end of the Second World War. These accounts contained a total of approximately $40 million.

Do you think this pleased the Jews a bit? They scrutinized the list, and the first thing they noted was that fewer than ten per cent of the names on it were Jewish. They didn't say much about this, however, except in their own Jewish community newspapers, because it tended to deflate the fable they had concocted of the Swiss bankers hoarding the savings of many thousands of Jewish "Holocaust" victims totaling billions of dollars. Instead they began screaming that, based on a similarity of names, eight of the 1,756 accounts on the list might belong to people who had been connected in one way or another with the German government during the war. There were names on the list which were the same as or similar to a former vice-president of the Reichstag, Hitler's official photographer, the wife of a top SS official, and five others. "Oy, veh! You've been doing business with Nazis!" the Jews shrieked.

The Swiss reminded the Jews that Switzerland had been a neutral country during the war and that Swiss banks had customers from both sides of the conflict. Reminding everyone of that was another mistake for the poor Swiss. The Jews, Senator D'Amato, and the rest of the Jews' camp followers began moaning that the Swiss really had sympathized with the Germans, that they had wanted the Germans to win and had helped the German war effort by trading with Germany.

Now, that's another one of those little grains of truth in this whole fabric of lies the Jews have constructed. A great many Swiss, especially in the German-speaking parts of the country, were pro-German. And of course, they did carry on trade with both the Germans and their allies as well as with the allies of the Jews, such as the United States and the Soviet Union. The Jews seized on the fact of Swiss trade with the Germans and began beating the Swiss on the heads with that. The gold the Germans gave the Swiss in return for manufactured products during the war probably had been confiscated from Jews, they screamed. Some of it probably was gold teeth extracted from Jewish concentration camp victims. "Give it back! Give it back to us!" The Swiss responded by apologizing for having remained neutral during the war and by donating another $100 million to the fund for "Holocaust" victims they already had set up.

That's nowhere enough to satisfy one Jewish leader, Avraham Burg, the head of Israel's Jewish Agency. (That's actually its name: the Jewish Agency.) Burg has demanded for the Jews not only all the gold which had gone to Switzerland from Germany during the war to pay for manufactured goods, but also gold which the victorious Allies confiscated from Germany at the end of the war and have been doling out ever since to various countries occupied by the Germans during the war to compensate these countries for their wartime losses. Burg claims that this gold once belonged to Jews, and he has demanded that all of the vaults holding this gold be sealed until it is officially turned over to Jews. He has demanded — and I quote him exactly — "that the corrupt division and distribution of Jewish spoils from World War II to world governments must immediately be ceased, and every last cent must be returned to Jewish hands."

Isn't that interesting wording? "[E]very last cent must be returned to Jewish hands." Not necessarily to the hands of the Jews Burg claims originally owned the gold, since it would be impossible to determine who those Jews were, but just "to Jewish hands." Just get it away from the Gentiles and put it into Jewish hands. The Jews will figure out what to do with it.

Imagine how that demand would sound if, instead of Jews, Lutherans or Baptists were claiming the gold. During the war the Soviet government forced millions of ethnic Germans — the so-called "Volga Germans" — off the land they had owned for 150 years, since being invited to Russia by Catherine the Great, and deported them to Siberia. After the war the communist and democratic victors forced millions of other ethnic Germans off their land in eastern Germany in a huge and murderous "ethnic cleansing" program, to which the western Allies consented.

Most of these plundered and dispossessed Germans were Lutherans, and what was stolen from them dwarfs any claim the Jews have made. Imagine the Lutheran church demanding today that it be compensated for everything that had been stolen from those plundered Germans during and after the war. We would laugh at the absurdity of the church's claim. The fact that Avraham Burg and his fellow Jews make such a claim today tells us something about their mentality, about their ethnocentricity and sense of racial solidarity, about their "us against them" attitude toward the world, as well as about their greed for gold. And it tells us about the folly of thinking of Jews as merely people with a different religion, who become anything other than Jews when they change their religion.

The reason that Avraham Burg can confidently make such demands, while no Lutheran spokesman dares do the same, is based on the fact of Jewish media control. The Jews have spent 60 years, since before the Second World War, using the media to complain about their mistreatment by the Germans, the Poles, the Ukrainians, the Latvians, the Lithuanians, the Hungarians, the Croatians, and so on. After the war they poured such a deluge of pro-Jewish propaganda out of Hollywood that most Americans today think of Jews as being the principal victims of the Second World War. Almost no one has heard about what Jewish Communism did to the Russians, the Ukrainians, the Poles, and the other European peoples unfortunate enough to be ruled by Communists before, during, or after the Second World War. Almost no one has heard about the mass murder of millions of German civilians after the war. In fact, most Americans can't even give a good estimate of the number of Americans who died in combat during the war. But everybody has heard about the grossly inflated figure of "six million" Jews supposedly killed in gas chambers by the Germans and then converted into soap, lampshades, and gold dental fillings.

This incessant Jewish "Holocaust" propaganda has got most people, including the Swiss, buffaloed. It has given the Jews a special status, a martyr status. Most people are afraid to criticize them or contradict them. But even the Swiss bankers and politicians who aren't fooled by the Jewish "Holocaust" exaggerations are afraid of the power of the Jewish media. They understand that the U.S. government is practically under the Jews' control. They understand that American politicians who are in the Jews' pockets, like Senator D'Amato, can cause them a lot of trouble. They understand that the Jews have enough political power through their media control to persuade the U. S. government to go along with a boycott of Switzerland if they demand one. And so instead of standing up to the Jews the Swiss keep on apologizing and trying to buy the Jewish blackmailers off. And the Jews continue to see this as weakness, and so they keep on pushing. They keep on demanding more.

And, hey, don't think that's because the Jews are greedy! They're not really interested in the gold, but only in the principle of the thing, they assure us. Israel Singer, the secretary of the World Jewish Congress, one of the groups applying pressure to the Swiss, has announced, "This is not about money. It is about justice." Right.

This business of demanding reparations for things which allegedly happened 50 or 60 years ago does bring up some interesting principles. The descendants of our Black slaves in this country are a bit slower at spotting opportunities than the Jews are, but even they can recognize a profitable principle when they see one. They're beginning to talk about the reparations that White people owe them for slavery. They might want to add up all of the man-hours their slave ancestors worked, multiply that by, say, $5 an hour, add interest at six per cent since the Emancipation Proclamation of 1863, and present us with the bill. Why not?

And what about the Indians and the real estate they can claim we owe them for? Why should it be only the Jews who can get away with making such claims — and with collecting on them? They've already extorted $55 billion in reparations from the German people since 1948. Suppose the Germans started figuring up what is owed to them? Or suppose the Scots presented a bill to the English? Or suppose the English presented a bill to the people of Normandy? Why is it only the Jews who are entitled to go back into history and add up their carefully nursed grievances and present a bill to the rest of the world?

The latest concession they've blackmailed the Swiss into is a $5 billion so-called "solidarity fund" to be used to compensate "victims of poverty, war, and genocide." A panel, a majority of whose members are Jews, is to decide how to dole out this money after it is collected from the Swiss people. If the Swiss are prompt in coughing up this money, then the Jews say they will not organize an international boycott of Switzerland.

Fortunately for the Swiss, they have at least one patriot among their politicians. He is a 56-year-old industrialist and member of the Swiss parliament, Christoph Blocher, and he is telling the Swiss people that they ought not to give in to this blackmail. He is telling his people that they owe nothing to the Jews and they ought to pay them nothing. And he is gaining strong support from Swiss voters. We'll see what happens next year, when the Swiss vote on whether or not to let the Jews take them to the cleaners for another $5 billion.

So far the Jews have been so pleased with the way the Swiss are caving in to their demands for gold that they're talking about similar claims against Sweden, Portugal, Spain, and Turkey. Hey, why not? When you've got the whole world buffaloed with "Holocaust" baloney, why not go for everything you can get?

If you really want to get some insight into the Jewish mentality, go to any big library — or to the Internet — and start collecting news clippings on these Jewish claims for reparations. Study the details. Try to see the big picture. Make some of the comparisons I've hinted at today: comparisons of the way the Jews look at their history to the way in which other races, other nations, look at their own histories. It will amaze you. It will take your breath away. And it will convince you that it's time for the world to do something about getting this Jewish monkey off its back.

Slavery and Race

by Dr. William Pierce

I have before me a news story written by a correspondent for the London Daily Telegraph. It's a story about the flourishing child-slavery business in West Africa: in countries like Nigeria, Togo, Benin, and Gabon. Businessmen in the coastal cities send buyers into the interior with buses, where they collect surplus children, in the seven- to 15-year-old age range, and bring them back in groups of 50 to 100 — in other words, a bus load — to the slave markets on the coast. Typically the buyers pay parents anywhere from 10 to 30 dollars per child. In some areas, they simply bribe local officials to look the other way and kidnap the children.

Once in the coastal cities, the children are housed in large, supermarket-style buildings where shoppers can stroll through, select the children they want to buy, and pay for their merchandise at the door as they leave. Some of the purchasers send the children out on the streets to work as prostitutes. Others use them as house servants or as factory workers.

This is not a small-time thing or an occasional thing. This is a thriving business involving thousands of children bought and sold every year in dozens of slave markets in West African cities, in the region which used to be known as the "slave coast," because that's where the slave dealers, during the 18th and early 19th centuries, would buy ship loads of slaves to take to the West Indies and the Americas for plantation work. After slavery was outlawed in Europe and America, it continued as an ongoing institution in Africa, just as it had for countless centuries before White men began buying African slaves.

The only reason Europeans and White Americans ever hear anything about this ongoing African slave trade is that there are a few tender-hearted White groups, such as Amnesty International and Anti-Slavery International, whose sensibilities are offended by this sort of thing. These groups try to arouse public opinion in America and Europe against slavery. They also work through politicians, trying to persuade them to put anti-slavery amendments into aid agreements with African countries. As a result of such aid-agreement amendments most African countries recently have gone through the motions of enacting legislation outlawing slavery. All this means in practice is that the slave dealers must pay bribes to the politicians or the police in order to avoid interference with their business.

Now, the news story I mentioned appeared because the London-based group Anti-Slavery International has just released a report detailing the latest facts and figures for child slavery in West Africa. Do you wonder why you don't see more news about the slave trade? Do you wonder why the New York Times, the Washington Post, the Wall Street Journal, and the major television news networks have virtually nothing to say about it? Can you imagine the outrage you would see in these controlled media, day after day and week after week, if White people were behind this trade in Black children?

Of course, you can! But news about Blacks in Africa, behaving the way Blacks always have behaved, whether it is buying and selling child slaves in Nigeria or engaging in ritual cannibalism in Liberia or "necklacing" accused witches in South Africa, is news which doesn't fit and is therefore deemed not newsworthy by the masters of the controlled media. In fact, the media masters consider such news positively harmful, because it conflicts with the image they have built in the minds of the White public: an image of virtuous, peaceable, freedom-loving, industrious, sensitive, and creative Blacks, essentially noble Blacks, who have failed to rise to the cultural level of Europe and America only because they have been enslaved and exploited by cruel, greedy White supremacists. It's important to maintain this deceptive image, because it reinforces the sense of White racial guilt; it helps keep Whites convinced that they owe something to non-Whites, that they must never think of their own racial interests or feel any sense of White racial solidarity, because that can only lead to terrible things like slavery and the oppression of noble Blacks.

Actually, the media masters have quite different reasons for wanting to keep White thinking about racial matters confused. If Whites ever begin thinking racially, ever begin thinking in terms of their collective racial interests, the way the media masters do, they will be much more difficult to control — and the media masters themselves will be in grave danger. So That's why we hear and see so much in the media about the evils of White racism, and the need for the government to crack down on what the media bosses call "hate," and the importance of giving the poor Blacks a few special advantages like affirmative action to make up for the way we mistreated them in the past — and, ahem, the correctness of pressuring the Swiss people into coughing up as much gold as another poor, oppressed minority group demands. And It's also why we almost never see or hear anything about Black slavery in Africa today — and, more generally, about what all of these wonderful minorities with which we are blessed are actually like and the way in which they really behave when left to themselves.

I've done a lot of thinking about this problem of the Jewish control of our news and entertainment media, and I've probably talked more about it on these American Dissident Voices broadcasts than any other problem we're facing as a people. That's because It's the most important problem we're facing. It's the key to all of our other problems. It's the one problem we must overcome if our people are to survive.

Let's look today at a couple of aspects of this problem of Jewish media control that I haven't discussed much in the past. What I have discussed often before is the fact that most people aren't really rational in the formation of their opinions and attitudes. They don't believe what makes the most sense. They don't believe what they see the best evidence for. They believe what is fashionable. They believe whatever they think other people believe. And so the task of the mass media is not primarily to present either factual or contrived evidence for a particular point of view they want the public to adopt; instead it is simply to convince the public that this point of view is fashionable: that it is the point of view most other people already have. And the media do this convincing primarily with advertising and with entertainment: they show fashionable actors expressing the opinions they want the viewers to adopt. Sometimes they use news for the same purpose: they'll sample the reactions of people on the street to some event in the news and then select those reactions for broadcast or publication which match the reaction they want the public to have. But the main task of the news media is to screen out facts which don't fit and present only those facts which seem compatible with the opinions the media are promoting.

And that technique works quite well with most people. But there are many White Americans who are able to think for themselves, who are able to entertain even unfashionable ideas, if that's where the evidence points. Why don't we hear more of these Americans speaking out? Why do so many of them just go along with the falsehoods and deceptions of the controlled media?

I believe that a full answer to this question has three parts. In the first place, these people able to think for themselves tend to be more successful economically and socially than the average, because they're smarter than the average. They tend to belong to the upper strata of our society, strata whose inhabitants are cushioned against many of the harsher realities of what is happening to our society — and who live in an environment where politeness is especially valued. They don't want to be rude. They don't want to be offensive. To point out too loudly the inadequacies of Blacks would be considered a bit déclassé.

In the second place many Whites believe that we should preserve the peace at all costs. They place a very high value on maintaining social tranquillity. They know how easily some minorities take offense and how violent and destructive they can become. They know that if a White policeman has to tap a Black with his nightstick during an arrest, his fellow Blacks may stage a three-day riot and burn the whole town to the ground. And so these peace-loving folks are inclined to tread very softly and leave their nightsticks at home. They'd rather see us White rabble-rousers restrained than give us an opportunity to stir up trouble. After all, they think, as bad as the racial situation is, we have to learn to live with it. We may not like it, but there's nothing we can do about it — nothing, that is, except things that inevitably would entail a great deal of conflict, violence, and bloodshed, and that's just too terrible to contemplate. Our people, unfortunately, have lost a lot of their stomach for that sort of thing over the past couple of hundred years.

And, as I said, these are folks who already have a reasonable understanding of the facts. They're not taken in by any egalitarian myths. With them it's a problem of values, of priorities. Keeping the peace and avoiding violence is the most important thing to them. About the only way you can persuade them to take a stand for their people is convince them by demonstration that Blacks are not the only ones who can raise hell, and that simply being polite will not permit them to escape unscathed and avoid violence to their own persons.

Finally, I believe that for many independent-minded people the problem is not being able to see the forest for the trees. What they see is that there are many individual Blacks who are intelligent, there are many moral Blacks, many industrious and self-disciplined Blacks, and many individual Blacks who are able to adapt quite successfully and even constructively to a civilized, European society. And they also see that there are many White people who are stupid, lazy, immoral, and undisciplined and are a burden on our society. These independent-minded people are focused on individual Blacks and individual Whites, and the conclusion they reach is that there are some good and useful people of all races in our society and some bad and useless people of all races.

What these independent-minded people fail to do is back off a bit and look at races as a whole. What they fail to understand is that the problem we must deal with is not the quality of the individual Negro who is living next door, or even the effect that minorities are having on our neighborhood. The problem is what Blacks as a race — or what non-Whites generally — are doing to our society and to our race by living among us. And it is quite clear, indisputably clear, that what they are doing as a race, as a whole, is not good. They are destroying our society and our race. That's the problem we must deal with, and all considerations of individuals become wholly insignificant in comparison.

Now, I know that's hard for some people to grasp. I know that it took me a while to get my own thinking straightened out. I began life more or less as a libertarian, and my primary concern was that the government not mess with me personally — and more generally that people be permitted to do whatever they want to do as individuals. I didn't think much about the cumulative effects of individual actions and individual qualities on the society in which I was living. But as these cumulative effects began being really noticeable in the 1960s, I had to start thinking about them. I believe that all of us need to think about them.

We need to understand that every race encompasses individuals with a range of characteristics, with each characteristic distributed about some average value in a more or less bell-shaped curve. When we want to think about the effects of mixing two races together in a society, it is these average values we must consider, not individuals. For example, there are smart Blacks and stupid Whites — a lot more of the latter these days than in the past, it seems — but the average intelligence for Blacks in the United States is between 15 and 20 IQ points below the average for Whites. That's more than enough to make the difference between being able to sustain a modern, civilized society and not being able to keep it from sliding back into the jungle, the way every Black country in Africa for which Whites built a civilized infrastructure began sliding back into the jungle as soon as the Whites relinquished control to the Blacks during the decolonization period after the Second World War. More than that, the rare individuals who have the special abilities required to build a civilization, not just sustain one, are way out on the high side of the bell curve — far enough out, in fact, that the Black bell curve has for all practical purposes gone to zero. Which is to say that if on the White bell curve for an average population of one million Whites there are 100 who qualify as civilization builders, as true innovators, then on a bell curve for one million Blacks the number of individuals who qualify as civilization builders is somewhere between zero and one.

These are the things that people who are able to think for themselves need to consider. They need to consider the overall effects of allowing large numbers of Blacks and other non-Whites to live among us. They need to consider the ultimate consequences of such a policy. They need to realize that as races with lower standards of performance than ours mix with us, they inevitably will pull down the overall standards for our society. Eventually they will pull us down to the level where we cannot compete effectively with other societies which have maintained their own standards.

Our independent-minded people need to think clearly about the ways in which our society already has been degraded by permitting larger and larger numbers of non-Whites to live among us. They need to look at our school problem and our crime problem and our drug problem and to understand that these are consequences of our failing to maintain a White society, and that we are suffering these consequences regardless of the fact that there are many individual Blacks who cannot be blamed for these problems. They need to understand that it is Blacks collectively, Blacks as a race, who are pulling our society down.

Our people also need to understand the true motivations of the media bosses when they respond to these problems by trying to obscure the problems and confuse us about them: for example, by campaigning against IQ testing — or any testing of people which distinguishes them or ranks them according to ability and thereby reveals the fact of racial inequality — and at the same time by trying to convince us that there is some mysterious benefit to be gained by having more racial diversity in our society; when they deliberately try to make us feel a sense of racial guilt by blaming Black slavery on Whites; when they deliberately use their media to encourage miscegenation; and finally, when they make the claim that there really is no such thing as race, that the whole concept of race is meaningless. Yes, we need to understand what these Jewish media bosses are up to. We need to understand the overall consequences to our people of permitting them to live among us.

Finally, let me leave you with this thought. If the idea of inferiority and superiority bothers you, if you don't like the idea of categorizing Black society in Nigeria or Uganda, with its enduring institution of slavery, as inferior to White society, just think of it as different. And just realize that when people from a different race are mixed with ours, we will become different. We will lose our racial distinctness, our very ability to think of ourselves as a race. That is why I am opposed not only to the presence of Blacks and Jews in our society, but even to the large-scale presence of races I respect, such as the Japanese. Mixing leads to the loss of distinctness, to the loss of identity. And the loss of identity leads inevitably to death.

Think about it.

THE ANTI-HUMANS

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Corneliu Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigous academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

On the 18th Amendment (Prohibition): "Very few Americans were sufficiently sane to perceive that they had repudiated the American conception of government and had replaced it with the legal principle of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat,' which was the theoretical justification of the Jews' revolution in Russia."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

ERNST ZÜNDEL'S POWER NEWSLETTER

Issue No. 225 — January 8, 1998
Personal Opinions of the Author

To my friends around the world:

The last newsletter was being stuffed and mailed out after the mail strike came to an end when word reached me that the Federal Appeal Court of Canada had reversed or overturned Judge Heald's decision of August 1997, which had forbidden Canada's Security Intelligence Review Committee from holding Star Chamber Inquisition-like hearings against me, after Canada's civilian spy agency had falsely declared me a "security threat" in the late summer of 1995.

The appeal was heard in Vancouver on October 2, 1997. Doug Christie, Barbara Kulaszka and I were there to fight the appeal. I had the feeling during those proceedings that they might go against us. After years of being dragged before judges, one gets a pretty good feel for the nuances and signals which invariably pass between judges and prosecutors. One can also tell by how they behave toward the accused, by what kinds of issues they concentrate on, and by what kinds of questions they ask the defence lawyer.

It seemed clear to me that for "reasons of state", as we say in Old Europe, those three judges were going to rule in favor of the powers the state arrogates unto itself to call anyone they choose a "security threat"—which means, ultimately, that the criterion applied is a political one. The future will call it precisely that!

That was hardly news to me or to my defence team. We did our duty for the historical record and to get those arguments and documents into the legal system for posterity to judge. We had prepared our arguments with diligence and had spared no effort in marshaling all the facts, precedents, etc. I am satisfied that what was humanly possible for us, was done. The three-judge panel decided against us, and ruled surprisingly quickly in this matter. Obviously those in authority are in a hurry to deal with Ernst Zündel, the man they like to hate in official circles in Canada. This is not surprising—after all, as we so well remember, the Prime Minister of Canada had promised the leaders of Canadian Jewry during a public speech in Toronto that "Holocaust Deniers" were not welcome in Canada!

Meanwhile, are they truly hurting my image—try as they might? In a survey done by Jack Granatstein, a professor at York University, and H. Graham Rawlinson, two researchers who just published The Canadian 100, there is a classification of the one hundred most influential Canadians of the 20th Century, according to how well they are known and there, in 44th position, it lists the German-Canadian Revisionist, Ernst Zündel!

What I intuitively suspected during the Appeal Hearings was later borne out—that my estranged wife, Irene, had taken the opportunity during my absence from Toronto to visit the city and to talk to the Intelligence Unit of Toronto Police, who in turn arranged to have her betray me to the Human Rights Commission lawyers during that period.

I was busy trying to fight for my freedom and my human rights in court and Tribunal hearings and, all along, tried valiantly to save my crumbling marriage. The last attempts on my part took place on October 7th and 8th, 1997, when I met Irene and David, her 9-year-old son from a previous marriage, in a restaurant less than 100 meters from my office. I became aware during that conversation that Irene had already seen the cops. Her October 17, 1997 Tribunal "secret witness" testimony only officially confirmed her betrayal. It was no surprise to me. I had warned my legal defence team that it was in the offing. More about that at the end of this letter.

On November 28, 1997 there was another court decision by none other than the Chief Justice, Isaacs, of the Federal Court of Canada, who ordered me to appear in Vancouver Federal Court on January 28, 1998 for yet another appeal hearing in the Canadian Human Rights Commission case.

The month of December, 1997, was a busy month for me. I had several appointments to keep with various medical doctors, needed eye examinations, etc. Appointment chased appointment. I felt a little like a hamster on a treadmill in those weeks.

All the while I had to prepare the groundwork for the continued cross-examination of word twister Gary Prideaux who, to the surprise of no one, found "hate" and "suggestions of violence" in the strangest, most unexpected words and places in documents posted on the Zündelsite.

As a by-product of these "expert witnesses" and what they find and say, an interesting pattern develops: ever-rising amounts of grants these traveling, highly paid "experts" get from government censorship agencies, after they do the bidding of Human Rights Commissions, etc., in exchange for depriving the targeted dissidents of their human rights and freedoms. Not once in my long revolving door career as Canada's Permanently Accused have I ever seen these government hirelings embarrassed the least bit about their aid-and-abet censorship activities!

This is a bit of a sidebar and detour from the main body of this Power letter, but important to keep in mind, which is the industry that is springing up around ways and means to enhance one's career by selling tailor-made expert witness testimony.

Professor Hilberg earned tens of thousands of dollars for his "expertise" in mine and various other court cases around the world. Professor Browning got in the neighborhood of $20,000 in the 1988 Great Holocaust Trial, and in the most recent Zündel Human Rights Tribunal case, Professor Prideaux admitted equally to a princely stipend for trying to deprive me of my intellectual freedom.

It is noteworthy that all these men were Americans, as was, of course, Irene Helen Zündel. All had no problems whatsoever when it came to ignoring the sacred First Amendment rights and other American traditions of freedom and protection from state intervention in order to help persecute and shut down, incarcerate, and ultimately have a man deported, if possible, from Canada for doing what has been a sacred right in America for centuries—to speak one's mind without fear of official sanctions from the all-powerful state.

Prideaux admitted that he got the largest grant apparently ever given by the government to a "linguist." It seems that, like magic, his grants increased every time he, an American, helped "get" a Canadian dissident! It was very obvious to me that Canada's-special interest groups have evolved a pretty slick, albeit a pretty hypocritical, system, of silencing people they don't like while having the taxpayers pick up the tab.

Next came the government's "communications or Internet expert", a very self-assured, self-made man called Ian Angus, who also said all the right things in all the right places. He even found a dictionary used, he claimed, by everybody in the telecommunications industry.

That was a strange claim, for not a single bookstore in Toronto carried that dictionary, and not a single computer-software bookstore had heard about it. Only one lone library in Toronto listed a copy, but it was out on a loan. (Maybe our opposition had checked it out?)

Based on one of my volunteer's recollection of her frantic scorch, we went to Book City, the world's biggest bookstore, to Lichtman's Bookstore, to the Engineering Library, to all the libraries of the University of Toronto. The dictionary was utterly unknown. No copies were to be found in any branches of the Greater Toronto Library System. We went to Robart's Library, to the Library of Victoria University, an adjunct to the University of Toronto. The illusive dictionary was ultimately found in the Toronto Research Library—in the area for teenager oriented, less-than-serious books!

This is significant—and telling! As people familiar with this attempt at censorship of the Internet recall, the main claim of the censors is that the Internet is "...like a telephone".

So naturally, the first thing that my legal research team did was to zero in on this dictionary's definition of a "telephone."

They found the following:

Definition of a "telephone": 1. An invention of the devil. 2. The most intrusive device ever invented. 3. The biggest time waster of all time, as in: "What did you do all day?" "Nothing, just spent the day on the phone." 4. Also a truly remarkable invention.

This goofy dictionary was used by the government's "expert"! When my lawyers first read me the above definitions, I thought that my lawyers were kidding!

When Doug Christie started reading from it, quoting the "invention of the devil" thing, it embarrassed the panel of judges and even some of the lawyers to no end. They had obviously assumed that we would not find a copy, but we did.

When Doug Christie asked Expert Angus about the ohvious lack of seriousness of such a source for such an important matter potentially impacting on all of Canada with this "instrument of the devil" definition and other similar "scientific" explanations, the expert smiled serenely and was ready with a series of glib answers!

It was simply astounding—almost surreal!

Doug Christie took him by the nape of his neck, to put it euphemistically, and led him to other and more professional dictionary definitions from every major dictionary—to trade and special jargon dictionaries put out by Bell Telephone and others, even all the way back to patent registrations and definitions.

For days, the word and definition wrestling continued, while I saw thousands of dollars—mine and the Canadian taxpayers'—being drained down that sinkhole called "Canadian Human Rights Tribunal." What a monumental sham!

Mr. Angus marshaled his defences and made his explanations, like one of Pavlov's dogs, repeating the definitions the Human Rights Commission needed for its case. He used an elaborate system of computer-generated slides, which he projected on a Tribunal-supplied screen via a special projector, which apparently was rented by the Human Rights Commission for $500-$600 a day! Evidently they thought that that would be impressive—that the proverbial bull (fill in the blank!) would baffle brains.

As our own freedom-of-speech antidote, we simply projected the Zündelsite onto that same screen—stored, as you will remember and we never let them forget, on a US-based server in California! We even asked the government's own expert to do the work for us!

He begged off blushingly. His own computer, he argued, was not software-programmed for that kind of application! That did not upset us. We knew a remedy.

We spent some anxious hours after court tracking down and finally, at 10 p.m., renting from a Jewish computer store owner, located in the suburbs, a brand new $5,000 laptop, which was then programmed during the night. We set it up for Mr. Angus and, via the government's own expert, proudly displayed to a packed courtroom and to the astonished media the by now world-famous Zündelsite!

And what a sight it was—with the American flag proudly waving away in live motion on every single one of its 2,000 documents, and with the First Amendment protection quote acting like a big middle finger right in the face of those Canadian abusers of freedom!

It was a glorious display! Few times in history has censorship-happy official Canada been so shamed for selling out to special interests! It was worth the money and effort, believe me! It was worth it ten times over!

As I sat there, I thought of all my many American friends and supporters who have helped me for so many years, and I wished they could have been there to see Old Glory flutter proudly in the cyber breeze like the beacon of hope it has become to a beleaguered world!

For hours and hours, the exasperated government expert was forced to call up those documents, pictures, excerpts and graphics stored on the Holocaust swindle! The Tribunal

Chairman seemed to get ever more agitated, especially as the "soap story" file was called up, which refuted all the outrageous claims made, along with all the perjured stories taken as "truth", especially during the Nuremberg trials! It irked him visibly, because the soap story is "hateful to the Jews," the complaint filed against me says! Well, it was hateful to the Germans!

Next, we invited them to see all the pictures of the anti-German propaganda—of the Germans as butcher shop owners, displaying and selling human body parts like arms, legs, hearts, kidneys and heads hanging from meat hooks! There were the pictures of the blood libel not only of the Second World war but of the First World War, of the "crucified Canadian soldier", of dozens of photographs of Belgian babies who allegedly had their hands cut off by the German monsters, by the dreaded "Hun"!

I really wondered what must be going on in the heads of these lawyers and Tribunal members! One could not detect a flicker of emotions in any of them! In all the years of being dragged through courts, in pleading for relief from anti-German propaganda in its endless, myriad forms, I have never seen a human reaction by any of my tormentors! It always was as if my judges and prosecutors were incapable of any human feelings or compassion. None ever showed any empathy, regardless of how passionately, logically or graphically I presented the German side of the story. It was as if these University-trained people had been lobotomized by their education!

No, I should correct that—it did happen once! During the early postal Tribunal hearing in 1981, one Tribunal chairman got it right when he stated in a ruling that the government should not interfere in this inter-ethnic struggle between Sabina Citron and Ernst Zündel, for it was a struggle and an issue "...involving two peoples, the Germans and the Jews."

Because of the fairness of this remark, and for good reasons of their own which are not hard to guess, the government later would not release the decision to me or to the public. I had to spend thousands of dollars, appealing to Privacy Commissions and Freedom of Information outfits, to finally, after ten years, be allowed to see the decision! They never gave me a copy, even though I won these hearings! (The Jewish community leaders were given a copy within the span of two weeks !) My lawyer had to copy down the decision almost ten years later by hand into her computer at Postal Headquarters!

So is it any wonder why it is so hard to make it stick that the Canadian Government is prejudiced and bigoted against Ernst Zündel?

But I am digressing. To come back to Communications Experts Prideaux and Angus, we left no stone unturned, no argument not made, no dictionary of experts in linguistics and electronic communications terminology not searched out and photocopied. Doug Christie fought hard for me—and for freedom! The daily grind, the long overnight flights from Victoria to Toronto and back, were beginning to show. But there stood our Battling Barrister—bravely and eloquently fighting on!

Then came the turn of by-now-defeated, lame-duck Toronto Mayor, Barbara Hall, who was one of the complainants in this case against me via her "Toronto Mayor's Committee on Race and Community Relations." Hall was running for election in the then Mega-Mayor-for-Metro-Toronto mayoralty campaign under the Socialist ticket, being a former social worker herself.

Hall is a trained lawyer and went to the same law school and classes as one of the Zündel legal advisors. Obviously her October 17th, 1997 Tribunal testimony was designed to garner votes during her election campaign. Her promoters and PR people sent out strident press releases about how the Mayor of Toronto wanted to "...stop the Ernst Zündels of the world", etc.

Well, she was bumped in October from the witness box—and, as fate would have it, largely by none other than Irene Helen Zündel, who for reasons of her own decided just at that time to testify for the cops and the Human Rights Commission, but who had forgotten that she had left behind a folder which was entitled "Barbara Hall."

This was a truly sublime turn of events! What was said in that courtroom, based largely on that collection of documents in that folder—testimony written up only sparingly by the media but nonetheless more fair to me than I am used to seeing—deprived the eager beaver Mayor Hall of the limelight and prevented her from grandstanding at my expense. Hall soon thereafter lost the election to the illustrious Jewish Mayor of North York, Mel Lastman. She is now yesterday's news.

Meanwhile, a new date for cross-examination having been set, Hall was still on the hook—or should I say in the hot seat! These so-called multi-racial agencies, such as the Mayor's Committee on Race and Community Relations, are supposed to act in a mediating and not provocative and antagonistic role. Logic would tell you that this meant that I, the accused, should have been given a chance to have had my say prior to the charges.

I had tried to appear before Hall's Committee when I first heard what my opponents were up to in trying to use the Human Rights Commission as their private censorship hatchet. I wrote letters requesting the right to appear and wanted to explain myself to them about my working relationship with the Zündelsite. I called Mayor Hall's office; I called City Hall clerks, etc.—all that to no avail. There was no time, they said; no place and no space for Ernst to speak his piece, maybe spare himself and the Canadian society some upset, and spare the taxpayers of Canada hundreds of thousands of dollars in unnecessary expenses.

Even though I was treated to silence and deprived of my rights one more time, I was determined that I would sooner or later catch up with the Mayor. About 15 months ago, a file was opened on Mayor Hall and, largely thanks to Irene's work in her politically incorrect days, it grew in size and started bulging with the minutes of the meetings of the Mayor's Committee on Race and Community Relations, the activities of Marvin Kurtz of B'nai Brith etc., all obtained under the Municipal Freedom of Information Act.

Irene had also asked the Mayor for a copy of the Oath she had sworn as a public official. Hall had obligingly sent it, along with almost 500 pages of documents, news releases, correspondence with the Attorney General of Ontario, the Solicitor General of Canada, with Cabinet Ministers of various levels of the Provincial and Federal Governments—in short, we had gathered lots and lots of ammunition for the counter-censorship ambush.

By the time the soon-to-be-history Mayor ftnally stepped into the witness box—the very picture of smug self-assurance, impeccably groomed and not a hair out of place!—she seemed sure she was finally going to slay the Zündel Dragon.

She was led through a number of perfunctory questions by one of the Jewish lady lawyers for the Human Rights Tribunal. Yes, she intoned, she had signed the complaint against Zündel—because she, as the Mayor for the multicultural Metropolis of Toronto, saw it as her duty to assure racial harmony and peace in the city etc. etc. She gave her fuzzy, feel-good liberal speech. The whole performance lasted maybe 20 minutes. This was her campaign stop she had evidently envisioned way back in October 1997. She looked around, preening herself in self-satisfaction.

It did not take long before that smug grin gave way to a tortured grimace, as Doug Christie slowly opened that fat three-ring binder I had prepared for him, and zeroed in on the Mayor's paper trail.

I do not think that I am overstating the case when I say that in all my life and many court appearances and cross-examinations I personally had to endure, observe and study, have I ever seen a person so slow and dim-witted, so completely taken by surprise as Toronto's former Mayor!

Doug Christie was magnificent that day, and in the days after.

He asked Hall about her Oath of Office.

Hall could not remember it.

Doug whipped out a photocopy of the one she had sent to Irene, to jar Hall's memory. He made her read it. He asked her about the meaning of the words used in the Oath. There was the word "malversion", which means "abuse of power in a corrupt way". She said she did not know the word. She, a trained lawyer, could not describe and did not know the meanings of words she had used, repeated and sworn to uphold. She was terribly embarrassed! I cringed in my seat!

Doug was relentless! He showed her the photocopies of the legal definitions of the words she could not remember. That Oath talked about doing her duty, impartially and fairly. Doug Christie read her in a ringing voice precisely what it meant. He thundered, while pointing to me: "Were you impartial, Mayor Hall, in treating this man, Ernst Zündel?"

Hall was visibly uncomfortable and agitated and terribly embarrassed by Doug Christie's questions. She claimed she "read it all" (meaning the entire Zündelsite, which contains several full-length books and hundreds of documents...!) before she signed the complaint against me.

She had insisted to her staff, she said, that she would only sign the document pertaining to content she had read.

Doug ultimately pointed out that in the time available to her, she could not even have read the entire 30,000 word essay, "Did Six Million Really Die?" which was only part of her complaint.

Doug Christie showed her the "Nazi Soap from Jewish Fat" details from the Jerusalem Post, the Yad Vashem, Yehuda Bauer's statements and findings, all saying that the "soap story" was a rumour or a lie!

She hadn't seen any of it! She was not familiar with it. She did not know how much aid Israel got, how many Jews lived there, and only grudgingly admitted that there was, indeed, a Jewish or Israeli Lobby.

Every time Doug showed her a new document, she seemed even more stunned. She never knew "any of this", she admitted.

Her performance was pathetic, devastating and embarrassing just to watch it!

Christie demanded to know: Did she not think that German people like Ernst Zündel had the right to defend themselves against such vicious lies? He pointed out that rather than my writings on the "soap story" being "hateful," the postings on the Zündelsite were, in effect, designed to lessen the hate among people—by removing hateful lies through truth, by exposing this 80-year-old "soap story" propaganda lie, which was already circulated in World War I—despite all the evidence and so much research to the contrary since then! Doug left the Mayor at times speechless for minutes!

When she finally muttered that she had found "hateful" passages in my writings posted on the Zündelsite but could not put her finger on them, Christie asked for a recess—to give her time to find them.

Even after 15-20 minute recesses, she could not find any, but still insisted she had seen "hate" on the Zündelsite. Somewhere.

Next, the relentess Doug Chnstie showed her Did Six Million Really Die? He demanded to know where the "hate" was in that publication.

She couldn't tell.

He pointed out that this very publication was the corrected issue of the publication which had been litigated in Criminal Courts in Canada for nine long years, ending up in my Supreme Court victory!

She did not know anything about that either.

Doug showed her the section 2(b) definition of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms the Supreme Court had given at the end of those trials, which set me free for a time. He even read it aloud to her, in his Battling Barrister voice:

Section 2(b) of the Charter protecrs the right of a minority to express its view, however unpopular it may be. All cammunications which convey or attempt to convey meaning are protected by s. 2(b), unless the physical form by which the communication is made (for example, a violent act) excludes protection. The content of the communication is irrelevant. The purpose of the guarantee is to permit free expression to the end of promoting truth, political or social participation, and self-fulfillment. That purpose extends to the protection of minonty beliefs which the majonty regards as wrong or false.

Hall was visibly taken aback. She said she had never heard of it, much less seen it. (It is embedded in at least 10 different documents, right on the Zündelsite, and prominently displayed as a link in the "Freedom of Speech Protection" document on every single Zündelsite document!)

And so it went hour after hour. For days on end! In the end, I felt very sorry for her, as she left the courtroom in embarrassment and humiliation. The media, of course, put a good face on the Mayor's dismal performance, as one could expect!

All the while, my estranged wife was waiting in some witness room, surrounded by her massive police guard contingent against a non-existent threat she was apparently afraid of. Finally came the 17th of December, the day of Irene Helen Zündel's cross-examination. She took the witness stand to be cross-examined.

After her October 17, 1997 testimony, I had toyed with the idea to just let her off the hook, but on reflection and legal advice, I opted for the more distasteful option of washing dirty linen in public.

What emerged during cross-examination was, for those who had an open mind, the picture of a young woman who, as it turned out, had an overly romanticized, not to say unrealistic, childlike image of what life in the "Zündel-Bunker", as she called it, would be like before she chose to become "Frau Zed" as she liked to call herself.

Like many people who get married and then find out their mates are mere mortals, she said on the witness stand she found her husband was not like the image I projected—or could one say that she had immaturely held of me before we got married? It turned out she developed ajealousy for Ingrid Rimland, the webmaster of the Zündelsite, that became a destructive obsession with her as time went by, even though I had been absolutely candid and honest with Irene about my past relationships before Irene and I ever got involved and certainly before we got married. She was in absolutely no doubt about our relationship—or so at least I thought until I heard some of her testimony.

I also did not realize the degree to which she became frightened for the safety of her son and herself, when the Canadian Federal Police found the bombers and callously chose not to charge and arrest them to this day. I had foolishly believed Irene's brave words and the tough, unflappable front she put on for me and my comrades and co-workers. I thought she was as tough as she said she was. That was my mistake.

Since she had forced me into a defensive stance through her unreasonable jealousy and defection, I chose a multi-pronged approach and decided to use some of the material I bad unearthed about a previous marriage she had hidden from me and never told me about, plus some vindictive notes and letters she had written, and underhanded steps she had undertaken—all of which I found out only after we had separated and a reconciliation was no longer possible after her betrayal.

For one, she had written anonymous letters to the American Immigration and Naturalization Service, with the intent to get Ingrid Rimland deported from America. It turned out she had rifled through my private files, either while I was asleep or out of the office, and obtained private correspondence which predated our marriage, and which she sent along to the INS. At least that's what she thought had happened! She had entrusted the letter to someone, whom she knew long before she met me, for remailing from the USA—all this behind my back. She did all this, and more, while she pretended to be my loyal wife and hard-working, loving comrade in the struggle.

Once I found out that this kind of deliberate and vindictive sabotage and unforgivabie behaviour had taken place behind my back, while I was desperately trying to keep not only our rocky marriage going but also keep my business operating smoothly and harmoniously, I felt not just sabotaged but utterly and unjustly betrayed. I felt it was not only disconcerting but downright base for someone near and dear to me to weep and complain to my face that I did not open up enough and did not trust her, as a husband should a wife, throw temper tantrums and make scenes in front of employees and visitors, excoriating and raging at me for being less than forthcoming in my trust in her—while all along she was actively betraying and undermining the very trust I was giving her against my better instincts.

So when I was faced with her public betrayal on October 27, 1997 and began to unearth all kinds of mean-spirited actions, outright deceptions and shocking behaviour, I simply could not let it go by the way I had at first wanted to do. Still, I was restrained in my use of documents in my possession and knowledge about her lifestyle, and Irene knew it and knows it. There are still other forums where she and I will likely meet, such as divorce courts and some other areas still open to me, where the material I have kept in reserve, and the witnesses whom I have interviewed, will come in handy.

Some of my advisors thought I should go all out in this round. However, Clausewitz, the German military strategist and tactician counseled, in my opinion wisely, to keep some strategic and tactical reserves, and not to recklessly throw every last bit of available strength into a "winner take all or lose all" battle.

One of my advisors, who is very close to me, said in quoting me what is really the old Aryan warrior's creed: to only act while under self-control and totally in charge of one's emotions, to undertake measured steps, meant to present one's case, not to act out of hurt and never to act out of anger, much less hate. In the end, that was the policy I adopted, and I will live with the consequences, fully realizing that I may have erred and may have hurt my chances, but I have learned in the last few months that we are all prone to make errors once in a while.

I was determined not to let my emotions get the better of me, as I have tried to do over the last 40 years in my evolution and struggle for the rehabilitation of my German people and, by extension, the redemption of our race. I therefore held back, where others thought I should have let it all "hang out", as the saying goes in the streets.

The picture I tried to carefully craft was exactly what happened. Irene had shared, as she assured me over and over again, before and during our 17 months marriage: my philosophy and outlook life. She had read and could quote and intelligently converse about the major works and concepts of Western thought. She gave me some of these important philosophical books—mine had been burned before we even got married—to rebuild my library. In these books are the notes in margins in her own handwriting, written long before we met. They reflect her complete understanding in matters of race, politics, ideology, the Jewish Question, even Freemasonry. I spared her the embarrassment of these notes.

I had Doug Chnstie go over some of the nasty notes she wrote to the webmaster of the Zündelsite, and brought out her nasty notes to me, which were most likely more embarrassing to me than to her, but I owed it to truth and to posterity to paint a truthful picture of what life was like with Irene and what she was like. Ultimately Irene snatched defeat from victory for herself and for the Human Rights Commission, for whom she testified of her own free will. It was a human tragedy.

All this became clear from Irene's cross-examination. In a flash of temper and furious rage she prevented from happening what she apparently had schemed and hoped to achieve all along—which was to destroy the Zündelsite by destroying, out of totally unjustified jealousy, Ingrid Rimland and my working relationship with Ingrid. It was her state of mind, her immaturity and romanticized version of her role as "Frau Z" in the struggle that did her and the Zündel-marriage in—which is sad, but nevertheless a fact, at least from my vantage point.

That was the personal part of the "secret witness" testimony the government had sprung on me. After the embarrassing and messy love-and-hate notes had been introduced and dissected in public to the glee of the Jewish lawyers and onlookers to illustrate Irene's lack of credibility and feverish state of mind, the cross-examination moved on to more substantial things.

The defence introduced letter after letter and document after document of analysis Irene herself had prepared and authored in previous months while still at the Zündel-Haus, and which she had sent to the Metropolitan Toronto Police Intelligence Unit, trying to help them find the bombers and arsonists, hoping against hope that they might eventually do the right thing, arrest the bombers, find the arsonists, and remove the threat to her, her boy, and me.

There were some truly embarrassing moments for the Commission, when letters by Irene were introduced being less than complimentary about the questionable ethics of the Commission and its flimsy case and about the lack of poiice action. There were also scathing passages in some of her analysis sent to the Police Department about some of the Jewish organizations and individuals present at the hearing in the courtroom that day, many of them by name, over and over again.

One document—a particularly hard-hitting, almost 20-page analysis showing the intricate web and connections which, in Irene's mind, tied the terrorists and bombers to mainstream Jewish organizations. This finally brought the lawyers for Sabina Citron and the Holocaust Remembrance Association to their feet to protest vehemently. The Chairman of the Tribunal also got upset by that document—and, unfortunately, Doug Christie, upset or angered himself after a long week on his feet, decided at that point that he was not going to present the rest of the documents Irene had prepared and we still had on the table to be read into the public record.

That's what happens sometime in court cases. Lawyers are human, too. So back these documents go, to be introduced at a more opportune time!

One final word needs to be said. One of the big deals the Human Rights Commission lawyers have always made, is about the famous daily editorial and news updates, called ZGrams, written by Ingrid Rimland, which she has been sending out, rain or shine, without fail, ever since January 1, 1996. Ingrid Rimland thus became the first daily internet columnist!

These ZGrams were a thorn in the side of Irene, as became all too clear during our marriage. She hated me for giving suggestions, supplying facts or data, or correcting historically wrong dates, places and names or events in some of these ZGrams. Sometimes I have had the feeling that had it not been for those daily ZGrams Ingrid Rimland shoots out into cyberspace each day, the Powers-that-be would have reluctantly lived with the Zündelsite.

However, these ZGrams have set the Zündelsite apart from all the rest of the dissident websites and made it the "magnificent Revisionist flag ship" it is, as one of her supporters has put it. When it comes to Patriot or Dissident Websites, the Zündelsite is Number One, as everybody knows and as the dramatic history around the censorship attempts of the Internet has proven.

It seems that the Holocaust Promotion Lobby takes these ZGrams as some kind of personal affront—or maybe a daily needling—daily reminders of their own limits to their power to censor. There is no other explanation, for I did not write these ZGrams, Ingnd Rimland did. She merely used me to double-check her facts and consult with me on some of the content.

Irene's anger was that this allowed Ingrid, as she put it, "...to be daily in my face and thus be a continuous thorn in my marriage." I could always understand the Jewish dislike of those ZGrams—after all, they were sharp and skillful editorials illustrating the clear limits to their what must to them seem near limitless power. These people control presidents, prime ministers, cabinet ministers, TV producers, movie moguls, large newspapers and news agencies—hell, even police departments and justice ministers!—to do their every bidding. Not Ingrid's ZGrams, though. So it is understandable that those ZGrams would iritate them to no end. After all, if you perceive yourself all-powerful and then are reduced to near-powerlessness and impotence by a competent editorial writer, that must have surely rankled!

Irene had no such cause. Nonetheless, she somehow—God only knows from where—convinced herself and her new police handlers and the Human Rights Commission lawyers that Ingrid Rimland copyrighted those ZGrams only in February 1997—that they were, in fact, my ZGrams. In Irene's testimony, she even mentioned specific days when this copyrighting is supposed to have happened.

Irene hnd previously testified that there was a veritable "fax war" going on between Zündel-Haus and Ingrid Rimland in February of 1997 over that copyright issue, and that it had caused several "marital spats" and nasty disagreements. When Doug Christie introduced Ingrid's copyright registration form from the United States Copyright Office, which Ingrid had duly registered with the help of a knowledgeable, legitimate Intellectual Property Rights Attorney, and with the dates on the form stating clearly that the copyright was valid from Day One, January 1, 1996, and granted almost a year earlier than Irene had sworn she "knew", there was great consternation.

In the end, incredibly, that perfectly legal and crucial copyright document was NOT allowed in as evidence, which goes a long way to show the dynamics and methods at work in these proceedings and hearings pertaining to the Zündelsite. Roughly one-third of the Zündelsite is composed of these ZGrams, wrtten and copyrighted by a United States citizen, who has never even been notified that these ZGrams are a "bone of contention" in Canada, and who was not allowed to be cross-examined before the Tribunal, even though she had flown to Canada at her own expense to be questioned on the opening day of the hearings and to be of help to me before the Tribunal!

Whatever else was said during Irene's cross-examination is really personal stuff and other incidental stuff which will make not one iota of difference in these proceedings and in the outcome. The Nizkorites will lap it up, as would the National Enquirer and Trash TV. Long before Irene thought she could destroy Ingrid Rimland by discrediting me and ratting me out. I had testified under cross-examination behind closed doors to the Commission lawyers as to how much Ingrid Rimland received for her writing, typing, polishing of my newsletters, booklets and other work, such as manuscript work on three books, preparing many press releases, business letters and editorial input into my Power and Germania letters etc. I had given an absolutely open accounting under oath as to how my operation and how Ingrid Rimland and I worked.

True, a Federal Court judge ruled that the Commission lawyers had to keep the information they had obtained from me "secret" for the time being because of the Judicial Review Application, where they were also granted intervenor status. To this odd ruling, Doug Christie had answered laconically: "How on earth are they going to keep this secret from themselves, since the same lawyers are also prosecuting Mr. Zündel before the Human Rights Commission?" So the Commission lawyers knew the facts all along. They must fear they might lose the Judicial Review after all!

The whole thing is a disgusting display of a double standard at work, where all the Jewish organizations have finally come out into the open, once again using a government agency to gang up on Ernst Zündel, the man they love to hate, yet one more time! It must be said: If nothing else, the Zündelsite has flushed them out as the only and global force behind all the censorship efforts regarding the Internet, and as the manipulators of governments and censors of freedom of thought and speech they really are!

In an article in Eye Magazine of December 1997, entitled "Nazi on the Net", the author comes close to understanding, finally, what is playing out in this Canadian Human Rights Commission censorship struggle. He is one of the few media types who seems to have realized that these hearings are only peripherally about Ernst, the man they love to hate.

These CHRC hearings are really about a very powerful censorship lobby which hates to be confronted by uncensored news and views about themselves. They conveniently use me because they figure that, after decades of vilification in the Canadian media, no one will dare to come to my defense, and thus they have a good chance to get a hold of the Internet! They think: Who cares if Ernst Zündel's reputation is one more time besmirched? Who cares if he is driven into bankruptcy? Who cares about his feelings? His humanity? His freedom? His civil and human rights?

Nobody cares, they think, for Canadian media people and the Holocaust Lobby, Canadian politicians and even some judges have long ago so dehumanized me as a "Nazi" and "hate monger" that Ernst Zündel does not merit one ounce of sympathy or even a moment of empathy. In Canada, or so they assume, it will simply be "business as usual"—the Ritual Defamation of Ernst Zündel, the man they have not been able to cow into submission so far. They will simply continue for another few years in yet more proceedings, trials and tribunals. I met Mark Mendelson, a Jewish police officer, in court the other day, and he said jokingly: "What is this Zündel Trial 14?"

So they think.

In their hate and shortsightedness to "get" Ernst Zündel, the censors and their cronies are prepared to sacrifice the Freedom of the Internet, the most revolutionary communications medium since Gutenberg invented the printing press. This Kafkaesque situation is about as grotesque and perverse as it can get in human affairs. Well, they'll find out yet one more time that it will not be that easy, for it is never over until it is over!

The bare facts are: In the end, the Zündelsite will go on, whatever they will do to me. I could go to jail, or die tonight, or be struck down by an assassin's bullet tomorrow, or be finally killed by one of their bombs; they can issue ten "cease and desist" orders against me, and if regular courts don't overturn those, I will be forced to submit to them and to respect and keep to the restrictions of my freedoms, as I have all other court orders over the last 20 years—but the Zündelsite will still be there in cyberspace, simply because I have no legal control over it. It is owned and controlled by an American citizen. Thoughtful observers and people in law enforcement and in the media, not blinded by hate, know it.

So the censors come and go. Wives betray their husbands. Some friends jump ship. Some tire of the struggle, listen to partial or distorted information, and drop out. But the maxim still holds: The price of freedom is eternal vigilance.

My detractors, the various Jewish lobbies, the Nizkorites and their fellow travelers, spew their venom into cyberspace, barf their hatred via television and radio talk shows into the living rooms of this country of wimps and refugees from freedom—and so what?! Politicians kowtow to censorship lobbies while making oily, hypocritical speeches about "freedom of the individual, freedom of the press"; they pay cynical lip service to "Human Rights" at international gatherings of blathers and mental masturbators; Christians refer to these times as the "End Times" because of the utter cynicism and corruption of our age—and so what?! Frankly, I think it was always something like this in human history since we struggled out of the caves of Neanderthal. Real freedom has never come cheap! Not in ancient Greece, not in Rome, not for Galileo and not for Ernst Zündel, David Irving, Robert Faurisson and many others.

I have been privileged to be at the forefront in the struggle for free speech in this generation. I have struggled for my own right to speak, chiefly so I may defend my own ethnic group and my own race in the process. And chiefly against Jewish liars and con-men. I have had my ups and downs in this struggle, and I have made my shares of errors in judgment and have been cut down to size and humbled by it in full view of the public.

I still stand. I will still fight for what I know is right and just. And so, I know, will you, my ever-faithful band of friends and comrades in the struggle.

To have my own wife testify against me has been difficult. You have helped me for years, and you have shown your support, your empathy, even your love in an outpouring of letters, faxes and phone calls. I know that you will help me in the New Year once again, especially in the difficult days and months to come as I will step into the ring to do battle with the eternal enemies of human progress and freedom, and as I sort out my feelings, wrestle with my emotions, try to find a way out of the dilemma, and embark on a road to greater freedom and new goals that are beckoning on the horizon.

We have court dates and Tribunal hearings dates well into June of this year. We will do our best, and then some. As long as I have your support, as long as I have the financial means to carry on, and since my health is improving dramatically thanks to some alternative medicine avenues I discovered through an American doctor friend, I expect to lead this valiant band of Freedom Fighters, against all odds, and even during periods when the whole world, it seems, is conspiring against us, to new victories out of what seems, for the moment, like an encirclement. We come from hardy and resilient racial stock. My own personal setbacks, hurts, pains and embarrassments are nothing compared to a legacy of a great race and people.

We say in German, "Größe verpflichtet", which means that the grandeur of our past commands us to fulfill our duty in the present. I intend to do just that. No government in Canada, bowing to the bidding of lobbyists, no traitorous government in Germany, no Jewish Lobby, however well connected, and certainly no appointed political hacks and hatchet men of a body that calls itself a "Human Rights" Commission is going to change that. I am a human being. I am a German. I claim my human rights—and I will be heard!

I thank you, my friends, for your continued support. Have a healthy, happy and successful New Year!

THE ANTI-HUMANS

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Cornelu Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. Reading it will be an emotional experience you will not forget. "A sequel to Orwell's 1984" —R.S.H. "A searing exposé of Red bestiality!" —Dr. A.J. App). THE ANTI-HUMANS, Order #01013. 1,000 New Laws for Californians

by Guillermo Coletti

Opposition activist Tom Metzger has stated that the only political candidate he would ever consider to support in an electoral campaign, is a candidate who promises to abolish laws. I can understand his feeling, after all, I too live in California and my life, as well as his and those of many others, is under the constant micromanagement of the authorities. This close government supervision I'm referring to does not even take into consideration any reaction to public manifestations of my political and racial beliefs. Forget about that for now. Living in California means that, in some cities, an individual needs a license from some form of government agency to barbecue a burger in his own back yard. The process of getting the license to barbecue in your own backyard is rather easy and cheap, it consumes no more than an entire morning from your working day and it runs at about ten dollars per barbecue. Penalty for defiance is about one hundred dollars for first time offenders and it gets considerably higher for repeat barbecuers. This is the kind of stuff that only "radicals" react against; let's bear in mind that in postWorld War II America more laws are seen as an asset. January first nineteen hundred and ninety eight brings one thousand new laws to be obeyed, followed by all of us in the People's Republic of California. But, what are these laws? What problems do they solve? Certainly, only "extremists" may think that a law can ever be implemented in this country for the sole purpose of creating revenue for the state and to further governmental control of social behavior. Anyone who loves America has to give the authorities of this country the benefit of the doubt and believe, unless proven otherwise and beyond a reasonable doubt, that any new law is not only crowned by good intentions but also by efficiency. Nothing petty can ever happen here, no way. With that in mind let's take a look at some of these laws.

Library Taxes: Counties can impose an additional 1/8 to 1/4cent sales tax to fund libraries. Fiction: It will make libraries work better. Reality: Another way to scheme money to hire more mongrels.

School Days: The school year, which averages 176 days in California, is lengthened by one day. Fiction: It will make students learn more. Reality: The student body of California is becoming more mongrelized every day, an additional day at school will improve nothing for worthless brownies.

Threats: School officials acquire the authority to expel students who make violent threats against school personnel or property. Fiction: It will make the classrooms safer for the pussy liberals who teach in California. Reality: Not a chance.

Battery: The fine for battery of a police officer rises from $2,000 to $10,000. Fiction: Rodney King types will respect authority. Reality: Rodney King types won't ever find out about this new law.

Cockfighting: Makes it easier to seize roosters and other fighting animals, allows judges to order the animals killed. Fiction: It will cease wetback inspired animal savagery. Reality: There are too many wetbacks in the state, it will change nothing. Additionally it will give Jew judges unprecedented green light to perform ritual animal sacrifices.

Gun Crimes: Criminals who carry a gun during the commission of a crime face an additional ten years in jail. Fiction: It will make our beautiful state crimeproof. Reality: There are too many niggers and wetbacks committing crimes, it will change nothing.

Ammo Sales: No ammunition sales that can be used on concealed weapons to people under 21. Fiction: It will make our beautiful state crimeproof. Reality: There are too many niggers and wetbacks committing crimes, it will change nothing.

Registration: New residents must register their handguns within 60 days of moving into California. Fiction: It will make our beautiful state crimeproof. Reality: There are too many niggers and wetbacks committing crimes, it will change nothing.

Gun Permits: Police chiefs and sheriffs can only issue permits to carry concealed weapons to residents of their cities or counties. Fiction: It will make our beautiful state crimeproof. Reality: There are too many niggers and wetbacks committing crimes, it will change nothing.

Concealed Weapons: Passengers caught with handguns concealed in cars in which they are riding can face a felony charge. Fiction: It will make our beautiful state crimeproof. Reality: There are too many niggers and wetbacks committing crimes, it will change nothing.

It would not be fair to conclude this issue without putting ourselves, just for a moment, in the shoes of the average law abiding goy. Goys are the only ones who care to obey nonsense, anyway. Let's imagine that Mr. Goy wants to obey all laws. First, Mr. Goy has to find the complete text of all laws, xerox them at the nearest public library or download them from the Internet, or something similar. Step number one, the gathering of all legal texts, may take at least three hours. Then, Mr. Goy has to read every one of the 1,000 new laws. Mr. Goy is a fast learner, so he reads and learns every law in 15 minutes. There 1,000 laws, at 15 minutes each equals 15,000 minutes. That is 250 hours, plus 3 hours invested researching...253 hours!!!! Every resident in California is expected by the authorities to know all laws, since ignorance of the law won't get us anywhere in the occupied courts. But learning the new laws of 1998 alone demand 253 hours, similar to working full time for 6.5 weeks. Without a doubt, the freest country on earth and the bravest people. ❑

A FEW LESSONS FROM PAKISTAN

By
Allan Callahan

Regarding bringing about a geographical separation of the races to solve the race problem, there are no doubt many who would recoil in horror at such an idea, thinking it would be too great an undertaking to be taken seriously, and would take too long, if carried out humanely. I disagree, and suggest that the splitting off of Pakistan from India in 1947 is very instructive.

Britain partitioned India that year, to give Muslims a homeland of their own, since it was obvious there was going to be big trouble with the Hindus otherwise. The Pakistanis consider themselves a different people, with a different religion, different customs, different foods, different clothes and different names. And although both Hindus and Pakistanis are basicly dark, the latter are more lightly-colored than the former.

As soon as each ethnic group realized what was actually going to happen, and a few weeks before Britain officially didthe partitioning, the Pakistanis and Hindus began to separate. Some 15 million people uprooted themselves, in what was one of the biggest population transfers in history, if not the biggest. And within a few weeks after the official date, the transfer was pretty well complete; most Hindus were out of Pakistan, and most Pakistanis were out of India. They left in trains, on oxcarts, on bicycles and on foot, with all their belongings, plus their animals. It was all done in an amazingly short period of time. And they weren't forced at gunpoint, either.

East Pakistan was separated from main Pakistan by a thousand miles of Indian territory. This was an unstable situation, so in 1971, this eastern province seceded to become Bangladesh.

The racial aspects of India and Pakistan are instructive, also. The darker and far more numerous Hindus got the lion's share of the territory and most of the infrastructure left by the British raj. Jinnah, the father of modern Pakistan, said his people had received "a moth-eaten" country, and later on lost Eastern Pakistan to boot. Except for the fertile Punjab, Pakistan is mostly arid, with inhospitable mountains.

Still, the Pakistanis were glad to get a country of their own, and have done better than India, economically. By 1997, 50 years after the split-up, Pakistan's per capita income was $460. That is very low; but still above India's $340. Both are poor countries, but India should have done better than Pakistan, because of its original advantages in territory and infrastructure. How can you explain it? If we could examine the brains of a cross-section of both Hindus and Pakistanis, we would probably find that those of the former have slightly shallower convolutions than those of the latter, and infra and supragranular layers that are a tad thinner. Some tell us that "skin color means nothing," but it is a fairly reliable guide as to what is underneath!

Fifty years ago, anyone who understood this could have predicted that the lighter-complexioned Pakistani should eventually overtake his more dusky cousin in India, even though he started out on a lower rung of the economic ladder. And this is exactly what happened. ❑

TAKE A GLIMPSE

By

Jarah B. Crawford

Dear Mr. Smith;

I am responding to your writing in The Sun-Sentinel of Miami, July 13, 1997 as reprinted in GANPAC BRIEF [available from: Hans Schmidt, P.O. Box 11124, Pensacola FL 32524-1124] December, 1997, Hans Schmidt, publisher. Tim, I am 72 years old. I survived three years of World War II. I am a classical musician; I play the oboe very well and did some symphony work. It seems clear to me that my years have granted to me some wisdom and insight that are not discovered in your writing, probably because of your fewer years, but more probably because you reflect a massive brainwashing which has been unavoidable since WW II. As with my post-WW II daughters, your psyche, your soul, has been so damaged by the destroyers as to be destroyed. This, Tim, is through no fault of your own. You are a victim as truly as those who were in Hiroshima on that fateful day in 1945, as truly as my two daughters who got their "higher education" in our fields of perverted academia. Therefore, the eyes of your soul cannot possibly see matters as I see them. Nor do I expect you to. All I ask is for you to read what my soul sees in the subject matter of your writing. Let's take a look.

You are a music writer. Does this mean you write music, or do you write about music? Are you a music critic? You do not say.

You raise what you believe to be the monstrous question of, "How could those admittedly great musicians in Nazi Germany have made such great recordings in the demented, insane period of Hitler and his henchmen?" Further, that this tremendous music survives with such superlative recognition poses an impossible enigma to you. Where does the problem lie?

The enigma lies not in the recordings nor in the musicians who performed the music. These speak for themselves. Further, there is no inconsistency between the music and the historical period of that time. And this is where you fall off the edge, for all your perceptions beyond this point are the results of a meticulously planned programming that was imperceptibly ingrained into you, beginning with your parents. Your formative years were carefully guarded until you got to first grade. From then, you had no possible chance of developing independent thought outside the program, for your access to knowledge was restricted to curriculum and the library. These, of course, had long been in the hands of the programmers. You see, you are in a closed system.

Tim, to end your wrestling with this troubling issue of great music coming from the Third Reich, you must step outside the walls which imprison you. If yours were a social problem, we would recommend counseling. If it were a health problem, we would recommend some sort of health care. But your problem is not recognized inside the walls of your program. You all speak the same words. Let's see what makes you tick.

You wonder why some conductors and musicians stayed in Germany during the Nazi era while others fled or were chased out. It does not require a Ph.D. to understand that those who fled or were chased out were, at least, at odds with the reigning regime. Or perhaps it is the Ph.D. who cannot understand this. In the other case, those who stayed were Germans who knew what had been done to Germany, and who saw their way out of an evil slavery which had previously reduced Germany to serfdom. Men of vision who experienced the proposed great domed hall, the proposed new Reichstag and other marvels of Albert Speer's architectural plans for the Third Reich, men who saw the economy and the money system ripped from the hands of the money-changers, who witnessed the grandiose rebirth of the German spirit in the arts, in science, in industry, in social progress; those brilliant enough to grasp the sight of a world at peace, a world of abundance, and a world of racial improvement; these men "played the music" which you cannot understand.

With one exception, you know absolutely nothing of the positive side of Hitler's Germany. Inside the walls of your prison, not a word, not a thought or wisper of this Germany has been permitted by the money changers who were driven out of Germany and who since have completed their physical and psychological enslavement of every American. For your entire lifetime, you have heard of German terrorism, concentration death camps, gassings, babies pierced through by bayonets, lamp shades of human skin, and above all, THE 6 MILLION! The very thought of Nazi Germany creates an involuntary response from you precisely as Pavlov's conditioned response. You are helpless to help yourself, so destroyed is your soul. Oh, with one exception: those beautiful recordings, obviously divinely inspired, which you simply cannot justify.

If your own goodness poses such a contrast with anything German or Hitler, then you create your own responsibility to break through the walls of your prison, take a deep breath of fresh air of, to you, a new world of freedom in which the truth of what I have learned from the soul of Nazi Germany, and the lies which satiate your previous enslavement inside the walls, is abundantly available. Of course, this truth is available to you only if you have the ability, the determination, to regenerate your soul even as the Third Reich regenerated the souls of those hapless German folk, as with Conductor Wilhelm Furtwangler and those musicians of the Berlin Philharmonic. Perhaps this regeneration is not even possible at this late date, in which case you are already in the state of demise.

From your position of hatred for Hitler and Nazi Germany, or from your Pavlovian conditioned response to Hitler and Nazi Germany, I want you to look with objective honesty at some atrocities performed by Americans which you blindly accept without making judgment.

Please try to justify for me the massive American bombing of Dresden, Germany at the end of World War II.

Dresden was a non-industrial, open city, into which hundreds of thousands of civilians had come, fleeing from the approaching Russians. The massive bombings created a fierce firestorm in which all the oxygen was burned. Human cremation was everywhere. This being true, how dare you point a finger at Nazi Germany?

Please justify for me the American act at the end of WW II known as Operation Keelhaul. This will be an appropriate study for you. Then, how dare you point a finger at Nazi Germany?

Please justify for me the liquidation of 1.1 million German men in open prison camps, by the Americans — AFTER THE WAR WAS OVER!!! See the book, Other Losses. Come on, Tim, be honest. How dare you point a finger at Nazi Germany?

Please justify for me the dropping of the atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki when the Japanese were suing for peace. This American atrocity occurred 92 days after the surrender of Germany. It is believed by some, including myself, that these atomic bombs were stolen from Germany by the Americans. It was Hitler who said, "God, forgive me if I choose to use the weapons in my hands." Hitler did not drop the atomic bombs; AMERICANS DID! How dare you point a finger at Nazi Germany?

Please justify for me the American injustice at the Nuremberg Trials after WW II. How dare you point a finger at Nazi Germany?

Please justify for me the Americans and their allies leaving the symbol of peace, the lone prisoner at Spandau, to remain there decade after decade, only to murder him there in his very old age in 1983. What was known that the world must not learn? How dare you point a finger at Nazi Germany.

Please justify for me the American military force still on German soil 52 years after the end of WW II. How dare you point a finger at Nazi Germany?

Please justify for me why there has been no peace treaty signed with Germany since WW II.

Please justify for me the continued payments of reparations by Germany 52 years after the end of WW II. How dare you point a finger at Nazi Germany?

Please justify for me present German law which makes prison mandatory for anyone who questions the forced lies about Nazi Germany. Do you know that American citizens can be sentenced to prison in Germany for questioning the so-called Holocaust? How dare you point a finger at Nazi Germany?

Had enough, Tim, or do you want more?

Now, Tim, I want you to justify for me the inordinate amount of crime in America today.

I want you to justify the workings of the Federal Reserve Corporation; the near-total corruption of Congress; the body count which follows President Bill Clinton and his wife, Hillary; the dumbing-down of our school students and the billions of dollars spent to do so; the issuing of money NOT by our Congress — WITH DEBT; the massive control of information by our controlled media; the official government secrecy surrounding the UFO phenomenon; the secrecy of Area 51; the cure for cancer absolutely forbidden; the stealing of 1.5 trillion dollars from the Social Security Fund by the United States Government; the political prisoners now being held in our prisons — decade after decade, and for life.

I want you to justify for me the deaths of Paul D. Wilcher and Vincent Foster. These murders in Washington, D.C. are part of the reign of terror by President Clinton and his regime at the White House.

I want you to justify for me the murder of Gordon Kahl in Arkansas when Bill Clinton was governor of Arkansas.

I want you to justify for me the federal government murders of 14-year-old Samuel Weaver and his mother, Vicki, while she was holding her baby, at Ruby Ridge, Idaho. It happened during President Clinton's reign of terror.

I want you to justify for me the mass carnage which our own federal government committed at Waco, Texas, burning alive or shooting all 87 persons in that blazing inferno which I watched on TV, which you watched on TV along with 250 million other Americans. How horrible do you think that was, Tim? Does your conditioned response kick in every time you hear the word, WACO? It happened during President Clinton's reign of terror.

I want you to justify for me the slaughter of 168 Americans in the Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Are you getting the picture, Tim? From murder in Arkansas, to murder at Ruby Ridge, to mass murder at Waco, to greater mass murder at Oklahoma City, all during the Bill Clinton regime at the White House. Shall we add to this list the shooting down of TWA Flight 800, and the 39 murders of Heaven's Gate near San Diego, California? Why not add these to the list? They fit the other heinous acts of the President Clinton regime at the White House.

I want you to justify the appointment of a lesbian lawyer from Miami for the Attorney General of the United States. This, too, is part of the Bill Clinton regime at the White House.

HOW DARE YOU POINT A FINGER AT HITLER AND NAZI GERMANY?

While you struggle with these heart rending, conscience-battering questions, I would like you to read at least part of the book by Albert Speer, Inside The Third Reich. I do not personally like Speer. But his book affords a glimpse into the German world, had not the Americans and their allies been successful in destroying this German dream. The glimpse I received was of a cultural explosion which would have dwarfed the Egyptian, the Grecian and the Roman cultures. The common man would have been lifted very high culturally, educationally and spiritually. The inventions and industry of the released German spirit had already put the rest of the world to shame, attested by the 1500 tons of documents, inventions and goods stolen from Germany by the Americans at the end of the war (See Harper's Magazine, August, 1946). I have concluded that Germany would not have needed to conquer the world militarily, for the blessings of the German culture would have nourished the rest of the world for, yes, a thousand years. Please, Tim, if this were only remotely possible, compare it with the degeneracy we wallow in today. The world has become a massive concentration camp where billions of inmates serve the whims, pleasures and lusts of a very few families; degenerate beings without souls who treat this beautiful blue planet as their own private toy box. We who have retained a semblance of a soul now think about, talk about and foresee the possible end of life on the planet.

Tim, I predict that in the very near future the last half of the twentieth century will be viewed, rightly, as you wrongly view Nazi Germany. America will be seen for what it is, the money changers' playground. You will be asked, "Why did you stay?" How will you answer?

No, Conductor Furtwangler's wartime performances do not give me a cold chill, but rather a warm hope. Whereas Furtwangler and the Berlin Philharmonic performed at large factories during the lunch hour, just so the workers could share in this cultural wealth, can you imagine the New York Philharmonic playing at a factory in America and what the workers' reactions would be? A degenerate rock group would be appropriate and well received.

Perhaps I am just part of "the Furtwangler cult," as you put it, which is getting "bigger than ever these days." I would welcome a photo of Furtwangler bowing to an audience that includes Hitler and Goebbels. I would compare it with the mental photo I have of President Bill Clinton dropping his trousers in front of a strange woman in a hotel room, asking for a blow job. Since you referred to the handshake between Furtwangler and the despicable Goebbels, would you be proud of a photograph of yourself shaking hands with President Clinton?

It is obscene to suggest that the shabby works of Paul Hindemith should have a place alongside the four symphonies of Brahms. Let us cease this wailing for the perse-

You cannot explain the strange case of the esteemed Leo Blech who held onto his conducting career in Nazi Germany until 1937, despite his being Jewish. You cannot understand why he was trying to get back into Germany after a foreign tour in 1937.

Since you have viewed the 53 minute video, "Great Conductors of the Third Reich," did you pass or fail the test of your own values as you said this video will test? What measures were used by you for this test? Were these measures taken from the only set of values you know behind the walls which imprison you? Or do I see you taking a glimpse at the Nazi regime, admitting that "...we can't go back into their heads and souls," and therefore we cannot sit in judgment? I hope you continue from the "...difficult and provocative starting point" which this video provides so that one day you will reach a just and honest assessment of "...the truth of the matter."

You know, I have fantasized what this century could have been, had the German dream — their cultural explosion — continued unabated. World War II would not have taken place. My high school senior class president, Donald Noble, would not have been killed. The world would have been spared the endless misery created by the destroyers. Our own cultural development would have enriched our lives more than we can imagine. Our spiritual development (not church) would have brought a kinship among our people so there would be no need for the bumper sticker, "MEAN PEOPLE SUCK." How reasonable it would be to have a President and Congress benevolent to those whom they serve. How reasonable it would be to have the vast wealth of this nation shared among those who worked for it, instead of a few families controlling it all to keep us in slavery. How reasonable it would be to allow contact with space beings who could share their superior knowledge and technology with us. How reasonable it would be to have the peace and happiness that a kinder and gentler society would provide. With these and countless other benefits which would flow from a higher culture and an improved genetic structure, my glimpse, my fantasies, would blossom into a glorious new and beautiful heaven on Earth where the music, too, would find new and magnificent expression of thanks for all that is good.

As if to emblazon the words of these pages on your soul, a short quotation is taken from "Israel or America? The ADL and the Establishment Jewry in North America," written by Dr. Alexander Jacob as published in Liberty Bell, December 1997.

> "What is most alarming about this atrocious social phenomenon is that, coupled with the educational indoctrination being conducted by the ADL (Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith) and the League for Human Rights (in Canada), the aristocratic faculty in men which originally produced high culture is deliberately emaciated and left to wither away completely. This spiritual emasculation of the European mind is the inevitable effect of Jewish assimilation and...the ultimate purpose of it."

Tim, I have an assignment for you. I want you to work out a plan whereby all evil and corruption, all the lies, fraud and injustice, are removed from the United States of America. Of necessity, this demands your solution to the Jewish problem as seen in Dr. Jacob's writing. THIS TAKES YOU RIGHT BACK TO 1933 IN GERMANY. I assure you that this is the most dangerous assignment you will ever face. But face it you must!!!

I wish you well. I would like you to become my friend because I appreciate your love for great music.

Sincerely - in C Major,
Jarah Blaine Crawford, Knoxville, Tennessee

So beautiful, so worthless

Princess Di Was a Creature of Her Time

By
Jay Lock

Hard Copy TV hostess Terri Murphey reported in mid-September that Princess Di died pregnant. If true, the father was either a Pakistani doctor or an Arab playboy. Other sordid facts of the relationship between Princess Di and the Al Fayed family are also emerging. These matters would be of no interest to us, except that they reflect just how thorough-going the white death wish has become even among the "best" of our kind.

Mohamed Al Fayed, father of wastrel Dodi, has spilled his guts to the London press. He says Diana and his son were "made for each other." Why! "Like me, she has been abused by the establishment." As for papa's alleged abuse, hogwash. The man is establishment, a billionaire with all the proper international and social connections. Al Fayed, whom the Royal Family called a "wog," made his billions by selling groceries, buying Harrod's department store, snatching up Royal properties and auctioning off the Royals' heirlooms. No wonder he was stiffed by the Queen, yet stands side by side with her at horse racing events. As long as 11 years ago Al Fayed set his son up with Diana at the Guard's Club in Windsor. Sonny often sipped tea with Di on the terrace at Harrod's.

No wonder Prince Charles distanced himself from this Muslim playboy. Before the bloody crash in the Paris tunnel, Charles went public with his concerns, "viewing with growing alarm the stream of disclosures about the private life of Dodi Fayed." He was said to be concerned about the lasting effect of Dodi's escapades on his ex-wife's life. Today few remember Charles's prophetic remarks.

The press reports that Dodi's father also craved a relationship with Prince William, the probable future King, if Britain doesn't turn into a republic in the meantime. He sent gifts to the British princes, inscribed "from Uncle Mohamed." He did everything he could to get next to the Royal Family, from sponsoring the Royal Windsor Horse Show to purchasing sporting estates in Scotland. His manipulations were clever enough to get him into the good graces of Diana's late father, Earl Spencer, but not enough to get into the good graces of the queen. Ultimately Al Fayed, caught bribing members of Parliament, was denied British citizenship.

Perhaps as an extension of his own scandalous lifestyle, Dodi bought up radio stations throughout the United Kingdom and was planning to hire the repulsive Howard Stern as a talking head. Before his death Dodi was being sued by American model Kelly Fisher, who claimed he had reneged on his promise to marry her.

Rabbi Martin Siegel, head of the Institute for Behavioral Health and Spiritual Values in Columbia (MD), was unhappy about the tabloid's coverage of the Princess's death: "Every time you go to buy a can of tuna fish, you've got to look at this stuff....It's a very destructive influence on the whole culture." The Rabbi has it perfectly backwards. The public needs to know what happens to white women who give their bodies to darkish strangers in or out of marriage.

Wesley Pruden, editor of the Washington Times, dared to discuss the "impossibility" of the divorced mother of a future king ("defender of the Christian faith") marrying a Muslim. Wrote Pruden:

> Maybe we've reached the time in our evolutionary "growth" that all responsibility can be cast aside, and we, like the randy presidents and other shabby pols we elect to express our national character, can do whatever feels good.

In her syndicated column on the subject of the late Princess, Hillary Clinton wrote about what Diana "meant to me and to all of us." She recalls how Di "spoke passionately about her recent trip to Angola" and about her other ministrations to Third Worlders and sundry sodomites.

Hillary ended her comments by noting that Di should be hailed for trying "to build a life of integrity on her own terms." By this definition, one person's "integrity" is another person's racial renegadism. The First Lady painted Diana as a feminist heroine. Judging by her frenzied activities to embarrass her former husband, her family, her nation and her race, she deserved the title.

Postcards Recall Exciting Times

Browsing the public library last month, I happened upon a little tome I had never noticed before, Postcards of Hitler's Germany, by Roger James Bender (published by the author, San Jose, CA 1995). The book is a delight. It is a pictorial history of Germany with special emphasis on the years 1923-1937. It is also a paean of praise to whites living in an all-white ethnostate. The German people on these rare and long-forgotten bits of cardboard are pictured idyllically, doing things that Northern Europeans have always done—singing, hiking, cycling, swimming, boating, climbing, taking part in community festivals and organizing folk benefits for the needy. In sum, they are shown enjoying the pleasures of their own kind on their own turf with no interference from alien intruders.

Comparing Germany of the 30s to the present multiracial nightmare is a study in depression. I found myself longing to be back in that long-dead Deutschland where, despite the presence of an obtrusive and all-powerful government, the people were obviously lighthearted and gay, in the true meaning of that much-maligned word. Liberals will be foaming at the mouth at this assertion, yet Germany was unquestionably happier, incomparably happier than it is today. It had a direction and a purpose, and that purpose transcended making as much money as possible. Don't give me that slop about how evil the government was, how repressive, how gangster-like. I don't care about the kind of government Germany had if it protected the German people from alien culture-bashing. As long as it protected its borders from gate-crashing Third Worlders, that's all I want to hear. Governments can be changed at will. A corrupt government will eventually expire of its own rottenness. Try recreating a rotten (i.e., miscegenated) race!

Greater Germany's population in 1938 was about 80 million. Except for a tiny, neutralized Jewish population which comprised seven-tenths of one percent, practically all of these 80 million were Nordics and Alpines. Today the population of the country isn't much larger, but a huge percentage of it consists of nonwhites and their mixed-blood offspring. All of this has taken place since 1945, a little over half a century!

In Bender's book the postcards, many in color, are marvelous evocations of an era when European nations were just that—European and white. Forget the Nazi nonsense. Try to imagine what that country could have achieved under a benevolent leader who puts his own race before conquest. One can easily imagine German colonies on the outermost planets in a few decades. Instead, because of Der Führer's catadysmic impact upon a great people, the Vaterland today is a lickspittle satellite of a minority-dominated America. But Bender's collection of postcards shows none of that—no blacks, browns, yellows, mulattos, mestizo hybrids or Eurasians. No Semitized or Africanized culture sully these pages, no soul, rap or rock abominations, no black or Hispanic gangs, no cantina music, no chattering Tex-Mex "language," no ballots printed in Spanish, no Afro hairdos, no epicanthic folds, no ACLU, no Anti-Defamation League and, equally important, no Hollywood-Broadway poison to undermine the morals of an ancient Christian land.

Churches are shown in all their splendor, not the ugliness of outlandishly foreign mosques. Beautiful Northern European children play games that probably date back to Neolithic times. Dates, people, places and events are commemorated to draw the German people's attention to the magnificent beacon which their country has been in history, and the kaleidoscope of culture which it has emblazoned across the world's skies, enriching us all. To the confusion of professional German haters, I might add that only a relatively small percentage of the thousands of cards have a militaristic theme.

Whether her people are shown watching an iir show, sailing boats, frolicking on the beach or simply going for a leisurely stroll in the beautiful forests, these cards depict Germany as it once was and should be today—strong, united, proud and completely in the possession of its creator race. The very thought of Negroes and other nonwhites and their hybrid progeny residing in Germany is a nightmare. I am not a German or even a German-American. But these pictures make me nostalgic for this lost all-white nation state, even though these scenes took place before I was even born. I guess it is the ancient call of the blood.

DOES THE WEST HAVE THE WILL TO SURVIVE?

That is the obvious question posed by Jean Raspail's terrifying novel of the swamping of the White world by an unlimited flood of non-White "refugees." But there is also a less obvious and even more fundamental question: Must Whites find their way to a new Morality and a new spirituality in order to face the moral challenges of the present and overcome them? THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS is the most frightening book you will ever read. It is frightening because it is utterly believable. The armada of refugee ships in Raspail's story is exactly like the one that dumped 150,000 Cubans from Fidel Castro's prisons and insane asylums on our shores in 1980 — except this time the armada is from India, with more than 70 times as large a population. And it is only the first armada of many. If any book will awaken White Americans to the danger they face from uncontrolled immigration, it is THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Dietz:

While reading the two outstanding articles in the December issue of the LB, "Israel or America? / The ADL and the Establishment Jewry in North America" (pages 1-23) by Dr. Alexander Jacob and "House of Orwell" by Joseph G. Stano (pages 24-33) a few thoughts occurred to me.

We need not go very far to find a record of Jews' hostility toward their host populations. Jews revere their Old Testament, which contains the following hate-filled, arrogant passages and which, we may assume, still influences their thinking:

Deuteronomy VII, 16

And thou shalt consume all the people which the Lord thy God shall deliver thee; thine eye shall have no pity on them.

Deuteronomy XV, 6

For the Lord thy God blesseth thee, as he promised thee: and thou shalt reign over many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee.

Isaiah XIX, 2

And I will set the Egyptians against the Egyptians: and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbor: city against city, and kingdom against kingdom.

Joshua XXIV, 13

And I have given you a land for which ye did not labour, and cities which ye built not. and ye dwell in them; of the vineyards and oliveyards which ye planted not do ye eat.

In a work written well over a century ago a well-informed European was already complaining about Jews' influence on and control of financial institutions, the theater, publishing and the cultural life of Europe. See my translation of "At the Jewish Cemetery in Prague" by Hermann Goedsche, originally published in 1868. (Liberty Bell, July, 1993, pages 11-60)

If the Jews' hatred of their host populations had been expressed by the ritual murder of Aryan children, a crime of which they were often accused in past centuries, they have changed their expression of hate in modern times. By means of their extensive control of the "American" media, especially television, they are now in a position to commit genocide of their host population by shrewd psychological warfare in which they are popularizing such lethal, suicidal attitudes as justification of and acceptance of miscegenation, homosexuality, women's hostility toward men ("feminism"), abortion and massive immigration from some of the most primitive, poverty-stricken and disease-ridden countries of the world. The demographic and psychological decline of the Aryan component of the population of the United States is now all too painful and real. In all fairness, however, we must not ascribe the aforementioned behavior to all Jews, because some of them are astute enough to be aware that destroying the best elements of their host population would be like sawing off the limb of a tree on which one is sitting. (For a recent example of such wisdom see my review of Michael Levin's Why Race Matters, Liberty Bell, November, 1997, pages 1-9).

Mr. Stano has done good work in pointing out some of the main absurdities of the "Holocaust" material. We Aryans, However, must reproach ourselves for believing it, not to mention acting on it. As a nation we are gullible, cowardly and undisciplined in our thinking for accepting what should have long ago been dismissed as lying war-time propaganda. We have allowed our emotions and our lack of curiosity about historical facts to take over our situation. We fought a merciless, unnecessarily prolonged war against little Germany and as a nation we bombed and incinerated hundreds of thousands of Germans and other Europeans and after the war we turned much of Europe over to the Soviet tyranny. This war was prolonged and made more costly by Roosevelt's demands for unconditional surrender (January, 1943) and the genocidal threats of the Morgenthau Plan (September, 1944). After the war millions of American soldiers were involved in the occupation of Germany and could see what we had done during the years 1941-1945 and were doing in the several years after the "end" of the war. (I was one of such soldiers.) While inflicting massive damage on Germany, both in the terms of property and human lives, at a cost of hundreds of thousands of sons and husbands, we were allied with the Soviet tyranny and gave it unbelievably naive support in its attempt to force its way into western Europe, as it had already attempted with near success in 1919. These circumstances set the stage for a half century of the dangerous and costly "Cold War," but also created a need to rationalize the way we had conducted the war. Part of this rationalization involves a readiness to believe in an exclusively German war guilt and an infinitely evil German conduct of war. The "Holocaust" material fulfilled this need for rationalization of our own conduct of the war well and unthinking, uninformed Americans insouciantly accepted it. The debilitating psychological legacy of the Second World War is, alas, still having its effects.

Sincerely yours,

Dear George:

I read with interest the article by Dr. Alexander Jacob entitled "Israel or America?" which appeared in your December 1997 issue. As I understand, ex-Mossadnik Victor Ostrovsky also exposed the so-called Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the Jew Freemasonic lodge, and its various fronts as being North America's equivalent of the predominantly Jewish KGB in the former Soviet Union.

Jacob's article attempts to gloss over or cover up the Jewish role in Soviet society and government. "Stalin" alias Djugashvili, meaning "son of a Jew", was of Khazar stock, and thus would be very much a Jew as his hated rival "Trotsky" alias Bronstein. A I recall, "Litvinov", alias Finkelstein, murdered his own brother in Stockholm during the 1920s. Certainly, Stalin's notorious show trials did feature some dozens of Jews, but it is hard to base this fact on the supposition that Stalin was therefore "anti-Jew". The numbers of Gentiles murdered in Stalin's domain during his rule are 30 or so million, so his hatred for Goyim was far greater than was his hatred of fellow Jews. Only a blight-winger's wishful-thinking would seduce him into thinking that any Jew who kills a Jew is not Jewish. By this token, we can assume that Israel is no longer run by Jews since the assassination of Rabin.

The slant of this article leads the reader to believe that the ADL is "anti-communist". Jews are indeed anti-communist when it comes to sharing THEIR wealth with others. Communism in practice means the confiscation of Gentile wealth in favor of Jews, not unlike the Jewish equivalent of capitalism. The Russian nobleman and anarchist, Bakunin, correctly predicted the reality of Soviet communism back in the 1870s, with its central state planning and control, run by Jews. Dr. Jacob cites another Jew, W.D. Rubinstein, an "Australian social historian", in regard to the supposed powerlessness of Jews under Soviet communism, despite the admission that Jews were "overrepresented at the elite level" of Soviet society. Yet, this Jew maintains that these top-kick kikes found it "impossible" to function coherently in politics or economics. In particular, Rubinstein claims that Soviet Jews found it impossible to "amass personal wealth and economic influence." Rubinstein overlooks or is paid to overlook the glaring Fortune magazine report which touted those 'wonderful' Soviet millionaires, all of whom 'happened to be Jews'. Naturally, such gigantic embezzlement of government labor and property as produced these millionaires could not have gone undetected, so we may conclude that the massive thefts were done with the knowledge and approval of the Jewish rulers of the Soviet slave empire. Since we can all witness Jewish co-ordination and collaboration in our own countries, it is incredible that Jews would find such organized behavior "impossible" in the Soviet states which they founded and ran, right into the ground. As one letter writer to Liberty Bell stated, the Jews could not run Russia, but they could and did rob it with great success, leaving it in ruins. In this regard, they destroyed more real wealth than they ever stole, for real wealth is productivity, not plunder. This merely proves, once again, that the Jew is only interested in screwing up society and then skedaddling with the stolen goods. The biblical Egyptians were just one example of the Jews' innate behavior pattern.

"House of Orwell" by Joseph G. Stano, in the same issue of Liberty Bell, is the best hammering of the Holohoax I've seen yet, for it uses ZOG official propaganda of yesterday to refute ZOG propaganda of today. This can assist Gentiles in developing a healthy distrust of the ZOG and all its works. He also hits the bull's eye in regard to the Jews having their reputations at stake in promoting this Big Lie. The curse of the Goyim is their inability to remember much of anything from 12 o'clock to noon. No wonder the hebes have it so easy!

Keep up the good work, George.

Hans Schmidt, Chairman

Mr. Bill Lann Lee, Acting Attorney General for Civil Rights
U.S. Department of Justice
Constitution Ave. and 10th Street NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Lee:

Permit us to congratulate you on your appointment as the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. Many of our members being immigrants, we most certainly see your rise to this high position in the United States Government as a credit to your parents, who came from China with the hope of creating a better life for themselves and their offspring. They obviously have reason to be proud of you.

We are encouraged by your words that you will enforce civil rights laws without fear or favor, and without giving preferences to special groups, be they ethnic, racial, religious or otherwise. We see this as an encouragement to point to the often flagrant discrimination Americans of German descent, members of the largest ethnic minority in America, and encompassing nearly a quarter of the population, have to contend with on a daily basis.

For instance, you may agree with us that President Clinton's aim to have the United States Government mirror the ethnic-racial-religious composition (i.e., "the face") of America, has not been reached. Looking at lists of government officials of the first or second tier, you will notice an almost complete absence of German names, although if there were a numerus clausus, every fourth government official ought to be wholly or part German. Could this be because of an erroneous view that "Germans" of whatever nationality are not good administrators? The fact that the German lands of Europe (Germany proper, Austria, Switzerland and Luxembourg) are the best run countries on the Old Continent seems to belie this assumption. Therefore, we can only assume that the discrimination is deliberate, and based on other than sound reasons. We do hope that your department looks into the matter.

Furthermore, we have before us two lists of young Americans who recently received scholarships to European universities. Of 32 students going to Oxford University as a result of the Rhodes scholarship program, only one, a girl, is, according to her name, clearly of German descent. Of more than 50 students going to other institutes of higher learning in Europe on scholarships whose origin lie with the Marshall plan, not more than three are German-Americans. Things like that are going on all the time, all over the country. Here again the question may be asked whether the "German" students are simply not smart enough, or are other criteria coming into play?

We assume that in your new position you will have access to records showing the yearly disbursements (cash grants) by private charities and government agencies to cultural and social groups of ethnic, religious or racial background. You will notice either the total absence of names of German-American organizations on such lists, or the financial assistance they have received is so minuscule as not worth mentioning. An uninformed observer may assume that the "Germans" do not receive any such grants because they never ask for it, but we can assure you from personal experience that in most instances a German-American application for such funds would be met with incredulity, and more often than not turned down before a formal request is made. (Notice also the absence of German names when the yearly MacArthur grants are being disbursed.)

We realize that in many of the instances mentioned, the United States Government had no input into the matter, but if justice, fairness and equality are a desired goal, certainly an "across the board" numerical balance should be strived for. To leave members of the largest minority of the country out of the political, educational, cultural, and economic playing field can only harm the entire nation.

What we told you here is but the tip of the iceberg. This has been going on for decades, but any German-American complaint about the situation is usually met with disbelief. It may well be that these facts are unknown to most Americans (including the German-Americans who are directly affected by it) because the American media will never delve into it. Could it be that it is feared that a true depiction of this sorry state of affairs might take the attention away from other ethnic groups who have a desperate need to remain to be known as the perpetual and sole victims of injustice?

Sincerely,
Hans Schmidt

Attention: Niki Kapsambelis

Dear Miss Kapsambelis:

In your recent article that ran across the country titled "Intermarriage Battleground", you quoted Mrs. Tova Weinberg of Pittsburgh saying, "Our ashes are still smoldering from the 6 million who died in the Holocaust. I do it for them."

At this point, if you were really a journalist who had some regard for truth, you would have entered a parenthetical note stating something like this: (The 6 million figure referred to by Mrs. Weinberg is no longer accepted by most historians. Indeed, the director of the Holocaust Museum in Israel disputes that figure. Revisionist Historians, who have examined all the evidence relating to the so-called holocaust, estimate far fewer than 600,000 Jews and others perished in German Concentration camps. Of these deaths, most were due to disease, malnutrition, and exposure. Some few were shot or otherwise executed for alleged crimes. There is no evidence whatsoever that even one Jew was "gassed" — much less 6 million)

No one who has done the least bit of research concerning this subject puts any credence in the 6 million figure whatsoever. What you and other journalists like you do, Miss Kapsambelis, is to perpetuate a fiction when you let ride such falsehoods as "6 million Jews gassed" in articles that carry your name. A very harmful fiction it is, too. It continues a terribly unfair denigration of the German people and distorts most viciously what really happened during the Third Reich.

The myth of the Jewish Holocaust has been enormously beneficial to Jews around the world. Through this highly emotional tale, Germans and Americans have been coerced into paying huge sums to the millions of survivors. These billions of dollars have enabled the Jews to buy up most of the news/entertainment media of this and European countries. Their media control is the propagandist's dream. They have been able for decades to get away with censoring out all but their side of issues. Particularly when the other view is inimical to their interests. It is only since the arrival of the Internet that other views are now being heard that haven't first been passed through the filters of the Jewish-owned media. How refreshing the Internet. How loudly the squeal from the controlled media about the need to censor the Net. How they despise truth.

How ironic that Jews like Mrs. Weinberg are given free space without media criticism to argue against race-mixing of the Jewish sub-race with others; while Aryans who wish the same thing for their race are castigated by Jews and the media in the most odious terms whenever they express those wishes orally or in print. May we Aryans who wish to preserve our race count on your support, Mrs. Weinberg? Will you report our wishes uncritically, Miss Kapsambelis?

Editor:

I cannot stand it any longer; I must write to your otherwise excellent journal concerning a grave error in the article from The New Order, an otherwise excellent journal also. In the June, 1997 LB, page 14, Western Civilization is called "our White Christian Civilization."

The civilization of Northwestern Europe which has been known as Western Civilization, or Western Civ to college students, is in no way based on Christianity. In fact, it was Christianity which began its downhill slide so evident today.

As most students of history are aware, Western Civilization is based on that of the Ancient Greek Empire, whose best-known hero may be Alexander the Great, the Ancient Roman Empire, and the peoples of Northwestern Europe who were conquered by these two empires successively, Rome on top of Greek civilization. The peoples of Northwestern Europe accepted and were assimilated into the ambience of these two great empires. The Romans in particular built aqueducts, did much fine engineering and architecture, art, literature, jurisprudence, and administration, among other advances of civilization, as the art of war.

Much to the later sorrow and descent of these people was the brutally enforced adherence to Christianity in the person of the Holy Roman Catholic Pope (who recently brown-nosed the Jews), during which the traitor Charlemagne had beheaded several thousand of our Nordic tribal chieftains in one day alone, thus enslaving a once proud and free Nordic people to a slavish, on-the-knees devotion to a Jewish god, an oriental deity who is still today draining the blood from our veins and the guts and brains from our bodies.

After the enforced and brutal Christianization of Europe (which took a thousand years, actually), Charlemagne "invited the Jews into the realm so it would prosper." This latter we see today still operative in the intermarriage of the nobility of England with rich Jews from the early years back as far as 1000 A.D.

I urge you to authenticate this data by reading two very carefully researched publications: one is WHAM! Confessions of a White American Man, by Thorz Hammer ($6.00 from P.O. Box 941, Adkins TX 78101, and "Intelligence Newsletter" from Christian Crusade for Truth, HC 66, Box 39, Deming NM 88030 for a donation.

Whatever civilization we have or have had in the Euro-American culture has been eaten and chipped away and eroded irrevocably by the advent of Christianity, which a recent writer in LB called "the product of feverish rabbinical minds."

One can debate forever the finer points of the Christian faith and its bastard cousin, Identity Christianity, but one cannot in any way call the Euro-American civilization a "White Christian Civilization." To do so is an insult to the educated, those with character and integrity, and any aware and alive person either within the White Nationalist Movement or without.

The Third Reich of pre-World War II Germany was the finest hour of the Twentieth Century white world. Unfortunately, the rot of Christianity made most of us susceptible to the brainwashing of the Jews, so most of the civilized (and Third) world joined the Jewish bankers who owned both England and Franklin Roosevelt, then president of the United States and himself a Jew, as The Rational Feminist has provided the genealogical documentation for ca. 1995.

I have every respect for The New Order, but they are way out in left field with whatever they are trying to do with this very destructive drive to incorporate the USA as a "Christian Civilization." I have sent Commander Hansen, the Assistant Editor numerous facts and figures to prove that white America is no way either a Christian entity, or even a church-going entity, unless you count the most numerous Baptists and Catholics as representative of a white America that would elect a Christian proponent president who resides in North Dakota but has not given me any figures except those in his fantasies, which are totally incorrect. This is not, and never was a Christian nation. Most of the so-called forefathers gave lip service to Christianity, but were at best deists if not outright atheists.

Dear George:

In the last letter to the LIBERTY BELL, published for January 1998, I mentioned some of your contributors. There was one that should have been included, probably more, one Ben Kriegh. One of his better articles was "Some Revisionist Viewpoints on World War II" of December 1989. For its length it covered more points, more thoroughly, than William Pierce does in his writing, and that is something.

However that is not the point of this letter. His article in January 1998 on "More on Monetary Reform" is one of my favorites. When I wrote the article on the Federal Reserve you published in January 1997, I expected some comment, but the one by Prof. Charles Weber didn't fill that expectation. However it did ignite Ben Kriegh into answering those comments in a much more satisfactory manner than I am capable of.

It should be noted that he who controls "money" controls the life blood of a nation, and the constant fight over who has that control has been going on since the beginning of time. It is in the last four or five hundred years that it has put the world in the condition that it is now in. Ben's analysis and conclusioons of this situation is "right on." The proper operation of the money system as outlined by him is the solution to most of our problems. And it is the most important problem of the day.

Dear Editor:

At long last we have an explanation as to why the New Orleans school board dumped George Washington Elementary to honor that well-known African-American, Charles Drew, by renaming the elementary school after him.

I hear cries of hooray! Whoopee! And...who in hell is Charles Drew? According to Bill Bowers, a member of the Orleans Parish School Board, Charles Drew was a surgeon, an accomplishment by an African-American of such monumental proportions that it clearly overshadows any accomplishments of George Washington.

But wait! Mr. Bowers informs us that 25 communities in New Orleans have completed the process to change their school names. What chance will Thomas Jefferson have when compared to the awesome credentials of an African-American lawyer? Could Hamilton or even Franklin compete with an African-American..er..Indian Chief? Butcher? Baker? Candlestick maker? No! Never!

Let me sum up this African-American exercise in creative history with one word: PATHETIC!

Washington is to be bounced because the black population adopted a policy in 1992 to rename its public schools if any were named after someone who was a slave owner or someone who didn't respect equal opportunity. Well, not respecting "equal opportunity" certainly lets out a lot of so-called black civil rights leader who are clearly for quotas and not "equal opportunity."

One the other hand, "equal opportunity" affords the white community the right to change the names of schools if they have been named after persons who were opposed to our form of government, or supported our enemies during a war, or were liars, or thieves, or were morally bankrupt. Someone like Martin Luther King.

Indeed, let's simply compare Washington to King in deciding whose name should be on a school building.

Washington's life is an open book. King's records have been sealed by a liberal judge until the year 2027 and his family is constantly petitioning to have the records destroyed so the American people will never find out the truth about this ahero." However, there is more than enough information available about King to prove that George Washington, the "Father of our Nation," stands as a giant when compared to many great men of history, any one of whom towers a mile over that liberal media creation known as Martin Luther King.

The 1513 people who lost their lives when the TITANICsank in 1912 have received much attention in the form of the latest (but by no means first) motion picture film about the tragedy.

This large number of lives is small in comparison with the lives lost in the far greater tragedies on the Baltic Sea in 1945. In the spring of 1945 Germans fleeing the Communist terror boarded three large passenger ships knowing the great risk involved but also aware of the fate of civilian populations when their areas were occupied by the Red Army. They had been admonished by the massacre at Nemmersdorf in East Prussia as early as October 1944, when German forces wrested this village back and saw what the Red Army had done, just to mention one example.

On 31 January 1945 more than 7,000 passengers of the WILHELM GUSTLOFF died in the cold waters of the Baltic Sea. On 9 February only about 300 passengers out of some 4,000 on the GENERAL STEUBEN survived its sinking by a Soviet submarine. On 16 April only 183 passengers of the GOYA out of 7,000 survived.

It was not until years later that over 100,000 Americans were killed while resisting Communist terror and aggression in Korea and Vietnam.

by D. Baca (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Cornelin Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. Reading it will be an emotional experience you will not forget. "A sequel to Orwell's 1984" —R.S.H. "A searing exposé of Red bestiality!" —Dr. A.J. App). THE ANTI-HUMANS, Order #01013. DOES THE WEST HAVE THE WILL TO SURVIVE?

That is the obvious question posed by Jean Raspail's terrifying novel of the swamping of the White world by an unlimited flood of non-White "refugees." But there is also a less obvious and even more fundamental question: Must Whites find their way to a new Morality and a new spirituality in order to face the moral challenges of the present and overcome them? THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS is the most frightening book you will ever read. It is frightening because it is utterly believable. The armada of refugee ships in Raspail's story is exactly like the one that dumped 150,000 Cubans from Fidel Castro's prisons and insane asylums on our shores in 1980 — except this time the armada is from India, with more than 70 times as large a population. And it is only the first armada of many. If any book will awaken White Americans to the danger they face from uncontrolled immigration, it is THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS. ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigous academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

On the 18th Amendment (Prohibition): "Very few Americans were sufficiently sane to perceive that they had repudiated the American conception of government and had replaced it with the legal principle of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat,' which was the theoretical justification of the Jews' revolution in Russia."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

THE RACEY RACIST

by Robert Frenz

9 March 1998

One of the uses of the word race is to indicate a group to which certain people may, or may not, belong. All peoples, on this planet, are free to take pride in the fact that they belong to this, or that, race, that is, except for people we call White. Any so-called White person who is proud of belonging to the only race capable of sending men into outer space, becomes an instant undesirable and is branded with the label "racist." In more sane times, when people had the ability to, and the desire to, discriminate, it would have been a complimentary designation. The political and social pressures, which now require us to be as stupid as possible, are enormous. Thinking citizens are the last things our Zionist government desires.

We are taught not to think in our schools and often, in our homes. We soon learn the advantages of not questioning anything. A student is often little more than a protoplasmic tape-recorder capable of memorizing wads of nonsense and then vomiting it back at the appropriate time. This earns the student good grades which must accumulate in order to receive — like the straw man in the Wizard of Oz — a diploma. A diploma then becomes some proof that the holder has the capacity to think. When one accumulates enough diplomas, he then takes his place among the "experts" and then extra, and often cryptic, extra letters to his name. That one might be perfectly capable of thinking without a certificate, apparently occurs to no one, which remains a demonstration that our society has collectively lost its capacity for thought.

Many people occupy desks in high school biology classes. During their seat time, they are exposed to a theory of evolution and a classification regimen consisting of the ditty "kingdom, phylum, class, order, family, genus, species and variety." When we recite this sequence, together with "ontogeny recapitulates phylogeny," the world is put on notice of our brilliance.

People have always classified things and the first great generalizer of life-form grouping was Aristotle. His writings described all sorts of natural groups. Like all classification schemes, things belonged to various groups depending upon likenesses and dissimilarities. His method was used until the 19th century at which time Charles Darwin presented his Origin of Species. Aristotle believed in an essence of natural forms while the Darwinian school did not. This was a departure from the idea that eagles, for example, "appeared" as a distinct entity unrelated to anything. Darwin held that birds "must have evolved" from reptiles although he never explained why, on the road to evolving change, some lizard wasn't disturbed when a few feathers started sprouting from his tail or that it was plagued by impulses to leap into the Grand Canyon, legs flapping. Biological classification soon became tied to evolution and since the Church shuddered at the thought of non-creation, or that man might have devolved from apes, it could not be expected to favor the changing rules for classification. Those rules not only have changed but they are continually changing as one group of experts tries to out-expert another group of experts. As an example: when I was in high school, we were taught that there were only 2 kingdoms of life — plants and animals. Now, this has been expanded with the additions: fungi, prokaryotes and protoctists (aka protista). One day an animal is classified as this, and on the next day, it is stuffed somewhere else. Science, as with all human endeavor, is in a continual state of flux with enough manure added to qualify it as first class fertilizer.

Europe, and Asia were well acquainted with horses long before Hank Stanley went to Africa to find out why

Davy Livingstone failed to return the wheel-barrow he borrowed. Somewhere down the pike, a pair of white-eyes spotted their first zebra. "Damn a mighty. Thar's one silly lookin' hoss. Ah wonder who a'painted it." It looked like a horse, acted very similar to a horse, but those gosh-danged stripes just got in the way. So, to keep things merry on the classification front, this critter was given the Latin name Equus zebra to distinguish it from Equus caballus — the common horse. Zebby lived in the upland plains of southern Africa while horsey did not. I can hear them say "They must have evolved differently." Thus, the zebra and the horse were grouped as separate species. Equus is the genus name and the additional term gives rise to the binomial species designation.

As White men wandered here and there, they soon discovered another striped "horse" living in the arid, and slightly wooded, area of east-central Africa. Although it looked like a zebra, which looked like a horse, old Mr. Grevy wasn't happy with that state of affairs. All kosherized scientists, when a problem surfaces, simply redefine everything. Thus Equus grevyi was hatched. Unlike the zebra of southern Africa, it had narrower stripes and a white belly.

As might be expected, those snoopy White men soon came upon another "zebra" which wasn't exactly a zebra like the other zebras. Its stripes were very widely spaced; it lived and "evolved" in the rich grasslands of eastern Africa and it wasn't long before Burchell's zebra was given the highfalutin name Equus quagga. The African striped horses, plus the better-known horse, now fell into 4 distinct species, so there! Generally speaking, members of the same species are inter-fertile but unlike man, who will stick his prong into anything (literally!), never inter-breed except for bizarre and rare cases. (Some lower forms of life like the Euglena and the faggot, are not inter-fertile across the species. Both possess contractile vacuoles and are classified according to what kind of party zipper-Bill is having. The Euglena belongs to both the protozoan order Euglenida and the algae division Euglenophyta, thus enjoying a double use for its vacuole.)

Dogs are not unfamiliar to us. They belong to the genus Canis as do the coyote Canis latrans, the jackal Canis aureus, the dingo Canis dingo plus 3 others which I shall conveniently omit. The Australian dingo is quite dog-like and it apparently has been domesticated to an extent — by the adventuresome, I presume.

Canis familiarus, the common dog is further divided into smaller groups called breeds, or races, if you prefer. These include the Dalmatian, Collie, Beagle, etc. Even in dogs, the races are not equal. How does one equate a Doberman with a Chihuahua? Or a Dachshund with a Great Dane?

The African hunting (wild) dog, Lycaon pictus (named after Lyacon — a legionary King of Arcadia), is in a genus all by itself because it is the only dog-like critter possessing only 4 toes. If it weren't for this item, the wild dog might have perhaps been given his very own species name. (Once upon a time, Sidney, the king of the wild dogs said "We all have 5 toes on each of 4 feet. It would be nice if we were more harmonious. Therefore, let's endeavor to evolve into critters with 4 toes on each of 4 feet." And the heavens thundered and it came to pass. Bls. 3:12.)

It might do well to pause a bit and consider that it doesn't take very much to have some animal partitioned into its own cubbyhole: a geographically different habitat, thus implying a different evolution; stripes, as in the case of the zebra; or some other relatively minor, but specific, difference.

Crows are one of my favorite birds — wily, sharp-eyed, and great survivors of men's continued shotgun blasts. There are 30 species of Corvus and 20 of them are known as crows. All are about 20 inches long with glossy-black feathers. All are omnivorous, which means they'll eat almost anything — insects, seeds, carrion, eggs, and have been known to kill small rodents and snakes. The major difference in these 20 species is that their natural habitats are geographically different. A crow living in North America (Corvus brachyrhynchos) is, for most purposes, identical to the Russian crow (Corvus corone) and yet they belong to 2 different species. The man in the street wouldn't recognize any difference whether the birds were flying, pecking at corn, or leaving the roasting oven.

As with Galileo Galilei, the Darwinists and the classifiers, were always looking over their shoulders at those christian zealots who loved to char-broil people alive for not being in tune with the latest notions about men and their souls. It's time for a break.

The ancient Greeks used to contemplate even contemplation and one of the contemplations they contemplated related to something along this line: if one takes away all of the physical attributes of a chair, then something must be left. The chair wasn't removed, only its attributes. What remained, when applied to human beans, was the soul. Ain't Greeks great? No wonder they developed so many paradoxes. They must have been excellent sauce consumers also.

Keeping in mind that a different habitat implies a different evolutionary highway and this alone is a compelling reason to classify critters as belonging to a different species, at the least. Present-day taxonomy must be phylogentically correct, that is, it must satisfy the tenets of the evolution theory — a very weak batch of gobbledegook.

With a hop aboard our UFO, let's snatch Sambo the Congoid from his dung-plastered hut in western Africa. On our return trip, we'll beam-up Mr. Kurisaki from his rebuilt Hiroshima home which he calls Phoenix. Once properly dipped in formaldehyde, we'll stare and ponder how to classify these two primates. (Order: Primate. Characteristics: thumb, have nails not claws, omnivorous, binocular vision, etc.) Down the scale is the next classification, the family Hominidae, followed by the genus Homo. Now — wow! — as the wabbit says to Elmer, "What's up doc?"

Not only do our 2 specimens come (evolved) from non-connected regions of the planet, anyone with reasonable eyesight could tell them apart at 666 yards. Up closer, one is colored black and the other a brownish-yellow. One has straight hair; the other kinky tufts which microscopically resemble wool. One has well-developed calf muscles while the other does not — in fact, sports a "lark's-spur" heel. The ape-like eyes of one resemble, not in the slightest, the slit-like eyes of the other. (Sidney Poitier vs. David Suzuki.) The closer we look, the greater the differences we find. One has almost no body odor while the other strikes our nose as resembling a musk ox during estrus. Mind you, that a different geographical location, plus obvious, and non-trivial, physical differences, is enough to separate any other animal into different species, it does not hold true with our specimens since both are said to belong to the species Homo sapiens! Remarkable, isn't it? And certainly very non-scientific.

Similarities are what determine general classifications while differences determine the minor classifications. However, when we get to "talking-apes," the rules change. A minor classification such as species becomes the reservoir for generalities instead of specifics: species = specifics, get it? I'll repeat: species means specific differences outside the generalities. I am sure that this present-day classification folderol is the result of "church science," or "jewish science," which is little more than starting with a desired conclusion and then working backwards — selectively choosing the facts.

If a dingo could be enticed to mate with a coyote, the offspring would be neither dingo nor coyote. It would be a bastard — a mongrel — a mixed-breed — a mischling. It would belong to nothing which can be classified. If all of the dingoes integrated with all of the coyotes, and engaged in Clinton-style tail-undulations, there would be no more coyotes or dingoes and the valued "diversity" would be lost. Breed-mixing is "caniscide" for it destroys both species.

We still call mongrel dogs, dogs, as we call mongrel humans, humans, but the essential issue remains — they are all unclassifiable because they do not breed true. An Eskimo on Eskimo mating always produces another Eskimo. A Hottentot on Hottentot mating always produces another Hottentot and it makes no difference where the delivery room is, whether in Alaska or Miami Beach. A Ford manufactured in Detroit, is still a Ford. A Negro manufactured in America is still a Negro. To call the inhabitants of our biological sewer "Americans" makes about as much sense as to call all automobiles "Detroits." Did you ever observe a litter of mongrel pups, or alley cats? The odd collection of colors and sizes is what Clinton calls "representative of America." All of the involved separate breeds which went into producing these mongrels have vanished.

Evidence indicates that the Negroes, Japanese, northern Europeans, etc. belong to separate species. And when it comes to the separate classifications of Hominids, a very special place should be reserved for that species of man which has the unique features of blue-eyes, blond hair, and cream-colored skin.

In Europe, the Caucasian species is divided into races such as Alpine and Nordic. The Korean and Japanese are races of an Asian species. Never forget, that the direction of all science is determined by political power and today that power is hell-bent upon making everyone blind to the over-whelming differences which exist between the various Hominid groups. The jews, and their christian yes-men, want the planet to be infested with race-mixed people, that is, ultimate jews — the United Nations' brown man. The jews, with their Hollywood instrument, have been stating this for nearly 75 years. They call this mixing of bloods "the spirit of America." (Recently, a Canadian TV station surprisingly aired a program revealing this. It was quite astounding to hear how the Hollywood moguls really hated peoples who still retained their distinctive species, and racial, characteristics, whether Negroid, Mongoloid, or whatever.)

If you still believe that men should be biologically classified with a set of rules different from those applied to the other animals, then I'd like to invite you for a ride in my UFO where we shall talk to God direct instead of paying middleman huckster Pat Robertson to pass His words on as hearsay.

If the black rat (Rattus rattus) refuses to breed with the brown Norway rat (Rattus norvegicus), even though they are inter-fertile and occupy the same territory, then why do you support destructive games such as "guess who's coming to dinner"?

A biological classification is nothing more than a label and Americans, as the jews they mostly are, are transfixed by labels to the point of obsession. Content is reality. Labels are not.

(Note: To those who are serious evolutionists, please be advised that very recent discoveries in cell chemistry are starting to punch large holes in the theory of evolution. This, of course, doesn't mean that religious hokum is being vindicated.) ❑

Pro-Zionist Bias Permeates the Judiciary in Argentina

By
Guillermo Coletti

I am old enough to remember when the political term "banana republic" was widely utilized as a way to describe, in a fashion less than flattering, a country with very little selfdetermination, one subservient to the will of more powerful nations. This term was frequently found in articles written by selfproclaimed centrists, as well as leftists, to depict the influence exercised, for example, by the CIA in underdeveloped Central and South American countries. It was for many years a very effective punchline. Considering the fastmoving pace of today's rising Israeli influence in the region, particularly in Argentina, the term should be updated to a more appropriate one: Kosher Republic. Argentina, currently under an administration with an unequivocal determination to obedience to the World Jewish Congress and the state of Israel, has proven itself once more as a lackey. This loss of Argentina's sovereignty must not be seen as casualtyfree.

The latest arbitrariness has been exercised upon the Constitutional rights of Alfredo Astiz, a retired Navy Captain, Argentinian hero of the mid1970's war against Communist terrorism and a distinguished veteran of the MalvinasFalklands conflict.

Capt. Astiz recently granted an interview to Trespuntos magazine. During the course of the interview, Capt. Astiz defended the war against Communist terrorism. He went on to add that he had been trained to kill. Soon after these comments were made public, actually immediately after, representatives of the Jewish lobby made numerous public manifestations of disapproval. They actually do things like that very openly. Unfortunately, these outbursts of arrogance are never comprehended in their real magnitude and significance by the uncritical average Argentinian. Jewish activists have chosen to call Astiz "the blonde angel of death", unlike the other "angel of death", the Mediterranean looking German scientist Dr. Josef Mengele, who wasn't blonde. In 1990's Argentina, Zionist forces always find echo among the structures of Democratic power, a tightly closed new elite of politicians, journalists, entertainers and the flamboyant nouveau rich.

What follows is a brief chronology of these events.

Day one: Trespuntos releases the January 1998 issue containing Astiz's interview.

Day two: Jewish leaders condemn Astiz's statements.

Day three: the Establishment media follow Jewish concerns and support them with editorials and commentaries, the usual diatribes.

Day four: even Argentinian President Carlos Menem commented publicly on the matter, saying that he was going to look into what possibility there was "within the law" to punish Capt. Astiz.

Day five: the Argentinian circus keeps growing as new voices add to the campaign against Astiz: militant lesbians and homosexuals, a local Rock star recovering from heroine addiction, mothers of fallen Marxist terrorists, comedians, the Greens, and others.

The matter has now become strictly political and the handlers of Democratic power in Argentina are mobilized in full to sacrifice a national hero, in order to please the powerful few. It is important to make clear that whatever punishment was applied against this Argentinian citizen was a violation of Constitutionally protected rights to publicly express one's own ideas. Let's look briefly at these two parts of his comments:

a) Alfredo Astiz defended the role of the Argentinian Armed Forces during the 1970's war against armed Communist terrorists. The period of civil unrest in Argentina was indeed a very painful period. And so, most citizens, and in this particular case politicians as well, have decided to go on with the business of building a country and leaving behind old resentments. A law of forgiveness, an Amnesty law was passed granting pardon to all parties involved in that war, Communists as well as Patriots. It is important that this be understood: everyone was forgiven, regardless of political persuasion. After the threat of prosecution was lifted, the leftists were the first to begin talking quite openly about their past paramilitary operations. They have written books loaded with gruesome details on how they executed political enemies in captivity, or how they set bombs that killed men, women and children. Some of these accounts even describe in detail how kidnapped people were shot in the head, and even the size of the holes made in the skulls by the bullets. The leftists had shown no repentance for any single violent act of terrorism they have ever committed. Of course, no serious political observer would expect them to react otherwise. Nevertheless, when a man from the other side, in this case Capt. Astiz, defends the participation of the Armed Forces in that internal conflict, he's been accused of "advocating disobedience to the law" and is, consequently, expelled from the Navy, although he is already retired. His pension benefits are taken away. How a retired member of the Navy can be demoded is something that puzzles me. The other part of the punishment, denying to a dissident his pension benefits, is a form of punishment that is widely applied in Germany to nationalists as a response to pressure from Jewish groups and the state of Israel. It is important to bear in mind that these actions come from the corners of the promoters of absolute Democracy. American politician Adlai Stevenson used to say that Democracy was about unpopular ideas, the unbending, guaranteed right of individuals to express all beliefs, not only those held by the majority or by the government, but also those despised by the masses. Of course, the substance of this sort of peachy rhetoric does not go beyond the frenzy of an electoral campaign.

b) The second part of the comment, which was used to create the emotional climate for the persecution of Astiz, is that he was trained to kill. Isn't that an essential part of the training of any soldier, in any country? Aren't Israeli, or American, soldiers trained to kill? Isn't fighting wars the primary function of an army?

After reviewing the above referenced events words of Aristotle came to mind: "It is the nature of the many to be amenable to fear but not to the sense of honor".

A White House Jew Confesses

By

Guillermo Coletti

"The Jew everywhere feels himself a cosmopolitan",
Friedrich von Hellwald,
Zur Characteristik des jüdischen Volkes", 1872.

After winning the Presidential election of 1992, President Clinton promised to form a team of men and women who were going to reflect the human fiber of America. He proceeded to fill more than 50% of his appointments with Jewish individuals. The remaining were staffed with a mix of Lesbians, Homosexuals, Negroes, Mulattos, Quadroons, Octadroons, and, yes, there was even room for a handful of heterosexual White men. Clinton's Presidency has already received a lot of criticism from wellmeaning and decent Americans, I have nothing new to add to the subject. But among his many colorful appointees there was a very interesting Hebrew character, a Mr. Robert Reich. In spite of bearing a last name reminiscent of glorious bygone days of the German nation, this Reich is Jewish, and very happy about it. As a matter of fact, his recently released book, Locked in the Cabinet, speaks to that.

I will quote, for the reader's enjoyment and intellectual torment, a very small part of the book. The quote that will follow reflects a dramatic double standard, but that is nothing new and it is not the most serious element to emanate from this citation. Reich recalls his first meeting with Alan Greenspan, the Oberjude head of the Federal Reserve. Of Greenspan he starts saying that he is a "shy little Jewish guy". He then continues by adding:

"We have never met before, but I instantly know him ... He is New York. He is Jewish. He looks my uncle Louis, his voice is my uncle Sam. I feel we've been together at countless weddings, bar mitzvahs, and funerals. I know his genetic structure. I'm certain that within the last five hundred years ... we shared the same ancestor."

After reading this passage I spent quite a while looking for the right words to accompany my input. I considered arrogance, effrontery, illhumor, petulance, cockiness. Let me expand.

I do no longer wish to hear about conspiracy theories. A vital component is absent from the conspiracy picture, a component necessary to make a conspiracy a conspiracy. That component is secrecy. There is no more secrecy about Jewish power. The manifestation and the evidence of this subversive phenomenon is out in the open. Its arrival was celebrated with neon signs and colored balloons, and was sealed with hundreds of deals President Reagan has made with the state of Israel. If you have eyes, you can see Jewish power. They are celebrating it right in front of us, and we are being billed for it. They are telling to our faces that they are in charge. Jews now adorn their sentences with Yiddish or Hebrew terminology. They call their shiksas shiksas and gois gois. There is no need to spell it. They don't boast about their racial power because there is racial equality, or because there is a double standard; those are myths. They boast about their power for two reasons: reason one is obvious, they have power and there is no racial equality; reason two is less obvious, they have an uncontrollable emotional need to dance and feast over the suffering and the defeat of others that always, I repeat, always, preceded their expulsion. Jews are a different breed, and in their loudness, they are as tasteless as Puerto Ricans or Haitians. If we let ourselves fall too deep, they will treat us with as much respect and consideration as they treat the Palestinians. I hope I'm not confusing you, because I really want you to understand.

This Robert Reich's hymn to the genetic decomposition his underrace has represented for centuries tells us that they no longer see a need to keep up the appearances for us. They're bold, they need not to be cautious, or so they think. How can we remain passive observers of this defiance? We Aryans seem to have a rather difficult time dealing with the realities of the Jewish question. Nevertheless, there have been moments of historical determination. After all, "anti Semitism is the final consequence of Judaism" (F.W. Nietzsche, The Antichrist) an unavoidable result of their own actions. The Roman Emperors designated the Hebrews as "secta nefaria (Nefarious Sect)", in a number of edicts dating after 326 B.C. The French understood the problem in 1322, Queen Isabella found answers in 1492, the city of Vienna dealt with this matter efficiently in 1671, and the same happened in Prague in 1745, and that much can be said of the Norwegians and the Swedes in 1814. The dilemma for modern Aryan man is to decide "where to draw the line".

Robert Reich's passing through the White House is already part of the history of America. He is an icon. "He is New York ... He is Jewish!", to borrow some of his own wording. He has been praised by the media as a genius. Is he a genius? He is definitely respected at least just as much as Harvey Milk, Abbie Hoffman, Allen Ginsberg, or Julius and Ethel Rosenberg.

In a recent issue of Tikkun Magazine review (Vol. 12, No. 4) David Biale, reviewing Robert Reich's book, writes:

"The charm of his book lies, consciously or not, in a classic Jewish stance toward the pomp and pomposity of goyish power."

I wish to end this brief piece by noting that sometimes individuals like myself, who look at the 1945 destruction of Europe with great sadness, observe this kind of events with a smile on our faces. You will forgive me, but only if you know what I have meant.

More on Polygamy for Aryans

by Guillermo Coletti

When I decided to write on polygamy I knew I was about to touch on a very controversial topic. Polygamy is one of those subjects, like Race, that are hardly ever discussed with candor in our democratic society. The rigidity around it has been made possible by the efforts of Christian and Judaic Churches, Conservatives, as well as Feminists and advocates of any and all policies aimed at removing Aryan man from influence, the ultimate feminization of man. American official stand on polygamy is quite clear; it is illegal. The country has no problem with sodomites parading their socalled "Gay pride", but it has banned polygamy. There is no legal problem with multiple divorces either. My article "Polygamy for Aryans" was published in the October 1997 issue of Liberty Bell and the December 1997 issue of WAR. As far as I can remember, no previous article of mine generated so much mail from within the ranks of people involved in the struggle. The reactions have been extreme: some people sent me almost fanatical letters of support, calling me to continue writing on the matter, while others reacted against my article with great contempt. Of course, I have a great deal of appreciation for all of the people who understood what I was trying to convey. Nevertheless, I do also appreciate the challenge presented by some of those on the other end. To my disappointment, none of the critical letters made a case for monogamy. I believe it is vital for those who oppose polygamy to be capable to articulate a defense for monogamy. The benefits of monogamy had yet to be expressed in a cohesive and comprehensive way, free of superstitious dogma, if that is at all possible. Let's review some of the most notable arguments.

A Christian gentleman says my proposal to discuss polygamy is dangerous because it "infects Aryan thinking" with nonAryan traditions. This Christian gentleman fails to qualify "Aryan tradition", as well as he evidently fails to acknowledge that Christianity is a nonAryan "infection". Christianity was for the ancient Aryan what a Hollywood movie is for the modern Aryan: a fable conceived by Jews, aimed at manipulating Aryan behavior, casted with Jewish actors. Christianity distorted all previously known beliefs embraced and conceived by Aryans; it brought us monotheism and monogamy. Discussing polygamy is part of discussing our past. Ancient Aryan man was not monogamy inclined. All Ancient Aryan societies that manifested themselves in a written manner, have made this point quite clear. From the Odyssey to most Viking Sagas, Aryan man always sought after more than one female companion. Denying that is simply falsifying history.

Another gentleman stated that monogamy brought a sense of order to Aryan societies. That viewpoint subscribes, at least in an unspoken manner, to the much propagated falsehood that Ancient Aryan was some kind of inferior creature, incapable of order, progress or civilization. Aryan man always looked for a sense of order in every society he established. The taming of modern man, through monotheism and monogamy, has brought us closer to catastrophe than glory. I reject the ideal of a society in which Aryan man is viewed as a domesticated animal. I embrace Nietzschean principle that man is something that must be overcome, replaced by a superman who will be intellectually superior while maintaining a harmony with Nature, his beasty needs and instincts. It is no coincidence that the taming of the Aryan occurs simultaneously with the advancement of Universalism and the embracement of sentimental feminine beliefs, such as "turn the other cheek" and the ever increasing love for the weak and the inferior.

Liberty Bell's January 1998 issue published a letter from an anonymous reader who seems to have been offended by the discussion of polygamy. This individual too fails to explain why he thinks polygamy is such a terrible thing. He writes: "...I was thinking more in terms of Polyandry [female polygamy] with so few worthy Aryan females who will have anything to do with today's impotent Aryan male". Unlike polyandry, polygamy does have a biological purpose. A man with many spouses can impregnate them all, while a woman with many spouses will only be impregnated by one at a time, and then will have to wait some nine months for the next pregnancy. The Aryan man in Chile about whom I was writing, had eight wives and at the time I wrote the article every single one was pregnant, meaning that in a short period there will be eight more Aryan babies. What possible genetic benefit can derive from Polyandry? The same reader questioned my praise of Mormon polygamy and asked if I had polled the wives. The answer is, of course, I have not polled the wives. Mormon polygamy was not intended as an entertainment for their women. The Mormons were, at one point in their early history, Aryans who have not enjoyed religious tolerance from mainstream America. They went from persecution to prosperity. What follows are a few examples of institutionalized intolerance against Mormonism. From the Republican National Platform, 1888: "The political power of the Mormon Church in the territories as exercised in the past is a menace to free institutions". In response to Mormonism the Democratic Party included the following statement in its 1904 National Platform: "We demand the extermination of polygamy within the jurisdiction of the United States". The Mormons established a very prosperous community in which they enjoyed the benefits of their own lifestyle, they have made out of Utah an exceptional state which has yet to be affected by the filth (racemixing, crime, drugs, etc.) which affects much of the rest of the country. Polygamy also helped them enlarge their community while maintaining their genetic backbone. This reader suggests that I can take the idea of polygamy for Aryans and "shove it".

A young Aryan lady, who has been and remains a very good friend of mine, felt that the issue of polygamy implied a lack of equality between Aryan man and Aryan woman. My answer was brief: "there is no equality between man and woman ... and it is precisely because of that inequality that we complement ... one has what the other needs and thus life is created". Then I quoted one of my favorite German thinkers, Arthur Schopenhauer, from his On Women, 1851: "The institution of monogamy, and the laws of marriage which it entails, bestow upon the woman an unnatural position of privilege, by considering her throughout as the full equivalent of the man, which is by no means the case".

I believe this followup has answered the most important issues raised in response to the original article. ❑

UK General Election 1997

ONLY A CHANGE OF MANAGEMENT IN A REGIME OF RUIN

By Colin Jordan

The UK General Election earlier this year was overbearingly presented by the mind-moulding media for weeks preceding it as a most momentous matter of choice: a decisive exercise of the freedom of the people to decide their government which is said to distinguish and evaluate democracy. Yet in truth it was but a highly successful exercise in the art of fooling the people, contriving very much ado about very little of significant difference, this being the feature of this dishonest system of deprivation by way of delusion. Both its aim and its outcome have been nothing much more than a reshuffle of office-holders resulting from a change in the predominant section of the same, old gang of seedy, sordid, swindling politicians responsible collectively for Britain's ghastly decline and alienation in the past half century.

In short and in general it was a phoney election whereby the same sort of people and the same sort of ideas were set to continue despite all the laborious pretence of alteration. With it we have had yet another of those periodic coups of confidence trickery characterising the system of debasement under which we suffer in the name of democracy.

Regarding the reshuffle of players in the parliamentary pantomime, in place of the multiracialist Major with his Jewish wife, we now have the multiracialist Blair, bringing us with his power-greedy, glinting eyes, cocksure expression and well rehearsed, plastic smile the revelation that we now have at the helm a smarter, political conjuror than his jaded predecessor, Blair's sweeping victory in the reshuffle as the purported champion of the Common Man was primarily and ironically financed by a bevy of hugely wealthy, Jewish businessmen, confident in the expectation that he who pays the piper calls the tune in British politics. Profit, not benevolence towards the Common Man, was their spur in making Rlair their man.

Blair's immediate handler in his role of protégé of Jewry is the Jew, Peter Mandelson. This principal adviser and general factotum to the leader of "New Labour" has had his role regularised, being now designated "Minister Without Portfolio".

Regarding the views of the players in the parliamentary pantomime, an underlying consensus existed before the phoney election, exists after it, and is in fact at all times a feature of the democratic system. Hence it was that all the prime parties of so-called democracy, Conservative, Labour and Liberal-Democrat alike, banned from their election campaigns any mention of the most basic issue of all, namely the question of the preservation of a Britain for the British, being united as one in having allowed and promoted alien immigration into and alien control over our country, and in the intention to let this continue.

All three of these old parties of misrule have been and remain, without any basic difference, committed to what has amounted to the greatest crime in our history, the Coloured Invasion of Britain, thereby negating all the centuries of struggle by the British folk to repel invaders. This makes these treacherous politicians of the old system undoubtedly the greatest, as yet unpunished, criminals in our history, richly deserving not some seat at Westminster, but instead standing room only over the trapdoor on a scaffold with a noose round the neck, awaiting the death drop. These nauseous dissemblers of democracy, endlessly profess their concexn for the people of Britain. However, the people they are concerned with are not specifically and exclusively our own, native, Anglo-Saxon and Celtic breed of this island, as it should be. Instead they include anyone and everyone, whether African or Asian or some motley mixture, whom they have wrongfully admitted to residence here, and look to manipulate for votes in the head-counting game on which they depend for power, privilege and profit.

One and the same party they arc in their willful and woeful disregard of the fact that our greatest national treasure, our richest natural resource, lies not in gold in the vaults of banks or in minerals in the soil, but in our race, meaning our Anglo-Saxon and Celtic stock which gave Britain its character, made her great in the past, and which alone can make her great again in the future. At one and the same time these parties of ruin, whichever one is in turn in power, commit both the crime of commission and that of omission regarding our race. That is to say they encourage our folk to mix with and mate with African and Asian immigrants who are not, never have been and never will be truly, namely racially British. Simultaneously they deliberately abstain from providing any encouragement to the dwindling White birthrate in Britain, either by direct incentive or indirectly by other reform: a White birthrate which is overshadowed by the soaring birthrate of all the Coloureds they have allowed to come here.

The inevitable outcome of this racial betrayal by the old parties will be the eventual reduction of the British folk to a minority in what was once their own country, alongside the proliferation of the Coloureds plus all the mongrels resulting from miscegenation. Those pillars of democracy, the old parties, have never responded and never will respond to the will of the White people of Britain to keep Britain White.

Not only are they one and the same party in ignoring the will of the people, despite all their declarations as to democracy's obedience to that will, they are one and the same in forcing Coloured settlement and a Jewish presence and power on the British people by repressive laws obliging them to mix with and accept the racial aliens, and punishing outspoken criticism of and opposition to that Coloured settlement and that Jewish presence and power. The only difference due to the accession of the Jewish-funded Labour Party to a turn in office is the likelihood of even more, new laws of repression demanded by the Jews and Coloureds. Forever babbling of their devotion to freedom, the dishonest parties of democracy are in reality the enemies of true, British freedom.

They have argued before, during and after the election as to the merits and demerits of this and that scheme of international management of British affairs, unitedly accepting the need for and the desirability of alien influence and control, and unitedly opposing any advocacy of exclusive British control of exclusively British affairs. Theirs is indeed a veritable union in favour of the alienation of our affairs along with the alienation of the occupancy of our homeland. They stand as one, whether led by Major or by Blair, in a conspiracy of silence regarding the power of the Jews in Britain today: a power in violation of the still existing law of King Edward the First expelling this alien people from England in 1290, by virtue of which law they are still today to be ranked as illegal immigrants.

They are also as one party of but varying sections in their avoidance or derisive treatment of real patriotism, grotesquely acclaiming nationalism for other countries, most of all if they are African or Asian, while deploring it for ours. Also one party they are in their failure to provide any dynamic inspiration for our youth; their failure to provide them with any tutelage in the social responsibilities of constructive patriotism; their failure to provide them with any effective stimulation to serve the nation above self.

Instead, they have with monstrous guilt left our citizens of the future to dissipate themselves in mind-enfeebling, negroid, jungle-music; to waste their time in vacuous loitering at street corners and utterly shallow pursuits; to resort to hooliganism and vandalism because untutored in better outlets for their energy; and to descend to mind-and-body-destroying drugs because of the void in their lives, and the consequent sense of frustration and futility resulting from the failure of governments to present them with a patriotic purpose in life. The sight of our neglected, dishevelled, degenerate inheritors of tomorrow's Britain is illustration enough and condemnation enough in itself of the culpability of the old parties of democracy. All the faults of our youth are simply the true reflections of the appalling failings of these parties of ruin representing democracy.

One and the same they are in their failure to cope with the mounting crime in the disintegrating society they have brought about, and in which they rank as the biggest criminals of all, the robbers and destroyers of race and nation and homeland. The breakdown of law and order under these arch-criminals is indicative — as is the sight of the degraded youth of today — of that sickness of society caused by the neglect and the maladministration of democracy's old parties

General Elections, whether the recent one or previous ones, have been utterly fraudulent in that their purpose, as rigged by the old parties, has been to provide the public with an illusion of choice and change to keep them content, while ensuring by the manipulation of restriction and selection and the despotic influence of their media that one or other of the sections of the old order with fundamentally the same or very similar views continue to control things, so that the democratic consensus is everlastinq. This is the nature of the workings of that essentially dishonest and inherently injurious system known as democracy, which is unalterably dedicated to policies causing national decline and racial ruin. This will always remain so because the disposition to damage is an inevitable and essential part of it.

Face up to it and accept it: if Britain and the British folk are to survive and revive, we have to overthrow and replace this ruinous system. Nothing other and less will do. We must not tolerate it. We must not participate in it and thereby bolster and sustain it. To take part in what are in reality rigged elections under that system, either in support of the old parties or of new ones which believe they are set to oust the old ones, but which are futile because either they will certainly be blocked in one way or another by the old ones, or will necessarily take on in time the character of the old ones in order to survive, thus joining them, not beating them: to do any of this is deadly folly which will definitely ensure that our very last chance to rescue our race and nation and homeland is doomed to utter failure.

What has to be done is completely to reject the present system in its entirety, rejecting its rigged elections, boycotting them all and thereby disrupting them by abstention. The fraudulent nature of present democracy has to be exposed and denounced all the time in every way possible. At the same time and beyond this it is vital for the sake of race and nation to sabotage in every imaginative way possible the structure and the workings of this democratic system of ruin, so as to bring about its breakdown. Only its breakdown can open the door to that vital, revolutionary change of system without which Britain as we know and value it will certainly be finally finished.

THE ANTI-HUMANS

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Corneliu Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. Exposing the Warmongers

by Dr. William L. Pierce

Every evening when I have turned on the television news during the past few weeks, the message has had the same theme: Saddam Hussein must be stopped! Saddam Hussein is a danger to America! We must destroy Saddam Hussein! About the only difference I've noticed in these daily news messages is that they're steadily becoming more strident, more demanding, more imperative: We must destroy Saddam Hussein! And in support of this message the television people are using all of their tricks to stir up public opinion in favor of another war against Iraq. Day after day we hear things like: "Saddam continues to defy the United Nations. Saddam thumbs his nose at America. Saddam challenges us to do something about his illegal actions."

These inflammatory comments are made against a background of old film footage of Saddam in his military uniform, grinning at us. NBC's news anchor Tom Brokaw seems really impatient: "Why don't we take out Saddam now?" he asks. "Why don't we just go in there and kill him? What are we waiting for?" That's pretty much the refrain heard from all of the news commentators.

Now, how exactly is Saddam Hussein defying us? Saddam is saying, "Iraq is our country. It is a sovereign country. It doesn't belong to the United Nations or to the United States. We're tired of you people sticking your noses into our business and telling us how to run our country. Get out! Leave us alone! Go away!" And, of course, he's threatened to shoot down our spy planes if we continue to fly over Iraq without Iraq's permission.

Pretty intolerable behavior, right? A pretty good reason for us to start another war and bomb Iraq back into the Stone Age, right? Complete justification for slaughtering a few hundred thousand more Iraqis, right? What does this guy Saddam think in demanding that we respect the sovereignty of his country? We're bigger than he is, so we don't have to respect him, right? If these television people who are so hot for a new war against Iraq would just come right out and say that, I would find their warmongering a little easier to take. If they would just say, "Hey, we're bigger and stronger than Iraq, and so we can make the Iraqis do whatever we tell them. We don't have to respect them or treat them the way we expect to be treated. We can push them around as much as we want, and if they don't like it we'll just kill them."

But of course, the last thing we expect from our controlled news media is honesty. They want their war, and they also want to make us believe that the war is Saddam's fault, not ours. And so day after day the television news people tell us about how Saddam is threatening the security of the world and defying America and just begging for us to go in there and "take him out," to use Tom Brokaw's euphemism for political assassination.

If we want to begin justifying high-level political assassination, I can think of a head of state much closer to home than Saddam who ought to be "taken out," someone whose elimination would really do America a lot of good.

It was just 11 months ago, on December 21, 1996, when I predicted on this program that the Jewish media bosses would make a major effort to take us into another war during Mr. Clinton's second term in office. I based my prediction on two sets of facts: first, that Mr. Clinton had just appointed an all-Jewish foreign-policy team for his second term; and second, that Clinton's second term was an opportunity the Jews couldn't afford to miss to use American military force to wipe out Israel's rivals in the Middle East once and for all.

And now, I fear, my prediction is coming true. If this current drive to start another war with Iraq is what I'm afraid it is, then it'll involve much more than merely another attempt to assassinate Saddam Hussein. They'll manage to escalate it into something which will wipe out all of their rivals in the Middle East and leave Israel a free hand to continue her policies of expansion. And it will end up costing America a lot more than a few billion dollars worth of military hardware and a few thousand more unexplained cases of veterans suffering from "Gulf War syndrome." A lot more.

You know, there are many people in addition to the Jews pushing for another war to destroy Iraq. There are the trendy New World Order types who are hostile to the idea of national sovereignty and believe that all of the countries of the world ought to be subordinated to the United Nations and forced to obey UN directives, by military means if necessary. That is, they say they believe that, so long as the country in defiance of the United Nations isn't Israel. Israel has been thumbing its nose at the UN for years and defying one UN resolution after another, building new Jewish settlements on land seized by military force from Israel's neighbors and refusing to permit UN inspection teams to look for evidence of illegal weapons in Israel.

And there are even more people who believe that a war against Iraq can be justified if it will destroy Iraq's capability to build so-called "weapons of mass destruction." The controlled media have been full of horror stories recently about the possibility that Iraq may develop and use biological and chemical weapons capable of killing millions of people. And let's face it: that is a possibility. The genie is out of the bottle. Modern technology gives even very small countries the ability to build very destructive weapons. It is a real danger.

But if we want to combat that danger, Iraq is not the place to start. Israel has developed chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons of mass destruction, and that's something that really should worry the world. After all, Saddam may be a dictator, but he's never given any evidence of having the frighteningly dangerous combination of hair-trigger paranoia and delusions of grandeur that afflicts Israeli leaders. He hasn't been caught sending Iraqi agents into other countries to assassinate religious or political leaders with exotic biological or chemical weapons. But Israel's current prime minister, Benjamin Netanyahu, has been caught sending Israeli agents to do exactly that.

I don't know whether Mr. Netanyahu is a religious man or not, but all too many of his fellow Israelis are. Orthodox Jews wield the balance of power in Israel, and their religion teaches them explicitly that they are a "chosen people," that their tribal god chose them to rule over all the other peoples of the earth, that all the wealth of the Gentiles really belongs to the Jews, and that anyone who refuses to submit to Jewish rule should be killed. If you never learned that in Sunday School, find yourself a Bible and read the Book of Isaiah. I mean, really read it. Read it carefully. Think about its meaning. And then remind yourself that whacked-out, nutcase religious Jews who believe Isaiah's bloodthirsty, chauvinistic ravings — believe them literally — are in control of one of the world's largest arsenals of chemical and biological weapons.

If there's any situation which calls for a massive, preemptive military strike to safeguard the world from a madman using weapons of mass destruction, it's the situation in Israel today.

When was the last time you heard Mr. Clinton insisting that Israel should permit a UN inspection team to check for biological and chemical weapons in that country?

And certainly one cannot fall back on the excuse that it's only little countries which must not be permitted to have such weapons. Iraq has four times the population of Israel.

Let's review this conflict with Iraq objectively for a moment. America has no good reason to pick a fight with Iraq. Iraq poses no threat to us. Iraq wants nothing from us but to be left alone. Unlike Israel, Iraq has never even asked us for a handout.

In 1991 we bombed Baghdad and slaughtered more than 100,000 Iraqis because they had invaded Kuwait — which in fact used to belong to them before it had been taken away during the colonial period. And then we imposed a crippling economic embargo on the defeated Iraqis — an embargo which has caused the deaths of an estimated half-million Iraqi infants and children during the past six years and which is maintained because of Israeli insistence. So the Iraqis have plenty of reason to hate us now, but no reason to try to hurt us if we would just leave them alone. Iraqi interests lie in the Middle East and only in the Middle East.

The reason we are headed toward another war with Iraq is solely because of the influence of Jews on the government of the United States. It certainly isn't because we are concerned about Iraq's development of weapons of mass destruction. If we were serious about that sort of thing we would have stopped Israel from developing its chemical, biological, and nuclear arsenal. The reason it's all right with our government for the Jews to have weapons of mass destruction but not all right for the Iraqis to have them is that the Jews control the news and entertainment media in the United States — and thus wield effective control over the political process here — and the Iraqis don't. And that's the only reason.

So let's cut out the baloney about the "rule of law" in international affairs or about the need to keep weapons of mass destruction out of the hands of dangerous and unpredictable people. Weapons of mass destruction already are in the hands of dangerous and unpredictable people, and a lot more dangerous and unpredictable people will have them in the future.

And why is that? Why is the world faced with the very real threat that truly horrendous chemical or biological weapons will be used in the future? Well, in the case of the Middle East, the reason is the policy that the United States government has had imposed on it by the Jewish minority here. Israel is the continuing sore point in that part of the world. It is Israel which first introduced weapons of mass destruction into the Middle East. And it is Israel's aggression, supported by the United States, which has put pressure on countries like Iraq to develop their own weapons of mass destruction. Any country which can develop them, any country which has the ability to develop them, will develop them if it feels threatened, because whether or not it's obvious to Americans, it's obvious to the rest of the world that there is no such thing as justice or a rule of law in international affairs. They've seen the way things have worked in the Middle East for the past 50 years. So let's not fool ourselves with the pretense that Saddam Hussein is some sort of crazy, power-mad gangster and we're the good guys working to maintain international security and prevent a catastrophe. We are the ones who brought about the introduction of weapons of mass destruction into the Middle East through our support of Israel.

And we are the ones who caused the present crisis in the Middle East, again through our support of Israel. And the solution to the present crisis is not to bomb Baghdad again or to try again to assassinate Iraq's president or to starve more Iraqi children by maintaining the embargo against Iraq. That's the policy that Mr. Clinton's secretary of state, Madeleine Albright, is trying to persuade Iraq's neighbors to go along with, but fortunately they're not buying it. They're saying, "Listen, we want peace and stability in this region. We don't want weapons of mass destruction used here by anybody. And we'll support an effort to police Iraq — if the United Nations at the same time will police Israel and force that country to surrender its weapons of mass destruction and to abide by UN resolutions."

That, of course, is completely unacceptable to the Jews, to the "chosen people," and so Madeleine Albright has been waddling from one Middle Eastern meeting to another during the past two weeks twisting the arms of everyone she can get her hooks into. She and her fellow Jews are determined to get rid of Saddam Hussein and cripple Iraq by any means necessary. As their hope of lining up the United Nations to do the job for them fades, they'll certainly be developing a scheme to get the United States to do it alone.

We can expect some sort of manufactured excuse for a U.S. assault on Iraq. Don't be surprised to hear on the news any day now about some sort of "provocation" by Iraq to justify the United States starting a new war. Perhaps the CIA will stir up some sort of insurrection in a part of Iraq where the U.S. government has told Saddam Hussein he's not permitted to send his troops, and when he moves to put down the insurrection the Clinton government will use that as its pretext for attacking.

As I mentioned, I predicted this 11 months ago. Of course, I didn't know what the details would be, but it was clear that the Jewish power structure was planning a new war. And of course, I don't know just how the present situation will develop. It is even possible that the lack of cooperation they are getting from other countries will persuade the Jews to back off temporarily, until they can apply more diplomatic and economic pressure to other UN members. But I doubt it. I'm expecting the war sooner rather than later, despite Mr. Clinton's big pretense of reluctance, his big pretense of wanting to bully Iraq into line by diplomacy rather than by military force. I don't know when it will come. I don't know how it will come. But I know that it's coming.

I'll make another prediction. We'll see the use of weapons of mass destruction sooner than anyone would like. All of the horror stories about the terrorist use of chemical and biological weapons the Jews have been publishing in the controlled mass media recently in an effort to drum up public support for a preemptive strike against Iraq will start coming true — especially if the Clinton government does what the Jews are demanding and attacks Iraq.

Put yourself in the position of a patriotic Iraqi, or a religious Muslim, or any non-Jewish patriot in the Middle East. You hesitate to use chemical or biological weapons as long as there is any hope that justice will prevail without their use. But when you have given up all hope for justice, then you will do whatever you can. The suicide bombers who have been blowing themselves up in Israel to protest the lack of justice for Palestinians will be showing up in New York, Washington, Los Angeles, and Chicago. But they won't be using old-fashioned explosives. And the Muslim suicide teams who have been shooting up buses of tourists in Egypt to protest the Egyptian government's collaboration with the Great Satan will move their operations into the Great Satan itself, and they'll be using more than rifles and submachine guns.

It is coming, and many, many innocent people will die. It is coming because our government has let itself be controlled by Jews, because our government's policies have been based on what's good for the Jews and what's good for Israel rather than on what's good for Americans. And the Jews always, throughout history, have overreached themselves. They never have been content to mind their own business and take their own share and leave other people alone. Too many Jews really believe the ravings of Isaiah. They really believe that they can have it all, that they deserve it all, and that whatever they do in their greed to get it all is justified. That's why Mr. Clinton's horrid, little Jewess, Madeleine Albright, is continuing to try to pressure Iraq's neighbors into acquiescing in another war against that country.

In a way, perhaps it's a good thing that all of this is coming to a head now, like a boil that has been festering. We Americans have become far too complacent, far too comfortable, far too credulous, far too tolerant of evil and injustice and of encroachments against us by everyone else. When someone from the Middle East who has given up all hope of justice for his people pops a biological grenade in a New York subway tunnel or on the grounds of the Washington Monument or somewhere else in the United States, and thousands of our people start dying, some of those who have been too complacent and too tolerant will begin to change their attitudes.

Our task — mine and yours — is to do everything we can to ensure that our people also become less credulous, that they stop believing the lies of the mass media, that they begin understanding who is responsible for the catastrophe which is looming before them. Because certainly the Jews and their puppets in the Clinton government will try to place the blame elsewhere. Just as they blamed the Oklahoma City bombing on the militias and on patriots generally rather than on the government's atrocious behavior in the Waco massacre two years earlier, so they will blame the coming use of weapons of mass destruction by terrorists on the enemies of the Jews instead of on the Jews themselves, whose policies caused the desperation which led to the terrorism.

The Lesson of Haiti

by Dr. William L. Pierce

This month the last of the United Nations "peacekeeping" troops in Haiti will leave, and the Haitians will be given yet another chance to try to govern themselves. The "peacekeepers" occupied Haiti, along with 23,000 U.S. troops, three years ago, in order to force the government of General Raoul Cedras to resign so that a Clinton favorite, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, could be installed as president. The reasons presented to the American public for this interference in Haiti's affairs were that General Cedras was a "dictator" and that he didn't respect the "human rights" of the Haitians. Mr. Clinton's friend Aristide, on the other hand, was said to be a "democrat" and a respecter of human rights.

Actually, Aristide is a former priest turned Marxist whose idea of respecting human rights is to incite mobs of his supporters to murder his political opponents by breaking their arms, wiring a gasoline-soaked tire around their necks, and burning them to death — a procedure known as "necklacing." Well, that's about par for making a country safe for democracy the United Nations way!

However, the Haitians didn't care much more for Mr. Clinton's Marxist buddy Aristide than they did for General Cedras, and Aristide is out of office again and the Haitians are about to be allowed to run things themselves once more. Well, almost. Five hundred U.S. troops will remain in the country to keep an eye on things. They will call for more help if the need to "make Haiti safe for democracy" arises again.

The Clintonistas aren't bragging very loudly about the success of their latest effort in that direction, because the situation in Haiti is just about as grim today as it was before the United Nations stuck its nose into things three years ago. About the only significant change is that the flood of Haitian "boat people" washing up on Florida's beaches has slowed somewhat, but that flood was caused in the first place by an embargo imposed on Haiti by the U.S. government in an unsuccessful attempt to force General Cedras out, and the consequent damage to Haiti's already pitifully weak economy. When the embargo was removed, many Haitians decided to stay at home and share in the new goodies brought to them by the Clinton administration.

The U.S. troops built roads, schools, and clinics and pumped a few billion U.S. dollars into the Haitian economy, but a survey of the results of all this effort is not encouraging. The streets of Port-au-Prince still reek of garbage and human waste, political corruption is as bad as it ever was, and violent crime is on the rise. The new roads and clinics built by the United States merely add a superficial appearance of improvement, so that the tourist industry is able to begin making a little money again, but the basic situation of Haiti and the lives of most Haitians remain unchanged.

This sort of thing has happened over and over again in Haiti. It seems that we would have learned something from it. In the 18th century Haiti, then called Saint-Domingue and ruled by the French, was the most prosperous colony in the New World. Its enormously fertile soil produced a great abundance of crops and drew thousands of White French settlers. Unfortunately, Black slaves from Africa were imported to help with the work.

In the late 1700's the madness of the French Revolution, with its truly nutty doctrine of racial equality, infected many Frenchmen, and the Black plantation workers were encouraged to revolt. When they did they brutally murdered every White man, woman, and child in the colony and declared Haiti a republic. What had been the richest and most productive part of the New World promptly sank back to an African level of squalor, misery, and poverty. The roads and cities built by the French fell into ruin. A peculiarly African mixture of anarchy and despotism took the place of French law and order.

A little over a century later, in 1915, following an especially chaotic and bloody period, U.S. Marines were sent into Haiti to force a semblance of order on the country. The reason for sending them was to safeguard American business interests in Haiti, although President Wilson told Americans that the Marines were being sent to "bring democracy to Haiti." The Marines remained in Haiti for 19 years. They not only enforced governmental stability there, but they also built schools and hospitals, a modern telephone system, and more than 1,000 miles of paved roads with 210 bridges. The U.S. government trained Haitian teachers and doctors. We really gave the Haitians the basis for a fresh start. As soon as the U.S. Marines pulled out in 1934, however, the Haitians returned to their own way of doing things, which is to say, to indolence, corruption, and Voodoo. Everything the Americans had built for them gradually returned to the jungle.

In 1958 the United States sent the Marines to Haiti again, this time with the aim of rebuilding the country's economy and infrastructure so that it would not succumb to Communist influences. We propped up the regime of "Papa Doc" Duvalier, who had been trained in medicine during our first incursion into Haiti, but who was a practitioner of Voodoo as well. He was a brutal and bloody dictator. Again we spent hundreds of millions of dollars rebuilding what the Haitians had wrecked and training thousands of them in the skills needed to keep the country running. But when we pulled out again, the country immediately returned to its old ways: its African ways.

And in 1994 we tried the same foolishness all over again, claiming that we were "restoring democracy" to Haiti.

Why can't we accept the plain and simple truth that it is as impossible to make democrats out of the Haitians as it is to teach them how to maintain their own roads? Why can't we understand that the Haitians are fundamentally different from us, that they are Africans, not Europeans like us: that they are Negroes, and that left to themselves they must do things in the way Negroes always have done them, with indolence, corruption, and Voodoo?

I have in front of me a book on Haiti written by a British scholar, a fellow of the Royal Geographic Society, following his extended travels in Haiti at the beginning of this century. The book was published by Thomas Nelson and Sons, with offices in London, Edinburgh, Dublin, and New York. The author is Hesketh Prichard, and the title of his book is Where Black Rules White: A Journey Across and About Hayti. Prichard chose his title because he was especially interested in the fact that Haiti was a country ruled entirely by its Black population, without the White colonial domination that was present nearly everywhere else in the non-White world at that time. The only Whites in the country were a few hundred businessmen and their agents in the coastal cities. These Whites were not treated well by the government or people of Haiti.

Prichard was basically sympathetic to the Blacks and wanted to see how they lived when they had been introduced to civilization by Whites but were then left completely free to do as they wished, without White control. He writes of Haiti in the first chapter of his book: "There the law of the world is reversed, and the Black man rules. It is one of the few spots on earth where his color sets the Negro upon a pedestal and gives him privileges. The full-blooded African is paramount; even the mulattos and half-breeds are disliked and have been barbarously weeded out as time has passed."

One of the first things Prichard notes about Haiti is the pervasive filth. He was not expecting sanitation to be up to European standards, of course, but he was stunned by the degree of filth he actually encountered, not just in the villages but also in the capital city, Port-au-Prince. And he was struck by the caricatures of finery and elegance which thrived in the midst of this filth. For example, he noticed that every Haitian of any importance at all bore the title of "general" and was equipped with a gaudy general's uniform, replete with gold braid and all the other trimmings. When he inquired into the military establishment in Haiti, where the total population at that time was under two million, he discovered that the Haitian Army boasted 6,500 generals, 7,000 regimental officers, and 6,500 privates.

Prichard recounts a conversation he had one evening with three Haitian generals. It is a conversation with a surrealistic quality, as are many other things in Haiti. At one level the Black generals are able to converse with a semblance of knowledge of military matters, but at another level it is clear that they are completely out of touch with reality. One is reminded of the classical stereotype of the African cannibal wearing an opera hat and a loincloth.

Prichard's book is filled with fascinating anecdotes and with detailed descriptions of his personal experiences with various facets of Haitian life. He remarks on the good-natured, open-hearted character of the people, who could nevertheless commit the most blood-curdling atrocities at the least provocation. The extreme degree of corruption of the Haitian bureaucracy elicits special attention from Prichard, as does the utterly capricious way in which it operates. The dispensing of justice, in particular, is a caricature of European systems, in which many of the same outward forms are observed.

Prichard also comments on the religious beliefs and practices of the Haitians. The official religion, which they inherited from their former French masters, is Roman Catholicism, but the true religion of the people is Voodoo, a peculiarly African religion with Catholic touches. In religion as in other aspects of Haitian life there is a bizarre blending of White forms with Black substance.

Later in his book Prichard generalizes from many of his observations to reach a fundamental conclusion about life in Haiti: namely, that in all matters regarding their connections with the White world, with White civilization, the Haitians are more concerned with show than with substance, and their ability to mimic the characteristics of White people, both individually and collectively, persuades many people who observe them only superficially and who want to believe them equal that they really are equal.

Prichard writes: "What most astonishes the traveler in Hayti is that they have everything there. Ask for what you please, the answer invariably is, 'Yes, yes, we have it.' They possess everything that a civilized and progressive nation can desire. Electric light? They proudly point to a [power] plant on a hilltop outside the town. Constitutional government? A Chamber of Deputies elected by public vote, a Senate, and all the elaborate paraphernalia of the law: they are to be found here, seemingly all of them. Institutions, churches, schools, roads, railways . . . . On paper their system is flawless. . . . If one puts one's trust in the mirage of hearsay, the Haitians can boast of possessing all desirable things, but on nearer approach these pleasant prospects are apt to take on another complexion."

For instance, you are standing in what was once a building, but is now a spindle-shanked ghost of its former self. A single man, nursing a broken leg, sprawls on the black, earthen floor; a pile of wooden beds is heaped in the north corner; rain has formed a pool in the middle of the room, crawling and spreading into an ever wider circle as the last shower drips from the roof. Some filthy sheets lie wound into a sticky ball on two beds, one of which is overturned. A large, iron washing tub stands in the open doorway."

Now where are you? It would be impossible to guess. As a matter of fact, you are in the Military Hospital of the second most important town of Hayti, a state-supported concern in which the soldiers of the Republic are supposed to be cured of all the ills of the flesh. . . .

"It was the same with the electric light. The [power] plant was here, but it did not work. It was the same with the [Army's] cannons. There are cannons, but they won't go off. It was the same with their railways. They were being 'hurried forward,' but they never progressed. It was the same with everything."

There are many more examples. What had dawned on Prichard is that the Haitians really don't care. To them the imitation of civilization is as good as the real thing. They believe that if they are able to dress like White men and speak the White man's language and mimic the White man's institutions, then they are as good as White men. And I believe what Prichard observed of the Haitians applies equally well to Blacks in the United States today.

Prichard ends his book with a chapter titled "Can the Negro Rule Himself?" And he answers his question:

"The present condition of Hayti gives the best possible answer to the question, and, considering the experiment has lasted for a century, perhaps also a conclusive one. For a century the answer has been working itself out there in flesh and blood. The Negro has had his chance, a fair field, and no favor. He has had the most beautiful and fertile of the Caribbees for his own; he has had the advantage of excellent French laws; he inherited a made country, with Cap Haitien for its Paris . . . . Here was a wide land sown with prosperity, a land of wood, water, towns and plantations, and in the midst of it the Black man was turned loose to work out his own salvation. What has he made of the chances that were given to him?"

Prichard then summarizes the century of Haiti's independent existence, running through a list of Black rulers and strongmen, of revolutions and massacres and disorders. He winds up his survey with these words:

"Suffice it to say that . . . [Hayti's] best president was Geffrard, a mulatto, and that the dictatorship of her Black heads of state always has been marked by a redder smear than usual upon the page of history. The better, the wiser, the more enlightened and less brutalized class has always been composed of the mulattos, and the Blacks have recognized the fact and hated the mulatto element accordingly. But to pass from the earlier days of independence to more recent times: we had not long ago the savage rule of President Salomon, a notorious sectary of snake worship, beneath whose iron hand the country groaned for years, and public executions, assassinations, and robbery were the order of the day. And at the present time? Today in Hayti we come to the real crux of the question. At the end of a hundred years of trial how does the Black man govern himself? What progress has he made? Absolutely none."

That's the way it was a century ago, when Prichard wrote, and that's essentially the way it is today, despite three large-scale efforts by the United States during this century to improve the lot of the Haitians.Why is all of this important to us? A century ago Prichard was by no means an unusual man of his class. He went to Haiti, he carefully observed life there in great detail over an extended period, and he drew logical and reasonable conclusions from his observations. Other scholars of his day could have done the same thing. But it is unimaginable that a scholar today, whether from Britain or America, could make observations like Prichard did, draw similar conclusions, and then publish his conclusions in a book by a mainstream publisher. It is simply not possible.

In the first place, one would be hard pressed to find a scholar from any university in America or Britain today who would have the courage to write honestly about Haiti, because he knows that if he did he would be condemned as a "racist" by a numerous and noisy faction of his colleagues and would be drummed out of the academy. And even if someone did write a book with observations and conclusions similar to Prichard's, no mainstream publisher would touch it. That's how far downhill our civilization has slid in a century.

The Haitians have their Voodoo, with all of its disgusting and bizarre beliefs and practices. And we have our cult of Political Correctness, our cult of egalitarianism. It is a cult based as much on superstition and as devoid of reason and logic as the Voodoo of the Haitians. And it exercises as strong a hold on its adherents. A Haitian would as soon offend a Voodoo witch doctor and risk having a curse put on himself as one of our modern scholars would risk being labeled a "racist!"

The Camp Of The Saints

Revisited

By

Maj. D.V. Clerkin

Written in 1973, THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS, a novel by French author Jean Respail, was an instant controversial hit. It described an invasion by an armada of over one hundred leaky ships carrying a million East Indians, an invasion of France and thereby the whole of Europe by filthy, disease-ridden, squalid Hindus who have had enough of the poverty of India produced by their own sexual profligacy and ennui. The "Monster," as Raspail identifies the collective mass of people, manages to get onto the seas and progresses toward Europe with a relentlessness that defies nature and logic. Raspail tells how the "liberal" forces in charge of Europe's psychological soul — the Church, the Press, the University — lobbied for the "Monster," that it should be allowed to land on French soil as a "penance," that white guilt demanded the sacrifice of the European culture and race to the "Monster."

As the armada passed out of the Indian Ocean to the mouth of the Red Sea, only the Egyptians had a presence of mind and the determination to threaten the "Monster" with armed violence, thus turning the armada away from the Red Sea and the Suez Canal. The "Monster" proceeded to steam toward the Cape of Good Hope, where the white South African government of the time sent out barges to the armada loaded with food, clothing and medicines. The Hindus threw the supplies into the ocean! The "Monster" would not be bought off with anything less than European land and white flesh.

As the armada progresses up the Atlantic coast of West Africa, the drumming of Third World propaganda became deafening in France and throughout Europe. Frenchmen in the south of France flee from the impending disaster soon to be visited on them and their country. The president of France orders the army to proceed to the south and repel the invasion. The French Assembly calls for the resignation of the president and the army suffers a revolt — the propaganda from the "liberal" forces for many years infecting the ranks of officers and men alike. They refuse to fire on the "refugees." France begins to fall apart, the prisons breaking down and convicts streaming into the French countryside, raping, stealing and murdering. Hippies from all over Europe collect on the southern shores of France to welcome the "Monster."

Only one French officer stands by his oath of office — Colonel Dragases — and he is unable to do anything to stem the invasion because his own troops desert, one of his most trusted captains even blowing out his own brains rather than obey the Colonel's order to fire his weapons into the hordes of Hindus pouring ashore from the rusted hulks run aground. Much of the French establishment goes over to the side of the invaders, seeing that making deals may be safer than opposition to the inevitable. French women willingly become whores for the insatiable desires of the Hindus for white flesh. Those who do not cooperate are simply forced into prostitution. More ships come to Europe, and slowly the Aryan motherland dies in an ocean of color.

Raspail decries the impotence of the European response to such an armed invasion, yet in his Afterword he begs the indulgence of the "liberal" forces by claiming that his motive in writing such a novel was not driven by "racism," and that were he a soldier in such a circumstance he could not have fired on the invaders either. Such a cop-aut after reading what Raspail describes in THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS concerning the overt anti-white hatred of the Hindu invaders — they were determined to spread their genes widely among the Europeans, thus wiping out the Aryan race (GENOCIDE!) — is sickening, making the reader wonder why Raspail entertained such a scenario in the first place?

If Raspail had not the fortitude of Aryan soul to repel the invasion of his country, the determination to defend his own race from extinction in this manner, then his book becomes meaningless. Raspail and all who share his cowardice in the face af the enemy are spiritually dead, racially moribund, and not qualified to speak as whites, let alone Aryans.

One need not wonder what Adolf Hitler would have done in his time had the threat of a Hindu invasion been placed against the heart of Europe. Hitler would have ordered U-Boat attacks against the armada in the Atlantic Ocean. The Lufwaffe would have attacked when the "Monster" steamed in range. The SS would have been deployed to repel the invaders who survived to land on the shores of France. Those who would call this response inhumane — an atrocity — should be reminded of the motive of the invaders from India. They intended to seize an entire continent for their own purposes, their own race and religion, their lust for white flesh, their concept of destroying the hated white man. As the U-Boats strike, the Luftwaffe bombs and strafes, and the SS mows them down on the beaches, who would claim that these actions are uncalled for? Those who shrink from the obligation to defend the soil wherein their ancestors are buried, where their culture was born, where their children hope to be saved by the courage and manliness of their fathers, where white Aryan women expect their men to do something to prevent such a calamity, such as these are not fit to speak for the white race in any capacity.

Raspail goes beyond fiction to claim that he would not have fired on the invaders, thus displaying his own sense of white racial guilt, probably fostered by his loyalty to Judeo-Christianity, wherein the Hindu concept of Dharma is strongest, sapping the will of its adherents. (Dharma is the Hindu religious concept of absolute tolerance, of perversions, of race mixing, of religious oddities, etc,)

Which is why Hitler and the SS concept is more relevant today than ever. I would not feel morally guilty in shooting such invaders. They have come to finish me and mine. If we had such a situation, then maybe we would be engulfed, killed, but not for want of showing the invaders what we are made of. To surrender abjectly in such a way as Raspail recounts in THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS, to give it all up without a fight, is beyond my ability to consider possible.

As I drove about yesterday in my car, I listened to a tape of the finale of "Die Götterdämmerung," by Richard Wagner, "Brunhilde's Immolation." Thinking then of the Raspail novel, this is the music which should be in the ears of every Aryan when they meet their own personal test of will. Raspail is a Frenchman who cannot conceive that Hitler and National Socialism were right. He writes that the French music establishment played recordings of Mozart as the nation went down, while the Germans played Wagner, which Raspail scoffed at as being typical of the Germans. Mozart is essentially music of the salon, while Wagner is music that energizes the soul and the fighting spirit of the Aryan people. As the machine guns chattered and the mortars and napalm exploded, yes, Wagner would indeed justify the action.

Jack London — Aryan

Jack London, author of THE CALL OF THE WILD and THE SEA WOLF, among other books, was as he said, a Socialist, but before everything, London said nobly that he was a White man. Here he proves it: "Consult the entire history of the human world in past ages and you will find that the world has ever belonged to the pure breed and has never belonged to the mongrel. I give you this as a challenge: Read up your history of the human race....

"The Greeks died two thousands years ago when they mongrelized. Just because a lot of people talk the Greek language, does not make these people pure Greeks. [Ed. There are Aryan Greeks today, though many Greeks have Persian and Turkish blood, giving them a dark look while the Greeks of the time of Plato and Aristotle, of Demosthenes and Pericles, were in many cases blond and very Dorian Nordic]. Just because a lot of people talk Italian, does not make them Romans. The Greeks were strong as long as they remained pure. They were possessed with power, achievement, culture, creativeness, individuality. When they mongrelized themselves by breeding with the slush of conquered races, they faded away, and have played nothing but a despicable part ever since in the world's history.

"This is true of the Romans; this is true of the Lombards; this is true of the Phoenicians; this is true of the Chaldeans; this is true of the Egyptians. This is not true of the Chinese; this is not true of the Japanese; this is not true of the Germans [Ed. In London's time at least....] this is not true of the Anglo-Saxons [Ed. So too with the English, who have been lately on a rampage of race mixing with every piece of trash from their late Empire!]. This is not true of the Yaquis of Mexico [Ed. Old Indians of Mexico, who did not mix with the Spanish settlers, thereby not becoming Mestizos]. It is true of the fifteen million mongrels in Mexico; it is true of the mongrels that inhabit the greater portion of the West Indies, and who inhabit South America and Central America from Cape Horn to the Rio Grande. This is true of the mongrelized Hindoos....

"Read up your history. It is all there on the shelves.... [Ed. Not any more!] And find me one race that retained its power of civilization, of culture, and creativeness, after it mongrelized itself." (From Charmian London' s THE BOOK OF JACK LONDON, 1921, pp. 297-298).

Jack London of course was right, though no one today is willing to discuss his racial views, un-repentantly pro-white. His books are not even read, much less his racial essays and challenges, to the race mongrelizers of his time. Race mongrelization is not a new idea amongst the elite rulers of society. They preach integration, but do not practice it. The Jews preach it incessantly, but the rabbis tell the Jews not to mix with anyone but another Jew. And that goes for the so-called Falasha, or black Jews as well, Israel will take them in — and segregate them the way the old Jim Crow laws in the South used to segregate black from white. World Government depends on creating a "world race" of mongrels, devoid of spirit or individuality, with no aspirations but to fill the stomach and get off sexually. The conservatives and patriots who deny race as a factor fail to see that the Brahmins of the Oligopoly are either truly white, or Jews putting on the dog. The patriots rail against the concept of World Government, the New World Order, claiming it is a "Nazi" idea. As Jack London would say, show me a National Socialist who would force the white race to mix with muds and Jews.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thank you Mr. Dietz. May the Liberty Bell ring in saecula saeculorum.

(Re: DGR and Evolution by Jarah B. Crawford in Liberty Bell issue January 1998.)

Dear Sir,

My article on evolution and race in the October 1997 Liberty Bell noted also, as stated in the beginning, "media attempts...to manipulate...minds..." This usually occurs deliberately through disinformation supplied by an author, however, it also may result from lack of comprehension or simply misunderstanding on the part of the reader. This occurred in the article I referenced and was the reason I wrote my article. Mr. Crawford appears to have made the same mistake and any "disinformation" drawn from my article by him would subsequently be due to his lack of understanding of the topic.

Should anyone take at least five years of dedicated study to the discoveries since Australopithecus was found in 1971, they will find a line of evolving pre-human skeletons, beginning about six million years ago. The same applies for pigs, elephants, horses, and many other creatures. These fragments are tangible evidence of history unlike dubious church doctrines written centuries ago in swamp cities such as Eridu. I concede that misinformation sometimes occurs here however, the field is only twenty-five years old. Gaps do exist in the data and several different pre-human species existed simultaneously over the interval cited which makes sorting and identification difficult. Speculations are made attempting to match theory with the data. The possession of tangible evidence as the basis of this "ridiculous concept" however, distinguishes Evolution from the folklore of Creationism and Interventionism. It proves, to some of us at least, that we evolved into un"identical socialist creatures", whose socialist nature resulted simply from inhibition of religious doctrines.

In paragraph three, I identified Culture with race, giving European examples, while simultaneously shifting, as phrased therein, to the "big picture", i.e. the cultural level. My statement concerning the "Caucasian in Europe" referred to the cultural level and not the evolution of the biped creature from Australopi- thecus. The latest modern human migration out of Africa, which occurred about one-hundred thousand years ago, was clearly noted. After about fifty-thousand years of warfare, conflicts and miscegenation with the remnants of the previous migrants before the Neanderthal types were exterminated, the "evolution of the Caucasian [Cultures] in Europe occurred in [the remaining] forty-thousand years".

I reject Interventionism on the whole and consider it simply asinine. Not only is the paradigm itself incomplete, it distracts from and refocuses, diseducating people with respect to the crucial political/economic holy war of today. It also ignores the relevant, documented, accepted and tangible archaeological history discussed above. With regard to the "only alternative [to evolution] that [I] know", it more accurately should be the only "worth considering". Should one absolutely need mythical make-believe gods to make life perfect however, I would like to complete Mr. Crawford's recommendation list with the works of Stan Deyo, a sharp and profoundly intellectual modern mystagogue of "Hebrew" origins. His books, The Cosmic Conspiracy and The Vindicator Scrolls, are chefs-d'oeuvre in the latest revision of ruminator religion. The diagrams of space ships and the basic formulas of physics therein should provide ample pasture for many months of entertainment. Bon appetite!

Dear Mr. Dietz:

Correction on my letter of 1/3/98. In offering "Intelligence Newsletter" as documentation for the fact that British royalty and nobility intermarried with rich Jews as far back as 1000, I inadvertently gave the wrong issue number. The correct issue is the November-December '97 one for the best clarification of this little known fact. Thank you for your kind attention to this letter.

Dear Mr. Dietz:

Just reading Dr. Pierce's article, "The Jewish Problem", Liberty Bell, June 1997:35. I always get a chuckle from these rantings from the Jewish positions, extortions, numerous colonies of ants, they seem invading the pantries of the Pan-Aryan world. No one is quite as witty as Dr. Pierce in describing the never-ending Jewish schemes against we industrious, competent, honorable whites which the Jewish unending nests of ants seem to be marshaling in their almost mechanical, zombie-like alien attacks on Western Civilization.

During these piercing articles of enlightenment and analysis of the world scene and politics and above all, MONEY SCHEMES, it always pops into my mind that if Hitler had this nefarious "pogrom" to wipe out the Jews, the usually super-competent Führer in everything else, sure as hell didn't do a very good job of it, for if he had, how could they all be over here busy picking the pockets of the goyim in all Aryan lands where there is any money?

The Jews have never explained yet how they are all over the globe, destroying the white male by using the blacks and their many shades of darkening hues, Asians, mestizos, screaming day and night about the holocaust, nodding their curls at the Wailing Wall, building Israel with white money, running the wheelbarrows to every pile of gold on the globe—all with so few left from the terrible holocaust which my eyes rebel at reading anymore

How could the Führer, who brought a defeated Germany back from the rack of death dealt it by international Jewry in WW I, begin regaining German lands and people, infusing pride in a beaten and starved people, built a war machine in defiance of the Jewish puppet oppressors, despite their boycott, and fought a war for six years against 52 nations of the earth—how could he do all that, have this "pogrom" to wipe out the Jews, as they claim in their holocaustomania, and yet he could not, apparently, wipe out the few million Jews in Germany and German-protected lands?

Surely this should be the main mystery of administrative and political accomplishment or lack of it for an otherwise superior leader, general, beloved leader, statesman, and inheritor of Odin's Kingdom, and still if he had this "pogrom" to wipe out the Jews and did not accomplish such a simple feat.

Statesmen, politicians, journalists, military leaders, and all governments should be studying this problem day and night. Did Hitler have a knowledge of magic, as in the Thule Society? If so, that didn't work either. So all the talents he had at his disposal in men and materials, and his own ingenious brain, and still he somehow could not carry out this simple feat, because here, as proof that he failed, are millions and seemingly billions of Jews picking every pocket in the known white world. I rest my case.

Heil Hitler!

Dear Sirs:

...The November issue was excellent with the article on monetary reform by Ben Kriegh and the article on Clinton by Coletti. I have read the publications of the Monetary Science Institute for years and have given away a couple of dozen of their books on money to educate people. It is too bad that they do not publish a newsletter any more. However, I feel that the subject is too abstract for most people and that most want to understand how to get their hands on money without understanding the system. Why else would people use and abuse the use of credit cards and play the debt based Money game.

Money is power, and people understand that much. This is brought out very clearly in The Rotten Heart of Europe. In the battle of who is to control the system, Germany or France, no mention is made of how money is to be created in the new paradise of the Common Currency, but neither country wants to give up hegemony to the other.

If you have any information on what is currently happening in the rush to the ECU or can put me in touch with someone who is current on the subject, I would appreciate the information. The book I refer to was published in 1995 and was the viewpoint of an English writer.

Sincerely, T.A.K., Alaska

Dear Landsmann:

Many years ago, people studying the Constitution of the United States with an unbiased eye, pointed out that it set up a government ruled by money. Oswald Spengler stated it plainly: "Democracy is the system of rule by money." Whose money and how obtained is irrelevant. Ancient Athens, which defeated the Persian invasions, ended up as a wholly owned subsidiary of the Persian Empire. Here in America, the creation the of the Federal Reserve money monopoly gave the money power and, hence, rule of America, to the Jews and their co-conspirators. But this is only part of the story of how America was corrupted.

Prior to American entry into WW II, Roosevelt and the Jews were concocting scenarios to force Japan into war with America in case Roosevelt's provocations and acts of war failed to get Hitler to declare war. One of these was to bomb Japanese cities from China using American planes and aircrews. Japan and China had been at war since 1937 and China had been helpless before Japanese air power. Roosevelt offered to supply China with an airforce on the sly. The money, planes, air and ground crews would all be American. Only the airfields and the planes' insignia would be Chinese. When some of these planes were shot down over Japan while murdering civilians in fire raids, Roosevelt figured that the reaction in Japan would force a declaration of war against America thus getting America into war áby the back door."

To carry out this plot, an American company was formed and given a $400,000,000 line of credit. This money was loaned to the Chinese government and guaranteed by the U.S. government. With this money the corporation was allowed to by U.S. military planes and recruit active military personnel. In violation of the Neutrality Laws and Air Force regulations operational planes were declared "surplus" and sold to a Private corporation along with their weapons and service equipment. Active duty personnel were discharged before their enlistments expired and allowed to join a private company working for a foreign government. Some of the best men in the Air Force joined this new company causing lasting bitterness in the Air Force which was being stripped of personnel and equipment while trying to prepare for a future war.

The first planes Purchased were 100 P-400 fighters. After they were in position to protect the Chinese airfields, another 200 B-24 bombers were to arrive and start fire bombing Japanese cities. But the Japanese did not wait for this to happen. They struck before the full 100 fighters even reached China. The fighters helped defend Burma till the British collapsed and then moved to China where they fought a guerilla air war against the Japanese. Cut off by land and sea, the American Air Force (it eventually became a USAAF outfit) was dependent on air transport planes flying the "Hump" over the mountains from India. The planes arrived with war material and personnel and flew back empty. Or did they? Here is where I asked myself the question: "What kind of cargo could be carried on a little C-47 that would pay the interest on $400,000,000 ($20,000,000,000 in current money)?" The answer was suggested by the area from which the planes were flying: Yunnan province, the opium growing area of China.

Here is what I think happened: The planes flying to India from China carried a load of opium which was secretly sold to pay interest on the Chinese loans. The American CIA, observing the huge profits of this trades, soon moved in on it. By the end of the war they were clearing billions from this new source of revenue. Many authors have spoken of how the CIA was set up by British agent William Stephenson working out of Rockefeller Center in NYC and about their European operations. But here is where I think the real foundation pf the CIA was laid. With the dope trade the CIA became independent U.S. government funding for its operations. At the end of WW II it looked as if this wonderful revenue stream would come to an end. Obviously, this could not be permitted.

Vietnam had been taken over by the French in the mid 1800s and the port of Haipong built especially to move Vietnamese and Chinese opium to Europe to compete with the British opium trade out of India. Vietnam was France's India. What if it could be put under CIA control? To this end the CIA enlisted a short-order cook from Harlem named Ho Chi Minh to be their puppet ruler. They gave him a dozen CIA advisors and hired about 500 Vietnamese to be his Army. At the end of WW II a Chinese Army occupied No. Vietnam and brought Ho and his gang with them. Because of U.S. pressure, the Chinese were forced to turn over the government and part of the Japanese weapons to Ho and his gang. That was how "Democracy" came to the Vietnamese people.

When the French attempted to return to their colony, the Reds made a treacherous attack on them but were unable to stand up to a real army. They were soon chased into the jungles and the wastelands. At this point the CIA made them an offer they couldn't refuse: "You need arms to fight the French? We will supply them." "But how can we pay?" asked the Reds. "Grow dope," was the answer. And that was the start of the Vietnam wars and the post-war dope trade. CIA planes openly flew weapons to the Reds out of Thailand and Burma and dope out until the French shot down some of their planes forcing them to be more careful. For six years the first Indochina war went on producing profits beyond the wildest dreams of the CIA criminals. With the money from this the CIA bought fleets of airplanes and whole airlines. (Ever wonder why the CIA needs so many airlines?) They also bought the U.S. political process. Forming alliances with Communists elsewhere, the CIA soon managed to have American arms cut off to Nationalist China thus assuring its fall to the Reds. This transformed the war in Vietnam and turned the Reds into real contenders. For six years this profitable war raged and then it was brought to an end when the U.S. made a separate peace in Korea betraying the French. The Red Chinese then moved their artillery from Korea to Vietnam to defeat the French at Dien Bien Fu. The U.S. helped by refusing to aid the French despite pretending to be their NATO allies. Instead of aiding the French, the U.S. insisted the French surrender the north to the Reds. This set the stage for even greater profits as the war could now be transferred to the south.

From 1956 to 1975 the CIA milked the Vietnam war for all it was worth. They decided to expand the mass market for dope by addicting the American population. This was accomplished through mass marketing through music and propaganda (the "Hippy 60s") and especially by addicting U.S. soldiers cycling through Vietnam on their tours of duty. Even the dead bodies of American soldiers being flown home from Vietnam were stuffed with drugs. In those 19 years the dope trade became the staple of world trade outmatching the oil trade manyfold. Yet this trade remained invisible to the banking system that handled the hundreds of billions in money every year! In that time the CIA and its bankers became the financial and political masters of the world. But all good things must come to an end. In 1975 it was time to end the farce. North Vietnam was sold 3,000 tanks and 2,000 AA missiles on credit while South Vietnam was cut off from fuel and ammunition. This delivered South Vietnam to the Communists in the now routine way.

A new war had already been set up to replace the old. This time Russia was to be used as the patsy for a change. It was sent to occupy Afghanistan. England had already occupied Afghanistan three times in the last century. The trouble was, it cost too much to keep a large force there and a smaller one got wiped out by the natives. Now it was the Russians who invaded the country and the U.S. who supported the guerillas. The guerilla war was financed in the now standard way: The Afghanis and Pakistanis were made to grow dope. This lovely war lasted into the 80s before the USSR withdrew. But that time the CIA had a replacement war ready in Central America, but this time they got caught.

The key event was the downing of the Hasenfuss plane, a CIA plane carrying weapons in to the Contras, and dope out. The plane's base was Clinton's dope airfield at Mena, Arkansas. It flew from there to Nicaragua carrying guns. The guns were obtained by Oliver North's men from steel mills where they were supposedly being melted down. In reality only the junk was melted down. The good weapons went to the Contras. The place was then to fly to Holmstead AFB in Florida where Bush's son was to meet it and Janet Reno was to protect it. Instead it crashed with the weapons. The whole dirty affair then came to light. A frantic cover-up was mounted to try and justify the dope trading in terms of "fighting communism" (as if the U.S. had ever really done such a thing!), but the secret was out.

But this came too late to make any difference. The CIA's American dope trade was now the #1 article of international trade. The wealth of the world was theirs. The rule of the U.S. was theirs. When the CIA shut down its Mena operation in 1986, Clinton's screams were silenced by his being told he was on the short list for puppet president in 1992. The U.S. is now a corrupt empire run for the benefit of the Jews and their co-conspirators. And that is what happened to the "great experiment" of an American Republic. Democracy devolved from the Republic and ended in the usual way. If Spengler is right, what is next are annihilation wars as various criminal factions fight to rule and loot. The old U.S.A. was crippled in the Civil War and ended forever after WW II.

Such is my reconstruction of events. I offer it as a guide to the perplexed.

Sincerely, S.R., New York State

Dear Mr. Dietz:

Thanks for the LB which I received a few days ago and I immediately dropped everything and read it from cover to cover.

Don't you think Coletti is a little off the mark when he says Clinton was elected twice by the American people? He was elected by illegal aliens, niggers and jews, none of which I consider Americans. As I recall, in his first election he received only 24% of the vote and I believe it was even less in the second. This little old paper in Pensacola, the only paper here, ran big headlines: CLINTON WINS BIG! I sent them a letter saying he had not won big at all — barely skidded through, but of course my letter was not published, just as none of the letters I wrote defending Hans Schmidt were never published.

I finally got moved on the 14th of January, but it will take a while to get unpacked. If I get something I want to read, I just shelve the whole business of unpacking...

PS: Hope the enclosed check will help a little. You mentioned once you might publish all of Dr. Oliver's works in one or more volumes. Did you ever do that? If so, I certainly want to get a copy. [I am sorry, but due to financial and equipment problems I won't be able to publish any more of Dr. Oliver's writings. Volume 1 of Against the Grain is still available.--Editor]

Dear Landsmann:

It is now clear that the world financial bubble began to collapse when Red China took over Hong Kong and diverted all its bank lending into China. Hong Kong was the financial heart circulating money around East Asia. After the Red takeover new loans ceased to be issued after the old ones were repaid. The floating supply of money disappeared causing a credit crunch. It became impossible to get loans and people began to try and raise money by liquidating stocks and bonds and land. The moment they tried this, the price collapsed just as it will in America in the near future. The implosion is spreading. So far hyperinflation by the Federal Reserve has only delayed it a little. The American money supply is now being hyperinflated at over 100% per year and will soon collapse like the Asian currencies. I assume the Jews will try to prevent the crash in America (it has already happened in Asia!) until they can start up a mideast war so as to blame it all on the Moslems—again.

Spotlight recently published a map of what the Jews claim is theirs according to Genesis. I note this is a virtual duplicate of the old Assyrian Empire. The Jews are worthy successors to the old Assyrians when it comes to cruelty and murder. One Assyrian king boasted of how he drove the garrison of a surrendered city into the desert to die of thirst and exposure. Moshe Dyan did the same thing to 60,000 Egyptian soldiers after the 1967 war. However, the Assyrians fought their own wars while the Israelis demand America fight theirs.

Speaking of Assyria, the name comes from their God Asshur. In Genesis, when Moses asks the God of the burning bush who he is, he answers with the nonsense phrase: "I am that I am." Researching this I find that what the Bible actually said was "I am Asshur." The religious translators blanked out the Asshur and added "I AM" derived from reading the Aramaic text backward to get: "I AM THAT I AM." After Asshur was defeated by other Gods the Jews dropped his name and substituted the nonsense jumble YHWH so they could claim he was whatever God was victorious at the time. In Aramaic the word "lord" is translated as BAAL, or actually BL since vowels had not been invented yet. Thus, BL, SSHR became BL YHWH which is always translated as "Lord God" in the King James Bible. Both Asshur, Jehova and Odin are storm gods of very similar attributes. Can it be that what Christians have been unknowingly worshiping all these years is the desert devil Asshur?

Just suppose that Iraq had led the UN coalition that seized Puerto Rico, then blockaded the U.S. and declared a "no fly" zone over the U.S. east of the Mississippi. That is what we have done to Iraq at the command of Israel. Now we are supposed to launch a new war to destroy Iraq, Syria, Libya and Iran for Israel. Meanwhile, the Moslems, knowing that this is coming, have formed an 11-nation alliance to break the power of the U.S. for good. The 11 nations are: N. Korea, China, Khazackstan, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iran, Iraq, Syria, Bosnia and Libya. I suspect the financial crash triggered by China was the first shot in this new war.

Back in the 60s, Eqypt was trying to conquer Yemen without much luck. The Yemenis were fierce fighters who were sheltered in their impenetrable mountains. To terrorize them the Egyptians dropped poison gas on their mountain villages. They figured the natives had no planes or modern technology and could not retaliate in kind. The Yemenis thought about this for a year, then, on a fixed day, they poisoned the water supply of every Egyptian garrison in Yemen. In Saana alone over 600 Egyptians died.

On December 6, Clintondirt issued a presidential directive for the U.S. Air Force to prepare for the use of atomic weapons against smaller nations. Around Christmas, two B-18 atomic bombers were sent to Bahrein for the mission. The U.S. has been openly developing ground penetrating atomic bombs to destroy Libya's water tunnels (called "poison gas factories" in the Jews-media) and the Iranian tunnels with their anti-ship missiles overlooking the Strait of Hormuz. A preemptive attack on Iran's nuclear reactors is also being considered. The planned victims have a few atomic bombs but nothing to match what the U.S. has or what Israel has stolen from America. Thus, they have come up with a "Yemeni" solution as a deterrent. They have shipped biotoxins to 100 U.S. cities. The moment the U.S. drops the first atomic bombs on a Moslem country, they will retaliate upon America itself. The Jews know of this and are doing nothing about it. They hate America anyway. Besides, if 50 or 100 millions are killed, it will end the government's financial problems and the public will be too shattered to worry about who created the financial collapse.

This war was originally scheduled for Thanksgiving, but someone suddenly shot down a number of U.S. plances all over the world, probably from orbit using energy weapons. If this is so, then the airplane is now obsolete as a first class war weapon and, without airpower, the U.S. is nothing. As I write, Clintondirt is huffing and puffing to start another war with Iraq. We will see who strikes whom this time. Just as the Moslems got even in 1973 for the Israeli victory of 1967, so this 1998 war will be the Moslem revenge for the 1991 aggression by the U.S. and Israel.

Incidentally, note that No. Korea shoots down any U.S. plane that comes near it. In 1993 it shot down a U.S. spy plane 123 miles off the coast and the U.S. government didn't dare open its mouth. Korea and the Gulf are the "two wars" that the U.S. has been preparing for since 1991.

PS: The FBI gave up on the Flight 800 shootdown calling it an "accident." On the contrary, the plane shows all the signs of being shot down with a scalar energy weapon, including the Scalar Globe photographed by witnesses on the ground, and the way all the transistors were burned up. Missiles and atomic bombs are long obsolete WW II weapons. All major powers are now equipped with various energy weapons.

Sincerely, S.R., New York State

Dear George,

The last Liberty Bell was excellent and I almost wished I was still receiving other copies to pass on. There are just too many closed minds about me. It is almost as though one was appealing to a brain enclosed in cement. Yours is a bright beam — I wish you and yours well in this New Year.

Dear George-

A.V. Schaerffenberg's masterful piece on Aryan-German music traditions and the pathology brought about in great music by the Jewish influence over our Culture should be read by every serious Aryan music student, and especially by those who one day hope to be conductors and soloists. In a past edition of one of our publications, I touched on the takeover of American popular culture by the Jews, who have negrified it and thus have brought Aryan youth to the pit of anti-artistic filth. But Schaerffenberg has put a fine point on the subject which I, a music lover, have agonized over every time I saw that troll Leonard Bernstein praised and lionized for his compositions, the only one of which, the movie music for "On The Waterfront," bears any resemblance to music. If it were not for Dick Cavett, no one would ever have heard of Bernstein's overture to "Candide."

As I served in Japan as a U.S. Marine, and also went to university there for an undergraduate degree, I noticed that the Japanese have a great respect for the German composers. Thus, I find Seiji Ozawa more than adequate with a good orchestra in his hands. His reading of Bruckner's Fifth Symphony with the Boston Symphony pleased me, and he is versatile enough to do Debussy as well as most of the standard repertory. I heard more serious music of our race on Japanese radio than I do anywhere in America. There were coffee shops in Tokyo and Yokohama that featured only classical music.

The worst travesty is the Jewish promotion of a Congoid conductor, Bobby Ferrins, who looks like the boss of a Jamaican drug posse. He prances on the podium, forcing Aryan children to sing African rhymes, while he leers at blond female players in the orchestras he is permitted to abuse. And the Jews boil over with praise for this cretin.

Is there hope for Aryan music? Only if we succeed in creating an Aryan Republic on the ruins of this sad country. In that Staat there must be erected a grand concert hall / opera house, a place of cultural worship and serenity, wherein the Aryan soul can rise above the mundane.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigous academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

On the 18th Amendment (Prohibition): "Very few Americans were sufficiently sane to perceive that they had repudiated the American conception of government and had replaced it with the legal principle of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat,' which was the theoretical justification of the Jews' revolution in Russia."

On Race: "We must further understand that all races naturally regard themselves as superior to all others. We think Congoids unintelligent, but they feel only contempt for a race so stupid or craven that it fawns on them, gives them votes, lavishly subsidizes them with its own earnings, and even oppresses its own people to curry their favor. We are a race as are the others. If we attribute to Ourselves a superiority, intellectual, moral, or other, in terms of our own standards, we are simply indulging in a tautology. The only objective criterion of superiority, among human races as among all other species, is biological: the strong survive, the weak perish. The superior race of mankind today is the one that will emerge victorious—whether by its technology or its fecundity—from the proximate struggle for life on an overcrowded planet."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

Starting the Revolution

The imagined, electoral route to political power, presented, pursued and cherished by those antiquated forms of political organisation, the nationalist parties in Britain, was shown in the previous article in this series to be a catastrophically wasteful illusion, continued indulgence in which will deprive us of our last chance to work and fight on the right lines to achieve ultimate victory. The election results of those parties last year, as in previous years, were an overwhelming confirmation of the correctness of our analysis. The inescapable conclusion, therefore, is that another route to power with another form of organisation appropriate to that route has to be discerned and pursued from now on. It is our purpose here and in later installments in the series to explore and outline the essential alternative of strategy and structure which we have to adopt forthwith, some aspects of which were just briefly indicated and summarised at the conclusion of the last installment.

The strategy has to be the result of a full comprehension of the multifariousness of power which has political effect, and within which ambit state power, although rightly seen as the ultimate objective, is also to be seen as achievable not only by successful electioneering — which is now to be recognised as clearly beyond the capacity of the nationalist parties aspiring to it — but also by the compound and cumulative effect of the acquisition of and exexcise of power in other forms and in other dimensions. The appropriate, new form of organisation has to be the product of the visualisation of the appropriate, new strategy, reflecting in close fit its requirements.

The obsolete structure and function of a political party, geared to soliciting the masses for members and votes, has to be replaced with a task force, a Vanguard to give it a name, as an elite of workers and fighters freed from the hampering, debilitating, ruinous encumbrance of the camp followers incorporated in parties. These latter, namely all the timewasting, gossiping hangers-on who are drawn to a political party, and who are in full estimation uneconomic in costing more to attract and to keep content than they are worth in their output, have to be shed; have to be relegated to the role and ranks of a somewhat supportive section of the general public, conceived at the most as external auxiliaries providing some money and supplementary service without entanglement with the workers and fighters of the task force.

The development of a task-efficient Vanguard in place of the doomed folly of a nationalist party, stagnating in its illusions, begins with the quality of the individual: there the revolution starts and the attainment of power commences. Whereas the ordinary member of the ordinary, nationalist party represents in views and habits something very substantially, if not mostly, of the old order, while purporting to uphold the new, the first, indeed the qualifying task of the out-of-the ordinary person fit to be considered a memher of the Vanguard is the winning of power within himself or herself for the new order of the future.

SELF-POWER: THE FIRST STEP

This means a thorough purgation in respect of the thought and practice of the death system of Democracy. In order to be truly a forerunner of a redeemed future for our Folk, the aspirant has to set himself or herself to achieve as far as possible a personal and internal liberation from the shackles of servitude to that death system, meaning the thorough expulsion from mind and conduct of ways of thinking and ways of behaving belonging to that system. Mentally this liberation is completely possible: the Vanguarder can and must make of his or her mind an inner island of sanity and salubrity in the foul waters of Democracy with all its insidious vapours; a bastion and bridgehead of revolt. Behaviourally, despite the enshrouding and coercive restraints and requirements of that system, he or she, given the will, springing from the emancipation of the mind, can substantially if not completely step out of the line of conduct prescribed by Democracy, and must exert the self-discipline and determination to do so as far as possible despite Democracy's coercion.

This degree o personal liberation by the exercise of power over one's person is something the ordinauy member of the ordinary organisation is never obliged to achieve, and which the vast majority at least lack the quality to achieve. That ordinary member never tires of glibly and continually talking of successfully seeking to recruit and also successfully seeking to solicit the votes of other, poor-quality people in order to gain state power so that the state can do this and that in the way of reform as a great, impersonal provider and rectifier; while conspicuously failing to take power over and within himself or herself, the form of power most immediately within reach. That ordinary member of a nationalist party thus makes his or her politics a creed of escapism from personal responsibility. In contrast, the measure of the Vanguarder is the will and the ability to put things in order in his or her own being, seen as a cell of the state, as the prerequisite for any and all extension of power-seeking in any and all further measures of revolution: revolution which has its beginning in you, the individual, with the seizure and exercise of self-power.

The self-liberation and self-empowerment of each and every individual member of the Vanguard as the primary stage of the revolution encompasses first and foremost the self-improvement resulting from the systematic pursuit of greater knowledge of the nature of the problems besetting our Folk, their causes, consequences and remedies; and of all the means of gaining power in all its forms to deal with these problems, and to apply those remedies, and with knowledge of the means and methods of the enemy in opposing us. The raw material of power lies in this knowledge, the possession and correct use of which, under the impulse of will, is absolutely essential for successful action towards our ultimate objectives. Thus there can ke no such thing as a Vanguarder full of energy, full of desire, full of courage, but empty of knowledge needed as well, without which action is blind. A Vanguarder worthy of the name has to be already, or has to discipline himself or herself to become a student, a methodical and systematic student not shy of the name, and not a mere dabbler, in order to be effective as a fighter and worker, a missionary and an exemplar; all of which functions and attributes go to make up the necessary nature of a genuine Vanguarder.

Endowed with the will for self-control and self-improvement, and thereby fulfilling the role of a student, the Vanguarder has next to ensure that, before going on to action beyond himself or herself affecting others and other things, his or her conduct in his or her personal life is appropriate to that of someone representing the new order in rejection of the old, not sullied and contaminated by the life style of the latter. One cannot thoroughly think as a rebel, and yet act in any way as a conformist. To do this is to be absurdly inconsistent to the extent of decisive disqualification. Making this point are the following resolutions of right conduct for the individual Vanguarder.

RESOLUTIONS OF RIGHT CONDUCT

- Personal tidiness and methodical habits are the proof and the benefit of inner discipline. Master yourself first in order to be able to gain mastery elsewhere!
- Safeguarding and improving your own health with a wholesome diet, natural remedies and sufficient exercise, avoiding harmful additives and medications and carcinogenic substances, is highly important as a personal contribution to a finer Folk, and essential to your best functioning as a worker and fighter. Smokers and heavy drinkers and drug addicts have no place in the Vanguard, since they are clearly and importantly incapable of achieving self-power.
- Don't dress like a Democrat, making yourself look like one of the enemy, while reckoning to fight the degeneracy which is the nature of Democracy! Jeans and 'trainers' have become the authentic uniform of the slovenly, slack, sickly conformists of the present system, keen to display their membership of the 'casual' society alien to the Vanguard of National-Socialism. Say 'No' to Democracy in all it stands for and appears in, including dress and habits as much as in thoughts!
- Cut the cackle! Let the ordinary parties and organisations cater for the 'gas bags', wasting untold hours in empty talk. Time is too short and the task too big for the tongue wagging which is a main activity of the majority of party members.
- Don't go along with the poisonous language of Democracy! For instance, call the perverts what they are, queers, instead of acquiescing in their imposition of their disguising misnomer of 'gay'
- Don't tolerate defeatist talk: the lament that it is 'too late' for victory and the measures needed for it, and that the enemy is now too strong! We can most cetainly win, if only we here and now abandon the fanciful and futile party game with its foolish striving to induct the masses in order to solicit the votes of sufficiently more of those masses to acquire the government. Have and exude unbeatable confidence in ultimate victory, this for the Vanguard being no question of 'if', but of 'when' and 'how'!
- Resolve, if unattached, to select and breed with a mate of high-racial quality, not allowing mere lust to transcend racial responsibility! Consciousness of ancestry, concern for the continuation of racial lineage, is an essential characteristic of the Vanguard, so every Vanguard member needs to research his or her family history, taking pride in the Aryan blood-line, thereby strengthening his or her commitment to the struggle. Said Cicero some 2,000 years ago: "Not to know what happened before we were born is to remain perpetually a child. For what is the worth of human life unless it is woven into the life of our ancestors by the records of history."
- If you have a child, the education and training of that child is emphatically your business: your personal responsibility as a member of the Vanguard. It is for you, as a condition of membership, to ensure that the child grows up to become a Vanguarder, not a pitiable deformity belonging to Democracy and its definitive degeneracy, and thus becoming one of the enemy under your own roof while beariny your own name. Take power over your child's upbringing as part of the seizure of the future!

HOME CORRECTION OF SCHOOL INDOCTRINATION

With this last resolution we have opened up a field of tremendous importance for the Vanguard as the fighting force for the future of our Folk. Today, under Democracy, our schools are in the hands of our enemies for the teaching profession is predominantly in the hands of those who are communistic in their aim of moulding our children to multiracialism, rejection of racial awareness and pride, miscegenation, deracinated internationalism, and acquiescence in homosexuality. Our children are thus in the clutches of those who are body snatchers and child molesters, stealing the next generation from us in an appalling crime of defilement worse than that of paedophiles, since these teachers are raping the mind and soul of their victims.

Yet we find such a preponderance of members of the racial-nationalist parties babbling about the wonderful Britain they are going to bring about through the ballot box, while seen to be quite incapable of even bringing up their own children properly in correction of the evil influence of the school in particular and the environment in general. For the Vanguard the new Britain begins not in the bravado of beer talk, but in what its member does in reformative action now, importantly including what that individual does regarding children which is an activity vastly more valuable than ambling round the houses, stuffing leaflets through doors and canvassing for votes.

Taking a first aspect of educational action, and leaving a second aspect to a later and more appropriate context, your home has to be seen as and daily used as a successful competitor to the school. The liberalistic notion that children should be left to make up their minds for themselves is one of Democracy's pretences, conceived to cloak the reality that children are influenced by adults one way or another, and right now are most definitely being indoctrinated in school by our enemies In charge there, so it is simply a question of who wins the battle for the minds of our children, our enemies or us. The old parties of nationalism are most certainly a most outstanding failure in this battle, measured by their pathetic, jeans-clad, 'trainer'-shod, 'rock'-vibrating, slovenly offsprings.

The superiority of thought and conduct incumbent on the Vanguarder befits that person to be a teacher and trainer in his or her own home, capable of providing a model for children, the father functioning not as some offputting pedagogue on a pedestal, but as a genial while masterly companion dispensing a mixture of discipline and affection, and securing attention and respect as leader of the household state. Training in personal tidiness and smartness, self-reliance, withstanding hardship and pain, sharpening the power of observation, appreciation of the beauty of Nature, capacity for hard work physical as well as mental, physical culture, recognition of good music, the importance of integrity and of worthwhile aims in life, development of the sense of justice: all this in the way of character building, health promotion and spiritual development is not only as important but far more important than stuffing the mind with masses of information which can be obtained in a reference library, if and when the need for any of it arises. We have far too many weak-chinned, walking encyclopaedias, representative of Democracy's values.

Every evening the Vanguard parent should obey the responsibility to find out from the child exactly what the enemy has in the way of indoctrination tried to put over that day through whatever subject and activity allows it, and that parent should then skillfully seek to administer the antidote to the poison. It should be done deftly and subtly, spotlighting contradictions and irrationalities and falsities; undermining confidence in the teachers, nourishing resistance to their teachings, poking fun at their scruffy appearance and life style, stimulating a feeling of superiority in the child to sheepish pupils. This is the way to make the home of the Vanguarder triumph over the school of Democracy in defence of the child. The young person has a ready capacity for rebelliousness. Our enemies exploit it for degeneracy. We can with care and persistence bring young people to see that what is put to them as bright and exciting revolt against an oppressive, parental way of life is in truth an enforced conformity to the faceless authoritarianism of the manipulators of Democracy. In other words, we can turn the revolt of youth against its present misleaders.

OVERT OR COVERT ACTIVITY

At this juncture it is of the utmost importance that the Vanguarder makes a permanent decision whether he or she is going to proceed along the overt or along the covert way of action. Those who once become known to the enemy authorities for activities which, at least at present, can be pursued openly without incapacitating penalty and restriction will be marked down by those authorities, and also by other enemy bodies, and be liable to be subject to some surveillance, and in consequence rendered unfit to engage in activities which have to be kept secret. In considering this vital question and reaching a decision, one has to try to estimate and take into account the likelihood that the contemplated, overt activities, while feasible at present, will before long or at least eventually be prevented in practice by impediments, if not prohibited by law.

Just as those who choose open activities cannot later change to secret activities, the converse is true with equal certainty: those who choose the secret or 'underground' way cannot at any time whatsoever indulge in open activities without sacrificing their secrecy. Thus emerges the golden rule that the two types of activity and the two types of person involved cannot be mixed at any time. They have to be kept now and always entirely and strictly separate and self-contained. Having said that, there are and always will be targets which can be aimed at and hit by open-road Vanguarders either identifiably or anonymously, providing that those activities in which they are identifiable or risk becoming so are not seriously illegal so that they are acting in violation of the golden rule stated above.

Here are just a few examples of those many fields of combat in which in keeping with the above differentiations and stipulations direct action can and should be taken either by overt Vanguarders, acting identifiably or anonymously, or instead by covert Vanguarders, acting secretly, which category of Vanguarder depending on the nature of the action. In the first place there is the need to combat the race mixers in every way possible. To this end, bring your enmity ceaselessly to bear on all those who indulge in the racial perversion of marriage or cohabitation with persons of alien race! Vent your hostility on all those firms which act as agencies of introduction for Negroes and Asians seeking White mates, or patronise race mixture, or indulge in multiracial advertising, or specialise in conducting courses against 'racial prejudice' (more than 50 of these are to be found in the Local Government Management Board's 'Directory of Equal Opportunities Trainers and Consultants' to be found in many public reference libraries)!

As the next example, confront and damage all those many bodies forever holding out the begging bowl for Coloureds the world over! Consume their 'freepost' facilities in registering your disgust!

Thirdly, whether you have a child of your own or not, target and militantly oppose and harass and hinder, and put every pressure you can on all those schoolteachers who are polluting and corrupting children in their care by deliberate indoctrination contrary to the survival and welfare of our race!

As a final example, combat with both denunciation and hindrance the queers who proselytise and propagate; and all others who explicitely tolerate and promote them!

Direct action such as this has brought us into Stage 2 of the revolution, which is the pursuit of power in all its many forms short of state power, after Stage 1, which is the winning of power over and within one's self; Stage 3 being the attainment of state power, followed finally by Stage 4 which is the use of state power to transform society and its way of life.

Such elementary, direct action as above can be taken by the Vanguarder on his or her own as a single and basic unit of the task force, and every Vanguarder should be capable of so acting alone, although generally action is most effective when taken jointly with others. Small though the punch here considered may be, the value lies not just in the estimation of an act in isolation, but in appreciation of the effect in aggregate of all such acts over a long time, and in conjunction with all the other action open to the Vanguard in wearing down and disrupting and demoralising and damaging and destroying the enemy in all its formations and followings.

Yet, however much a Vanguarder must be capable, if needs be, of acting on his or her own, working and fighting as a self-sustainable unit in the struggle, it is most desirable indeed for all Vanguarders to be in touch with others of their kind, and so to constitute some kind of community within the task force. The basic kind of community is that of loose linkage. A more involved kind is that of proximity. The most involved is that of an integrated settlement. The contact with others is not only a big benefit to morale through the comradeship of both political work and relaxation, including the possibllity of holidaying together, but also a big aid to the home training of children in allowing those of one Vanguard family to mix with those of another, so that they are not isolated and obliged to find companionship with the children of households of Democracy. Beyond that, contact is necessary for all forms of joint action and team work. Thus we come to the need to make contact, and the problem of doing so, where the individual is not already sufficiently in touch with others.

MAKING CONTACT

For those with this problem, Gothic Ripples now offers a special service in place of our ordinary, contact service of the past which catered for all readers with certain things to offer or required, and which has now been terminated. Under this new, contact service those and only those accepting to serve in the Vanguard, and wanting to contact others similarly accepting to serve in the Vanguard, for companionship and joint activity, can without charge have a notice to this effect of up to 30 words of their choice inserted with a box number without disclosing in the wording their name and address, if they prefer not to disclose this at the outset. They must, however, indicate their area of residence sufficiently to ensure a contact within reach.

Thereupon, those wishing to contact the advertiser can send to Gothic Ripples a letter for the advertiser which need not at this stage disclose the respondent's name and address, but should propose a date, time and place for a meeting in the locality indicated by the advertiser, and also a way of identifying each to the other at the meeting place. This letter should be sent in a sealed and stamped envelope with the box number to which it is a reply clearly marked on the back of that envelope, and this envelope should be enclosed in another and preferably larger envelope addressed and despatched to Gothic Ripples.

Gothic Ripples will then forward this reply to the advertiser who has then to decide whether to write to the respondent by way of Gothic Ripples, and, if doing so, whether to disclose his or her name and address, or to leave this disclosure until a satisfactory meeting. It will be for those meeting to decide then or thereafter whether to adopt the contact and to exchange name and address, understanding from the start that contact in this way through Gothic Ripples is no surety of the political authenticity and personal reliability of anyone involved. Anyone can subscribe to Gothic Ripples, and among the variety doing so we know we have at least one person acting as informant for the Jewish, anti-fascist magazine, Searchlight, and probably others acting for the police and MI5 and other enemy bodies. The sensible rule is to be sharply wary of any stranger and indeed anyone at all until you have good reason to regard that person as genuine and reliable, and far better to take time to survey and assess rather than to repent for far longer because of a failure to do so. Gothic Ripples cannot in this connection engage to provide reports on our knowledge or lack of knowledge of persons.

At the stage of a meeting having been arranged and having taken place, the role of Gothic Ripples in the contact making as a transmitter of mail will have been fulfilled, and no further forwarding between the same individuals can be undertaken.

Having thus offered some help in bringing together Vanguarders who so far lack any contact or have insufficient contact for their purposes, we now can for the remainder of this installment take a look at the kinds of activities open to Vanguarders who decide on an overt role, beyond what has already been indicated. To begin with, there is a vast scope for research teams working not only for the purposes of contemporary propaganda, but also for the far distant but ultimate day when we are able to seize state power, and when, because of all the time beforehand, we will have no excuse for being unprepared in any respect.

STUDY GROUPS

We need study groups to formulate the framework of policies for the salvation and the rejuvenation of this and other Aryan countries and communities, but not to seek prematurely to lay down fine details of these policies which depend on the circumstances at the time of implementation, and thus have to await determination that much later. In this vital work the study groups concerned can function — modestly, not grandiosely and hence ridiculously — as something akin to ministries in miniature, each concerned with a particular department of policy. A central field for study is that of the best structure of government, both national and local, for our purposes, selected from the considerable range of possibilities.

We need study groups to investigate and report on an immensity of other subjects, providing the Vanguard with a needed fund of collective knowledge and argument for all its purposes, including self-improvement, policy formulation, and propaganda. What, for example, can be said to be the nature of true freedom as distinct from the bogus liberty of Democracy? In this context how far, given state power, could we go in allowing systematic expression of views fundamentally hostile to and injurious to National-Socialism? Assuming our possession, given state power, of a mass media at present denied to us, and resulting then in our ability to put our views powerfully and persuasively into every home in the country, would we still need to and have the justification to place any prohibitions on the then comparatively feeble ability of opponents to propagate even the strongest opposition to all we stand for? And, if we allowed the expression of ideas destructive of the National-Socialist order, would it be reasonable nevertheless to prohibit and repress the activities of those upholding such ideas, and seeking the overthrow of the National-Socialist state?

For another question in the same field of general enquiry to illustrate its scope, how did Christianity succeed in ousting Odinism, and why is Christianity now in decline in the West, and how can we best go about replacing it in the future? For another, how are our enemies so successful in captivating our youth, rendering them degenerate and turning them against us and our ideas; thus how best can we confront and counteract them in this subversion of our Folk's future? We need great investigation and great debate on all matters of importance to improve our thinking, that is our power of the mind, and thereby our capacity to convert, along with our ability to sustain our strength from belief, and to act most effectively in the pursuit of power wherever it lies.

The Vanguard needs those who will apply themselves to becoming experts, not dilettantes, in a wide variety of fields ranging from telephonic surveillance, other police and security service surveillance, methods of infiltration by these forces and other elements of the enemy, police methods in general, the law, the television transmission and relay system, video production, production and operation of radio transmitters, computers and the Internet, microwaves in their relation to surveillance and to mind control.

As part of this huge business of equipping the mind for the high-grade pursuit of power, the overt arm of the Vanguard also needs teams devoted to the analysis of enemy propaganda, and thereupon the preparation of the most effective answers to that enemy propaganda, and the incorporation of those answers in contra-propaganda to the public which is aimed not at soliciting mass voting in our favour through contemporary electioneering, but at (a) attracting recruits for the overt formations of the Vanguard — subject to the most stringent scrutiny and evaluation before acceptance, this for the sake not only of security but also quality control — (b) discrediting and disrupting the present system, and (c) laying foundations of agreement within the public at large which, built on as time goes on, can become a solid base of approval and sympathy for an eventual seizure of state power when the time is ripe by virtue of the workings of Democracy's inherent disposition to dissolution and breakdown, powerfully assisted by the continual and cumulative workings of the Vanguard to bring on this dissolution and breakdown.

BEATING THE ENEMY'S BARBS AND BLOCKADES

Such favourite and winning trigger-words of the enemy as 'hate', 'discrimination', 'prejudice', 'tolerance', 'extremist', 'nazi', must be spotlighted by the contra-propaganda teams for analysis and devastating reply. Similarly the enemy's deceitful pretences of propaganda, such as the contention that racial difference is only skin deep, nothing more than a matter of pigmentation, must be carefully considered, leading to the perfection of an answer. The governing motivation in this field has to be scientific treatment in place of the haphazard, ill considered, impromptu, unsynchronised, inconsistent utterances of the past which have proved so severely ineffective, with our side habitually on the defensive if not on the run, and the other side regularly scoring. This has to cease by methodically uplifting our propaganda from its primitive condition.

In the well-thought-out, streamlined, psychological warfare devised and conducted by our specialists in place of the present outpourings of amateurs with all their crudity and deficiency, 'Democracy' has to be seen and treated as the prime target it deserves to be, without any feeble contortion and posturing to appear to go along with it as is being manifested by the electioneering, party-game players here and abroad. You cannot do the job of cleansing and conquering through disabling compromise. 'Democracy', hailed as the acme of progress and civilised attainment, the finest form of government there can possibly be, the very flower of freedom, must be cleverly, ceaselessly, convincingly shown to be The Great Pretence: an utter fraud, a disastrous deception and despoilment of the people for the benefit of the politicians and their masters, the ultimate rulers behind the scenes.

Another crucial and related issue, the Jews, has to be tackled, not evaded, but with that shrewdness which is not another word for cowardly compromise. Despite all the repressive legislation here, they can still be tackled effectively here, if it is done in the right way. The right way is not frontally and bluntly and broadly and vaguely to denounce them and abuse them, which plays into their hands, arousing sympathy for them in the silly public, and giving the authorieies responsive to them excuse and opportunity for coming to their aid with raids, seizures, prosecutions and imprisonments.

The right way is through calm and careful consideration of weak spots of vulnerability in Jewry's corporate anatomy to develop clever propaganda concentrating on those weak spots, their Achilles heels. One such weak spot is their cruelty to animals involved in their antiquated, ritual slaughter of animals. Another is their Talmud, their gargantuan guide to living for the select tribe, replete with injunctions of hateful enmity towards non-

Jews. A warning in this connection! Make sure of your material by going to the source and inspecting the tractates which comprise this huge treatise! Over the years and over the world there have been so many faulty presentations which have been repeated from one publication to another, and which have enabled Jewry not only to deny material in particular and thereby discredit criticism of The Talmud in general, but to bring about successful, legal proceedings.

Another area of vulnerability is their monstrously vainglorious conception of themselves as a god-chosen, master race destined to dominate the world. This is not a matter of risking repression by blackguarding them as the world's worst, but of refusing to recognise that they are, as they claim, the world's divine superiors.

Some Vanguarders may be attracted to the work of forming and operating a support body for National-Socialist prisoners and their dependants. Since the Vanguard is imbued with awareness that our struggle is a worldwide one against a worldwide enemy with racial unity transcending geographical nationalism, such a support body must reflect this by caring for racial and ideological comrades, wherever in the world they are, in a spirit of worldwide comradeship.

Task force communities in the lowest form, that of loose linkage, can be brought into existence even where those concerned live at a distance too great for other than occasional visits and communication by correspondence. Providing this severely restricted contact is regularly maintained, and is not spasmodic and haphazard, it is much preferable to, because much mere productive and sustaininy, those individuals living and acting in isolation. A step above that is the greater contact resultiny when Vanguard members already live or can manaqe to come to live in the same immedidte area. Then, in a community of proximity, the interaction will be much greater, and thus more productive and sustaining. This will be for most people the maximum in togetherness that they can aim at and achieve.

THE COMMUNITY OF RESIDENTIAL PROXIMITY

This type of community of higher interaction because of residential proximity, while not absolutely essential for team work, is certainly very conducive to it. Among other things, it facilitates two things of great impurtance for the future; two areas of power seizure which the ballot-box-balmy, nationalist parties sadly neglect in their excitement over votechasin. These are our own schools and our own youth movement.

While the conscientious, imaginative, persevering parent can and must do so very much in the home and out of it to counter the foul influence of the conventional school outside, which his or her children attend, those children can be protected and properly trained that much more when, in addition, the conventional school is replaced entirely by home schooling or an external, alternative school. As the law now stands in Britain, home schooling by parenes in place of attendance at conventional schools is definitely permissible, subject to requirements as to the quality and extent of the home teachinq which can quite easily bc fulfilled, providing a parent has the time and the knowledge and the ability to impart it. Furthermore, it seems that this permissible schooling in the home is not nccessarily limited to the children whose home it is, but can extend to the children of friends.

Setting up a school outside the home and for children from a number of homes is a much different and more complicated and closely regulated matter, though not beyond the scope of thoroughly competent Vanguarders. However, even where for whatever reason schooling in the home or an alternative school outside the home cannot replace the conventional school, as a second-best provision a Vanguard school of a kind can be set up alongside the conventional school, countering it though not replacing it for the children concerned, operating outside the hours of that conventional school. Thus one way or another, to one extent or another, men and women of the Vanguard can succeed in rescuing their children from the clutches of the enemy's educational system, and in this exercise of power, withdrawing to this extent from the enemy's domain.

In the U.S.A, at the moment over a million children are being educated at home or in alternative schools because their parents have opted out of the conventional system. In Britain home schooling is now going on in at least 10,000 homes according to the estimate of the main, home-schooling organisation in this country, named 'Education Otherwise'. A VANGUARD YOUTH MOVEMENT

Supplementary to the liberation and protection of the Vanguard's children from the corrupting influences of the conventional school and the rest of the degenerate influences in the rest of the environment of Democracy, there needs to be a youth movement of the Vanguard to fill the void in the out-of-school life of school children and also in the life of young people after leaving school. At a time when the Boy Scout and Girl Guide movement — apart from its limitations from the start — has capitulated to 'political correctness' and its central multiracialism, and the nationalist parties are too busy seeking votes for salvation in the future to bother with youth salvation now, it is of the utmost importance that the Vanguard applies itself to the care of young people as a matter of winning the future here and now.

Through such a youth movement our youngsters have to be won over to a strength of body and mind in the service of the Folk. They have to be nurtured in pride in race through an aroused awareness of identity, endowed with our folk traditions and festivals from the Mayday of the maypole to the yule log of the winter solstice as contributory to this, bonded and galvanised by the camaraderie of camps, enthused by songs of struggle as were the magnificent Hitler Youth.

Passing for a moment from the start of life with the young person, and the role of the Vanguard there, to the end of that life form in the transformation known as 'death', the role of the Vanguard does not end there, but continues in the custodianship of our dead. In place of the final ignominy of relegation to some Christian graveyard or the ash-disposal area of some civic crematorium, something far more fitting can be achieved. Although not generally realised, anyone with ground where a hazard to publie health, specifically pollution of a watercourse, cannot be said to result can have a burial there, and that can be even a mere back garden. Given sufficient ground, you can even have friends and relatives buried there.

No planning permission is requircd because private graves do not constitute a change of land use or an engineering project under Town & Country Planning Regulations.

This means that anyone or any group having or acquiring a suitable plot of ground in the country, and having the inclination to do so, could look into the possibility of creating a graveyard and crematory-ash reserve for Vanguarders who want not only to work and fight together during life, but at its end to remain together in death. (Green Burial: the DIY Guide to Law and Practice is an informative publication on its subject. 'Greene' denoting biodegradable practices, including trees as memorials instead of stones. It is available at £9.85 post free from the Natural Death Centre, 20 Heber Road, London, NW2 6AA.)

The proximity community of the Vanguard offers opportunities, greater than when members are left in comparative isolation, for them to opt out of the Democratic community in a variety of ways, and the more they can do this, the more they are seizing and exercising forms of power, placing implants of the new order of the future within the old order of the present. This process of penetration and replacement is also urged by the enlightened people associated with the Final Conflict magazine as their alternative to electioneering, and designated 'Counter Power' by them.

It can mean such things as members for their livelihood banding together in business ventures run on co-operative, profit-sharing lines. It can mean operating allotments and smallholdings for the organic cultivation of their own, chemically-free vegetables and fruit, and other, wholesome food from such as bees, poultry, rabbits and goats; thus freeing their bodies from the harmful products of Democracy's drug-dependent agriculture and commerce, alongside freeing their minds from its narcotic thought. It can mean support systems for members in need, social centres for their recreation including the arrangement of joint excursions and holidays, and much more.

THE VANGUARD SETTLEMENT

The third and more advanced form of community, beyond that of loose linkage in the first place and residential proximity in the second place, is that of a settlement, where people come to live together on common or adjoining ground, aiming at a high degree of self-sufficiency, the highest degree possible, in all aspects of life, and thereby creating something which is substantially a state within the state. This conception has an immediate and powerful allure, touching and arousing an idealistic strain in most people, and has indeed high potentialities as a means of introducing something of the new order now instead of leaving reform until, if ever, state power is attained by the ballot box. However, its offer of high rewards is matched by its imposition of high demands, so that it can very easily prove an all-absorbing impracticability, and over the years the rate of failure has been very high.

Thus anyone and everyone attracted to the idea should think long and hard to the necessary depth, realistically assessing what it takes to make the dream come true, and how far he or she measures up to what it takes. For instance, town dwellers need to be sure that they can adapt to the quiet of the countryside and the lack of urban facilities. There is the need here, as with every kind of project open to us, for a study group specialising in the subject, and analysing the reasons for past failures.

The last century saw many attempts to found Utopian colonies in the Americas. One of them was the attempt by anti-Jewish Bernhard Forster and his wife, Elisabeth, sister of the philosopher, Friedrich Nietsche, to establish the colony of Nueva Germania in Paraguay, described unsympathetically by a Ben Macintyre in his book, Forgotten Fatherland (Macmillan, 1992, £17.50, and paperback by Picador at £6.99). This colony has persisted in a forlorn fashion up to now, but as a lingering relic has now to be pronounced yet another failure.

In contrast to this folkish experiment, what have proved enduring have been settlements inspired by a Christian or other, religious communalism, such as that of the Amish. So a lesson here seems to be that an ethnic bond, even some extent of ideological bond, is not enough of an adhesive force permanently to withstand the strains of the situation with its hardships and deprivations. There has to be a sufficiently powerful, religious motivation present. This is where the Vanguard with its ideology of race transmuted to the extent of a religion has the necessary power of adhesion.

A quite recent attempt has been that of the NS Kindred at Volksberg in the U.S.A. which was set up in 1989 on 80 acres on a secluded, mountain ridge in California. It was not planned as a commune — which, although one form of community of high integration, is certainly not the only form — but as having, along with central accommodation for staff, a collection of separate homesteads with people going out to work in the surrounding locality, and an overflow even residing outside in that locality.

It created a 'Wotan School' for the children of its participants, and outlined its activity as follows:- 'The first hours of the morning (before breakfast) are dedicated to physical and spiritual training. The children begin the day with discussion of their spiritual heritage, Folk consciousness, and their own purpose in the service of the Folk --- The children begin their training with some difficult concentration exercises which develop and strengthen their nervous systems and mental and intuitional abilities. Next, they do a series of exercises designed to stretch, massage, and rejuvenate all of the joints, and especially the spinal column (also included are inverted exercises, which, using the law of gravity, flood the brain with blood, enriching it with oxygen and nutrients ---). After this, there are exercises for strength --- Finally the children jog and run to build their physical endurance --- After breakfast, the children begin their intellectual studies, which, besides reading, writing, mathematics, and other basics, includes German, music (singing and instruments), and survival training. This continues until mid-afternoon. The school day closes with additional physical and spiritual training.'

THE VOLKSBERG LESSON

Volksberg, after showing much promise for several years, has now sadly collapsed. It did not lack some measure of religious inspiration, though evidently not enough to compensate for the mistaken admission of persons with personality problems, including some of those posturing playboys to be described as 'Hollywood Nazis'. The disruption these misfits caused seems to have been the main, if not the sole reason for its failure. This experience underlines the supreme importance of selectivity respecting participants.

Another recent project, seemingly still continuing, has been the Cosmotheist Community of Dr William L. Pierce in the U.S.A. This was established in 1984 with the purchase of a 360-acre site on a mountain side in West Virginia, U.S.A., envisaginy homes, a community centre and a school. It has a firm, non-Christian, religious content.

Looking ahead, some may be superficially attracted to the idea of the extreme isolation from contemporary contamination offered by, for instance, some tiny Scottish island — such as Texa, one mile long, two miles from Islay, which came on the market in 1995 for £80,000 (around what it probably cost the BNP to contest the last General Election), If so, they need fully to understand how great are the difficulties of living in such a location, greater than the large ones respecting a settlement in a less remote and isolated situation. Moreover, extreme isolation is unlikely to allow, if needed, money-providing employment to be found outside the community. It does not conveniently allow unattached Vanguarders to visit for activities they cannot engage in on their own, and so have the benefit of a base there, and it does not conveniently allow those from other communities of the Vanguard to visit for liaison and co-operative purposes. Thirdly, it does not allow the community to generate by good behaviour useful goodwill in the immediate society outside.

Expanding on the last consideration, while certainly the purpose of the settlement is to facilitate detachment from the environment of Democracy as far as this benefits us, it is not to facilitate indulgence in any kind of silly behaviour which serves to alienate ordinary outsiders unnecessarily. Instead we have to be sensitive to the fact that, in practising the good order needed for the internal success of the settlement, we can be making successful propaganda to outsiders by the power of example, capable of eliciting at least respect, which is the basis for good relations useful to us now, and for some future development of useful sympathy.

With either a community of proximity or a settlement, and the concentration of persons that they provide, it is possible for participants to seek power in the outside society in the way of attaining positions of influence in the neighbouring locality, through the provision of and staffing of services of many kinds. This amounts to some extent of piecemeal take-over at grass roots now, based on the Vanguard community, and is a field of activity to be explored and pursued with imagination and enterprise.

Enough has been said in this article on overt activity, prior to a later one on covert activity, to refute the argument of the electioneering addicts that we have no practical alternative to their party game. In the immensity of its scope the task force has a proper place for everyone of quality prepared to work hard and fight hard for the salvation or our race. Even those too old or disabled to be active workers and fighters are not precluded, providing they are prepared to do whatever it is they can, as regularly as they can, to help active workers and fighters, including contributing money for their work and combat. Every passing day those of the task force need to stop and check how much they have done during the past 24 hours. Doing so, they fulfill the fact that membership of the Vanguard is not as with the ordinary, political organisations just a matter of signifying support on a form, and paying a petty subscription, and then remaining free to be as inactive as desired. To the contrary, Vanguard membership means solid service. It begins with solid service and it ceases without solid service. ❑

CIVIL WAR TWO.
THE COMING BREAKUP OF AMERICA

by Thomas W. Chittum

Mr. Chittum was a rifleman in the U.S. Army in Vietnam in 1965 and 1966, and served in the same category in the Rhodesian Territorials in the early 1970s, and also in the Croatian Army in 1991 and 1992, so he has had a lot of military experience. He believes America will first dissolve into increasingly warring factions, and then break apart. He believes that "historic, demographic, political, economic and military developments.....are relentlessly propelling America towards a second civil war." The very concept of multiethnic democracy will be gone forever.

Chittum says that the underlying cause of our approaching second civil war is "the very nature of our country and its peoples.....(we have) no common mythology, no common language (Spoanish is getting stronger every day), no common culture, no common history, and—most important—no common vision of (our) future."

The brown invasion from south of the Rio Grande is our most pressing immediate problem. In 1916, Pancho Villa and his banditos rode into Columbus, New Mexico shouting "Mata los gringos" (kill the gringos!), and kill them they did—17 in all, including women, before retreating back across the border. Gen. John J. Pershing took an army unit and went after them, but never could run Villa into the ground. Today, he is a Mexican folk hero.

There is a Mexican "Reconquista" going on in our Southwest. Under prescnt trends, Chittum holds that, long before 2050, they will be a majority in all of our Southwest. Once this happens, they won't have to learn English to work or collect welfare, so won't bother to. "White flight," already strong, will get stronger, and eventually, Anglos will have to learn Spanish to find work, and may have trouble even then. The Southwest will become a de facto province of Mexico.

Hispanic officials who have anything to do with border control will wink at immigration laws, and may even openly defy them. Illegal aliens will really flood across the border then.

Chittum points out that in the last serious Mexican revolution, which lasted from 1910 to around 1920, from one to two million Mexicans died, out of a population of just over 15 million. This was maybe, roughly, some 10% of the population. In America's first Civil War, we lost just 2%.

The border area is already a sinkhole of crime. In one 18 month period, over 100 Southern Pacific freight trains were looted.

In 1991, whites were no longer a majority in New Mexico. Around 2006, Hispanics will become the actual majority of the state population. By 1996, about half the first graders in Texas were brownies. In 1994, for the first time, more of these racial aliens were added to the nation's population than whites.

There is a campus-based group of Chicanos that advocates an independent Hispanic nation in the Southwest, to be named "Aztlan." This movement will continue to gain strength from both legal and illegal immigration, and white flight.

All that the browns are doing is not lost on blacks; they smell blood, too. By 2050, under present trends, they will be the majority in the states of the deep South. Whites will increasingly flee to more and more enclaves; and, as conditions worsen, form self-defense militias. Negroes will form their own militias, to try and counter them .

Clashes will increase. In white areas, most of the police will be white, and in the negro areas, most of them will be black. Thus the stage will be set for white-black clashes between the police.

The National Guard will be mostly white in some areas, and mostly black in others. How can it act in a unified manner to put down racial troubles if it itself is rent with racial dissentions?

And what of regular army, navy and air-force personnel? Same thing there—shot through and through with racial aliens; with, of course, some units much worse off than others. By 1996, our army stood at about 40% minority. By 2050, under present trends, it will be 80%. Looked at another way, for every white soldier there will be 2 black and 2 Hispanic soldiers.

The federal government itself will be in the same boat. Already there are many coloreds in it, and they will be even more numerous by the time Civil War Two starts.

Polarization will increase among civilian militias, police, National Guard Units, regular military units, and civilian government officials on local, state and national levels. Dissention will accelerate, guerrilla warfare will speed up, and finally, civil war will break out.

Many of the heavy weapons used in the war will come from our military bases that are overrun. Chittum points out that, "in Civil War I, all but three federal military bases in the South were quickly captured by state National Guards or cobbled together militias, and the heavy weapons taken provided the backbone of the new Confederate Army."

Remember, in this coming civil war, many of the defenders of these bases will be co-ethnics of the attackers, may slip them information, and, when the shooting starts, desert with their weapons, and maybe even turn them on their own comrades and officers.

Our Civil War Two will be more like our wars against the Indians than our Civil War I. The more dissimilar the combatants are, the worse the fighting usually is. Civil War I was plenty violent, but wasn't vicious. Torture was rare, as was mutilation of bodies.

In Civil War I, when Vicksburg surrendercd, the starving defenders were fed, not raped and murdered. In Civil War Two, citizens of a new "Vicksburg" are much more likely to be mistreated.

Chittum does not believe that civil war will occur for at least another 15 years. Since his book was written in 1996, this would put it at 2011. Although he meant all-out war, he does think there will be "straws-in-the-wind" before that time—increasingly violent riots, confrontatians and other troubles.

When the big war starts, Chittum believes its epicenter will be Los Angeles, and if he had to be more specific, and pick a month, day and year, plus a time and exact spot, he would say May 5, 2020, about midnight, at the Ruben Salazar Park.

Chittum gaes into a lot of detail about enclaves, territory, population shifts, demographics and the way a map of the U.S. may look after CW Two ends and the dust settles. He colors in a Caucasian nation, Hispanic nation and black nation.

Although no percentages are given, by looking at the map it appears that Mexicans will take over about half the state of California, which will be basicly the southern portion and around 2/3 of the coastal area, about 2/3 of Arizona, something like 80% of New Mexico, approximately 70% of Texas and their kinsmen—Hispanics—will take the southern half of Florida.

Negroes get some 20% of Texas (east side), all of Louisiana, about half of Arkansas, nearly all of Mississippi, about 80% each of Alabama and Georgia, about 95% of So. Carolina, the largest portions of No. Carolina and Virginia, and all of Maryland.

The rest would go to whites, which appears to be about 75%. Of the total colored territory, it looks like it is split about 50-50 between Mexicans/Hispanics and negroes. No territory is projected for Asians, any other coloreds, or native Indians, probably because there is no telling where they will wind up.

When Mexico became independent of Spain in 1821, the government tried to get its own people to go in and settle up Texas, but not many wanted to go, as they were afraid of the Comanches. So, whites from the U.S. were invited in as settlers, and many came, because they had courage enough to take on the Indians. In fact, so many white settlers came that the Mexican Government became alarmed, and wanted to change its policy, but it was too late, and "the die was cast." This was one of the causes of the Mexican War of 1846-48.

At any rate, Chittum's speculations about territorial acquisitions are only a rough blueprint, and he allows that, since nobody can predict the exact outcome of a war, the actual war may turn cut to be quite different. One thing that will have great bearing on it will be the fighting abilities of the browns and the blacks.

Regarding the former, Geronimo had a very low opinion of Mexicans as warriors, and maybe he was right. In the Mexican War, whites never had any advantage in either men or cannon, and were sometimes outnumbered 5-to-1, yet never lost a battle. Palo Alto, Resaca, de Palma, Monterrey, Buena Vista, Vera Cruz, Cerro Gordo, Mexico City—the Americans pushed right on in to the capitol itself, and the Mexicans sued for peace. The war was over.

As for blacks, under skilled leadership (usually this means white leadership), they sometimes make good soldiers; but, left to themselves, general negro incompetence makes them poor prospects for dealing with logistics or anything else that calls for much in the way of tactics, strategy and planning.

Some may say: "But what about Toussaint l'Ouverture? Didn't he defeat the best soldiers that Napoleon could throw at him, in Haiti? No, he did not. Yellow fever defeated the French. In 1801, Napoleon sent an expeditionary force. General Leclerc and 25,000 men landed at Cap Francais. They defeated Toussaint and his blacks and drove them into the interior. That would have ended it had not yellow fever come along. 22,000 French soldiers died from it. The remaining 3,000 were not killed hy the negro army, but were too weak to fight, and had to evacuate the island in 1803.

Most of us have heard the old saying: "Never underestimate your opponent." True enough! So, if we should go to war against browns and blacks, we should go into it assuming that they are the best soldiers in the world.

I have a high opinion of the book Civil War Two, and am pretty much in agreement with Chittum on everything except the amount of territory he expects the coloreds to wind up with, after the dust settles. And while he may very well be right, I expect them to get less than he does.

This is if the war starts within 15 or 20 years, as he expects it to. But if it doesn't start until, say, around mid-century or later, the coloreds are likely to wind up with even more than he expects.

Right now we whites are being squeezed and mongrelized out of existence by the encroaching and rapid-breeding coloreds. As frightening as another civil war in the U.S. is, it might be the only thing that can save us. This is because the present government, whose policies have been the main cause of the problem, will most likely cease to exist when hostilities end, and each warring faction will then have its own government. And whatever new government we whites may wind up with, it will almost certainly be a very different one than our present government.

Very different, and for the better, because it will not be dominated by white renegades and race traitors.

Red Dawn

Movie Review:

The Boxer

by Guillermo Coletti

I've told all my friends to see "The Boxer". There are many good reasons to see this movie but perhaps the most important is that it gives a realistic picture of modernlife struggle for ethnic liberty. The focus is on the Irish British conflict, so often disguised and misinterpreted as one of religious substance. Two groups of White people are fighting for different aims, one for independence and the other for Imperialism. The IRA freedom fighters resort to unconventional guerilla methods of warfare just as, as history proves, all freedom fighters have done in the past. The original Ku Klux Klan used similar unorthodox fighting methods to resist Northern occupational forces, only limited and adapted to what was available to them in 1865. In the 1980's the US government bankrolled the "contra" guerillas to overthrow the government of Nicaragua but, intentionally or unintentionally, they failed. About the Brits it must be said that although they have not hesitated greatly on granting independence to every congoidal and mongrelized colony they might have had at one point, from India to Belize, they're holding on firmly to Northern Ireland to the bitter end. Personally speaking, I would like to see a friendly end to the story, since I'm sensitive to all Aryan casualties, but it doesn't appear it will be that way. I think it is insane to maintain this sort of disputes among brother or cousin Aryan peoples. We could be using this amount of energy and tenacity to take back colonies in Africa and Asia or, better yet, kicking the nonAryans out of our lands.

The movie shows, in a manner I believe sober and accurate, many aspects of everyday life under military occupation. Enthusiasts who talk about Civil War and Race War should see it, if only to enrich with a boost of realism their visualization of the upcoming clash. We will always have wars and nothing indicates the contrary; after all, wars have resolved more serious conflicts than anything else. But how will it be when war will no longer be fought in faraway "exotic" lands, when it will happen at home? Everything will then change, and the ability of each individual to play the games of the jungle will be the key to survival.

Pumping iron at Gold's all day and stuffing ourselves with Creatine won't cut it. Vietnam proved that. Barefooted little malnourished gooks put up a hell of a fight. And they had the best possible reason for that: motivation. War for them was not just a "tour" in Indonesia; they were Indonesia. To win a war it is crucial to embrace the right state of mind. The enemy always has to be destroyed and might is always right.

"The Boxer" depicts Irish people of different generations who have been living through this virtual state of war since the 1960's. Central to the story are the wives of the prisoners and their remarkable dedication. These Aryan heroines stand by their men under the most ferocious circumstances and still manage to raise their children with a sense of pride and dignity. It is apparent that the American subculture has not hit hard the lifestyle of the Irish. Also shown is the solidarity of the comrades on the outside with those inside the dungeons of the Iron Heel. Let's face it, in a Civil War when a brother gets caught by enemy forces somebody has to provide for his family. The guys in the Mafia have understood that fact since before Al Capone. Honor is more important than edicts or executive orders. Why? Simply because selfpreservation is dependent on it, that's why. Everything changes in real war. For instance, there's no tolerance for traitors. Eisenhower signed the execution order for Pvt. Slovick, who was AWOL, during World War II. A traitor is under all circumstances a lesser man whose life no one really cares about, with the exception of, in some cases, his own mother. Jews are also unforgiving with their traitors; they should not be expected to be otherwise.

Watching "The Boxer" will be a good exercise for all dissidents. Again, I encourage you all to see it, not to frighten anyone but to rush the will and the determination to fight for liberty. The day will come when everyone will be put to the test. On that day it won't be sufficient to be loyal, it will also be necessary to be surrounded by others equally devoted, from a girlfriend or wife to the comrades in the three men cell.

Although the main character in the story is, of course, Danny Flynn, the boxer, interpreted by Daniel Day Lewis, an array of characters are to be given special attention. Harry is an uncompromising regional IRA boss who steps a few times out of the lines drawn by his boss; although undisciplined, he is, without a doubt, a man who lives for the struggle. The IRA leader is interpreted flawlessly as a man with strong devotion to his cause, while caring for his family and the loved ones of his comrade soldiers. An irregular army needs as much discipline and understanding of rank as any other army, and that is also clearly represented in this film.

This is not a movie for those seeking hightech excitement, but a perfect one for those searching folk heroes. Finally, the movie review wouldn't be complete without mentioning the great performance of many beautiful Irish gals who carry not a single drop of Cherokee blood. What a treat to the eyes!

"The free man is a warrior. He tramples ruthlessly upon that contemptible kind of comfort that grocers, Christians, cows, women, Englishmen and other democrats worship."

Friedrich Nietzsche, The Twilight of the Idols, 1889.

Deutschland Erwache!

6,500 Aryans Gather at Passau

by Guillermo Coletti

On Saturday February 7, 1998, the German city of Passau was host to a gathering organized by the National Democratic Party. 6,500 Aryans attended the nine hour long rally called "A Day of National Resistance", which took place at the Nibelungenhalle. The NDP is the party of Guenther Deckert, a nonviolent political dissident currently imprisoned by the Bonn regime.

The Iron Heel kept 1,000 people from attending the rally. Many buses were searched and detained by security forces until moments after the meeting. Radical "antifas" (antiFascists) managed to prevent many other buses from arriving at Passau. They sabotaged tires, roads and in some cases they fired flare guns at a number of bus conductors. Most European "antifas" are Jews, SHARPs (Skinheads Against Racial Prejuice), homosexuals, lesbians, junkies and radical leftists, just like their American counterparts.

The political police, officially present at the encounter, didn't allow representatives of foreign organizations to speak. The excuse given was that they could have voiced opinions that, although legal outside Germany, were forbidden within German territory. This action may be used to illustrate the climate of oppression and the dangers faced by the German people who attended the meeting, who did so at the expense of risking prison, political persecution, police raids and torture, which is becoming a frequent tool of "political persuasion" in democratic Germany. In 1997 alone, 6,300 Germans were prosecuted for nonviolent expressions of political and historical dissent.

The Speakers

Udo Voigt, NPD President, stated that "the NDP is no longer just a national party, it is a party with a cosmosvision." He also imposed a 500 Deutsch Mark "defamation tax" to the members of the occupied media who wanted to cover the event.

Comrade Manfred Roeder was greeted by a standing ovation. He mentioned that "Germany had become a supermarket to the world where all the dispossessed people of the world are invited!".

Other speeches were given by Jürgen Rieger, Prof. Weinschenk, Herbert Schweiger, Frank Schwerdt and Christian Wendt (from the BerlinerBrandenburger Zeitung). Live music was provided by Frank Rennicke (patriotic folk singer) and other comrades.

It is my personal opinion that this event will be seen in days to come as a turning point in Germany. Our comrades are no longer thinking and acting in terms of small, secretive meetings in beer halls. This has demonstrated that there is power behind our movement and that only the tip of the iceberg has been disclosed. We will soon see a difference between prePassau and postPassau events in Germany. Our traditional enemies are speechless, they just don't know what to make of this. Perhaps there is in this event a lesson for us to learn as well.

The NPD has already announced a massive demonstration for May 1st, in Leipzig. Let the games begin!

A website from NS comrades in Argentina has an extensive report in Spanish and three nice and clear photos of the event. Check it out at:

Information in the German language can be found at: abbc.com/nj

The official NPD site, which of course has a German language report on the Passau rally, can be linked from abbc.com/nj

The media have done a good job at keeping the American people uninformed. Do your part: distribute this report as much as you can.

Racism:
The Will Of Nature

By

David Myatt

Introduction

For too long, the Aryan race — the European or White race — has been on the defensive in the racial war which has already begun. In Europe itself, this racial war began after the Second World War with the migration into Aryan lands of millions upon millions of non-Aryans. If current trends continue, then in less than fifty years time, the majority of people in a once Aryan country like Britain will be non-Aryan.

For decades, Aryans have been indoctrinated — in schools, in colleges, through the medium of television, radio, newspapers and film — with anti-Aryan race-mixing propaganda. This race-mixing, so-called "anti-racist" propaganda was designed to mentally control Aryans; it was designed to make Aryans feel guilty about their own Aryan heritage, their own Aryan culture and their own Aryan customs. This sinister propaganda was designed to pacify Aryans, and force them to accept, and integrate with, the millions upon millions of non-Aryan immigrants. This government-sanctioned, government-controlled propaganda has been so successful, that few Aryans today know what their own unique Aryan customs are . Instead, Aryans have been educated to accept what is basically an un-Aryan society. This un-Aryan society is the multi-racial society we have today, and this society itself has been deliberately created — deliberately forced upon Aryans.

To force racial integration, and to create a multi-racial society, the post-War governments of every Aryan nation introduced tyrannical social legislation which forbid "racial discrimination" (on pain of imprisonment) and which set up with government funds various agencies, tribunals, councils and other groups to promote and protect the "rights" of these immigrants and to grant them favours denied to the Aryan majority. Furthermore, tyrannical social laws were introduced into every Aryan nation (with the sole exception of America) which made it illegal, a criminal offence, for Aryans to speak out in public against this foreign invasion of their lands. Other, even more tyrannical laws were introduced which made it illegal to publish or even possess literature which was critical of this invasion and the invaders. Other, equally tyrannical laws were introduced which forbid protest marches against this invasion, which forbid public meetings critical of this invasion, and which gave the pro-immigrant, anti-Aryan Police forces Stalinist-type powers to conduct "dawn raids" and take away for interrogation, using whatever force was necessary, anyone suspected of being involved with "racist groups".

Together with all these pro-immigrant, anti-Aryan laws, even more tyrannical laws were introduced which made Aryan customs illegal — which stripped Aryans of their natural and ancient rights and privileges. In effect, all these social laws prohibited any show of Aryan pride, any display of Aryan culture, as they suppressed Aryan culture and Aryan customs themselves. This is exactly what these modern social laws were designed, and are enforced, to do — to deprive Aryans of their traditions, their heritage, their culture, their customs, their basic rights and freedoms, while giving more and more rights and more and more freedom to non-Aryans.

All this race-mixing propaganda, all these anti-Aryan social laws have been, and are, a means to try and control, to tame and tyrannize, to subjugate the Aryan race. In the society of today, "fighting racism" has become a priority — by which the tyrannical governments, and their lackeys, mean "fighting Aryan pride, Aryan culture and the Aryan way of life, for the benefit of non-Aryans." The final assault on what remains of our freedom has begun. Those few Aryans who resist the mental and physical tyranny of the anti-Aryan governments are now under increasing attack.

This present work — a compilation of militant, revolutionary articles mostly from The National-Socialist — is a weapon designed to help Aryans fight the anti-Aryan tyranny which has been created. As such, it is a "call to arms". It is the voice of Aryan freedom — and a defiance of the tyrannical anti-Aryan governments of occupation which now rule over our Aryan people. This work explains in words which cannot be mis-understood the suppressed truths of these anti-Aryan tyrannical times we live in: truths such as "racism is the will of Nature", how racial prejudice is natural and necessary, and why it is natural, healthy and necessary for us to hate our enemies.

I

A Natural Reaction

It is natural and healthy for the healthy, vigorous individuals of a particular folk to be intolerant towards and to fight foreigners who settle or who want to settle in the land where that folk dwells.

A folk is a living community bound by ties of blood, and the individuals of such a living racial community share a common heritage and a common culture. That is, they share the same spirit, ethos, or racial instincts. In truth, a folk — a race united by a shared ethos — is a living being which the individuals of that folk are part of. This truth of a folk as a living being is the suppressed and feared heresy of our times.

Because a folk is a living being, it can be healthy, as it can be sick or diseased. A healthy folk is a vigorous folk where the individuals of that folk feel or share a sense of Destiny and a sense of identity. They belong, have a sense of pride, and are prepared to place the interests of their folk — the Destiny, the future, of their folk — before their own self-interest, and even before their own lives. For a healthy folk, this sense of vigour, this sense of pride and this sense of Destiny are often instinctive, and one can go so far as to say that as long as the majority of people of a particular folk have, act on and live by their natural and healthy racial instincts, then their folk is healthy. Furthermore, a healthy folk desires to expand — it desires to propagate itself, to live on and to expand into, or colonize, new territories. It is the natural Destiny of a vigorous healthy folk to expand, at the expense of others, just as it is natural for a healthy folk to defend itself from that which or those who would destroy it or make it ill.

A sick, diseased or ailing folk is an insular, inward-looking folk whose individuals are more interested in themselves than they are in the future and the Destiny of their folk. A sick, diseased or ailing folk is a folk whose individuals are tolerant of foreigners who settle or who want to settle in the native lands of that folk. A sick, diseased or ailing folk is a folk where the individuals no longer fervently desire war, glory and conquest but instead yearn for peace and a personal happiness.

Just as it is natural for our own healthy bodies to fight an infection, an illness — an invading organism which seeks to do us harm and which desires to prosper at our expense — so it is natural for the individuals of a healthy folk to fight those whose very presence in the body of the folk can harm or will harm that folk. The body of the folk is the homelands — the fatherland — where that folk dwell.

As we know, our fatherlands have been and still are being invaded by those who belong to other living beings, other races. It is natural that these other races do this, or try to do this — for that is part of the Destiny of their own race, their own unique living organism which they are part of. Nature knows nothing of sentiment. There is only the hard, brutal survival of some at the expense of others, with the more vigorous, the more healthy, surviving and prospering. We cannot blame the invaders for invading or wanting to invade our territories — for it is in their nature that they do this, or try to do this. If our own unique folk is to survive and prosper, then it must defend itself, as it must be vigorous, aggressive and conquering. The individuals of our folk must learn once again to listen to and act upon their own natural and healthy instincts. In this natural battle for survival, any and all means are justified — for there is only the hard fact, either we as a race will survive or we as a race will allow ourselves to be dominated and eventually die out.

To survive — given the situation that now exists in our fatherlands — we must make our folk strong again by letting the fever of our ancestral warrior blood sweep and rage through them. We must rouse ourselves from our stupor, from the sickbed where our Zionist commissars have kept us for so long. Our folk has been stupefied by the drugs of "materialism", "capitalism" and "racial equality" our enemies have given us to keep us docile and sleepy. We must break out from the prison-hospital — our present anti-Aryan society — the Zionists have confined us to and have built specially to house us in the hope of destroying our racial vigour and our Destiny.

The healthy, vigorous individuals of our own folk — of our own Aryan race — who act on their natural and healthy aggressive, intolerant, instincts are the best; they are the type of individual our race needs in this crises, this war for survival.

We cannot afford to practice tolerance toward what is making us ill and what could destroy us, as we cannot afford to play the useless and unfair "electoral game" which our enemies have created to divert us and which they allow us to play so that we can squander our energies in a futile way. For a race or folk striving to exist and striving to prosper, tolerance is a weakness, and prejudice is a strength. Tolerance is basically a disease, an infection, which weakens the folk and the individuals of that folk by making them ill, by turning them against their own natural and healthy racial instincts. Those of our own people who preach and who practice tolerance, and those who preach and who practice "multi-racialism", are diseased; they are a contagious infection. And this contagious infection has been deliberately injected into the body of our folk by those natural enemies of ours, the Zionists. They have injected this disease into our folk to weaken us, to make us ill, thus allowing them to control us.

Our enemies desire to keep us weak and enslaved, which is why they have had their infected collaborators introduce repressive laws into our fatherlands. These Zionist inspired laws have been designed to try and control us — for our enemies fear that we who are still strong will rouse our people into taking the direct action which is necessary and which is the natural, healthy response to the threat our race now faces. Thus have these enemies of our race created a tyrannical, repressive State where such a healthy response and where our natural and healthy racial instincts have been made illegal.

To win this war of survival, we must recover our strength — we must show our people the way to be healthy and strong. This means us and them re-discovering our natural and healthy racial instincts, as it means us and them acting on the basis of these instincts. For it is these racial instincts which alone can save our race, and which alone can give our race a glorious future.

These Aryan instincts of ours are:

(1) It is natural and healthy for us to discriminate in favour of our own kind. It is natural and healthy to place our own folk before those of other races, and to want and desire to live among our own kind.

(2) It is natural and healthy to hate sworn enemies and to want to see them defeated and conquered.

(3) It is natural and healthy to want to kill, with our own hands, our sworn enemies, as it is natural and healthy to joyfully celebrate such a killing.

(4) It is natural and healthy to use violence to defend ourselves, our family, our kin, our comrades and our clan or tribe.

(5) It is natural and healthy for us to form ourselves into armed groups, or clans; to give our allegiance to these groups and to enjoy fighting as part of this group. It is natural and healthy for us to be enthusiastic about combat, battles and war and to desire to actively partake in such things. It is natural and healthy for us to condemn as weak and cowardly any person who does not share our lust for combat and battle.

(6) It is natural and healthy for us to — from time to time — give vent to our vitality and aggression by riotous celebration and feasting.

(7) It is natural and healthy for us to carry weapons to defend ourselves, our family and our kin, as it is natural and healthy to skilfully use whatever weapon we carry and if necessary injure, maim or kill anyone or any persons who attack us, our family or our kin.

(8) It is natural and healthy for us to stalk and kill animals for food, as it is natural and healthy for us to hunt enemies and kill them.

(9) It is natural and healthy for us to prefer deeds — action — to words and to distrust those who speak too glibly or too much, as it is natural and healthy to take pride in being tough and to scorn those who lack self-discipline and who prefer comfort and security to duty and adventure.

II

Racial War!

It is time for plain, honest speaking; it is the time to write the truth, regardless of the consequences. The truth is that we Aryans must now take part in the war which other races have, both knowingly and unknowingly, declared against us, and which they are already fighting.

The truth is that the invasion of our Aryan fatherlands, our Aryan homelands, is a racial declaration of war by non-Aryan races. They have invaded our territory, our lands. They are expanding at our expense. Gangs of them are now trying to control the streets of our lands and carve out their own territories which they rule. So it is that these negro and Asian gangs are trying to intimidate Aryans, as the members of these gangs actively hate Aryans and wish to humiliate them. These gangs are now actually laughing at us, for they have sensed how tame, how domesticated, how weak and cowardly the majority of Aryan men have become.

To do anything other than fight in this war for the holy cause of Aryan survival and Aryan freedom is sheer cowardice; it is dishonourable and un-Aryan. To do anything now other than fight is to live and act like a sub-human; it is to be weak.

The truth is that we need to reclaim our lands. The truth is that our race now needs a revolutionary political movement behind which our race can unite and which can show by example what our Aryan nature really is — it is war-like; it is superior. The time for playing safe political games by the rules of our Zionist enemies is over. What we do not need is an ordinary "political party" — for we must now change the White man's thinking and help him recover his ancient courage. There must now be a holy war against our enemies, for these enemies are threatening our very racial existence, as they and their allies are intent on taming the Aryan race and keeping it enslaved.

The truth is that we Aryans are the superior race. Other races are inferior to us in what matters — in courage, in heroism, in inventiveness, in reason, in nobility, and in honour. Other races lack our Aryan sense of fairness, our Aryan sense of natural justice. Other races lack our Aryan sense of honour and our ability to reason. When we Aryans are true to our own Aryan nature — our honourable warrior nature — we are invincible. We have dominated other races in the past, created civilizations and Empires, because of our Aryan nature — because we are prepared to die rather than submit; because we are prepared to "fight to the last man"; because we can be, if necessary, utterly ruthless "when our blood is boiling"; and because we can "outwit and outfight our enemies" in battle and combat.

It is natural, necessary and healthy that we should be intolerant towards other races. It is natural, necessary and healthy that we should be prejudiced against them and not wish to mix with them or live among them or even near them. It is natural, necessary and healthy for us to be proud of our own race, our own racial heritage and the racial achievements of our ancestors. The truth is that such intolerance and such prejudice against other races is not "brutish bigotry" but the natural response of a healthy, vigorous race to an invader. This response is exactly what happens when the healthy cells of our own individual bodies detect an invading and harmful organism like a virus and react to it; they defend the body and seek to destroy or repel or triumph over the invading organism. If they fail in this battle, the body falls ill and may die. If they succeed, the body recovers and is healthy and strong again. The feared and suppressed truth of these times we live in is that our own race, our own unique folk, is a living organism. Thus, when we defend our own race, our own racial health, by fighting those who are invading our fatherlands — who are invading the living body of our folk — then we are doing what is natural, necessary and healthy. We are doing what is civilized and wise. To do otherwise, is to be weak and ill, and is unnatural: it is against Nature herself. It is those who encourage such things as "race-mixing" and who seek to outlaw such things as "racial hatred" and "racial discrimination" who are unnatural, uncivilized and brutish.

The truth is that our Zionist enemies want us, as Aryans, to be sick and ill; they want us to be tame and servile. Thus have they created the type of society we have today, with its materialistic values and its obsession with wealth, power, comfort and "sex". Thus have these Zionists had their tame politicians and their lackeys introduce repressive "racial hatred", "Public Order" and "Criminal Justice" laws which are intended to mentally and spiritually castrate the Aryan race. These laws have been designed, and are enforced, to control us, to make us ill — they have been designed to suppress the natural, healthy response of our folk to an invasion by other races. They have been designed to undermine, suppress and destroy our natural, healthy warrior nature, our warrior intolerance, our warrior hatred, our lust for battle, our Aryan honour.

The truth is that our Zionist enemies — and their lackeys and allies — have used and are using non-Aryan races to destroy our Aryan civilization, our Aryan society and our Aryan race itself. These invading races are the conscripted armies which the Zionist "Generals" — far from the "front-line" — command, and which they exploit and use to achieve Zionist goals. The uniform of the soldiers of this Zionist invasion force is the colour of their skin. There has been wave after wave of invasion — and little real Aryan resistance to these invasions, so tame, so domesticated, so cowardly and so weak have the majority of Aryans become. There has been so little resistance in fact, that the Zionist Generals have been able to establish "Occupation Governments" in Aryan lands, with the help and assistance of hundreds of thousands of Aryan traitors and "Zionist agents" who have done and who are doing what the Zionists want them to do in Aryan lands.

The weapons used by this invasion force are both ancient and modern. The ancient weapons — used mostly by the "front-line" street gangs — are barbaric violence, intimidation, fear and the occupation of Aryan territory. The main modern weapon is a slow racial genocide, the slow destruction of the Aryan race through an ever-decreasing pure Aryan birth-rate, through an ever-increasing non-Aryan birth-rate, and through "assimilation" — race-mixing — with the invaders. Make no mistake — this new weapon of slow racial genocide is just as deadly, just as destructive, as a modern "atomic bomb". The body of our Aryan folk is slowly but surely dying — just as an individual slowly but surely dies when exposed to a deadly amount of atomic radiation.

Since these foreigners are an invasion force, since there is now a war, and since we do live under a tyrannical Zionist Occupation Government, we have no choice but to actively fight for our freedom, our race and our lands. We must fight the non-Aryan invaders who have settled in our lands. We must fight the Aryan traitors in our midst who have betrayed our race. We must fight those who fraternize with the invaders. We must fight anyone who sides with the enemy, who enforces the tyrannical anti-Aryan laws of the enemy or who does any work for the enemy. We must also severely deal with anyone who betrays us, or our holy cause.

In these desperate, tyrannical times there is one simple rule — anyone who upholds Aryan values, who champions the Aryan race, is our ally, and anyone who upholds or champions what is un-Aryan is our sworn enemy.

III

The Freedom To Hate

As will be explained, racism is the will of Nature. It is natural and necessary for us to hate, just as "racism" itself is natural, necessary and good. It is natural, and necessary — and indeed, a moral duty — for us both as individuals, and collectively as a folk or race, to feel hatred toward enemies, and those people or those things which are harmful to us. Hatred is an aid to survival. Our moral duty, our natural duty as a people — as a folk or race — is to survive, to prosper and to evolve, for it is race-mixing (and thus the destruction of race) which is the ultimate evil. Race-mixing is a crime against life itself; it is a crime against Nature, for race is how Nature works. Race is how Nature is manifest to us, and in us. Race is evolution in action. Race is an expression of life. Race, expressed simply, is the ultimate meaning of our lives. For the true, the natural, purpose of our lives as individuals is to aid our own race, aid its unique Destiny, and help our race evolve still further. The ultimate purpose of our individuals lives is not, as the ignorant and the deluded believe, to simply indulge ourselves, to "be happy" or to acquire possessions or wealth. Our ultimate purpose is to aid Nature, and those things which express or manifest Nature: for we ourselves, and our folk, our race, are Nature.

It is those who deny the existence of human races, and those who seek to destroy those races through the crime of race-mixing who are ignorant, immoral, unnatural and evil.

It is tolerance of other races which have settled or which are settling in one's own racial homeland which is unnatural and a crime against Nature herself. Hatred is a means to preserve the race; it is Nature's survival mechanism. Thus, those who instinctively hate foreign invaders are acting in accord with Nature, while those who tolerate the invaders, who mix with them or who breed with them are acting in an unnatural way, and are destroying Nature. The criminals who indulge in or who support race-mixing do more damage to Nature than those selfish, greedy individuals who despoil, pollute, damage and destroy the environment for profit or commercial gain.

So-called "racial hatred" — and "racism" itself — are Nature's way of protecting her creations, and protecting herself. Racism is Nature's way of trying to ensure that race survives. As such, racism is an expression of what is necessary, what is moral and what is good.

The modern "hate laws" which our modern politicians have introduced into modern societies are an expression of the sickness, the weakness of those politicians and these societies. Such unnatural "hate laws" — which, for example make inciting racial hatred a modern social "crime" — are also and most importantly repressive and tyrannical.

Such "hate laws" have been created, and are enforced by the Police and the Courts, to take away our fundamental right to hate our enemies and those things which are harmful to us. Such "hate laws" have taken away our natural, necessary and fundamental freedom to hate our enemies. Such "hate laws" have been created, and are enforced, to tame and domesticate us — to make us weak and ill and unable to defend ourselves against our enemies. The truth is that our modern societies are the creation of those who are, and who have been, the enemies of Nature, the enemies of life itself. These enemies have socially engineered these modern, unnatural and immoral societies by introducing what are tyrannical laws and tyrannical social policies designed to encourage and to enforce the natural crime, the evil, the vice of race-mixing.

For decades, the evil enemies of Nature have tried to indoctrinate, to mentally condition people — to "brainwash" them — into accepting the unnatural and evil lie that "all races are equal" and into accepting the evil lie that racial difference is only a matter of the "colour of a person's skin". The truth — heretical and suppressed in these tyrannical times of ours — is that races are very different, and these differences are natural and necessary. Furthermore, these racial differences are fundamental, and have to do with character, with identity, with soul (or ethos), and with Destiny. These fundamental differences express who we, as individuals, are and what our purpose, our Destiny is. To ignore these differences, or try and destroy them through the crime of race-mixing, is to undermine or destroy Nature's purpose.

For decades, the evil enemies of Nature who have socially engineered our modern race-mixing societies, have tried to undermine and destroy Aryan racial awareness, Aryan pride, Aryan culture and Aryan identity. To do this — to weaken, enslave and try to destroy the Aryan race — they invented and used the sociological myth of "racism is wrong". Thus have they, and those knowingly or unknowingly doing their evil, unnatural work, tried to make Aryans feel guilty about their own natural and healthy racial instincts.

However, in our modern socially engineered societies, to be a racist, to have the instincts, the pride or the hate of a racist, is to act in accord with the natural will of Nature. It is Nature's will, Nature's purpose or intent, for us to discriminate against other races, and to want to place our own people first. It is Nature's will, Nature's intent, for us to be proud of our race, our own racial culture, and intolerant of other races and their culture. It is Nature's will, Nature's intent, for us to fight — if necessary ruthlessly — those people, those races, and those things which would take away, suppress or destroy our own racial identity, and our unique and special racial Destiny, our will to survive, flourish and evolve as a separate race. It is Nature's will, Nature's intent, for each race to have its own homeland, its own separate fatherland, where it can survive, flourish and evolve. We must never forget, and never tire of saying to others, that racism is the will of Nature, and that race-mixing is the ultimate crime against Nature, the ultimate evil.

Those of our own people who encourage race-mixing, and who persecute racists, are either ignorant fools unknowingly doing the bidding of the evil enemies of Nature, or they do not really care about Nature, and life, because they are too busy indulging themselves and too busy trying to find a mythical personal "happiness".

Racism is an expression of evolution — of the urge toward difference, toward a higher life. Racism expresses the instinct to preserve difference, identity and Destiny. Racism expresses the natural honourable duty an individual has to their own folk, their own race, and to the Destiny of that race. As such, racism is civilized, while race-mixing is the ultimate act of dishonourable selfishness. Race-mixing is a neglect of duty, and a neglect of Nature. Because of this, race-mixing is an act of sub-human decadence and a return to barbarism.

IV
National-Socialism: The Aryan Way Of Life

(1) National-Socialism is an expression of the Destiny of the Aryan race. It expresses the natural desire of healthy, noble Aryans to live among their own kind, to preserve and extend their unique race and their unique culture, and to prosper and evolve still further in accord with the laws of Nature and in accord with the unique Destiny of the Aryan. According to National-Socialism, this Aryan Destiny is to civilize: to explore, to know, to conquer, to quest after new adventures and new frontiers.

Fundamentally, National-Socialism expresses what it means to be Aryan, and is a guide to the Aryan way of life.

(2) National-Socialism is an expression of the desire of healthy, noble Aryans to be free and to live in a socially just society. National-Socialism expresses the desire of healthy, noble Aryans to be able to live in an Aryan society where Aryan values and Aryan customs are upheld.

National-Socialism regards all present societies where Aryans live as anti-Aryan, as decadent, as ignoble and as repressive. All these societies are dedicated to the suppression of Aryan values, Aryan customs and Aryan culture itself. These societies, by their very nature and their unnatural social laws are harmful to Aryans, the Aryan race itself and the Aryan way of life. Accordingly, National-Socialism seeks the revolutionary overthrow of these decadent and un-Aryan societies and regards any means as justified in the war for Aryan survival and Aryan freedom.

(3) National-Socialism expresses, affirms and champions Aryan values over and above other values. These Aryan values are what express the soul, the character, the nature of the Aryan, and thus represent what it means to be Aryan.

These values are fundamentally honour, loyalty, duty. As such, they express and represent the noble warrior spirit. This noble, Aryan warrior spirit, or ethos, is totally opposed to the usury of capitalism, and in place of present societies built upon or dependent upon the usury of debt and interest, and thus dependent upon money and "International Finance", National-Socialism seeks to create an entirely new society founded upon honest work and concern for the welfare of the Aryan folk where the slavery of debt and interest would be abolished.

(4) National-Socialism expresses and affirms that race is of fundamental importance. To affirm race, is to affirm life itself, and the evolution of life toward a higher existence. To affirm race is to affirm and champion Nature, for race is how Nature works, and how Nature is manifest to us, and in us, as individuals.

Thus National-Socialism champions racial difference and diversity, and the creation of a separate ethnic homeland for Aryans, and Aryans only.

(5) National-Socialism expresses and affirms the importance of individual character. The most fundamental principle of National-Socialism is that individuals can change themselves for the better through an act — through the triumph — of individual will and through being inspired by idealism. This is the pursuit of individual excellence — the triumph of noble values through pursuit of a noble, supra-personal aim.

The leadership principle which National-Socialism upholds is a practical manifestation of the excellence of individual character — of individuals of noble character leading and inspiring others.

(6) National-Socialism expresses, affirms and champions the natural and healthy instincts of Aryans, and those things which create healthy, racially-aware Aryans with a sense of duty and a strong character.

Hence National-Socialism, in contrast to the decadent societies of the present, upholds and champions the concept of struggle — the striving for individual and racial excellence. Thus does National-Socialism uphold and champion the necessity of war. It affirms that war is the only true test of character, as it accepts that only those who have proved their character through valour in war should be in positions of authority in a National-Socialist society. Furthermore, a National-Socialist society would require every able-bodied youth to acquire self-discipline, and a sense of duty to their folk, by active military service, as it specifies that only those who have so aided their folk can be citizens of the National-Socialist State with all the rights of a citizen.

(7) National-Socialism is an expression and an affirmation of the cultural superiority of the Aryan. National-Socialism recognizes the importance of the Aryan race as the sole creator of civilization, the sole creator of a noble, honourable, just and civilized way of life.

Accordingly, some of the fundamental practical aims of National-Socialism are: (a) preserving the racial purity of the Aryan race through the creation of an Aryan homeland, and encouraging healthy Aryans to marry and produce large families for which they would be given financial incentives and social support; (b) encouraging through educational and military institutions noble, Aryan, character in individuals, and ensuring the physical health and well-being of the folk, and particularly the young through rigorous physical and military training; (c) establishing a sound and prospering rural way of life and rural economy as a means of producing healthy food and encouraging healthy outdoor living.

Aryan Customs

Aryan customs are what distinguish an Aryan society from a non-Aryan society. Such customs express the ethos, or soul, of the Aryan race and thus are an important part of Aryan culture. They represent an attempt to make real the natural and healthy instincts of Aryans, and in the past such customs have formed the basis for civilized Aryan societies. Indeed, it is these customs which have created such civilized societies, just as the striving to maintain such customs (with such customs often being unwritten codes of conduct) was the means whereby civilization itself was maintained.

These customs are natural and healthy for Aryans — that is, an Aryan who strives to uphold them lives a more healthy, more beneficial and more fulfilling life than an Aryan who does not uphold them. An Aryan upholding such customs is a cultured, civilized person, just as society which upholds such customs is a cultured and civilized society. In essence, Aryan customs express the noble, rational, freedom-loving and warrior nature of the most excellent or best Aryan individuals, as well as the Aryan instinct for 'fair-play'.

Of course, in an Aryan society (such as the Achaean — or ancient Greek society described by Homer in The Odyssey) there are more customs than those uniquely Aryan ones which will be detailed here. These other customs, such as hospitality and courtesy toward traveling strangers, were common to most warrior societies. Here, however, we are concerned with those customs which distinguish Aryans, which enable the creation of an Aryan society and which thus express the unique ethos of the Aryan race. Most of these Aryan customs derive from the instinctive feeling the best Aryan individuals possess for honour and fairness, and many of them depend on the swearing of oaths, such an oath being taken either "on one's honour" or "before the gods".

The fundamental Aryan customs are:

(1) The right to possess and bear weapons and to use those weapons in self-defence.

(2) The right to protect oneself, one's family and kin by using force if necessary — including using lethal force.

(3)The obligation to be loyal to those one has sworn an oath of loyalty to.

(4) The obligation to tell the truth, once having sworn an oath to do so.

(5) Never to break an oath, once having sworn one.

(6) The acceptance of the right to 'trial by combat' to prove one is innocent of an accusation.

(7) Accepting that any person accused of anything has the right to defend himself, in public, and that those making the accusation or laying a charge had to make that accusation in public before the accused for that accusation to be seriously considered.

(8) Accepting that anyone found guilty of some offence, including killing someone else, could, as their sole punishment, be exiled or outlawed.

(9) Accepting that those found guilty of some offence, such as killing another person, could, as their sole punishment, have to compensate the victims family in goods or in money. (This compensation was called Wehrgeld in Germanic and Anglo-Saxon societies.)

(10) Accepting that disputes between individuals, and between rival or disputing factions, could be settled through single combat, or a fight, between those individuals or between two champions, each such champion representing one of those opposing factions, with each person or each faction accepting that right was on the side of the victor of such a combat or fight.

(11) Accepting that everyone had the right to challenge the authority of someone, or those in authority, and that this challenge should be made through single combat between the challenger and the person whose authority is so challenged, with the person defeated graciously accepting the authority of the victor in such a combat.

Such customs as these were, of course, ideals. But what is important is that such ideals existed, and were upheld as the standard by which personal and social conduct was judged, and by which public affairs were conducted. Once these customs were no longer upheld, or no longer seen as desirable, for whatever reason, the society once upholding them ceased to be noble and ceased to be Aryan. It ceased to be truly free and ceased to be fair. This change usually occurred when warriors — combat hardened men — ceased to lead such a society and ceased to occupy positions of authority and respect within that society. The un-Aryan society which resulted from this decline of standards was usually influenced and led by those lacking combat experience.

These customs should be used to judge all types of society, particularly the ones that Aryans live in today. Judged by such Aryan standards as these, it is easy to see that all modern societies which Aryans live in are fundamentally un-Aryan — all such societies are thus ignoble, unfair and uncivilized, since Aryan customs, taken together, and such Aryan customs alone, represent what is noble, fair and civilized. All modern societies in which Aryans live are basically anti-Aryan and tyrannical — an expression of everything the best or most excellent Aryan individuals loathe and detest. Such customs enable us, as Aryans, to reject what is not-Aryan, as they enable us to understand and appreciate Aryan culture itself.

One of the most significant things about National-Socialism is that it is a modern and conscious expression of the ethos of the Aryan. That is, it captures, expresses and can make real in a practical way, the Aryan ethos and the civilization which is created by and maintained by such a noble ethos. By doing this, National-Socialism can not only create a truly Aryan, and thus civilized, society, but it can also continue the upward progress, or advancement, which such instinctive Aryan customs represented and sought to achieve in the past.

How to Deal with the Law

Silence Is Golden

If approached by a police officer, you do not have to speak to him beyond answering a few simple questions. Remain calm and say nothing. Give your name and age (not your date of birth), then remain quiet. If the policeman pats your clothes to check for a weapon, don't be nervous. Don't talk. You will not be harmed.

About I.D.

There is no law in the U.S. requiring citizens to carry an I.D. card of any type. The police cannot legally arrest you for refusing to identify yourself. There are two basic exceptions to this rule. If you are driving a vehicle, you are required to carry a license and produce it for a policeman. If you are present in an establishment where alcoholic beverages are consumed, you are required to produce evidence of your age on demand. Unless you are driving a car or are inside a tavern, you do not have to identify yourself to the police. You do not have to consent to any search of your body, your car or your home. If the police say they have a warrant, ask to see it. Do not interfere with or obstruct the police, even if they begin an illegal search. If you do so, you are likely to be arrested. Get the policeman's badge number, write down the time of the incident and file a complaint later.

If You Are Stopped by the Police

Ask if you are under arrest. If he says you are, ask him the nature of the charges. If you are not under arrest, you should be free to go. WARNING: NEVER RUN FROM THE POLICE. If you do, you might be shot in the back. Do not physically resist. Make it clear that you do not consent to any search. If you are searched anyway, do not resist. You can complain later.

If You Are Stopped While Driving

Along with your driver's license you are required to produce the vehicle's registration and proof of insurance. If the police officer has probable cause, he can search your vehicle without a warrant. Make it clear that you do not consent to any search, but do not resist a search if it is made without your permission. If the police officer asks you any questions after you provide him with the required documents, you should respond by asking if he is going to give you a ticket. If he is not going to give you a ticket, you should be free to leave. If you are handed a ticket sign it. Signing a ticket is merely a promise that you will appear in court. It does not imply guilt. If you refuse tn sien ynur ticket, you will be arrested. If the policeman suspects you of driving while intoxicated, he has the power to order you to take a breath or blood test. If you refuse to take the test, you will not be convicted of drunk driving, but you will lose your driver's license for a long period of time.

If You Are Arrested

Whether or not you are guilty, go with the police without resistance. You will have the opportunity to make your defense in court. You have no obligation to help the police in their investigation. Remain quiet. Tell the police nothing but your name and age. Resist the urge to defend yourself or explain your conduct. The time for telling "your side of the story" is in open court. If you say anything more to the police, you will be asking for trouble.

Get a Lawyer

If arrested, demand to talk to a lawyer at once. You can do so by phone immediately after you are booked into the detention center. Do not talk to any person unless your lawyer is present. Be careful. Many lawyers are crooked. Some will work with the police against you. If the lawyer assigned to you urges you to speak or suggests a "plea bargain," you should ask for a new lawyer. No competent attorney ever urges a suspect to cooperate with an investigation.

What Happens Afterward

After your arrest the police will fingerprint and photograph you and take your possessions. Ask for a receipt of everything taken from you. This will include your wallet and all its contents, your clothing and anything you were carrying when you were arrested. You may be released with or without bail at any time. If you are not released, you will be delivered to a court on the third business day after your arrest or sooner. Demand to be arraigned as soon as possible. If this demand is not granted, a judge may be forced to throw out the charges and you will be released. Do not waive any of your rights at your arraignment. Your lawyer should ask that you be released on bail. If the bail is too high, ask the judge to reduce it. He doesn't have to do this, but it doesn't hurt to ask. Speak with respect to the judge, regardless of what you think of him personally.

Keep a Stiff Upper Lip

Being arrested can be quite an experience, especially if it is your first time. You will survive it. Stay calm. Be quiet. Do not cause problems. Keep your eyes open and try to remember the details of all that happens, such as names, badge numbers, times and faces. Ahove all, stay calm.

THE ANTI-HUMANS

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Corneliu Z. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti-Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

12 March, 1998

The Hon. Senator Trent Lott
The Hon. Speaker Newt Gingrich
c/o The Congress of the USA
Washington, D.C.

Dear Sirs:

I viewed with astonishment your recent high-decibel calls for the bombing of Iraq. Indeed, you were so caught up in your blood-thirsty threats against Saddam and his people that you gasped with disbelief and rage when you learned that UN Chief Kofi Annan had successfully defused the explosive crisis in the Middle East.

What a changed-for-the-worse society we now endure. What strange and dangerous people now inhabit the once hallowed halls of Congress. This 74 year old scribe can remember a country that was once the freest in the world. A white, European-descendants country that was a nation. A monocultural nation blessed with good schools, safe streets and decent people. A nation where mothers were warm, respected home-makers, not stevedores and drivers of 18-wheelers while their babies languish in day-care centers without a mother's loving care. A nation where the races were segregated in schools and communites. A time when discipline in the schools was a normal adjunct. A white-race nation whose schoolchildren were taught a true history of their country, not a collection of ridiculous lies, ostensibly concocted to give an ersatz "selfesteem" to a coddled minority. A white-race nation that took a healthy pride in its race and heritage. A proud people who had not yet donned the hair-shirt of guilt so slyly woven for them by their racial enemies. (To see the societal destruction you politicians, under the goad of your Zionist puppetmasters, have inflicted on your race and country, view the movies made in the thirties and forties and contrast the scenes from those days with the filth and mongrelized ugliness of today.)

Yes, I remember a nation where the age-old "war between the sexes" was fought in chivalrous fashion. Not with the venomous "no-holds-barred" bitterness exhibited by today's wild women of liberation. A nation where the races lived apart in their own communities, pursuing their own amusements, honoring their own traditions, maintaining their own uniqueness in a true diversity without the rancor and murderous, inter-racial hatred that now covers the country like an evil blanket. A hatred that expands with each new anti white-race law passed by those strange, white-race destroyers: white US Congressmen.

Anti white-race laws have reduced that race's ordinary people to the status of third class citizens. Agencies of the Federal Govenzment leap with alacrity to the aid of any minority-ite who levels a complaint against a member of the majority-race. I wonder what drives these white legislators to wantonly destroy their own heritage, culture, and race? How unnatural such acts. How insane.

Gone is that nation whose Parliamentarians possessed honor and integrity. Whose Congressmen resisted mightily any call for military action beyond our shores. Arrived is a Congress which is far too beholden to Jewish PACs and Israel. A Congress whose leaders prance and snort and clash the cymbals for war. Leaders who shout for a cruel, criminal, military action against a small state which has done us no harm, nor threatened us with any. A military action that benefits only Israel; a rogue state that is, itself, loaded with weapons of mass destruction.

Gone is the time when the Presidency set a high moral tone for the nation. The base couple who now occupy the White House would be more at home in a cheap bordello than in that grand mansion. Yet, you, Mr. Gingrich, although allegedly of the opposition party, act as if Mr. Clinton was your dearest political and personal friend. How strange, that.

How golden those former days look now compared to the dog-days that are upon us. Instead of working to do something about the critical problems that threaten us, you, Mr. Lott, and you, Mr. Gingrich, seek to embroil us in a conflict that benefits only Israel. You totally ignore the savage assaults you politicians have made on the white race of this country. You totally ignore the plans of Mexican Irridentists to recapture seven southwestern states for a new province of Mexico called Aztlan. You ignore the boos that thousands of Mexican-Americans gave the US National Anthem at the beginning of a recent soccer game in Los Angeles. Boos accompanied by the waving of hundreds of Mexican flags. Our society is disintegrating, Sirs. Better look inward!!

Since many of you Congressmen sat out the Vietnam conflict, and have never tasted military life, I would like to make a suggestion that would remedy that lack of militaty experience.

Why don't you, Mr. Majority Leader, and you, Mr. Speaker, round up a company of like-minded fire-eaters on Capitol Hill; slip into your camouflage suits; pick up your assault rifles and grenades; don your parachutes, and have the Air Force fly you into Iraqi airspace and drop you there. Take Madeline "Mad" Albright with you. She of the sang-froid. The "Mad" Albright who thinks a dead Iraqi baby is a good baby. Just think of the plaudits you would receive from President "Bilbi Clinton-yahu" for capturing that elusive, Iraqi strongman: Saddam Hussein. How droll, how interesting that elements of "Sodom sur Potomac" would capture "Saddam du Baghdad." Ha. Also, consider the joy you would bring the London bookies and other gamblers with this "bets" of a life time opportunity — the outcome of your mission. Oh, do watch out for bits and pleces of cancer-causing shellcasing fragments. You know the ones. Those made from "depleted" Uranium that were rained down on Iraq In such copious quantites during your bloody aggession of 1991. That's right! Aggression. Ramsey Clarke calls it a WAR CRIME!!

The first item in LB March '98 Ernst Zündel's Power Newsletter, which described the thoroughness of the preparation of his defense against The Forces of Evil in Canada, is a clear example of why the Germans can't be beat. They may suffer reverses now and again, but beaten? Never!

And my note on page 7, noting the very heavy campaign of libel and slander thrown against the Germans from WWI and following, only proves the German superiority for all time. One does not throw his heavy artillery against a gnat.

Ernst Zündel's and the German people's story is the most incredible story in the annals of the human race. The onslaught of the Jewish juggernaut, continuing from the first conquest and occupation of the ancient Greeks, of the ancient Hebrews in Palestine, down through millenia, culminating in this incredible battle against Zündel and his worthy defense team, is only a hiatus before the Aryan giant awakens in force.

Doug Christie is King Arthur's shiningest knight who will be remembered in legends of his own.

I marvel at how Mr. Zündel has gone through all this travail and is still such a marvelous writer with such marvelous wit and humor.

I am impressed with his fairness and respect for his seemingly immature and traitorous ex-wife. Doubtless some of this deteroriated marriage is due to a considerable age difference if I read between the lines. Value systems are different today and romanticism holds sway and is not a good base for marriage.

Mr. Zündel's article would make an excellent text for the diversity/multiculturalism brainwashed high school speaker-phone students of Major Clerkin. Thanks for another great Liberty Bell.

Adolf Hitler - after all is said and done.
You read his speeches (without the Jew venom).
You read those of Roosevelt and Churchill.
And you will see who it is that is in awe of God. - - - You will see who unceasingly offered Peace plans, while the others, under Jew control, plotted for War.

With all sources of information in the hands of the Devil, there arose a brainwashed zombie like world that was ever ready to destroy the Good while championing the evil that they did not comprehend. They realized not that they were fighting for the evil that rules us now. The evil that has already changed all our lives. Has made us to live in a world devoid of a meaningful future.

A multicultural future in which the White Man will disappear. A planned extinction, and with it all the intelligence of the Universe.

There will be no more progress; no more advances. Soon, all will start to wear out and not be replaced. The Twin Towers will mirror the Pyramids of the Aztecs. Five decades ago Adolf Hitler fought against this evil. --- And the World knew it not. Even to this date — with the Jew still in control — they know not. They know not what he really said and wrote and did.

After all is said and done, after nation after nation has been forced into a course of national suicide, where age-old hereditary peoples have been made to give their lands to alien invaders, the soil of which is soaked with the blood of their ancestors, they are still ignorant of their would-be saviour — had they only known the truth.

But Hear Ye, Hear Ye, there is still time to reverse the present. To do this we must all go back to the time when that man of fate, Adolf Hitler, spoke naught but the wisdom and truth of the ages and tried his best to implement them into reality. We must hear all that he said and read all he wrote.

Without the Jew venom to distort it, it will be a revelation. For the very first time most people will see the real Hitler. They will see their folly in not having listened to him. They will see the evil intent of the Jew preventing that. They will begin to envision a World of endless promise, as Adolf Mitler saw it.

Dear Mr. Dietz:

In regard to the letter from Molly Gill in the latest issue of your magazine:

Ms. Gill has distorted a few statements I made in a personal correspondence with her that was not intended for publication. For instance, I never said that I would be running for President; I only sent her a platform that could be used by a National Socialist, should one decide to run for President. I also made clear to her that any opinions expressed in my letters were MY opinions, NOT those of The New Order or any other publication or organization

Ms. Gill's hysterical ranting about the U.S. not being a Christian nation is ridiculous and is based on nothing more than her wishful thinking. She is a fanatical pagan/Odinist and practicioner of Witchcraft, and admitted to me that she makes voodoo dolls and spends her time sticking pins in the eyes of the dolls. (No doubt by now she has made a doll representing me, but thus far my eyes are in fine condition.) Since America was founded, right up to the present, the vast, overwhelming majority of the American White people have been, and are, Christians. No amount of ranting and whining on the part of Ms. Gill can change this.

As to the relative merits of Christianity vs. paganism/Odinism, I would refer those interested to the lead article in the latest issue of the ARYAN EAGLE (JAN/FEB 1998 #17) "The 'Pagan' Revival: A Knife in the Back of the White Revolution." Dear Mr. Dietz:

The March '98 issue of Liberty Bell was, as usual, an exciting intellectual adventure. I did notice what I believe to be a small error in a letter from E.T., Washington. The letter discussed Jews, Russian communism and mentions "the Russian nobleman and anarchist, Bakunin..."

I have done some research into anarchism and I think the writer of this letter has mistaken Bakunin, (Mikhail, 1814-1876), for Prince Kropotkin (Piotr Alekseyevich, 1842-1921).

Bakunin was, indeed, a Russian revolutionary and leading exponent of anarchism who took part in the 1848-49 revolutions in France and Saxony. He advocated the violent overthrow of existing governments.

Prince Kropotkin, on the other hand, was a Russian anarchist and a noted geographer. He was imprisoned (1874-76) for political activities. He fled to England but after the Russian Revolution in 1917 he returned to Russia. After the Bolsheviks took power he retired from political life.

It is interesting to note that there were very few if any Jews in the Anarchist movement of the 19th century until we come to nearer the 20th century in England. I have read Woodcock and the journal, Anarchy: Journal of Desire Armed. Today the inner publishing core of the anarchist movement is almost entirely Jews, a fact that a good number of anarchists today are unaware of. Today they espouse open borders, diversity, multiculturism, and of course internationalism; and they are anti-white as well, although they often have white boys writing and fronting for them in various enterprises. Several have become TRF [The Rational Feminist] readers in disgust at the anti-white/pro-non-white element.

Another interesting fact about anarchists in general is that they are very hostile with long, internecine feuds of simply crazy duration and content. I believe that many if not most were, like Prince Kropotkin, abused and neglected in their parental homes. For example, the Prince's parents took long trips and left him for months at home with the servants.

Bakunin translated Marx's Communist Manifesto in 1848 into Russian and was associated with the other revolutionary activities. But I have never read anything about Bakunin being a nobleman. If anyone has documentation that he was, I would like to know that.

Two reference works that are very handy to have in the house in order to check out things that one thinks they remember are: The Concise Columbia Ecyclopedia (pbk) and The Columbia History of the World.

Dear Mr. Dietz:

Please renew my subscription for another year, and excuse my having waited up to the last minute.

I greatly enjoyed Molly Gill's letter [in the March issue of LB]. I liked her attitude. It is the right attitude to have, even though what she maintains is debatable in what concerns this country.

Nowhere in the world have the Jews found, in modern times, a more fertile terrain to prosper and do their destructive work. And that was because the descendants of the religious misfits, the founders of this country, welcomed them, embraced them, cuddled them, and little by little let them become their masters.

Our race faces a very, very grim future, and if the American people are not responsible for that, nobody else is.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

On the 18th Amendment (Prohibition): "Very few Americans were sufficiently sane to perceive that they had repudiated the American conception of government and had replaced it with the legal principle of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat,' which was the theoretical justification of the Jews' revolution in Russia."

On Race: "We must further understand that all races naturally regard themselves as superior to all others. We think Congoids unintelligent, but they feel only contempt for a race so stupid or craven that it fawns on them, gives them votes, lavishly subsidizes them with its own earnings, and even oppresses its own people to curry their favor. We are a race as are the others. If we attribute to Ourselves a superiority, intellectual, moral, or other, in terms of our own standards, we are simply indulging in a tautology. The only objective criterion of superiority, among human races as among all other species, is biological: the strong survive, the weak perish. The superior race of mankind today is the one that will emerge victorious—whether by its technology or its fecundity—from the proximate struggle for life on an overcrowded planet."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

The Meaning of National-Socialism

By David Myatt

Introduction

This pamphlet is a basic introduction to National-Socialism, written by a National-Socialist. It is not concerned with history — it deals solely with National-Socialist philosophy: what National-Socialism itself actually is, and what National-Socialists believe in or uphold. As this work will show, National-Socialism is totally opposed to the values and the ideas which have come to dominate the modern "Western" world. The basic values of National-Socialism are the now almost forgotten Aryan values of honour, a striving for excellence, self-discipline and the triumph of individual will. The heroic warrior spirit of National-Socialism is totally opposed to the self-indulgent materialism and pacifism which has come to dominate every modern social-worker infested "Western" society.

National-Socialism has become a real modern heresy, feared and reviled. For over seventy years, the opponents of National-Socialism have been spreading their lies and propaganda about National-Socialism; for the past fifty years, the governments of every so-called "Western" country have indoctrinated their peoples with these lies and this propaganda. In many of these countries, National-Socialism, and National-Socialist literature, is illegal, with public displays of National-Socialist symbols, such as the swastika, forbidden; in nearly every other country National-Socialists are actively persecuted and imprisoned. In all these countries, the only information available to the public about National-Socialism has come from its enemies. This pamphlet aims to change this, presenting as it does the suppressed truth about National-Socialism.

D. Myatt, Oxford, 1997 (108 yf)

I

What Is National-Socialism?

National-Socialism believes there are two fundamental ways of living, and thus two fundamental types of society based on these two ways. There is the material way of living, with individuals striving for, or pursuing, "happiness", material comfort and wealth. Then there is the way of excellence, of idealism (or nobility) with individuals striving for an idealistic goal. National-Socialism believes the material way is decadent — a waste of our lives, a waste of the evolutionary potential which we possess.

Furthermore, National-Socialism believes that the life of an individual is better, more fulfilling, if the idealistic goal that is pursued is in accord with the will of Nature. That is, if this idealistic goal aids Nature, and continues the evolutionary work of Nature. This stems from the National-Socialist assertion that we, as human beings, are part of Nature, and subject to the laws of Nature. All other philosophies, political beliefs or religions assert that we, as human beings, are somehow "above", different or separate from, Nature and her laws.

One of the fundamental aims of National-Socialism is to continue the work of Nature by creating better, more advanced individuals and by creating a better, more advanced, more civilized society for these individuals to live and flourish in. National-Socialism believes that better individuals can only be created through the pursuit of noble values — by individuals changing themselves for the better through a personal act of will. This requires individuals, and society itself, to champion and uphold those values which create personal excellence, which aid the individual change necessary. According to National-Socialism, these values are honour, loyalty and duty — for only these values create the right type of idealistic person, someone with a purity of purpose. It is these values, and these values alone, which create a civilized individual. A civilized person is a more evolved individual — someone with a higher, a noble, personal character. Further, it is the duty of each noble individual to act in accord with the workings, the will of Nature herself.

According to National-Socialism, race is how Nature works. For National-Socialism, race is Nature made manifest; race is our connection to Nature. Our race is an expression of "who and what we are". The different races which exist among our human species are an expression of evolution in action — of Nature working over aeons to produce diversity and difference. Thus, race is an expression of our very humanity — of our human identity.

Accordingly, National-Socialism desires to preserve and further evolve race itself. All other philosophies, political beliefs or religions desire to destroy race through creating multi-racial, multi-cultural societies.

For National-Socialism, the fundamental meaning of our lives, as individuals, is to strive to continue the work of Nature. This means striving to advance ourselves through upholding, in our own lives, the civilized values of honour, loyalty and duty; it means us doing our noble and civilized duty by striving to preserve and further evolve our own race, and those things which make our own race unique. These unique things are the ethos, the soul, the character, the culture of our race, and the Destiny of our race. According to National-Socialism, the ethos, the character of the Aryan race (the European, or "White" race) is expressed by honour, curiosity, conquest — these things express the true nature of the Aryan race. Furthermore, National-Socialism believes that it is the ultimate Destiny of the Aryan race to colonize the stars of our galaxy — to create a Galactic Empire.

In contrast to the inspiring, the noble, the Galactic — the numinous — goals of National-Socialism, the goals of all other philosophies, political beliefs or religions are mundane, materialistic and a complete waste of our lives.

II

Honour, Loyalty and Duty: A Personal Revolution

The fundamental personal values of National-Socialism — the foundation of National-Socialist morality — are honour, loyalty, and duty. A National-Socialist is someone who upholds, or who strives to uphold, these personal values: someone whose personal life is governed by these values. Thus, a true or genuine National-Socialist is someone who strives to be honourable, who is loyal to those they have sworn to be loyal to, and who does his National-Socialist duty.

The purpose of these values is to civilize, for it is these values which make a person civilized and noble. That is, these values express the essence of nobility and civilization; they create, or can create, a person who possesses a civilized, a noble, a strong character. In effect, these values create or can create a better individual; they are means whereby a personal, inner revolution can be achieved through a triumph of individual will.

Honour:

Honour is basically the natural instinct for nobility made conscious and this is done through a Code of Honour. Some things are fair, and some other things are unfair. A person of noble character — someone with an inborn sense of fairness — knows or feels what is fair and what is unfair. Honour thus determines personal behaviour, and the high standards of personal behaviour which honour demands are set out by a Code of Honour. Most fundamental of all, an honourable person is prepared to die — if necessary by his own hand — rather than be dishonoured. If someone is not prepared to do this, or does not do this for the sake of his own honour, then he is not living in an honourable way. Honour is thus a hard and simple standard to live by, and those who are honourable thus possess a strong personal character and a purity of purpose. They are better, more noble, more civilized, more evolved individuals because of this.

Loyalty:

Loyalty, like honour, is simple to understand, and simple in practice. Loyalty is being true to a person you have sworn to be loyal to. True loyalty means taking an oath of loyalty, an oath of allegiance, to a particular person and never breaking that oath. An oath of loyalty can only be ended in two ways: (i) by the death of the person to whom you have sworn to be loyal, and (ii) by mutual agreement between you and the person given loyalty.

Thus, true loyalty, like honour, sets a high personal standard, and requires personal discipline. Fundamentally, loyalty means Comradeship — true loyalty means being a Comrade to those you have sworn to be loyal to, and never letting those Comrades down. True loyalty means aiding and assisting those Comrades even when it is personally difficult to do so — or even if it might mean one's own death. True loyalty often means placing one own self — one's own opinions for instance — second, after the person to whom you have pledged your loyalty.

Duty:

Duty is the obligation an individual has to do what is necessary and honourable. Thus, there is a duty to be loyal to those given loyalty. There is a duty to strive to live in an honourable way. For a National-Socialist, there is also the duty to promote National-Socialism, the duty to strive to act in accord with Nature's will by preserving, defending and evolving one's own race, and the duty to strive for personal excellence.

Neglect of one's duty is a dishonourable act, and the sign of a weak personal character.

III

Triumph of the Will and Aryan Justice: A Social Revolution

In respect of our basic human nature, or character, National-Socialism is positive and idealistic, believing that most individuals possess the potential to change themselves for the better. All that is required for such a positive, civilized and evolutionary change is self-discipline and a natural idealism

— the triumph of individual will caused by an individual striving, or struggling, for an idealistic goal which itself is in harmony with Nature. National-Socialism believes that, given good leadership — sufficient noble inspiration by honourable individuals — the majority of people can change themselves for the better and come to know and value honour, loyalty and duty. Those who now do not understand or value these noble things, can do so given good leadership and guidance.

National-Socialism goes further, believing that it is possible to create, to build, a positive, healthy, evolutionary society which provides the social conditions necessary for individuals to develop their natural character and their potential to the full. This society can only be created through a National-Socialist revolution — by the overthrow of the existing System which is based on materialism, indulgence, selfishness, and neglect of race, and which is thus detrimental to the development of strong, honourable individuals, and detrimental to the will of Nature, manifest in race and racial diversity. The decadent values of this old System would be replaced by National-Socialist values. These National-Socialist values are personal honour, personal loyalty and duty to the folk or race.

A National-Socialist society, or Reich, is a society where the values of honour, loyalty and duty are upheld, and where they form the basic "code of practice" for those involved in public, or civic, life and are the basic rules which govern all the institutions (military, police, commercial, public, private, industrial and so on) of the society.

In this new Reich, the old system of so-called "justice" — based upon abstract ideas and abstract dogma — would be replaced by National-Socialist, or Aryan, justice. National-Socialism believes that real justice only and ever exists in honourable individuals — and cannot exist in anything lifeless or abstract, such as some "law", some "Court of Law", or some Institution, such as a Police force. It is individuals, and individual character, which matter, not something abstract and lifeless. A person is either honourable, and thus fair and just — or they are not.

Because of this understanding of the importance of individual character, such a Reich is a genuine folk-democracy where a real freedom exists. This freedom exists in such a National-Socialist society basically because of honour and duty: individuals know or accept their honourable duty, to themselves and others, and strive to do that duty to the best of their ability. For real freedom is not about "personal choice, personal rights" in isolation, as it is not about personal indulgence — it is about personal character. Real freedom means having the character to know what is dutiful and right, and having the character to do or try to do what is dutiful and right.

What must be understood is that personal honour, like race itself, is a manifestation of the will of Nature — a means whereby we have evolved to become better, civilized beings. All modern societies undermine individual character, and thus real freedom, because they expect or demand that individuals conform or be subservient to something abstract or dogmatic which is unnatural because it is against the will of Nature as manifest in personal honour and race. These modern societies do not try to elevate the individual in a natural way through developing personal character and through developing an understanding of our duties to Nature, evident in race. Instead, they effectively tyrannize or dictate to individuals by legislation, and social schemes which are enforceable by yet other laws, with more and more prisons established to punish those who transgress the unending stream of new social and political legislation.

A really free society does not need "laws" which are enforced by a police force, as it does not need hundreds of thousands of "social workers" or tens of thousands of professional lawyers — it only needs individuals who know what is honourable and who always strive to do the honourable thing. Modern societies are based on the mistaken and unnatural premise that it is legislation, social schemes enforced by laws, and the "deterrence" of prison, which can make a better society. National-Socialism totally rejects this unnatural way, and instead upholds the natural way of honour and the triumph of individual will.

National-Socialism is also realistic, as well as idealistic. Thus, it accepts that there will always be a few individuals who are and always will remain dishonourable, cowardly and ignoble by nature, despite repeated attempts by noble and idealistic leaders to inspire and change these few. But it is always only a few who cannot change themselves for the better through a triumph of the will, and always only a few who thus are disruptive of a society based upon noble ideals. A National-Socialist Reich would give these few several chances to change themselves and thus become honourable, dutiful individuals, through, for example, service to the folk in the Armed Forces. Should they still not change themselves, then they would be removed — either via exiling them, or executing them, for the removal of such a detrimental few is necessary to ensure the well-being of the whole.

IV
National-Socialism: The Aryan Way of Life

National-Socialism is concerned first and foremost with the Aryan race: with the nature, the welfare and the future of the Aryan. The following seven points briefly summarize the most important aspects of National-Socialism.

(1) National-Socialism is an expression, a manifestation, of the Destiny of the Aryan race. National-Socialism expresses the natural desire of healthy, noble, Aryans to live among their own kind, to preserve and extend their unique race and their unique culture, and to prosper and evolve still further in accord with the laws of Nature and in accord with the unique Destiny of the Aryan. According to National-Socialism, this Aryan Destiny is to civilize: to explore, to know, to conquer, to quest after new adventures and new frontiers.

Fundamentally, National-Socialism expresses what it means to be Aryan, and is a guide to the Aryan way of life.

(2) National-Socialism is an expression of the desire of healthy, noble Aryans to be free and to live in a socially just society. National-Socialism expresses the desire of healthy, noble Aryans to be able to live in an Aryan society where Aryan values and Aryan customs are upheld.

National-Socialism regards all present societies where Aryans live as anti-Aryan, as decadent, as ignoble and as repressive. All these societies are dedicated to the suppression of Aryan values, Aryan customs and Aryan culture itself. These societies, by their very nature and their unnatural social laws are harmful to Aryans, the Aryan race itself and the Aryan way of life. Accordingly, National-Socialism seeks the revolutionary overthrow of these decadent and un-Aryan societies and regards any means as justified in the war for Aryan survival and Aryan freedom.

(3) National-Socialism expresses, affirms and champions Aryan values over and above other values. These Aryan values are what express the soul, the character, the nature, of the Aryan, and thus represent what it means to be Aryan.

These values are fundamentally honour, loyalty, duty. As such, they express and represent the noble warrior spirit. This noble, Aryan warrior spirit, or ethos, is totally opposed to the usury of capitalism, and in place of present societies built upon or dependent upon the usury of debt and interest, and thus dependent upon money and "International Finance"; National-Socialism seeks to create an entirely new society founded upon honest work and concern for the welfare of the Aryan folk where the slavery of debt and interest would be abolished.

(4) National-Socialism expresses and affirms that race is of fundamental importance. To affirm race is to affirm life itself and the evolution of life toward a higher existence. To affirm race is to affirm and champion Nature, for race is how Nature works, and how Nature is manifest to us, and in us, as individuals.

Thus National-Socialism champions racial difference and diversity, and the creation of a separate ethnic homeland for Aryans, and Aryans only.

(5) National-Socialism expresses and affirms the importance of individual character. The most fundamental principle of National-Socialism is that individuals can change themselves for the better through an act — through the triumph — of individual will and through being inspired by idealism. This is the pursuit of individual excellence — the triumph of noble values through pursuit of a noble, supra-personal aim.

The leadership principle which National-Socialism upholds is a practical manifestation of the excellence of individual character — of individuals of noble character leading and inspiring others.

(6) National-Socialism expresses, affirms and champions the natural, healthy and necessary instincts of Aryans, and those things which create healthy, racially-aware Aryans with a sense of duty and a strong character. For National-Socialism, such healthy instincts — such as the desire to live among one's own racial kind and the desire to place one's own race before other races — are a manifestation of the will of Nature.

Hence National-Socialism, in contrast to the decadent societies of the present, upholds and champions the concept of struggle — the striving for individual and racial excellence. Thus does National-Socialism uphold and champion the necessity of war. It affirms that war is the only true test of character, as it accepts that only those who have proved their character through valour in war should be in positions of authority in a National-Socialist society. Furthermore, a National-Socialist society would require every able-bodied youth to acquire self-discipline, and a sense of duty to their folk, by active military service, as it specifies that only those who have so aided their folk can be citizens of the National-Socialist State with all the rights of a citizen.

(7) National-Socialism is an expression and an affirmation of the cultural superiority of the Aryan. National-Socialism recognizes the importance of the Aryan race as the sole creator of civilization, the sole creator of a noble, honourable, just and civilized way of life.

Accordingly, some of the fundamental practical aims of National-Socialism are: (a) preserving the racial purity of the Aryan race through the creation of an Aryan homeland, and encouraging healthy Aryans to marry and produce large families for which they would be given financial incentives and social support; (b) encouraging through educational and military institutions noble, Aryan character in individuals, and ensuring the physical health and well-being of the folk, and particularly the young through rigorous physical and military training; (c) establishing a sound and prospering rural way of life and rural economy as a means of producing healthy food and encouraging healthy outdoor living.

V

Folk and Fatherland: The Inner Meaning of National-Socialism

National-Socialism provides an answer to the most fundamental and the most important question which we as individuals can ask: What is the meaning of life? According to National-Socialism, the meaning of our life, as individuals, is to evolve: to continue with, to further the evolutionary work of Nature by striving for personal excellence and excellence for our own folk or race. This is because we, as individuals, are not isolated beings — we are part of Nature, and part of our race. We, as individuals, are part of much larger living systems or beings. We depend on these large organic beings because we ourselves are organic beings and thus a part of the natural, the cosmic, order itself.

Furthermore, these large organic systems, these beings, also depend on us. That is, what we do, or do not do, affects them. We can keep them healthy and prosperous, and aid them to evolve still further. What we have forgotten — or been indoctrinated not to be believe — is that our folk, our race, is our connection to Nature, and that a healthy society is by definition a folk society: an organic society based upon race and honour. That is, a healthy, natural society — one which expresses Nature, which aids Nature, which is in harmony with Nature — is an ethnic society which upholds "Blood and Honour". All other types of society, presently existing, or existing as a social, political or religious idea are unnatural and harmful to Nature and the separate racial evolution which expresses the will of nature.

We, as individuals, are our race, our very ancestors, made manifest and re-born. Our race is a supra-personal organism, a living being, which has existed, which has lived, for thousands of years before us. This living being which is our race can also exist for thousands, for hundreds of thousands of years after us. The very health, the well-being, the prosperity, the future of this living racial being depends on us — we are its future, just as it is natural for us, our duty, to preserve, aid, defend and further evolve this living being. Thus, our purpose, our duty, is to preserve the racial purity of our blood. This duty is our very purpose, as individuals — it is what we are born to do, what we exist for. When we do not do this duty, we are wasting our lives, we are undermining and helping to destroy this living racial being, and the greater living being which is Nature herself.

This is the simple, and profound, truth which National-Socialism champions and which the enemies of National-Socialism have suppressed and are trying so hard to destroy. Just as we are our race, so are we a unique racial culture and our unique racial Destiny: for racial culture and racial Destiny are the soul, the essence, the very life, the consciousness of this supra-personal living being which is our race. Thus, it is also our duty, part of our purpose, to preserve, aid and further develop our unique racial culture, and to strive to make our unique racial Destiny real. A fatherland is the homeland, the nation, of a specific race, the place where that race dwells or where they settle, and it is a means to preserve, aid and develop the race: it is an ethnic society founded upon and upholding a specific racial culture and striving to fulfill the specific Destiny of that race.

Thus, the terms "Folk and Fatherland", and "Blood and Honour", express the inner meaning of National-Socialism itself.

VI

The Aryan Religion of National-Socialism: Philosophy of the Future

Correctly understood, National-Socialism is much more than a "political" or even a social philosophy: it is a complete, and revolutionary, Weltanschauung, or "philosophy of life". It is profoundly spiritual and profoundly noble — a complete explanation of our human nature, our human Destiny, and our place in the general "scheme of things". In this sense, it is religious because it provides us with the answers which we seek and because it reflects, or represents, the natural order which exists in this world and the cosmos itself. Fundamentally, National-Socialism, as a way of living and as a religious, social and political philosophy, is an expression of the will of Nature. It is also, equally importantly, an expression of the nature and Destiny of the Aryan race itself. As such, it is an Aryan religion.

What Is Aryan Religion?

Aryan religion is the natural religion of those of Aryan race. Such a natural religion is healthy and inspiring for Aryans, and represents, or expresses, the natural ethos, or soul, of the Aryan — that which distinguishes the Aryan, and which thus expresses our natural Destiny, and represents our innate or natural character. As such, our unique Aryan religion expresses our unique Aryan culture.

Our natural, innate character as Aryans can be expressed by three words: curiosity, honour, conquest. By nature, we Aryans, when we are true to ourselves, are curious — we seek to know, to understand, and we have developed the art, or skill, of reason to aid us in this quest, this striving for understanding. By nature, we Aryans, when we are true to ourselves, are honourable — we have an innate sense of fairness, of natural justice, and an innate sense of what is right. What is right, for us as Aryans is, and always has been, what is honourable. By nature, we Aryans, when we are true to ourselves, are conquering — we have an innate desire to overcome obstacles, difficulties and enemies through the power, strength, or the triumph of our will. This desire to conquer is manifest, and has been manifest, in our natural warrior character.

When we express our Aryan nature, by our own lives and by our religious, or moral, beliefs, we are more healthy, more natural, than we would be otherwise. This is so because a natural Aryan religion reflects, and gives expression to, our Aryan nature and thus our conscience — our innermost beliefs and motives. It enables us to be "in harmony with our nature" and thus creates and maintains a healthy psyche in us as individuals.

In effect, a natural Aryan religion enables individuals to live in an Aryan way, and in practice this means our lives have a purpose: that they are fulfilling. When we live in accord with the principles and ideals of our own natural religion, we are fulfilling our own Destiny, as individual Aryans, and thus are aiding the unique Destiny of our race.

Furthermore, an Aryan religion gives us a practical, reasonable and realistic answer to the most fundamental question of all, the question of our own existence — "What is the purpose of our lives as individuals here on this planet we call Earth?"

The old pagan religions of our ancestors expressed some — but not all — of our nature, as Aryans. Examples of these old religions are the ancient Greek religion of the Homeric gods and the religion of the Vikings. Without exception, these old religions were the religions of warriors, and reflected the nature and beliefs of ancient warrior societies, and thus that part of our Aryan nature which is warrior-like. Hence, the morality of these instinctive and natural Aryan religions was always based upon personal honour. These religions also expressed, to a greater or a lesser degree, our essential pagan nature — for instance, our intuitive awareness of the numinosity, or sacredness, of Nature; our intuitive understanding of the joys of living; our innate desire to excel, to strive for excellence and for conquest; and our innate appreciation of beauty and harmony. These old religions also sought to give an answer to the fundamental question of our existence, as they all sought to try and explain the cosmos, how it had arisen, how it worked and how it affected our lives as individuals. Such explanations usually involved supra-human beings called "gods" and "goddesses" who often were personifications of natural or cosmic forces.

However, what all these old religions did not express was our unique Destiny as Aryans. They also did not fully express our unique Aryan nature. The new Aryan religion of National-Socialism alone expresses and represents our true nature, as Aryans, as it alone expresses and represents our unique Destiny, as Aryans. Furthermore, the religion of National-Socialism presents us with a reasoned answer to the fundamental question of our existence, just as it explains in a reasoned way life, and the cosmos itself.

The meaning, or the purpose, of the old religions — like the civilizations our ancestors created — is that they have led us to the understanding of the present. They have prepared the way for the divine revelation made manifest in the new religion of National-Socialism.

The National-Socialist Religion

The fundamental tenets, or principles, of this new Aryan religion are:

1) That there exists a supra-human Being — called the Cosmic Being — and that this Cosmic Being creates, or can create, Order from Chaos. Order is the very life of this Being. Order itself is a new, a better, more evolved, or more excellent arrangement of things.

2) That organic life itself is an expression, or manifestation, of the Order which this Cosmic Being creates, and is thus an expression of the life, the spirit, of this Being.

3) That change is a natural part of the evolution of Order from Chaos and that this, for organic life, involves the organic process of birth-life-death-renewal.

4) That death is not the final end of life, but the beginning of further change, a renewal of the cosmic order itself.

5) That what we call Nature is the Cosmic Being — the Order created by this Being — made manifest on this planet we call Earth. The creative force, or energy, which is present in Nature, and which produces, and causes changes in, living things — including ourselves — is this Cosmic Being, living and evolving, that is, creating more Order.

6) That we, as individuals, are this Cosmic Being — the very cosmos itself — made manifest. We sentient (that is, conscious and aware) beings are the striving of the Cosmic Being for more cosmic Order.

7) That our evolution, as human beings, is an increase in the cosmic Order and expresses the purpose, the life, or the will of the Cosmic Being. Thus the striving, or struggle, for order (or excellence) — for evolution toward higher forms — here on this planet is how the Cosmic Being works on this planet of ours, and is thus natural and necessary, for without it, there would be no order and no evolution toward higher forms.

8) That the Cosmic Being exists, or functions, in us through honour (or fairness), through curiosity (or reason) and through conquest (or the triumph of individual will).

Thus, an honourable individual is someone who is doing the will, or accomplishing the work, of this divine Cosmic Being.

9) That race and excellence of individual character express the will of this divine Being — of this Being working through Nature to bring about more Order, more diversity and more difference through evolution.

Thus, race is one way in which this Cosmic Being is manifest to us, as human beings on this planet of ours. Race thus expresses the essence of our humanity — of what makes us human. To preserve, and to further evolve, each race is to act in accord with the will, the purpose, of the divine creator, while to undermine or seek to destroy race and racial difference and diversity, is to act against the will of the divine creator. Each unique race can and should evolve, according to its own unique nature.

10) That the Aryan race has been given a special mission by the Cosmic Being who has endowed this race, through Nature and through evolution, with the gift of a unique character which is representative of the divine Being itself.

This nature is expressed in the honour, curiosity and conquest of the Aryan race, and made manifest by the civilization which Aryans create when they live according to their divine nature.

The unique and special Destiny of the Aryan race is to bring the divine light of civilization into the world, and to spread this light — the honour and the reason of civilization — out into the cosmos itself by venturing forth to explore and colonize the star-systems of the cosmos.

11) That the unique Destiny of the Aryan — and the unique importance of race and excellence of individual character — was first revealed to us by Adolf Hitler, and that the life, work and death of Adolf Hitler was a manifestation, on this planet of ours, of the Cosmic Being.

VII

The National-Socialist Way Of Life

Honour, loyalty and duty are the fundamental ideals of National-Socialism. They represent nobility in action, and the striving to live by these ideals creates, or can create, a noble character in the individual. The Nine Fundamental Principles of National-Socialism, given below, express the practical essence of National-Socialism, for individuals, and are thus a guide to how a National-Socialist should live his life.

1) In everything that you do or undertake, strive for excellence.

2) Do your duty by placing the welfare and well-being of your race before your own self-interest, and seek to preserve and extend your race by marrying among your own kind, and by producing/nurturing healthy children.

3) Uphold the noble ideal of honour in your own personal life, and strive to live, and die, in an honourable way.

4) Strive to uphold the noble, human, ideals of fairness and courtesy by being fair and courteous toward others, and strive to treat animals in a humane way.

5) Be loyal to those you have sworn loyalty to, if necessary unto death. Your word, once given, should not be broken since to break your word is a dishonourable act.

6) Be intolerant of what is harmful and unhealthy to, and what endangers, your race, and what is detrimental to the other creations of the divine.

7) Reverence Nature and be respectful toward what reveals or expresses the divine.

8) Always be ready, willing and physically fit enough to defend yourself and your family — and thus your own personal honour — and always carry a defensive weapon to enable your honour to be saved.

9) Seek always to make the world a better, a more noble, place by striving to make others aware of the noble ideals of honour, loyalty and duty.

Appendix I
The National-Socialist Honour Code

The word of a man of honour is his bond — when a man of honour gives his word ("On my word of honour...") he means it, since to break one's word is a dishonourable act. An oath of loyalty or allegiance to someone, once sworn by a man of honour ("I swear by my honour that I shall...") can only be ended either: (i) by the man of honour formally asking the person to whom the oath was sworn to release him from that oath, and that person agreeing so to release him; or (ii) by the death of the person to whom the oath was sworn. Anything else is dishonourable.

A man of honour is prepared to do his honourable duty by challenging to a duel anyone who impugns his honour or who makes dishonourable accusations against him. Anyone so challenged to a duel who, refusing to publicly and unreservedly apologize, refuses also to accept such a challenge to a duel for whatever reason, is acting dishonourably, and it is right to call such a person a coward and to dismiss as untruthful any accusations such a coward has made. Honour is only satisfied — for the person so accused — if he challenges his accuser to a duel and fights it; the honour of the person who so makes such accusations or who so impugns another man's honour, is only satisfied if he either unreservedly apologizes or accepts such a challenge and fights such a duel according to the etiquette of dueling. A man of honour may also challenge to a duel and fight in such a duel, a person who has acted dishonourably toward someone whom the man of honour has sworn loyalty or allegiance to or whom he champions.

A man of honour always does the duty he has sworn to do, however inconvenient it may be and however dangerous, because it is honourable to do one's duty and dishonourable not to do one's duty. A man of honour is prepared to die — if necessary by his own hand — rather than suffer the indignity of having to do anything dishonourable. A man of honour can only surrender to or admit to defeat by someone who is as dignified and as honourable as he himself is — that is, he can only entrust himself under such circumstances to another man of honour who swears to treat his defeated enemy with dignity and honour. A man of honour must die fighting, or die by his own hand, rather than subject himself to the indignity of being defeated by someone who is not a man of honour.

A man of honour treats others courteously, and women gallantly, and is only disdainful and contemptuous of those who, by their attitude, actions and behaviour treat him with disrespect or try to harm him, or who treat with disrespect or try to harm those he has personally sworn loyalty to or whom he champions. A man of honour, when called upon to act, or when honour bids him to act, acts without hesitation and if necessarily quite ruthlessly provided always that honour is satisfied.

A man of honour, in public, is somewhat reserved and controlled and not given to displays of emotion, or to boasting, preferring as he does deeds to words.

A man of honour does not lie, once having sworn on oath ("I swear on my honour that I shall speak the truth...") as he does not steal from others or cheat others for such conduct is dishonourable. A man of honour may use guile or cunning to deceive his sworn enemies, and his sworn enemies only, provided always that he does not personally benefit from such guile or cunning and provided always that honour is satisfied.

A man of honour strives to dress in a clean, discreet way in practical clothes devoid of ostentation and suitable to the task at hand.

Appendix II
A National-Socialist Glossary

[Note: What follows are brief explanations of some of the main terms important for an understanding of National-Socialism. Words marked with a * are defined in this Glossary.]

Archetype:

An archetype expresses an *ideal, or is a representation of what is ideal. As such, an archetype represents what is beautiful and harmonious — a striving for excellence — and is possessed of *numinosity. What is archetypal is what is most representative of, or most excellent about, a particular thing.

Aryan:

The term 'Aryan' is used to describe the White or Caucasoid race which originated in Europe. The term itself derives from an ancient Aryan word for 'a noble man' — Airya/Arya — and is thus apt to describe this noble, heroic, race.

The Aryan Ethos:

Ethos is the characteristic nature, or spirit/soul, of a particular *civilization, folk or race. The things which normally embody the ethos of a people, or race, are art, literature, achievements, music, customs and a particular religious attitude or religion.

The Aryan ethos — that which marks the Aryan and which expresses the true nature of the Aryan race — can be described in three words: Honour, Curiosity and Conquest.

The Arts of Civilization:

These are Arts, or skills, the acquisition of which makes an individual civilized. Someone who has mastered the Arts of Civilization is thinking, acting and living like an Aryan, since these Arts embody the essence of the Aryan ethos. The Arts are: the Art of personal Honour; the Art of Combat or fighting; and the Art of Knowledge, of seeking to learn about the vast cultural and scientific heritage of Aryan civilizations.

Civilization:

Civilization is an ordered way of living — superior to primitive, selfish barbarism — created by inventive warrior tribes who uphold the *noble personal values of *honour, loyalty and duty. It arises primarily from co-operation: from individuals being willing to place the welfare, security and future of their folk before their own self-interest.

Fundamentally, civilization depends for its creation and its maintenance on inventive, heroic, honourable individuals. Civilization is the pursuit of, or struggle for, *excellence by a heroic, noble and inventive folk or community who uphold honour and who thus create a society where *freedom is the norm.

Culture:

Culture is the term used to describe those things which can aid an individual to improve or advance himself, and thus fulfill the potential for change latent within him. Each race produces its own unique culture, and the distinctive culture of a particular race embodies or manifests the unique *ethos, or soul/spirit, of that race.

Decadence:

Decadence is a decline in or loss of *excellence. Decadence undermines and destroys individual vitality and health, and is basically a placing of self-interest, and self-indulgence, before personal honour and before the duty an individual has — as a thinking, civilized, being — toward striving to continue evolution by pursuing noble ideals.

Decadence, on the individual level, is a lack of character — a lack of will. On the artistic level, decadence is a lack of self-control, a pandering to weakness, a removal of high standards, and it is the philosophy, and the aesthetics, of the pretentious, the weak and the cowardly.

Democracy:

Real or genuine democracy means individual *honour and *freedom — it is an expression of the desire or will of a living, or organic, community to determine its own future. An organic society is totally different from, and totally opposite to, the lifeless, abstract modern societies created by abstract political or social dogma. Fundamentally, an organic society is an ethnic State.

Contrary to a popular misconception, the Greek word 'demos' does not simply mean 'people' in general. Rather, it originally meant 'the clan' in contrast to their 'chiefs'; in later Attic Greek, the word came to mean 'the community' or folk itself — distinguished as this community was by ties of blood. In both cases, a distinct racial or folk-community is meant.

A real democracy is a society, composed of members of the same race, where the ultimate authority resides in the folk-communities of that society. It is an ethnic nation, or community, where the individuals of that community co-operate together for their own well-being and advancement by upholding the ideals of honour and freedom.

Excellence:

Excellence is what is supreme; what is worthy; what is the best. Excellence is the setting of high-standards and the pursuit of them. It embodies what is archetypal or *ideal. Excellence implies a moving-forward, an evolution or improvement to a higher level, this higher level being set by an ideal or archetype, or some other expression of harmonious perfection.

On the individual level, excellence implies self-discipline and a noble motivation — a striving toward a supra-personal goal or ideal.

Freedom:

Freedom is the basis of the civilized way of living and means an individual having the basic right to determine their own life by choosing allegiance and by being able and willing to physically defend themselves, their own honour and that of their blood-kin. (The English word 'free' originally meant "to love (and defend) one's kin".)

Thus freedom means the right to be able to bear and to use arms or weapons in self-defence and in defence of one's own honour and that of one's kin. It further means the right to be able to do this, in accordance with a code of honour, with no one else and no group, institution or officials, being able to interfere, judge or restrict and take away the liberty of any individual so defending themselves and their honour, whatever the outcome. Thus, were a man to defend his own honour in an honourable way — according to a code of honour — such as, for example, by a duel, or a fair fight, then that man not only has the right to fight such a duel, but also has the right to be at liberty were his opponent to be injured or even killed in such a duel or fight. Anything other than this is un-civilized and tyrannical — a denial of freedom.

Real freedom means individuals of noble character having the ability and the power to determine their own lives in accord with what is noble and dutiful.

Honour:

Honour is the setting of high and *noble standards of personal conduct. The high standards set by honour derive from idealism and thus from the pursuit of excellence.

Honour is the instinct for nobility made conscious, and a code of honour is a means whereby the high standards of honour are set and a means whereby individuals strive to uphold and maintain them. Honour is the basis for the human morality of National-Socialism.

Idea:

An idea is basically a created model for which no natural *archetype exists. Abstract ideas express a concept of what is 'common' — that is, what is not the best; what is not of excellence. An idea is the exact opposite of an *ideal. Ideals represent and express personal, or individual, character; an idea represents an abstraction which individuals are expected to conform to or be subservient to.

Ideal:

An ideal is something which enshrines what is excellent, or which represents what is the best. It is a practical embodiment of excellence itself; some thing, or some person, distinguished because that thing or that person is the best — for example, the most courageous person in a battle who is distinguished from their comrades by their brave actions.

On the individual level, idealism means individuals undertaking deeds of exceptional merit which mark them out, and doing this because they themselves strive for the excellence of an ideal or ideals.

An ideal stands directly opposed to an abstract idea. Ideals are human — that is, organic; as such they are possessed of *numinosity; they are *archetypal and thus inspiring for individuals. Ideas are abstract, and lifeless — and thus essentially in-human. National-Socialism is based upon human ideals; all modern societies are based upon lifeless abstract ideas.

Justice:

Justice exists in, and only exists in, fair, noble individuals who uphold a code of honour and who strive to live by that code of honour.

Justice does not exist in, and cannot exist in anything abstract, be it in a law, a 'Court of Law', an institution or whatever. Real justice lives only in individuals and cannot be abstracted out from them into a dead, life-less, abstract form.

A just society is a society which is noble and which allows individuals to test or prove their own honour and innocence — and thus stay free — by trial, by combat or by having someone champion them in such a trial.

Nobility:

Nobility refers to personal character — it means having a noble character or nature. Someone who is noble is someone who is honourable — who exhibits those traits of character which represent honour: that is, fairness, heroism, courage, and gallantry.

Honour is the instinct for nobility made conscious, and a code of honour is a means whereby the high standards of honour are set and a means whereby individuals strive to uphold and maintain them.

Numinous:

Something is numinous if it has beauty and awe. Something which is divinely-inspired or divinely-representative is numinous. What is numinous is generally what is revered, or regarded as sacred — as spiritual or divine. Nature herself is numinous — a wonderful, awe-inspiring mystery.

Social Engineering:

Social Engineering is the term used to describe the manipulation and control of people by abstract social/political *ideas. Our modern lifeless, multi-racial societies are the direct product of decades of social engineering, of social/political ideas and abstract doctrines made law.

THE ANTI-HUMANS

by D. Bacu (307 pp., hb.) describes what was done to the young men whom Corneliu Z. Codreanu, the founder of the Legionary Movement in Romania, inspired, when seven years after his brutal murder, Romania was delivered to the Bolsheviks. They were subjected to what is the most fully documented Pavlovian experiment on a large number of human beings. It is likely that the same techniques were used on many American prisoners in Korea and Vietnam. The Anti Humans is a well-written document of great historical and psychological importance. Reading it will be an emotional experience you will not forget. "A sequel to Orwell's 1984" —R.S.H. "A searing exposé of Red bestiality!" —Dr. A.J. App). THE ANTI-HUMANS, Order #01013. SHOULD EISENHOWER BE GIVEN THE "CROMWELL TREATMENT?"

By
Allan Callahan

ZOG (our Zionist Occupation Govt) pretends to be very keen on punishing "war criminals."I call this "hypocrisy,"but ZOG can easily prove otherwise by punishing one of its own from its "War For Jewish Predominance" (WWII).

As far as I know, the words "war criminal" were not used back in the days of Oliver Cromwell. Had they been, possibly Charles II and his supporters might have used them after the Restoration, because they wanted to punish Cromwell in some way. They couldn't do so in the normal sense, he being already dead, but they wanted to do something that would be symbolic, or that would send a message. So Cromwell was one of those rare individuals who was hanged after he was dead.

Charles II hated him because Cromwell was instrumental in having his father, Charles I, beheaded. A few years after Cromwell's death, his body was dug up from Westminster Abbey and hanged on a triple gibbet at Tyburn. Two of his generals were hanged with him, and the bodies of his mother, sister and granddaughter were dragged from their graves.

After six hours, Cromwell and his two generals were taken down, beheaded, and the bodies thrown into a deep pit by the gibbet. The heads were taken to Westminster Hall, stuck on poles, and left there till at least 1684, or 23 years after being exhumed. Afterward, the mummified head of Cromwell was kept for various periods by different people, till March 25, 1960, when it was finally interred near Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, his alma mater, in a secret spot near the chapel.

Did Cromwell deserve all this? Well, he did treat Ireland with great severity, and exiled a large number of Englishmen who opposed his rule and gave him trouble, to the northern part of that country. In most respects, however, his administration was well run. The public revenues were economically managed, and every man was given liberty of conscience.

Cromwell was a great statesman and civil administrator, and in his personal habits, temperate and industrious. And even though he thought Charles I should die, he was courteous and kind to his three young children, who were held captive by the Parliamentary army; even going so far as to kneel to them in loyalty.

As President, Eisenhower was, it seems, a fairly able administrator, doing pretty well in handling the economy, and he did a good thing in getting the Interstate Highway System started; but as a general, he was terribly cruel to his German POWs after the war ended. Anyone who has read OTHER LOSSES, by James Bacque (Stoddard Publishing Co., Ltd., Canada, 1991), should feel sickened afterward by the horrors brought to light there.

Eisenhower didn't just starve his prisoners for about a year after WWII ended; he also did other horrible things, like sometimes shutting off the water in some of the camps for up to three days at a time, forcing some of the prisoners to drink their own urine. He also denied many shelter, sanitary facilities and medical care. Mail service was withheld for about a year, till the spring of 1946. Sick prisoners often had to sleep in the mud, while nearby hospital beds sat empty.

About a million died from starvation, disease, neglect and other cruelties. It is pretty obvious as to why. Eisenhower apparently had long hated the Germans, but what really sent him into a towing rage was his visits to some of the German internment camps as soon as the war ended. In some (but not all), there were a lot of sick, starving and dead inmates lying around. These were caused by the conditions of the war, and were not part of any "extermination policy."

Yes, tee things that enraged him the most were caused by the military actions of his own forces, particularly the raids by his air-fleets. What did he think his bombers were dropping—flowers???

Now, what about the "Final Solution?"Yes, there was such a plan, but it meant resettlement, not "extermination."An obnoxious American once asked Hitler where he got his ideas for his policies toward the Jews, and he said he got them from us, from our treatment of the Indians. We resettled a lot of them on reservations during the 19th century, but WWII profoundly changed the resettlement plans of the National Socialists (many Jews were resettled before, during and after the war, however).

Eisenhower was part-Jew, and was questioned about this when he sought to enter West Point. The academy was more concerned about things like this in those days, but (unfortunately) let him in anyway.

How much his Jewishness had to do with his actions is anybody's guess, but it most likely had something to do with it. Maybe he was just taking a leaf from the book of his tribal god, Yahweh. This diety hated the human race so much that he drowned the whole kit and caboodle, except for Noah and his family. He even drowned all the animals, saving only the smidgen on the ark. We don't know why he targeted them also, as they were innocent.

Eisenhower gave lip-service to the Geneva Convention, while at the same time secretely undercutting it to an astounding degree. He claimed there was a food shortage, but this was a lie. The wheat production that was lost in Germany and France was more than made up for by the yields in the U.K, and North America. There was also plenty of corn and the largest production of potatoes ever.

Why didn't the "food shortage" also affect the POWs under British and Canadian control? They were able to feed their prisoners adequately. At any rate, if there really had been a shortage, and Eisenhower couldn't feed his POWs, why didn't he just release them? The tough talking (but humane acting) Gen. Georgs Patton started releasing his prisoners as fast as he could, and let go many before he was stopped. He was then relieved of his command and transferred to a position where he couldn't release any more. Eisenhower said the Germans were beasts, while Patton said they were the most decent people in Europe.

There were plenty of supplies. Gen. Everett Hughes said, on 3-19-45, after visiting huge supply depots in Naples and Marseille, that there were "more stocks than we can ever use. Stretch as far as eye can see."

No really incriminating orders, of cnurse, were ever signed by Eisenhower. Instead, he used "winks and nods," with certain top deputies. All told, the number who knew exactly what was going on, numbered, at a minimum, 23. He kept the press out of the camps, saying there was typhus in them, and other diseases. True, but they were caused by him!!

The dense overcrowding in the barbed-wire cages eased because of the massive death rates. The rations for U.S. troops were set at 4,000 calories per day. Most of the prisoners got far less than the 2,000 Eisenhower claimed they were getting, and in many cases, far less than half!! The prisoners could not write and tell anyone what was going on, because no mail was allowed out, or in. (As aforementioned, mail service was withheld for about a year).

Red Cross parcels were not allowed in either, nor ICRC delegates. Hitler had allowed the organization to bring in extra food for Allied prisoners in Germany, but Eisenhower would not allow them to help feed German prisoners. Nor would he let German civilians help, even threatening them with death if they tried to slip any food in through the wire.

Two freight trains from Switzerland, loaded with food, were sent into Germany. They were told that the "warehouses were full," and were not allowed to unload. They returned.

Also consider that American Gen. Mark Clark took very good care of his POWs in Italy. A "food shortage?". Hogwash!!! The only shortage of any kind was a shortage of common decency in the makevp of part-Jew Dwight D. Eisenhower. We can imagine him sitting in his opulent office, never once deigning to set his polished boots down into the muck and mire that his prisoners were living and sleeping in, gloating and delighting in the misery and suffering he was causing, and the deaths.

After the soldiers were dead, one final indignity awaited them. Before they were thrown upon trucks like garbage, their clothing was stripped off, along with their watches and jewelry, and sold on the black market in Germany. Former Atty. Gen. of the U.S., Francis Biddle, visited this market and called it "terrific."

To sum up, I don't know if Oliver Cromwell deserved to be hanged after he was dead or not. Probably not. But Charles II and his Royalists wanted to make a point, and they made it.

Now, you might ask if I think Eisenhower deserves the same treatment? Well, personally I think hanging is too good for him, but it would make a point. ZOG says it wants to punish all war criminals, and not a bigger one ever lived than him. He may very well be the granddaddy of them all. Hanging him would show that ZOG is sincere, and would make a strong point.

Can you think of a stronger one? ❑

When Ignorance is NOT Bliss

By

Harold N. Simpson, Biochemist

Ignorance of fire does not prevent burned fingers and ignorance of food rules brings its own penalties. The so-called Christians do pray but obviously they either don't understand or don't believe what they pray. They pray, "Our Father.... Thy Will be Done...." Now, is it God's Will that man live on fresh food or on stale food? Is there a difference? There certainly is!

And again they pray, "...give us this day our daily bread". "Daily bread" means fresh bread. Wheat flour has a fresh time of three days after being milled. Now, with the milling of the flour in Minneapolis, the processing of flour, and then shipping of the flour to a warehouse in a distant city, the flour in our bread is far more than three days old. So the question is, how does one make "fresh" bread out of stale flour? Does the baking make flour "fresh"?

When food grows, it is alive—FRESH. When food dies—the cells die—it is now dead. Dead food soon oxidizes. Surface cholesterol oxidizes immediately, fats in about 40 hours.

This oxidation is the first step in a long chain of biochemical oxidation/reduction reactions that change the food into dirt. So, stale food is dirty. This dirty (STALE) food is a defilement of the human body. One difference between a man and a dog is, the dog thrives on stale food. A human needs FRESH food.

Few people know the meaning of the word "fresh" and have no idea of the penalties that follow from eating stale food. The preachers have no knowledge of what their Holy books say about stale food. The preachers don't know the meaning of the word "fresh" and they have not taught their people. They don't know the meaning of the word "stale". They don't know that stale food is a defilement of the body and they pay no attention to Paul's words that a defilement of the body brings destruction.

> "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."
> St. Paul, 1 Cor. 3:16-17

The result is, a lot of Americans think they are "good Christians", obeying the Divine Laws, when, actually, they daily violate one of the most important Laws of Life. They defile their bodies with stale food and they're suffering the consequences.

Certainly, a man who gets drunk twice a week has no reason to think he is a "good Christian". Is the same man who three times per day defiles his body with dirty (stale) food also a "a good Christian"? His destruction just takes a few decades longer.

It's time that the preachers awaken to what's happening in the real world and to realize the vast change in quality of food between 1900 and 1990.

The first and most important QUALITY of food is freshness. Loss of food freshness is followed by: loss or perversion of religious instincts, and eventual inability to distinguish wrong from right.

Since ancient times it has been the duty of the religious teachers to tell people what is fit to eat and what is not fit to eat. The preachers just don't do their job and their followers are headed for destruction. Take a look at what's going on in the world.

Some will object that the preacher has plenty to do to learn the details of theology and there is not time for him to become a graduate biochemist. That objection shows an ignorance of the basics of food. A person does not have to be a biochemist to know the basic principles of food. A man can learn the basics of food in one minute. Here it is: We must eat food of high quality. The three prime qualities of food are: Freshness, Wholesomeness, and Flavor. We need to know the meanings of these words. Few do!

"Fresh" means that the cells of the food are still alive when it goes into the cookpot. After food is cooked, the food is dead and should be eaten promptly as it soon begins to oxidize and become stale. The reason freshness is so important is, if food is 100% fresh, it is ZERO percent stale.

"Wholesome" means to eat the whole vegetable, grain, or animal, as much as is possible. If these foods are healthy, they will contain all the complex food elements needed to maintain health.

"Flavor" guides us to rejecting bad food and eating the foods that we need. It didn't take more than a minute to learn all this!

Now, when have you heard a preacher ever tell you that fresh food is important and that stale food is dirty food and a defilement of the body? If they don't know these basics of food and some of the deleterious effects of stale food on the mind and health, they really are ignorant of food. Considering that the ancient duty of the priesthood was always to tell people what was fit to eat and not fit to eat, the preachers are neglecting their duty, to the detriment of their followers. There is a reason for this. These preachers put all emphasis on spiritual things and they ignore the material aspect of things. The money is on the wrong side. The preachers ignore the truth that man is a unique combination of both the spiritual and the material. They follow the Gnostic Heresy, They are heretics and the people suffer from their heresy and faulty leadership.

There will be no improvement in our national mess until the food is improved and the food is not going to be improved without the force of religious teaching. The preachers must resume their ancient duty of telling people what is fit to eat and what is not fit to eat.

"All the great religions which have endured down the ages, however different in their orthodoxies, were founded on the central belief that human existence, like everything else in the universe, is governed by immutable laws of cause and effect which the intelligence must discover and obey."

THE Y2K COCKROACH

By

Robert Frens

O Doomsday, my Doomsday. Wherefore art thou Doomsday?

I was recently sent a report, The Day the World Shuts Down, apparently written by a Bruce Tippery who may, or may not have been, a little tippery when he wrote it. He wants to sell you something, of course, but has to properly deaden your senses and unlock your wallet first. He tries to do this by yammering about the already yammered about Y2K computer "bug." The "Y" means year and the "2K" (2 kilo) stands for 2000, thus the "Year 2000."

Everyone from the Christian TV dimwit duo, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Van Impe," to the local geek, has heard about this asteroid of virtual space and has joined the silly choir. Salesman Bruce starts out by stating that computer programmers decided, way back in the dark 1960's, that they would save valuable computer memory space by shortening year dates such as 1976 to 76, thus — in ignorance, we are told — doing their customers one gigantic favor. The purpose was to save space by eliminating 2 digits, or 2 bytes, as it were.

To bring this nonsense into perspective, I'll mention the familiar 3 inch popular computer diskette. This iron oxide coated wafer of plastic contains about 14 square inches of area which is room for 1.4 million bytes (characters). One byte therefore occupies the same physical space as does the cross section of a single hair! How many 2-digit year dates occur in any representative batch of computer code or data? A little reflection, and calculator work if you are so inclined, readily points out the fallacy of this so-called "space saving." (Space saving is generally accomplished by "compression," or other algorithms.)

Salesman Bruce then continues the fable with the remark that when the year odometer rolls over to "00," the processing will assume that the year 1900 is meant. This will cause bank accounts to vanish; insurance policies to be canceled; missiles to be launched; drinking water to stop flowing and probably, toe nail fungus. Although he frequently uses "crash" to describe every computer problem under the sun, let it be known that "crash" means one of two things: (1) smoke rolls out from somewhere because of a physical failure of some bit of man-made junk thus causing the computer to go physically "ape," and (2) the program itself goes "blooey" and internally chases its own tail thus making it appear that everything has gone to meet that great virtual spirit in the sky.

Salesman Bruce, in addition to his already growing pile of fertilizer, tosses on another scoop by stating that "99" is used often to terminate a computer's operation. Wow! See the implications of that one? Honor students would certainly be annoyed when their grades caused a computer to flip out. Imagine the grocery business during a 99 cent sale. 'Tis gossip that Bruce is dealing with and most of it is pure sausage. Often, during the input of data, the computer has no way of knowing where the end of it is, thus programmers often invokê ways to tag the data stream with an end value which has not occurred previously. 99 has certainly been used for this purpose but it has never, to my knowledge, been used as a command to stop computer operation altogether, as in Bruce's propaganda.

Assuming that 99 is a command, then how could the computer distinguish this from 99 as a data item, or address reference? It does this by accepting those bytes within a certain context as do we when we hear things such as "there" (they're, their) or "your" (you're, yore) and so on. Salesman Bruce has all of the banks going loopy at certain times depending upon which flavor of loopy he is dispensing. Banks do use computers. Banks do use pencils. Banks do employ people. If all of the employees at your bank instantly died from over-taxation, would the bank cease operation? If the pencil sharpener busted its blade, would the bank shut down until the Pyramids turn into pillars of salt? Bank computer operations are printed out and this is called "hard copy." This paper pile is microfilmed (often microfiche) and then stored in vaults. This represents their permanent set of data. If the electricity suddenly stopped — a far more serious problem than anything emanating from some computer network foul-up — I am sure the bank would find a way to send the ATF to your home, complete with tanks, flame throwers and anthrax, in order to collect that mortgage payment. If the electricity continued to flow, and the computers all went to virtual Nirvana, that payment notice would still be on time and only a quick trip to Zimbabwe would get you off the payment hook.

Salesman Bruce would also have you believe that the Pentagon would grow a sixth side and that the entire Military would be shut down depending upon when those nasty 99's appeared. Since the friendly business of the Military is death and destruction, I am confident that they have alternative plans. The Military always leaves room for, and welcomes, schemes for contingencies. Even guard duty has its supernumeraries, as all service men recognize. As an aside, the Military does its thing as a matter of business with not an ounce of hate to be found. It is an observable fact that more mischief has been perpetrated in the name of "love" than it ever has under the flag of "hate."

Salesman Bruce has all of the aircraft control towers going bananas. Woe to the airborne! He conveniently ignores those thousands of airports which have no computers at all and operate entirely by radio communications. Even without radios, people still have eyeballs, haven't they? All pilots are required to know the red, green and white light signals. Sure there would be a crash, a smash and a flop, once in awhile, here or there. Heck, this happens even with computers or haven't you been paying attention to the news lately? What with high-tech equipment being progressively manned by low-tech help, it might not be such a bad idea if the computers indeed all burned out. It might be well to remember that the 1948 Berlin Air Lift (Operation Vittles; lasted over 1 year) — was one of the most congested airport uses of all time — was done with make-shift control towers and no computers at all. Traffic controllers are the policeman of busy air corridors. Computers are one of their handy electronic tools which are no better than the people who utilize them. At one time, before the blockheads decided to meddle with the world's best public education system, youngsters were taught Roman numerals and given a taste of the Julian calendar. In essence, the Julian calendar was a day count from "day one," that is, the beginning of the beginning. Thus, July 4, 1997 was Julian day 2,450,634 as counted from some point in the 40005000 B.C. period — I forgot exactly when. July 4, 1998 is day number 2,450,999 which is 365 days after — no surprise for those who have mastered subtraction. This daily count is very convenient for exacting the number of days from one point to another. Many things are reckoned by merely counting days since a certain event without the necessity of a Gregorian date ever arising.

All sorts of enterprises, from banks to Internet servers, use a similar day count from some identified 'zero' date. From this count, the month, day and year are calculated. No big deal. I have a tiny program which accepts dates in the usual 'mmddyy' format where the 'yy' represents the year sans the '19' prefix which identifies the century. A peek at the code shows how easily one can slightly alter a handful of bytes so that it is workable for other, and multiple, centuries. How much written code is out there which needs this tweaking is anyone's guess. However, anyone with an I.Q. above that of a prune could have foreseen such problems years ago. I have often wondered how any programmer could be this blind to future dates, but then again, our present system of education is like the old grey mare — she ain't what she used to be.

Salesman Bruce has something to sell after you are sufficiently brain rattled and pale. He offers an exclusive, and extensive, Y2K Preparation, Protection and Survival Kit. Surprise! Surprise! And when the Y2K non-event arrives, Bruce will be happily spending the money the suckers sent to him. Caveat emptor.

What shall I do as the millions of horrified boobs pester everyone under the sun asking them if they are "year 2000 compliant"? You'll find me safely removed, giggling to myself, and drinking my hot Ovaltine. What have we learned? Salesman Bruce first creates the problem in your noggin, then he offers to sell you a remedy. Snake oil has always been popular here in America.

(Robert Frenz, http://www.faem.com)

1 July 1998
Note: I am indebted to Mr. Dan Parker for the following:

"Occasionally I read what someone has to say on Y2K just to sort of get an idea of how their brain works and what their politics might be. So, I read your recent essay on the subject and thought I'd send a few comments your way.

"As a software developer with almost 2 decades experience, I have my view of the Y2K matter also. Mine is very simple though — not unlike the Y2K problem itself. You understand how simple the problem is technically, and that alone sets you apart from most who comment on Y2K. I think you missed the mark a little though. The problem is simple, and all of us who actually know how computers and programs that execute on them work know that. However, it is made difficult by this simple little bug — or stupid negligence in engineering — because it is so widespread. There are a lot of obsolete systems (or, legacy systems) with this bug and to fix them all takes a lot of work. I wonder why the conspiracy crackpots haven't claimed that all of those bugs were intentionally planted to create a multi-billion dollar industry?

"Pervasive as it is, the Y2K bugs are not going to bring "the system" down. Anyone who thinks it even can is a peabrain or has some vested interest in making people think it can, i.e. Hal Lindsay, Jack Van Impe, et al." ❑

NEO-CONSERVATIVES:
BOLSHEVIKS OF TOMORROW?

By

Thomas G. Mysiewicz

When Moses Levy ("Karl Marx") penned his manifesto, few imagined that, rather than eliminating poverty and social inequalities, it would serve as a tool for the actual mass murder of close to 100-million Christians.

When Lenin (Ulanov), Trotsky (Lev Bronstein) and the other 1917 revolutionaries seized power in Russia, there were no plans to murder entire segments of the population (at least that anyone knew about). Rather, the Bolsheviks represented that they were empowering the people (proletariat) and were going to create a workers' paradise. Further as a tool to help smash the industrial "bourgeois" and individual nation states, free trade was to be promoted, along with cooperation with international banking and financial interests. This included the taking of substantial lines of credit and complete protection of banking interests in Revolutionary Russia.

Now that communism is "dead", we are told, there can be no repeat of its horrors. Yet, in America, it is apparent from Federal activities in recent years that the Bolshevist repressive structure is being recreated here, aided and abetted by those having a common religious ancestry with the creators of the original. But were are the rank-and-file troops?

I think one only need look as far as the Zionist-inspired philosophy of neo-conservatism to find individuals sufficiently mindless ("ditto") and willing to put into place a system that will destroy the values they claim to hold dear.

With neo-conservatism, the "class enemy" is officially the ephemeral "liberal". However, in reality it is the poor, the homeless, "burdens on society", those wishing to be paid a living wage, and "whackos" (including all non-kosher political activists, white separatists, etc.). These will have to go out and get nonexistent jobs or presumably starve.

A good example of this philosophy is provided by Rush Limbaugh in between pro-Israeli promotions, rantings about an alleged holocaust, and attacks on far-right whackos as exemplified by the Freemen, David Koresh and white separatists. Limbaugh promotes free trade agreements such as NAFTA that put American whites in competition with slave labor worldwide. Further, he portrays the Federal Reserve credit system as benign and even beneficial to "middle America". He supports elimination of most welfare. And he is vociferous in his support of Federal and other police enforcement conducted against "criminals", drug people and "whackos"—along with the massive standing-army-type police, justice and prison system that entails.

In reality, the neo-conservatism proposed by Limbaugh and a host of other promoters has resulted and will result in the export of the bulk of living-wage jobs overseas and will depress wage rates in remaining production/industrial jobs. Further, created service-sector jobs are barely sufficient to support a single person, let alone a family.

The unemployment and underemployment created by this free-trade policy force many individuals onto forms of welfare and break up (and prevent the formation) of families. The neo-conservative's answer is to block welfare, food stamps and other forms of assistance, presumably those cut off can either find nonexistent jobs or starve like the Ukrainians under Stalin.

In a non-debt-based system, the savings from cheap slave-labor produce would at least free up capital for economic expansion. However, with the debt system beloved by neo-conservatives, all surplus capital is soaked up for interest payments (now the largest Federal budget item). This system also dooms most small business—the so-called engine of the neo-conservative economy—to the statistical likelihood of bankruptcy since the Federal Reserve does not expand the FRN/Credit supply fast enough to allow net repayment of outstanding debt.

As small businesses are systematically eliminated by the growing debt monster, their founders gradually join the ranks of those displaced by free trade.

Neo-conservatives frequently claim to be for tax cuts to, as Limbaugh puts it, empower middle America. However, the free trade policies have eliminated huge amounts of tax revenues from import tariffs that have been shifted to...middle America. This is reminiscent of the Bolshevik maxim "all power to the people" and about as true.

Ultimately, the neo-conservative rhetoric of empowerment is just that and elimination of regulation is but a code phrase for allowing the business and financial powers that promote neo-conservatism to do as they wish. The neo-conservative support of massive prison building, overpaid law dogs (making 3 or more times what their charges are paid), and a host of judicial hangers-on is much like ancient pyramid building in that it temporarily disguises economic rot. But, like Bolshevism, the neo-conservative hodgepodge is doomed to fail and, so, those prisons will be needed after all.

Neo-conservatism cannot produce any more than the failed Leftist policies it proposes to replace, i.e., impoverishment, excessive concentration of wealth, abortion and illegitimacy due to financial stress, unemployment, depressed wage rates, bankruptcy, and eventual political liquidation and mass murder to deal with the resulting unrest.

The very neo-conservatives parroting demands for reduction in constitutional rights to trap criminals, drug pushers and "whackos"—and demanding prisons and Arizona-style concentration camps and chain gangs—while ignoring the economic causes of many of these problems, may one day find themselves on the receiving end. Ditto. Because, as old-line Bolsheviks were eventually liquidated after they had helped eliminate the initial target groups, neo-conservatives may find that they are not held to be as valuable by their Zionist masters as they vainly believe themselves to be. ❑

Alabama Erwacht!

By DGR

(July 1998)

Passive intolerance to Christianity and its solidarity still runs rampant within the Jewish community. At issue here is the attention at the national level which the Alabama governor's race has created within the Community-of-the-Chosen. Not only is it a prime example of politics today, it is a perfect example of why we must strongly strive to understand the global political process today.

The Community, mentioned above, is strongly divided between the two candidates in the upcoming election because of their roles in the Grand Design of things (see Douglas Reed's literature if you're not familiar with this term). It is not an election of Semite against Anti-Semite, or even against Non-Semite for that matter, but whether a Zionist with a proven track record will stand to serve the Community better, despite his allegiance to the Christian majority, than a challenger who simply is Jewish in everything but birth.

Incumbent Governor Fob James' Zionist credentials include: his wife, Bobbie, who is a fundamental Christian "millennialist who considers Israel the key to God's plan" and has developed close attachments to Israeli Rabbis and Likud politicians in her fifteen, or so, trips to Israel; Israel as the "cornerstone of his agenda"; an Israel-Alabama trade mission last year which "yielded important contracts for Israeli firms"; and lastly, elevating the small but official state Holocaust acknowledgement into a "major public ceremony" while stating publicly "We stand with you forever, and vow before God Almighty: Never again." His 1995 inauguration was attended by an Israeli Rabbi who flew in for the occasion to blow a shofar (a ram's horn) and read the Torah in Hebrew while the band played Hatikvah (The hymn of the Zionist movement since 1898 and Israeli National Anthem). Mr. James, after his approval and election, obviously was "good for Israel" both culturally and financially. It is easy to understand the appreciation of the Community for the man.

Challenger Siegelman is reportedly not Jewish, however, his wife is a Jewess and he has chosen to raise his daughters in Montgomery's Community. There, they attend a conservative synagogue, Agudath Israel, where their oldest daughter was reportedly recently bat mitzavhed.

Governor James is clearly and strongly supported by the 1200-plus Jewish residents of Mobile who are mostly affluent, wealthy, conservative, business associates and "prominent Republican donors." He is as close to a "Republican Jew" as they can find it seems for this election. Siegelman, on the other hand, is supported by the state's other 7800 or so Jews, who are less affluent and Democrat. An important consideration for the latter group was the lawsuit filed in federal court recently by James to "endorse the rituals", as one Jew so stated, of permitting public prayer in Alabama schools. This action flawed his otherwise impeccable credentials and created the controversy.

In terms of understanding the political picture in America today, this situation is yet another example in the education of conservatives. One might ask how the "beachhead" of Christianity, as one Rabbi phrased it in referring to Alabama, could find itself in the position where the governor's election was between a Zionist incumbent and a Jewish challenger, after all, Alabama's Jewish population is only about one-fifth of 1% of the total! This choice, however, is what Alabama's 4.3 million non-Jews will be allowed to make in their democratic society.

As part of this example we see, once again, that Christianity has compromised its fellow gentiles in the perpetual war against a society controlled exclusively by Jews or their employees. This was accomplished by simply accepting Israel as a "key to God's plan." One must ask in the case of James and his wife — given that they believe in the concept of a benevolent spiritual being creating several forms of life of which one is chosen to control the others- how one could accept being consigned into the inferior position, not to mention constructively working to accelerate a cataclysmic ending and their own self-destruction in the process?

Alabama voters are not likely to see this political election by the light of the Menorah. Economically, most residents simply struggle to survive. They will be provided with the finest in commercial advertising propaganda, the majority of which will focus on race, bond, welfare, crime, education, housing, and gun control issues. Those who want to see beyond these buy-a-vote diversions will be hard pressed to see reality, i.e., regardless of the candidate chosen, Israel will win. This political election, like so many others now globally, is only between different Jewish factions, and which side the gentiles will be tricked into taking.

Down on One Knee ...

by DGR

For the few whose cerebral spaces still function, a sad reminder of the true state of a once-great country was published on the front page of the Los Angeles Times on July 12. The article dealt with Asian immigrants and their "leap to success" during these last two decades.

It was not so much the truth of virtually everything said in that article as the picture it created. In simple words, it was the "dawn coming over the horizon" of a new day, one where we realize that we have lost the battle. On the battle field around us stand the weapons of war. Unlike the golden days of courage, integrity and halberds, are now credit institutions, computers, marketing, real estate, and import/export merchandising. The once crude barbarians, who wore cow hides and traveled by smelly quadraped, now sport Monsieur Pierre Cardin and a Mercedes-Benz. Where once they spoke in short tonal dialects, they now speak fluently in the European romance tongues of our ancestors, languages which few of us have had any interest to learn.

We would be conquered simply by the culture shock during the remainder of this battle if we were alert but few see what is happening. Those that remain standing are too economically fatigued, distracted by propaganda programs or simply entertained by the omni-present (and "-potent" as well) DD implant industry to note the dwindling numbers of their associates. Many have left the battlefield simply by walking off because of old age, choosing to join the cultural parasites in Palm Springs for the rest of their retirement. Those which remain have been abandoned along with the country, both literally and politically.

The Los Angeles Times told, for the first time clearly, that the white population of California is in the minority due to the overwhelming influx of immigration which has occured during the last decade or so. This situation was inevitable as well as anticipated within the next few years, however, it clearly is the state of the state today based on the figures provided. We are told that the term "White" includes 17.3 million of the population while "Black", "Asian-American", and "Latino" occupies 2.0, 3.8, and 9.2 million of the population respectively. The latter total to 15 million. When one considers — that the term "White" includes many different groups, illegal immigration is not addressed therein and the age of the data provided — it is clear that Americans of European descent are now at the mercy of the democratic, yet notably tribal, majority.

This incredible accomplishment is far more outstanding than the fable of David and Goliath and we are now sure to soon watch the world's former leading country fall to the other knee as well, before a final collapse within the next fifty years. Then, the "politics of meaning", as they like to say, should be clearly seen to be the politics of economic despotism while the concepts of liberty and freedom — those ideas and concepts at the foundation of Western Culture — shall be only memories of endearment for those genetically, culturally, politically and economically dispossessed.

Putting all fantasy aside, there is no hope for America to return to its foundations of Western Culture since the parasitic cancer inflicted within the last century has slowly traveled through America's lymph system to infect the body as well as the brain. With the current destruction of the middle class, which shall proceed systematically over the next decade or so, our only hope is to salvage and attach ourselves to another piece of land far away. We do not need them, it is they who need us. If we leave them with nothing but a country full of immigrants all seeking their own tribal self-aggrandizement through monetary enslavement, history will repeat itself and our organic destiny will again fulfill itself in the form of another Roman empire. Or maybe even a fourth Reich!

In case you're wondering, YES! I am furious!!! ❑

They Quail and Quake

By

William R. Wright

University Professors—they truly are the "cowardly lions" of the modern world. They will sail the stormy seas in search of bold new truths but only if they have a handy lifeboat to jump into if the truth gets a little rough. Yes, there were more than a few Jewish commissars in Russia, but let no one suggest that the "six million" story is a swindle. Horrors! Yes, maybe Marshall and the rest of the boys did fib a little at the Congressional hearings, but let no one suggest that FDR really did deliberately send the fleet to the bottom at Pearl Harbor. And yes, maybe the state of Israel really isn't quite as democratic as it pretends, but let no one suggest that it doesn't actually have a right to exist.

Above all, we must not go overboard by telling the plain, unvarnished truth. That would reek of polemics, resurgent neo-Nazism and offend all the well meaning people who just couldn't, wouldn't consider that they may have been wrong all their adult lives. No, we must be moderate and diplomatic about this and let the truth tippy toe out by degrees. Intellectual discourse is all about proper etiquette. If you say "It's all B---" you will get nowhere. If, however, you say "Have you considered..." then, with luck, the muse of a new idea may enter a previously closed mind. Approaching a unniversity professor with the thesis of historical revisionism is like trying to make Connie Coed without actually sticking your hand on her butt. Probing around the nether regions must be done very carefully lest offense be given.

Wining and dining university professors with heretical research is as challenging as tempting a female accustomed only to lying on her back. "Is that really possible...?" Yes, dear, try it you'll like it."

The Man With No Memory

George Catlett Marshall was the man with no memory. He just could not remember what he was doing on the morning Pearl Harbor was bombed or the night before. Some sneaky right wingers believe he was hiding in the White House with FDR awaiting the attack both knew was coming. But that really would be "From Here To Eternity" for the defenders of the Roosevelt legend. Our man Marshall must have been watching "Dallas" while concocting his testimony for the future Joint Congressional Committee. His appointment as ambassador to China and plans for delivering millions to communism undoubtedly preoccupied him while he "could not recall" where he was the evvening of December 6 to the morning of 10 A.M.

December 7. As to why he failed to supply vital intelligence to the Pearl Harbor commanders or issue warnings when war was imminent, only his Chinese communist fortune cookie could say.

Ah, so. Many are the mysteries of men in power. Mao's man Marshall did recommend against the Zionist partition of Palestine. Jewish Nazi "agrarian reformers" in Palestine were somehow distinguishable from the Chinese communist version of same. The Titanic sank because of a glancing blow against an iceberg. George Catlett Marshall sank eight battleships and whitewashed the truth as expertly as the White Star line counting its lifeboats.

Barry Goldwasser: The Conscience of a Zionist "Conservative"

"Extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice; moderation in the pursuit of justice is no virtue." So said the eloquent fraud of Zionist-conservatism in 1964. Barry Goldwasser, a Polish Jew huckster of conservative gold, never once supported the white racial background of the United States or its social structure. Goldwasser was an early advocate of racial integration of the nations armed forces. He "me-tooed" LBJ in his support of Civil Rights.

In his later years he supported the integration of the armed forces with homoexuals. Such positions were never consistent with any true conservatism but carry the smell of the Warsaw Ghetto instead.

Barry Goldwasser was born in the wrong country. Had he grown up in Hitler's Germany he could have taught gambling in the desert at a Zionist training school. (Las Vegas is run by Jewish mobsters so relocation should not be a problem.) Barry was quite a pro-choice fan. He regarded the killing of the unborn as The Pledge of Allegiance to female freedom.

Barry Goldwasser deserves to be remembered. He is the proof that a Jew is always a radical even while flying the flag. ❑

CAUCASIAN GENOCIDE
What It Will Take to Save the White Race From Extinction

By
Gerhard Hauptmann

Amid the oceans of Jewish anti-Nazi/anti-German propaganda vitriol and the just plain poor programming of Jewish-controlled television, there occasionally will appear a show of thinly disguised fiction that will approximate the hidden truth and reality. One such show currently running is called "Prey" (ABC, Thursday, 9 PM Eastern) and the plot of the show is that a superior species of humans has arisen and dwells among us in great numbers and in secrecy, as they appear the same as us externally, but they are all engaged secretly in genocidal warfare against all of us normal humans. The show gets its name from the fact that these superior "humans" or super humans consider normal humans to be their prey. The show tonight ended with the words "There can never be coexistence!" In other words: it is a genocidal race war to the death and extinction of one race or the other. Only a Jew could have thought up such a plot as this, and he couldn't have if he didn't have the real thing to use as a model. All of this is a true picture of reality, and the only disguised part is that it is the Jews who consider themselves to be the superior species of super humans. The genocidal race war to the extinction of one race or the other actually does exist, declared upon the Caucasian race by the entire Jewish race. If that were not bad enough, the Jews also use the other races to help them in their genocidal destruction of the Caucasian race, All of this is neither theory nor opinion, but rather, documented fact supported by an abundance of documentation, for anyone willing to investigate the evidence.

For well over two thousand years, the entire Jewish race has worked unceasingly toward its two-pronged goal of total world conquest and rule and total genocide against the Caucasian race. The Jew's world conquest and domination over the entire planet is virtually complete for all intents and purposed, and all of the Caucasian nations lie in defeat under the jackboot control of the Jews, their masses brainwashed and manipulated to the Jewish will and their morale and fighting spirit broken and subdued, just waiting for the executioner's final axe to fall across their necks. Due to absolute Jewish control over all major means of communication, most Caucasians don't even realize that their nation has fallen under Jewish control. Most Americans don't even know that their so-called "Federal Reserve Bank System" is privately owned exclusively by Jews and that the Jews receive every bit of all currency ever issued by the U. S. Treasury free of charge except for the printing cost and that the Jews then loan that money back to our federal government for both principle and a high interest rate and that it is through this criminal procedure that our national debt of unrepayable proportions has become "owed" to the Jews and that federal bankruptcy of our nation was the Jewish purpose all along. With this bottomless pit of taxpayers' money at their disposal, the Jews have bought up everything of value in America, especially all of our industry and production facilities. Whether we know it or not, our very livelihood is in the hands of the Jews.

As if the theft of the national treasury was not enough money to use against us, the Jews have established for themselves a monopoly in the illicit drug trade, using our legal system, our police, and even our armed forces to eliminate their competition, thereby keeping their illicit drug profits astronomically high. With these two windfall operations and many more not enumerated, the Jews have had plenty of money with which to bribe all of our politicians, and Jewish control over all of the major media has meant that no politician can resist the will of the Jews and survive in the political arena. The result is that the Jews have gained absolute control over our government. Democracy is dead and nothing but a sham, and the truth of the matter is that we live under the tyrannical dictatorship of the conquering Jews. The Jews allow us to delude ourselves into believing that we are still self-governing, while they get together the few last things that they need to hold absolute power over us. One of those things is to get our nuclear weapons and military forces under their control in the Jewish-controlled United Nations. The other thing is to confiscate all of the firearms out of the hands of the American public. When these things are done, America, the last bastion of hope for freedom and the Caucasian race, will fall completely to Jewish tyranny.

At this juncture, seeing how fully the Jewish race has come to dominate our race and our country and all of the other races and countries, it is easy to see how the Jews could come to view themselves as a race of super humans superior to all other humans, and indeed they are so in this one respect of dominating others. The new episode of "Prey" ran tonight on television and the superior species was officially named as "Homo Dominace" which was quite apropos to both the show and to reality. However, on the show the major news media is used to warn the public about the existence of "the new species," but in reality the Jews own and control all of the major news media and no such warnings are allowed. Another discrepancy is that the group resisting the superior species on the show get the full cooperation of the public of normal humans, while in reality the Jews have used their control over the media to brainwash the public of Caucasian humans against listening to anyone who speaks against the Jews. The people on the show freak out to learn that there are one hundred thousand of "the new species" among us, but in reality there are more than twenty million Jews either already in America or invading our shores through prejudicial immigration. Another strange and out-of-place correlation on the show is that the race war of species is depicted as being between Caucasians and a superior species which looks exactly like Caucasian, which is indeed the case in reality.

Although the contrary is the case on the television show, resistance to "Homo Dominace" in the real world is quite pathetic, revealing our true inferior nature in such matters, which just happen to be the most important of all matters, like: survival of the species. Although there are a goodly number of resisters out there who work hard at publishing newspapers and magazines and newsletters and pamphlets and flyers and sell books on the subject, this surface-scratching micro-media work falls woefully short of the substantial amount of news coverage needed to reach a significant percentage of the public to allow us to have a fair chance against our tyrannical adversary. Something much more drastic and dynamic is required to even the "playing" field. Our biggest problem is one of mass-communications. That is the pivotal point. We either have to find our way around this problem or find a way of breaking down their doors and taking our major media back from them and using it against them, as they have done to us. There may be one easy way around this problem. A whispering campaign. Word of mouth is a much more powerful weapon, potentially, than anyone ever imagined. If people would take is seriously enough and were motivated enough to apply themselves diligently and energetically to the task, we already have enough strategically placed people in the know about the Jewish conspiracy to get the word about it to every American, if our patriotic publications would just help out and get the news of the plan to their own readers. But if we can't get this simple job done, there will be no other option than for armed patriots to commandeer television stations and broadcast the news about the Jewish conspiracy for as long as they can hold their positions. Some computer genius or electronic specialist Might find a way to overlay television and radio signals with signals of our own, or a band of mobile high-powered radio broadcast units in large cities might reach a lot of people with our message, but that seems to be the least likely of prospective events.

The purpose of our efforts to obtain some form of mass communication is to inform the public of the existence of our "Homo Dominace" enemies and their conspiracy against us, and then the goal is to remove the hands of the enemy from the levers of control in this country. If we have to remove their cold, dead fingers from those levers and drag them off feet first with a bullet hole between their eyes, so be it. If we have to kill every last one of them to stop this and make sure that it never happens again, then it simple must be done. We must find the courage to do it. After all, it was them who declared a race war to the death upon our race. We are only responding, as we simply must respond. Anyway, that is what is required of us if we are to avoid genocide, racial extinction and permanent loss of all of our rights and freedoms. If we do not have the stomach for the battle, then we are all doomed to the fate prepared for us at the hands of our mortal enemies. Such cowardice would make us deserving of our fate. But even if some miracle should happen and we should even wipe every last Jew of the face of planet, ending that threat forever, we would still have major racial problems to overcome. To insure our racial integrity, we would have to force all other races back to their homelands, then take our military and force all Hispanics to the south past Panama. That is what it would take to win this war. ❑

Dear Mr. Dietz:

It does seem as though we whites have enough to do without the endless discussions as to whether Jesus the Christ was a Jew or not. And who were the Jews? And who were not the Jews? And are they white or black? And where did they go after the Exodus or the Babylonian Captivity?, most of which are part of a belief system rather than verifiable fact unless we rely on holy books, which no self-respecting historian would do.

To say nothing of the completely conflicting utterances of Jesus himself, we have the controversies over translations, as well as the conflicting reports of the gospels, written reportedly by men who never met the Christ, many years after his alleged death, with his life being alleged as well. It does seem a bit stupid to me, especially when the white race is at stake, to dwell on religious beliefs.

Primitive tribes believe in forest spirits who allegedly cause all their troubles, from the Eskimos (now called Alleuts) to the Catholic priest at the altar, busily transforming wafers baked in a nunnery into the body and blood of Christ. And others who earnestly trace the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel to the New World and our very own Western Civilization. To say nothing of the Mormons and the Methodists who have various other gurus and shamans and practices based on good and evil, and all the various definitions of those terms. Both are terms used to flail and flog any who do not conform to the norm. Many have been killed and children have been terrorized in the name of religion, from ancient Rome to the Pilgrims and Puritans who sported the ducking stool, the stocks and pillories for wrong doers, to say nothing of the scarlet A and ostracism and banishment. What one calls religion, another calls superstition. Superstition is usually what the other fellow believes. Our religion is the true one.

It seems to me that at least the educated should have become aware by now that church and state work together to control the populace for the benefit of the top dogs, the rich and powerful, whoever they may be.

But the human being is subject to many primordial fears and foibles and uncertainties, ever since he outgrew his stay on earth and messed everything up that Nature had ordained. Do I not myself, a well-read, college-degreed woman of several professions, sit clutching a Rosary when the thunder of the terrible electrical storms that make Florida the lightning capital of the world, come crashing around me and the blue lightning dances around my bedroom for hours on end? You bet I do.

I who have been a devote of Nature since I was a small child and have always felt uncomfortable with any interference with Nature and Her ways. I who like to think that I am a dedicated National Socialist with a reverence for the Third Reich, and with much agreement with Messrs. Jordan and Myatt.

Bringing in the issue of whether Jesus was a Jew or of some other ethnic group, does pertain to the Aryan awareness that the devilish Jew is out to get us and is well on the way to succeeding.

We will never know for sure who or what Jesus is or was, or whether he really ever existed or not. If we wish to study Jesus, Wodin, Thor or Freyja, let us do it and not ruin our digestion and Main Purpose over it.

A Christian Identist says he would never again fight with any but his Identist brothers. A Skinhead says he hates the Hammerskins and would like to kill a few. Like a divorced couple, we destroy children and family because of these prejudices which can never be conclusively proven. It seems to me the sensible thing to do is to hang out with our own choices for whatever religions we wish to practice, follow our own hygiene and dietary laws, fight in separate battalions and, like oil and water, don't mix!

The main issue here is race, not religion. Everybody bring your birth certificate, eschew pork if you wish, follow your own path as long as Honor, Duty and Loyalty is your creed, who cares who you eat with or don't eat with. Do as you please; stop trying to proselytize your brothers and sisters. Give them the respect to follow their own religious beliefs or none.

The Third Reich did not persecute religions. If they did not disobey the law, they were tolerated. TRF [The Rational Feminist] has a Yuletide '98 issue coming up to present some of the various religious leanings of WNM people.

There are many Judeo-Christians in our midst as well as the unchurched. We should all at least familiarize ourselves with our comrades' faiths so we can at least respect them and leave them be.

The very fact that people get so angry and hysterical about religion only proves that deep down they aren't sure it's right themselves. But we do all know, if we know anything, that it was Nature who brought us to this point in time on this planet earth which we have nearly wrecked for money, which pleases the Jews immensely.

Nature is something we can see, feel, hear, taste and smell every day, every hour, every minute. As long as we revere Nature, let our comrades go into buildings and worship as they please if they don't feel strong enough to stand on their own two feet without mysticism, smoke and mirrors.

But do let us stop wasting our precious time, paper, energy and friendships trying to "prove" to others that OUR belief is true. In the first place, it can't be done. In the second place, the clock is ticking; there is a band of cold water along the Florida bend when it should be warm; fires are burning our forests; floods are destroying our homes and families; and our once beautiful and civilized country is awash in debris from the Third World. What the hell does it matter whether Jesus was a Jew or not???

P.S. As to the Jewish feminists of the 60s and 70s, the recently deceased, redoubtable Bella Abzug, gone to meet her Maker, Heaven help Him. (Doubtless comforting to the people who fear the feminist movement and its devastating effect upon our Western Civilization).

But these strident Jewish females of the 60s and 70s were nothing compared to the Celtic women who fought alongside their men, trained boys for warfare, and raised hell generally! Old Bella had a mouth, but these babes were warriors as you may read in the Yuletide TRF, '98!

Further, in almost all mammals it is the matriarchs who run the day-to-day operationes with the males carrying special responsibilities such as protection and procreation in most cases.

However, I do agree that women were duped out of their homemaking world of autonomy and enjoyment and into the cold world of punching time clocks, pounding computers, and murdering their pre-born children, to dance to the tune of the Pied Piper of the synagogues. To have licentious men drooling over them, inspired by the ethnic media masters with more and more decadent and disgraceful and perverted scenarios, supposedly a "liberation" for all.

Quo vadis? The title of a religious book of the 19th century—Whither Thou Goest?

Dear Mr. Dietz:

I have just finished reading through the July Liberty Bell to be sure that I have read it all. DGR (p. 39ff.) has outlined, in a very scientific way and with the highest vocabulary level, the plight of the white race and its solution which just may help him to escape the stake. If my translation into everyday English is correct, he is saying that religion in any form will do us in. Miscegenation will destroy first the white race and then the human race. The Jews have (almost) won world hegemony due to our religious idiocy. We no longer live by instinct but by BS from pulpits. Not bad for starters.

MB of CA informs us of the world struggle between the Marxist atheist Jews and the Zionist Jews represented at Court by Special Prosecutor Ken Starr so that we can see that all the BS seriously discussed on the evening news by the pundits is all smoke and mirrors for the yokels not in yet on the secret that Israel is conducting her political wars where Daniel Webster fought for the soul of Jabez Stone if any of you remember that wonderful short story where Webster pled Stone's case before a jury of glittering-eyed U.S.traitors' ghosts for Stone's soul, which he had sold to the Devil for prosperous farminy. New England farming to be precise.

SR from New York usually rips open some shibboleths, and he (or she) didn't disappoint us this time. He illuminates the fact that has been rattling around in my brain also, that our Leader in WDC has succeeded in almost completely disarming our nation and leaving us prey to Unfriendly Forces who may change from time to time, but usually consist of the flotsam and jetsom of Third and Fourth World races who once fed themselves until the Christians did us in by invading their territory and making them dependent on the Euro-Americans. SR is a bit harsh saying that the liberals deserve to perish for their sins, but now really do we, who, after all, have had involuntary blinders on our eyes and ear plugs in our ears until we discovered our comrades in the White Nationalist Movement. I'm not sure I want to "restore the old America", but I would like to live in civilization once again perhaps without the church spires and Norman Rockwell bs in art. The false picture of America. Just a few notes I couldn't resist.

ALL of this issue is a much needed tonic and nourishment to our starved Aryan souls. What would I do without LB: I shudder to think of the bleak life I would lead, marooned in Pinellas County FL, the bastion of political correctness!

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Revilo Pendleton Oliver, Professor of the Classics at the University of Illinois for 32 years, is a scholar of international distinction who has written articles in four languages for the most prestigous academic publications in the United States and Europe.

During World War II, Dr. Oliver was Director of Research in a highly secret agency of the War Department, and was cited for outstanding service to his country.

One of the very few academicians who has been outspoken in his opposition to the progressive defacement of our civilization, Dr. Oliver has long insisted that the fate of his countrymen hangs on their willingness to subordinate their doctrinal differences to the tough but idealistic solidarity which is the prerequisite of a Majority resurgence.

SOME QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM AMERICA'S DECLINE:

On the 18th Amendment (Prohibition): "Very few Americans were sufficiently sane to perceive that they had repudiated the American conception of government and had replaced it with the legal principle of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat,' which was the theoretical justification of the Jews' revolution in Russia."

On Race: "We must further understand that all races naturally regard themselves as superior to all others. We think Congoids unintelligent, but they feel only contempt for a race so stupid or craven that it fawns on them, gives them votes, lavishly subsidizes them with its own earnings, and even oppresses its own people to curry their favor. We are a race as are the others. If we attribute to Ourselves a superiority, intellectual, moral, or other, in terms of our own standards, we are simply indulging in a tautology. The only objective criterion of superiority, among human races as among all other species, is biological: the strong survive, the weak perish. The superior race of mankind today is the one that will emerge victorious—whether by its technology or its fecundity—from the proximate struggle for life on an overcrowded planet."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH — FREEDOM OF THOUGHT
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor/publisher of Liberty Bell does not necessarily agree with each and every article in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers; however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that Liberty Bell strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of our Western culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible, and not subject to evolution, change, or replacement by the will of an informed people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the Thinking People, not only of America, but the entire world.

HATE-CRIME BOOMERANG or
THE AUSCHWITZ-LIE

by
Ejnar Vaaben

On October 11, 1994, the motley Danish newspaper Ekstra Bladet brought a message to its readers from the German Judenführer Ignatz Bubis: Now that the Danes in Kvaers have driven the neo-Nazis out of town it is time for them to outlaw those who publish and propagate the Auschwitz-Lie. It is a crime, according to Mr. Bubis, to deny that millions of Jews were gassed in the Third Reich. It would be an act of justice if all European countries punished such neo-Nazis, just as a court of law would punish a witness for giving false evidence in court. There is no point in arguing with the deniers, says the spokesman of the German Jews, they should simply be severely dealt with for daring to express their views in public.

The Auschwitz-Lie, in brief, should not be tolerated, but penalized in Denmark, just as it is punishable by German law, e.g. in the case of Günter Deckert.

That people who think that the Holocaust is a hoax should not be permitted to express their opinion in public is a view that Mr. Bubis shares with several prominent Danish Jews. The general opinion of the Danish press, public and politicians, however, seems to be that freedom of speech and expression is and should also be protected by law as it has been, with some restrictions, ever since J. F. Struensee published the edict on freedom of the press in 1770. It may be silly or ridiculous to deny the Holocaust, so much is clear, but it is not a crime for which the delinquent deserves years in jail. Just neglect these nuts, or surrender them to laughter! Some would even be fair enough to hold that Holocaust denial should be repudiated with arguments and open debate. Such an open and public debate, however, still remains to be seen. This debate will come once Revisionism has grown strong enough to carry it on. Until now the Danish mass media and historians have systematically failed to inform the public fairly about the revisionist work of scholars such as Faurisson, Butz, Stäglich, Walendy, Mattogno, etc. The tactic has, of course, been to treat these evil people with silence or slander and vilification.

After WW II thousands of Danes were punished for "treason", above all for having joined the Waffen-SS. These people claimed, correctly so, that not only had the government itself collaborated with the Germans, but it had even encouraged the Danish soldiers and volunteers to take up arms against the Communists. And in a few cases the King of Denmark had even decorated SS-officers before they left for combat. For various political reasons — also not to offend the leftist intellectuals and the Jews — this large group of early revisionists have still not received the official rehabilitation to which they are entitled. This, too, will change when the time is ripe.

These early revisionists were very well aware that the official "historians" are not telling the truth but feeding the public with myths as the politicians, to whom they are largely indebted for their degrees and positions, expect them to do. The official picture is, therefore, still ludicrously simplistic: In April 1940 the innocent Danes were quite unexpectedly occupied by the Satanic Adolf Hitler who not only wanted to conquer the entire world but also to murder all the Jews. The Danes, however, heroically saved the Jews from the Holocaust in October 1943, and the brave national resistance (actually mostly brutal Communists only craving to hand over the country to Stalin) fought the intruders until the day, in May 1945 (and especially after that date), when the country, after "five evil years", was finally liberated by the Christian soldiers of the allied forces. Roosevelt and Churchill were the good guys (Stalin, true, perhaps not all that good), whereas Hitler, no doubt about it, and all those who dared to defend him, were the incarnations of evil, deserving harsh punishment. Among the innocent victims the most innocent of them all, as always in the annals of history, were the Jews. 6,000,000 of them, imagine, had, on the order of Satan, been gassed, above all in Auschwitz. The Endlösung, to be sure, had been decided upon at the infamous conference at Wannsee, January 1942.

This, briefly, is what we read in books, learn in school, see on film, and readers are reminded of almost daily in the newspapers. And, surely, it must be true, must it not, for all the foreign media tell much the same story. Those who would deny all these "obvious facts of history", therefore, must be crackpots, hardly worthy of serious attention. This is still the general drift of current opinion, but it is now being challenged and it may rapidly change.

More and more Danes are becoming aware that the mass media, inside and outside Denmark, are dominated and controlled by Jews, often with strange foreign names. If we ask who rules America, we get the same answer as when we ask who rules Denmark, who rules Sweden, who rules Germany, etc.[1]

Virtually all major Danish newspapers are either edited or published by Jews. The Danes are becoming aware of the possibility that there is more to it than merely evil Germans, good Americans, and innocent Jews. Why is there such an uproar every time someone attempts to speak in a matter of fact way about anything a Jew says or does? Why do the Jews not want or allow any public debate about the Holocaust in a scholarly fashion? Why is the public constantly being presented with "historical facts" that are in obvious contradiction with common sense and the laws of nature?

And this is where Thies Christophersen, of all persons, comes into the picture. He is an unassuming agrarian man with a simple story to tell. When in Auschwitz, in 1944, he heard some nasty rumors of gas chambers with his ears, but with his eyes he saw no such things, and, as the saying goes, men's ears are duller agents of belief than their eyes. Later on he came to the conclusion that the real Holocaust was Dresden — he experienced the bombing of Dresden himself — not Auschwitz. Thies, though himself somewhat of a poet, was not very much in favor of the license of Jewish fables. When he quoted Nahum Goldmann of the WJC for writing that Jewish life largely consists in protesting and in amassing money, he was charged on grounds of "anti-Semitism". In Denmark, however, he could not be convicted for repeating what prominent Jews thought of themselves.

But worst of all, Thies Christophersen was a publisher who, first from Germany later from Kollund just north of the border, distributed a number of rare books and pamphlets quite often perceptively critical of the role that the hostes generis humani — the traditional enemies of mankind, to quote Tacitus — had been playing in the course also of modern history. Christophersen's name is now insolubly linked up with the title of his own brochure: Die Auschwitz-Lüge. What he wanted to communicate with this title was exactly what he was not supposed to say, namely that it was but a lie that there had been gas chambers in Auschwitz (Birkenau). To keep on propagating this lie, Thies thought, would be to calumniate Hitler and Germany.

This simple statement of fact infuriated Simon Wiesenthal and the internationally itinerant Jewish community. The argument, as said, was simple: If there were no homicidal gas chambers, Holocaust must be a myth, and people like Wiesenthal, consequently, liars. Panic in the Jewish camps of those who by some endless numbers of miracles had survived to bear witness to the Holocaust!

Thies held on to his simple thesis. In 1986 he moved to Denmark, because of its freedom from publishing restraints, as he explained to the court during the great Holocaust trail in Toronto 1988. As will be recalled, Ernst Zündel was charged with publishing "false news" — the revisionist booklet Did Six Million Really Die? Zündel, in his struggle for "freedom of speech and thought for all", was also the first to publish an English translation of Christophersen's small book on Auschwitz.

Since 1969 Christophersen had published the quarterly Die Bauernschaft, in the pages of which he, among other things, candidly had criticized the disruptive influence of the Jews and the obvious corruption of current German politics and justice. Before he finally had to leave Germany, his outspokenness had brought him no less than 43 charges. For Thies the most important thing, as he repeatedly explained, was to oppose the lies of the post-war period. His motto was to encounter lies with truth, hatred with love, and harassment with humor. Sooner than he expected, there would be an urgent demand for his having such virtues amply in stock.

From Kollund Thies Christophersen distributed not only Die Bauernschaft — the centesimal issue of which appeared by the end of 1992 — but also rare revisionist publications banned from Germany, and the valuable Die Kritik-Folgen, number 89 of which (a video) appeared in 1995. Business would seem to be thriving and everything apparently went well for Thies. Once a week his wife Edith would come over from Mohrkirch to assist her husband run the office, take care of his laundry, and furnish him with various necessities. For 1993 Christophersen planned not only to take over the stock of the Nordland Forlag in Aalborg (revisionist books, etc. worth some 250,000 DM), but also to invite some of his old friends for "Nordische Dichtertage".

There are some, such as Simon Wiesenthal, who do not easily forget. Many details are unknown, of course, but to make a long story short, the mass media now started inciting hatred up against Thies Christophersen. Eventually, he had to cancel the invitation to the "Nordische Dichtertage". On the program for May 22, 1993, we find the names of competent revisionists such as Wilhelm Stäglich and Udo Walendy. The press denounced the private get-together as a "secret Nazi-Treffen". Huge and violent demonstrations took place on May 16 and 20, 1993 (see, for details, Die Bauernschaft 2/93). Interestingly, the Danish press reported that David Irving, Robert Faurisson and Ernst Zündel would be speaking at the secret meeting. This was not true, but this piece of deliberate "false-news" does indicate, surely, the ulterior motive for sending and inciting German terrorists and "antifas" to demonstrate and cause riots in Kollund.

On April 20, 1994, some unidentified "revolutionary anti-fascists" broke into the stocks belonging to Thies Christophersen in Kollund, their motive clearly being to rob or destroy by arson his dangerous, hatred-inciting books, etc.

Only a few days later, the mass media reported that the German Bundesverfassungsgericht in Karlsruhe had now decided that the Auschwitz-Lie is no longer protected by freedom of speech.[2] Anyone who in public denies the Holocaust — defined as the gassing of millions of Jews (in Auschwitz-Birkenau) — is liable to punishment — up to five years in jail for inciting hatred (Volksverhetzung). Oddly enough, this declaration of intolerance was announced also on April 20 — the birthday of a certain gentleman whose ghost apparently would never die. This decision reflects a long and arduous debate in Germany, much of it having centered around the person of Günter Deckert (see Der Fall Günter Deckert, edited by Gunther Anthonn & Henri Roques, DAGD/ Germania Verlag, 1995), but also having to do, as Danish media reported (on Nov. 11, 1993! — note, again, the date) with Fred Leuchter who had been arrested and incarcerated in Germany, and David Irving who was fined and banned from Germany. Irving is said to uphold "the horrible thesis" that the Nazi mass murder of 6,000,000 Jews never took place, but is an allied fabrication (Berlingske Tidende, Nov. 11, 1993).

As will be recalled — and this should probably be kept in mind for a proper perspective on the events that were to follow — it created a global uproar when it became known to the public, in the beginning of August 1994, that the Germans had dealt too leniently with the Deckert case. The international magazine, Time, glorifying itself of "making news", was probably typical on August 22: "The court's decision (in the Deckert case) is no surprise, but the sympathetic wording provokes a national uproar...It was a slap in the face of all victims of the Holocaust", etc., etc. Again, to make a long story short, one of the judges in Mannheim, Rainer Orlet, was eventually forced into early retirement by politicians unable — under pressure from the newsmakers — to tolerate Orlet's characterization of Günter Deckert as being " a very sympathetic man of firm convictions", and the like. This was a slap in the face of the politicians themselves! By April 1995, the German courts had finally learned the lesson and sentenced Deckert to two years imprisonment for having translated, malevolently, a speech of Leuchter's, showing at the same time his lack of respect for the Jews by using the abbreviation "Holo" (for the holy, canonical expression "Holocaust"). (In June 1996 the witch Deckert received an additional 20 months for his heresy.)

But back to 1994. The month of March was, needless to say, the month of Mr. Spielberg's "Schindler's List", immediately hailed, predictably, as the film of the year (in March!), a masterpiece, etc. etc. Virtually all the newspapers in Denmark as elsewhere misused the occasion to repeat and recharge all the old myths about Holocaust, the gas chambers, the 6,000,000 innocent victims, etc. etc. Rather plain and profane shower heads, interestingly, by Politiken were elevated to "one of the strongest images in European history". A neat example, in retrospect, of typical jewnalistic impudence and failure to distinguish myth from fact. Bent Melchior, the chief rabbi, and brother of Arne Melchior, invited prominent Danes to the grand charity opening. But some politicians dauntlessly failed to turn up for the "List". At the last minute the rabbi even offered the expensive tickets for free, thus depriving the Simon Wiesenthal Center of some of the expected profits. But in vain. The shoah business, in this case, was no success. There were interviews with Wiesenthal, who loved the film, and with Claude lanzmann, who did not.

On the Ides of March the editor in chief of Politiken, Herbert Pundik (who in 1943 escaped from the Holocaust to Sweden, and now lives peddling to and from Israel-Denmark) reported, under the heading " Falsification of History", on an "official hearing on anti-Semitism". The hearing — silly word, a euphemism for propaganda — was inaugurated by the Minister of Justice, a "bastard", in his own semi-racist words, half Jew, half Dane, in the building of the Parliament in Copenhagen. According to the biggest bigshot among the speakers, a certain Dr. Dina Porat, a so-called historian from the University of Tel Aviv, Pundik, reported, "Schindler's List is the best antidote against Holocaust denial and the Auschwitz-Lie". "When there are no more witnesses left", she said, then "we only got the films and the museums left to refute the thesis that Auschwitz was a lie".

And the ignorant "hearers" seem to have swallowed all the rubbish without protest. But revisionists are grateful to the eminent Jewish doctor for admitting that in the end "films and museums" are the best arguments against the findings of scholarship and science.[3] Did the Christians present not recall the words of Paul, that we should not believe in the Jewish myths (Tit. 1. 14)? The film of Spielberg, as known, is based on a novel, a work of fiction.

In this mendacious and poisonous atmosphere the newsmonger uproar over Deckert being characterized as a very sympathetic man by a German judge becomes understandable.

But there was more to come. "Top-Nazi moves to Denmark", another newspaper reported on its front page, August 21, 1994. A German nationalist, a certain Meinolf Schönborn, all the papers howled, was moving to Kvaers, a small village not far from Kollund, in order to establish a press for Nazi propaganda. The univocal incitement of the media soon persuaded the simple folk of Kvaers that only the Devil would be so evil as to deny Auschwitz. For years the local school-master had been instructing his pupils in the unspeakable plight of the most innocent of all people, and now look...Politicians called for demonstrations, so-called anti-fascists emerged from their urban sewers, windows were smashed by cascading stones and bottles while policemen, oblivious of their duty as if hypnotized, witness the riots. On September 26, Extra Bladet in triumph reported that Kvaers had been liberated: "Neo-Nazis were stoned out of Kvaers — Further trouble ahead in Kollund". (No evidence that the German Neo-Nazis had any plans of publishing any propaganda was, of course, produced.) Arne Melchior, MP, greeted the popular rising.

The prophecy of what was in stock for Kollund had the desired effect. Now, after the great Kristallnacht in Kvaers, time had finally come to get even with the old liar from Auschwitz in nearby Kollund. In the following week-end some 1500 people turned up in Kollund with arguments in the form of bottles, stones and flaming torches, as well as threats of lynching the old Nazi. Thies Christophersen was finally driven out of Kollund. "Oh, wish that Simon Wiesenthal could have seen this", a nice old lady in the crowd spontaneously exclaimed. (For more details, see Die Bauernschaft 4/94, the last one to be edited by Christophersen.)

A week later the crowd moved on with their stones and bottles to Greve, near Copenhagen. Once again, the vulgar crowd, again joined by local politicians, naive housewives, little school-girls as well as an occasional wandering Jew, would prove oblivious to the words of J. G. Fichte: "A stone, gentlemen, is a bad argument". Here, then, it was the "Nazi-boss", Jonni Hansen, the successor to the dethroned Riis-Knudsen, and his small entourage of herdsmen who served as the valiant target of blind hatred.

In October 1994 the press reported of demonstrations arranged by students from the universities in Aalborg and Aarhus. The new Minister of Justice, Björn Westh, declared that he did not approve of the firebombs being thrown on Hundige Strandvej 153 in Greve. Nor would he, on the other hand, being now under official German pressure, accept that "racist books" intended for foreign readership were published in Denmark. The demonstrations in Greve continued. A year later, the press, this time correctly, spoke of terrorism, when a parcel, misplaced but clearly intended for Mr. Jonni Hansen proved to contain half a kilo of explosive. This was on October 20, 1995. The police described it as a "terrible bomb". Half a year ago a similar bomb had exploded in Germany. Apparently those responsible for the billet-doux have still not been identified. (Any connection with the bombs intended for Mr. Zündel in Toronto?) Though constantly the object of public harassment, Jonni Hansen nevertheless in November 1995 finally received permission to run a local radio, Radio Oasen. Mr. Hansen describes himself as a National Socialist, and the walls of his "bunker" are adorned with swastikas, and pictures of Adolf Hitler and Frits Clausen (the late Danish NS-leader, murdered in jail.)[4]

As for Thies Christophersen, the press in June 1995 reported that he by now "had had enough of Denmark", and had fled to Antwerp in Belgium. Let us add that a meeting with Thies Christophersen arranged by some students from the University of Aalborg had been canceled by the administration. Nor did any other university show any interest whatsoever in hearing Christophersen's version of history. Many would at least have expected the Jewish rector of the University of Copenhagen, Ove Nathan, to have taken an interest in the case, especially since he himself had often addressed the public about the value of protecting freedom of speech, and he, too, like Thies, had been a fugitive. In 1993 he had even sponsored a book on "xenophobia", as well as a conference the purpose of which was to see what we can do to avoid "history from repeating itself".[5] Here, obviously, was a clear case of an innocent victim of persecution. But no, not a single Jew raised his voice in protest. On the contrary, in October 1994, the chairman of the parliamentary committee on judicial affairs, Mr. Bjrn Elmquist, MP, wanted to have Thies Christophersen convicted for publishing the perceptive words of Nahum Goldmann in Die Bauernschaft (quoted above). In vain, as it turned out, and as the honorable MP should have known, for Thies had already been acquitted for the very same sin by a Danish court some years back.

"You cannot fight everything with tolerance", chief rabbi Bent Melchior slyly announced on TV, September 24, 1994, referring to the events applauded also by his brother Arne, MP, in Kvaers. But it would be unfair to conclude that the Jewish leaders were the only ones to rejoice over the Kristallnacht in Denmark. The country's former Minister of Foreign Affairs, MP, Uffe Ellemann-Jensen, also chairman of the liberal Party (and also a Jew?), repeated the words of the rabbi on Sunday, September 26, 1994. As a liberal he was not very happy about imposing restrictions on the freedom of speech, but instead encouraged the Danish citizens to "active fight" against Nazi propaganda. Thus, it should never be forgotten that there was some sort of official approval of the shameful terrorist events in Kvaers.

The mass media invariably spoke of a "victory" in Kvaers, or of the "liberation of Kvaers", as if WW II was still going on. The columnist of the tabloid B.T. made it all very clear when he wrote, after Kvaers, on September 26, 1994: "Thies Christoffersen (sic!) and his mercenaries (sic!) are still in Kollund. They will continue to publicize the lie of all lies: Hitler did not gas millions of Jews. Not until they all shut up their mouths will we stop showing them our contempt...". As a good and pious Christian you must confess your faith in gassings. Auschwitz is the modern Golgotha, as the Pope says.

There were many other demonstrations against "fascism and xenophobia" in October and November. On October 1, some 1500-2000 demonstrated in Kollund. There were 1000 on October 8 in Greve, and all political youth organizations were represented among the 1800 who marched in Kollund on October 9. And on the 56th anniversary of the Kristallnacht (the one in Germany, not the one in Kvaers) the torches were burning again, there were some 200 demons in Copenhagen, some 300 in Kollund, 70 in Greve, and unreported numbers in Aalborg and Odense. "On this day we should remind ourselves of the fear and cowardice that cost millions of Jews their lives", one petty politician admonished. Members of Jewish youth organizations wore the yellow star of David. In December, Thies Christophersen finally got the message, and moved out of Kollund.

On November 22, 1994, the Danish press reported that the German owner of the demolished house in Kvaers, Meinolf Schönborn, had been arrested in Detmold. He was accused of having denied the Holocaust (not that of his own home, naturally). In September 1995 the press announced that the defunct publishing house of the German visitor to Denmark had now been offered for sale.

Of course, the lurid press did not forget Thies Christophersen either. He had arrived in Switzerland in the early summer of 1995, but the public prosecutor in Bern had decided that Thies would have to leave the country by the end of the year. This led a certain Frede Farmand Rasmussen, in December 1995, to create a new rumor: Thies had now returned to Denmark! This, of course, was a hoax, but good for PR. Basing himself of some of the files, etc. that had been stolen from Thies on April 20, 1994, the said Mr. Farmand ("Daddy") also published a ridiculous book in November 1995: The Liar from Auschwitz ("Lögneren fra Auschwitz"), meant, of course, to refute Christophersen's Die Auschwitz-Lüge from 1973. A couple of jewsmen hailed it as a great scholarly achievement.[6] But actually it is so silly that presumably not even Deborah Lipstadt (not to speak of Dr. Porat!) would be able to take it seriously. Mr. Farmand's only "scholarly" source was the Norwegian translation of the poor Jean-Claude Pressac's inept 1993 book Les Crématoires d'Auschwitz. The book had been hailed in Politiken, July 20 (!), 1994, as the final refutation of evil revisionists like Robert Faurisson, etc.[7] According to Mr. Farmand, chemistry is not really an exact science, and the morgue of a crematory is invariably the same as a gas chamber. Oddly, Mr. Farmand fails to draw the conclusion that his own logic bids him to do: In that case we would have homicidal gas chambers for the extinction of Jews in all larger cities all over the world.

January 1995 was, needless to repeat, in Denmark as elsewhere, "the month of memory and mourning" — once again; it was the 50th anniversary of the liberation of the Auschwitz "death camp". The mass media were, as one can imagine, replete with stories about gas chambers, smoking chimneys, etc. In the following months the horrors, predictably and right on schedule, of Buchenwald, Dachau, Majdanek, were also resuscitated. Surprisingly, though, there were not, at least in Denmark, so many new witnesses who had survived thanks to the usual miracles. (Somehow, by miracle, there are still about 1000 "survivors", not just Jews, in Denmark who receive Wiedergutmachung from Germany; probably a rare potential here if you consider doing an original Ph.D. on legalized fraud!). One or two slimy journalists, to be sure, were aware that Pressac had reduced the 4,000,000 figure of Auschwitz — several times, in fact, so make your free choice — but they nevertheless hung on unto the magic number of 6,000,000. (This really goes to show how reliable jewnalists can be: 6 minus 3 = 6!)

Hardly surprising, the chief rabbi, Bent Melchior, on January 12, 1995, was decorated by the German Ambassador to Denmark with the Grosse Verdienstkreuz for his unique contributions to "reconciliation", and in his capacity as chairman of the European branch of the Jewish organization B'nai B'rith. What that shady organization is all about, the Danish public was, naturally, never told. Only that it was some sort of philanthropic league, offering, inter alia, gracious advice on how to exterminate racism, anti-Semitism, etc. Had the reader known the true nature of the B'nai B'rith he would undoubtedly have been disgusted at seeing a German traitor awarding a rabbi for assisting in bringing about the Endlösung of the German people.

It must be kept in mind that Bent Melchior, like his brother, the MP, Arne Melchior, and just like Judenführer Bubis and the German politicians often express their personal concern about freedom of speech and human rights. Even though the Danish Jewish leaders seldom in plain language insist the Auschwitz-Lie should be criminalized — the Danes would fail to understand why and perhaps become suspicious — there can hardly be any doubt about their innermost desires. Thus, for instance, MP Arne Melchior, on November 25, 1994 suggested during a debate in Parliament that "Nazi and racist propaganda" should be punished by up to more than two years in jail. Was he suggesting that books and booklets be thrown into jail? That was hardly the intention of his pilpul.[8]

In retrospect, then, the purpose of all the confusing demonstrations, riots, etc. was simply to quench the propagators of the Auschwitz-Lie, i.e., the truth about Auschwitz. The mass media etc. presented the covert fight against revisionism as an overt fight against racism, fascism, etc. Some readers would now recognize that Jewish tolerance simply means tolerance of Jews and intolerance of others. The Danish public, simply lacking the background knowledge required for making the necessary distinction between scholarly revisionism and vulgar "racism", was deliberately deceived by the you-know-who. The Danish Jews never dared to insist in plain words that the Auschwitz-Lie and historical source criticism should be criminalized. The Danish public had been taught for decades that Holocaust deniers were crackpots, ridiculous outsiders. And if such crackpots were to be punished — what then about all the other crackpots in the Danish society? So, in the end, the Parliament, listening to some of the advice of their legal advisors (who, with a shake of the head, spoke of "lousy justice" etc.), passed a bill to the effect that no further limitations on the existing law concerning freedom of expression were imposed. Nazi propaganda for export would not be tolerated, however, but how this concept was to be understood was never defined, being left to the judiciary (or: jewdiciary?) of the courts. To be sure, it was admittedly under pressure from Germany that the paragraph on export was added. It did not make much sense now that the two publishers in question, Nordwind in Kollund, and Nordland in Aalborg were virtually defunct. On the other hand, it is now quite clear that anyone is free to think and say that he happens not to believe in the Holocaust, in the gossip about the Auschwitz gas chambers, the 6,000,000, and any other Jewish myth.

Since the Endlösung of Thies Christophersen and his Die Auschwitz-Lüge was actually, i.e. covertly, what all the demonstrations and riots had been all about, the end result must have come somewhat as a disappointment to the Jewish leaders in Denmark.

The Jews, however, did not give up. Characteristically, Charlotte Thalmay, a young energetic leader of the Jewish Youth-League said, referring to the current debate on "racism, neo-nazism and freedom of expression", that she was in favor of imposing limitations upon freedom of speech, when this freedom is used "so as to make others feel hurt". " You cannot run away from being a Jew", Charlotte says (Sændagsavisen, July 16, 1995), "for even if Bob Dylan says he is a Buddhist and Frank Zappa converts, they are still Jews." Jews should encounter "xenophobia" even by putting on stage "small happenings and role-plays", Charlotte interestingly concludes.

Whether Charlotte, never the one to hurt the feelings of others, also included those of Jonni Hansen and Thies Christophersen, she did not say. Nor was she asked.

Charlotte's deep concern, though — at least I presume so, not being able to prove what others feel, and why — did perhaps not include the feelings of the American citizen Mr. Gary lauck, who, as a result of a small "happening" in which German as well as Danish police played a sinister role, had, while Charlotte was delivering her all too humane message, been incarcerated since March 20, 1995, I presume, again, with somewhat mixed feelings.

On May 24 (several days after the event, take note) Politiken headlined the news that a " Top-Nazi had been captured in Denmark", and "that the Germans were interested in the US-Nazi". A few days after the arrest of Mr. Lauck in the "Nazi-bunker" in Greve, hundreds of German policemen conducted a "grand razzia" of some eighty homes in Germany suspected of having received Mr. Lauck's Nazi propaganda from the NSDAP/AO headquarters in Lincoln, Nebraska. On March 16, the DA in Hamburg had asked the Danes (who now seem to be falling back into the war-time role of collaborating with the Germans) to arrest Mr. Lauck while on a private visit in Greve. On several previous occasions, the German authorities had asked the Danes to extradite Mr. Christophersen. In vain, though, for Thies had never violated Danish law. A year later, to be sure, the leader of the German Verfassungsschutz, Hans-Jörg Geiger, said to Jyllands-Posten, on February 5, 1996: "We are all very pleased that Denmark would no longer have the Nazi Thies Christophersen living among them. And that Denmark extradited the American Nazi Gary Lauck for prosecution in Germany".

Had this happened during the war, the Danes responsible for the illegal extradition would have been charged , on the basis of retroactive laws passed after the end of the war, of having violated the constitution in having collaborated with a foreign power! Even the Supreme Court proved itself to serve as a handmaiden of political correctness. This, though, was hardly something new.

Thies, as said before, had never violated Danish law — even though Danish politicians, unaware of their own legislation, imagined that he had. Nor had Mr. Lauck ever violated any Danish law. This was quite clear. Nevertheless, the Minister of Justice, in May, decided to have Mr. Lauck extradited to Germany, "the Jewish republic", as the unfortunate, handcuffed American being thrown into a police vehicle, gallantly described his future hosts (for the four coming years, at least) to the puzzled Danish public on TV. There was no uproar in the United States, there was no formal (or informal) protest from the U.S. ambassador to Denmark, H. E. Edward Elson, a Clintonite Jew, of course, whose "grandfather was a Russian Jew", and who, moreover, loved to introduce himself to the Danish public as an idealistic representative of freedom of speech, a man who had come over here from " America, the dear land of freedom" (sic!). Indeed, on November 11 (!), 1993, Berlingske Tidende reported how Edward had told the U.S. Senate about his forefathers having come to the U.S. as fugitives. For that very reason, he argued, he intended to employ his post in Copenhagen as a wonderful opportunity to repay his family's debt to the past. These deceptive words of pilpul and chutzpah could only be understood — if understandable at all — to the effect that there was nothing that H. E. wanted more than to be able to offer his help to people in need. Now that there finally was an American there who certainly needed his help, Mr. Elson failed to grasp the opportunity.

Some observers would perhaps have thought that had Mr. Clinton been a man of honor, he would immediately have send his deceitful ambassador right back to the shtetl or from wherever in Russia his forefathers may have come. Or, as a more humane measure, he could have let Mr. Elson go back to selling the glossy magazines that had, to begin with, made him so wealthy that he eventually had been able, by way of modern simony, to secure himself the post of Mr. Clinton's ambassador.

Furthermore, the displaced liberty-loving person, would launch himself as an ambassador who "wanted to open doors" — but, he forgot to tell, apparently not for the likes of Mr. Lauck in his Danish cell. Insisting that extradition to a third country would be against American as well as Danish law — and correctly so — Mr. Lauck appealed, and in fact had his case tried at all possible levels. It was all but a sham and mockery. Also, his appeal for "political asylum" was immediately turned down as "clearly baseless", though factually fully justified. On September 6, 1995, he was handed over to the German police in Hamburg in a late evening Nacht und Nebel-Aktion, as it were. Surely, Mr. Lauck was not exactly a philosemite, and surely Danish law does not allow a person to be extradited merely on account of his personal views. The Danish legal system, then, was corrupted by succumbing to "German" pressure and by the American failure to raise a voice of protest in protection over the rights of one of its citizens. Mr. Lauck, now incarcerated in Hamburg, can expect a heavy sentence for having spread his belief in the genius of Adolf Hitler and his disbelief in the Holocaust from America to Germany.[9]

As the irony of history would have it, the Danes, succumbing willingly in 1995 to German pressure, were just all too busy celebrating the 50th anniversary of their liberation from German pressure and occupation, May, 1945. Bondage was mistaken for liberty, and liberty for bondage. True, things did tend, in the mythical perspective of 1995, to become rather complicated. What WW II had actually been all about was not so clear anymore. The old story ran that it was a just war the allies had declared in order to let "Germany perish". Ever since the end of the war there had been a flood of allied propaganda over Denmark to support the perverse thesis that all Germans were mere monsters in human disguise. This included sordid Jewish publications such as Louis Nizer's What to do with Germany, and, from the other side, Ilja Ehrenburg's For Man's Sake. The Jewish professor of penal law, Stephan Hurwitz, in numerous publications, had, with his characteristic duplicity, presented the terror tribunal in Nuremberg as a court of justice and fairness.

But now the new story is that the Germans were rather innocent victims only happy to have finally been liberated from the evil genius of Hitler. Others would insist that the "meaning" of WW II had been to stop the Holocaust. But why would one want to liberate the innocent Germans if most of them were "willing executioners", and thus at least in part responsible for the Holocaust? To liberate Germans from themselves? If, on the other hand, the Holocaust is but a Jewish hoax, why are the German politicians today so eager in maintaining that it's a hoax that the Holocaust was a hoax? Would they not want to exculpate themselves if they could? And again, if the Danes actually supported Hitler's crusade against Communism — and the majority of those capable of forming an independent judgment about current affairs certainly did — why is it that Hitler and the Germans are considered so evil? And why punish the brave Danish volunteers for fighting against Communism? Why not rather decorate them for their courage and good intentions, as the old King had done? (After the war, naturally, the old King "did not remember" — even though we were all told "never to forget"!) And, once again, why claim that the Danes rescued the Jews in October 1943, when, in fact, as we all know, they were free to leave by the normal ferry to Sweden, thanks to an SS-officer, Dr. Werner Best, who allowed them to leave the country in peace? Those Jews who wished to do so could, to be sure, certainly catch the ferry from Copenhagen to Malmœ. German soldiers would even help them if they were late. The regular fare was not even a dollar. Why claim that Denmark had been brutally occupied by the Germans in April, 1940, when, in fact, the occupation took place peacefully according to an agreement the Government had made with the Reichsführer-SS, Heinrich Himmler? Everything was ready and set for the Germans when they arrived in the early morning, April 9. And why distort history by describing Communist partisans as patriotic Danish resistance fighters? And so on and so forth: Half a century after WW II the Danes are totally confused as to what actually happened, and why, during those five "evil years", which were, considering the circumstances, actually quite good for Denmark.

No help in solving these paradoxes was to be had from the official historians. These miserable intellectuals are, as a rule, simply too cowardly and dishonest to dare to appear politically incorrect.

The clue to an understanding of what actually happened is, of course, The Hoax of the Twentieth Century, as Dr. Butz aptly described the Holocaust myth. And the fact that Judea already in 1933 — if not on earlier occasions — declared war on Germany. Once this is recognized, all the deliberate distortions can be seen in their proper perspective, and the overall picture soon becomes convincingly simple. The Judea that declared war on Germany so long ago must today do all it can to protect the greatest lie of them all from being disclosed. The disclosure of the greatest lie will have a devastating effect on the endless number of minor lies. It will ruin their kingdom of deceit.

In Denmark today, then, it is entirely legal to think and say that one does not believe in the myth of the 6,000,000 gassed Jews. (Another matter is that it is virtually impossible to have one's views publicized. Not only newspapers and journals, but also publishers and other channels of information are under almost total Jewish control, directly or indirectly.)

It remains to be seen how the law will work in practice. There may be some unpleasant "happenings" ahead of us, depending, perhaps, on the judges, and their, if one dares to say so, racial or "religious" background. It goes without saying that Danish jurisdiction is also largely, though still not entirely, under foreign control.

The net result ensuing from all the demonstrations and riots etc., as said before, in Denmark must have been greatly disappointing to vindicators of free speech such as Wiesenthal, Bubis, the Melchior brothers, and others.

As the reader will recall, in the beginning of 1995 the president of the World Jewish Congress (WJC), Mr. Edgar Bronfman, let out a massive appeal to the effect that historical revisionism must be stopped: "The growing numbers of revisionist supporters cannot be ignored. We must use every resource to stop revisionism, now, before it's too late." (Source: IHR Newsletter, February, 1995).

This is a simple Judean declaration of war against traditional European scholarship and the fundamental principle of historical source criticism. It is a new version of the old conflict between faith and reason, between science and religion.

A similar concern is expressed in the annual world reports on "anti-Semitism", published by the Institute of Jewish Affairs in London, with the WJC. One of the Danish contributors is, in fact, Bent Melchior (listed in the report for 1992, p. vi): "...there have (in Denmark) been attempts to form a neo-Nazi group with a publishing office reprinting old anti-Semitic literature. There have also been more anonymous articles attempting to disseminate Holocaust "revisionist" ideas, but without any effect on the public debate", it reported in 1992. Already then, in 1992, the holy and highly decorated rabbi was in no doubt as to what was at stake for the myths of his tribes on a more secular level of affairs. Espionage, it would appear, is a natural part of the traditional moral code of rabbinism.

But let us leave Bent aside for a moment to see what his brother Arne was up to — forgetting here all the misdemeanors where he, with impunity, was exposed for having used public funds for strictly private purposes, etc. etc., all the usual irregularities that goyim simply fail to "understand".

"The children of the Holocaust crave for a European Union". This was the sweeping headline of a report by Arne Melchior, MP and, at that time, Minister of Communication and Tourism, April 29, 1993. The MP had been present at the inauguration of the US Holocaust Memorial Museum on April 22 as the self-appointed official representative of the Danish Government. Or at least the Danes had paid his travel expenses to Washington, D.C. — even to some private business in Portland, Oregon. Bringing up the old shibboleth of "the extinction of six million Jews during WW II", and reminding his readers of the "mad Adolf Hitler and his gang", he emphasizes that there are also good Germans, men like Helmut Kohl, for instance, who desire a European Germany, as opposed to the German Europe that Hitler & Co. wanted. Such Germans are all right (— at least as long as they continue to pay reparations, incarcerate German patriots, suppress freedom of speech, etc., we may add). It was for this sort of "reconciliation" that Bent Melchior was to be highly awarded by Germany, in January 1995, as we saw. Incidentally, it is worthy of notice that the 6 million shibboleth — a cheap trick intended to captivate our compassionate benevolence — appears with some interesting variants in the Melchior family. Thus the late father of Arne and Bent, the grand rabbi Marcus Melchior, in 1953, recalled the tragic fate of his

"six million brothers and sisters", who had already ten years ago, i.e. in October 1943, "been dragged to camps and tortured to death". This shameless lie he threw right into the face of the King and the Queen of Denmark attending the memorial sermon held in the Copenhagen synagogue, on October 8, 1953. Does this imply that first 6 million Jews were tortured in the camps, and then, later on, 6 million Jews were gassed? Since Bent Melchior occasionally speaks of twelve million victims, such an implication of his chutzpah and pilpul cannot be excluded. On the other hand, it must not be forgotten that Marcus Melchior also explicitly classified the entire event as "incomprehensible". (It may well be, one day in the future, under new auspices, that the Jews will say that they have always insisted that the Holocaust was "incomprehensible", in other words, that they never believed in the 6,000,000 Holocaust, it being but an evil myth imposed upon them by the goyim, a myth they, as a suppressed minority did not, naturally, dare to oppose for fear of retribution. In brief, the Jews were the real revisionists, all along. Thus, the argument will run, the Jews have suffered not once, but twice. Therefore, once again, they will be entitled to Wiedergutmachung.)

Interestingly, Bent Melchior often insists that Judaism is not in conflict with science, but rather its consummation. This means, for him, that it is to the rabbi we have to turn for a valid distinction between truth and falsehood, between good and evil.

So much the more good reason for historians to undertake free and critical research in the field of Holocaust studies!

This again makes it very clear indeed that German politicians and Jewish leaders share a common interest in upholding the hoax of the Holocaust. Readers of German newspapers need not be reminded that the current Jewish and German leaders are almost competing in upholding the myth. Or rather, the Jews can safely leave the squalid task to subservient Germans. Not a single Holocaust memorial without politicians punctiliously attending in order to confess to the public the sins of their fathers and sons, no matter where or when in Germany. This, again, implies that the struggle for a European Germany and the struggle against Holocaust Revisionism are intimately related. And this, again, means that we should expect European politicians — not merely the German ones — to give their support to the Holocaust myth. Exactly as the American presidents do, and exactly as the American politicians do. What could, for instance, be more symptomatic than the 6,000,000 resolution passed by the House on April 16, 1996 — to the eternal disgrace of the United States! The facts unfortunately prove that European politicians — without necessarily believing in the absurd myth, that is not at all the point — now also consider it opportune to support the hoax of the Holocaust in public. This is quite logical once the reader reminds himself of the words of the Israeli columnist, Ari Shavit, on Jews killing Arabs: "We killed them out of a certain naive hubris. Believing with absolute certitude that now, with the White House, the Senate and much of the American media in our hands, the lives of others do not count so much as our own." (New York Times, May 27, 1996) It takes more than an average democratic politician to risk confrontation with the ZOG under these dire circumstances.

Just like the holy gang of French bishops that recently condemned the Abbe Pierre, they all sanctimoniously confess the novel creed that gas chambers did indeed exist. They consider any scientific discussion about the physical reality of the alleged gas chambers as blasphemy, and they are prepared to condemn anyone who raises doubts about their actual existence.

It was Nazism, it was fascism, it was nationalism that lead to the Holocaust, so the argument goes, and all the Germans who accept the monstrous quibble without posing reasonable questions, are OK — but also obliged by their signature to show that they are prepared to crush simple peasants like Christophersen — not to speak of "spiritual arsonists" like Günter Deckert and many other German scholars and patriots. So if the German leaders wish to be considered decent and civilized people in the eyes of the world (whatever that "world" may be), they had better throw truly decent people like Mr. Deckert behind bars. And, as we observe, they do, many of them undoubtedly seeing themselves as good Christians willing to bring a sacrifice and to acknowldge their sins, or more precisely: the sins of their dead fathers and their no less innocent unborn sons.

It, therefore, does not come as a surprise to us to read in Berlingske Tidende, November 5, 1994, that chief rabbi Bent Melchior, president of the European branch of B'nei Brith (sic!), an international, philanthropic (sic!) organization, has held a meeting with Jacques Santer, the future chairman of the EU-Commission. The two distinguished gentlemen, we are told, discussed human rights in Europe. B'nei Brith (sic!) has the experience of a century in fighting racism and xenophobia, and now offers to share its "know-how" with the European Commission. — The average Danish reader would have no clue as to what was going on behind the curtain. The ignorant readership never heard of B'nai B'rith, and the jewnalist even got the spelling consistently wrong. Of course, the standard dictionaries and handbooks in Danish simply do not register this shady "philanthropic organisation", — perhaps the Jewish editorial boards have had a good reason for the flagrant omission. The brief notice in Berlingske Tidende seems as harmless as can be, but it was not, as we shall see.

Here, however, it will be useful to take notice of two incidents occurring in the Danish press and causing considerable commotion. To the superficial observer they have no bearing upon the issues reported above, but actually they do.

The first incident occurred when a former MP, Mr. Ole Maisted, in Politiken, June 24, 1994, published a brief letter to the effect that Jews, thanks to their "positive nepotism", were very powerful and occupied key positions in Danish society. This was, has for long been, and still is true to fact. Usually newspapers do not publish such letters. It was, though, hardly a slip. Immediately the Jewish editor of Politiken, Herbert Pundik — also an ardent propagator of the 6,000,000 myth, in "a huge gas oven"[10] — responded by crying out about anti-Semitism and called upon the support of all decent Danes. As if Mr. Maisted was about to gas Mr. Pundik! Leading politicians and historians at once responded to the excruciating cry condemning the views of Maisted, who shortly afterwards was excluded as a candidate for Parliament for the liberal party of Uffe Ellemann-Jensen (see above). On the other hand it was clear that he could not be punished by the law for having written what he wrote, though there were those who did their best to have him convicted. Maisted was condemned by all and socially ostracized. A few words of courage and truth thus put an end to his long political career.

A year later, in Berlingske Tidende, May 2, 1995, Marianne Herlufsdatter had the audacity of publishing a letter: "Jewish Politics according to the Books of Moses". She argued, correctly, that when Jews spoke of one's having to love one's neighbor, this rule was merely confined to other Jews, not to Christians, and other strangers, and, moreover, that the laws of Moses were actually nothing but a recipe for terrorism. What had prompted her to write her letter in the first place was the fact that Herbert Pundik in a brochure had accused the Danes of being Nazis and racists if they would not open up their borders for all sorts of foreigners, including Palestinians expelled from Israel (by the sorts of Mr. Pundik himself, once an Israeli soldier, he forgot to add).

An entire page of furious invectives was given to Bent Melchior and other Jews to spit into Marianne Herlufsdatter's "Ugly face of anti-Semitism". Letters in support of her views were "lost" somewhere in the office of Berlingske Tidende. (Are they now in the archives of Bent Melchior's "philanthropic organization"?)

As for Marianne Herlufsdatter and her husband, Lars Thirslund, who are gifted artists, elderly people without influence or political connections, this reaction came as a shock. They started reading rare books on history, quickly grasped to their great astonishment how they had been deceived for decades by the public lies of the Jews, and on November 19, 1995, they published their first revisionist pamphlet, Vestlig samisdat, discussing, among other things, Theodore N. Kaufman's Germany Must Perish, not a single copy of which, it turns out, is available in any public library in Scandinavia.[11]

These two incidents show that any kind of objective discussion of the Jewish problem — a problem not even supposed to exist — immediately will be met with blind and furious accusations of anti-Semitism. What happened to the two Danes was analogous to what happened to Marlon Brando recently — only the Danes did not have to kiss a kike in public. (It would not have been impossible though, for of course Danish TV is also largely run by Jews, on or behind the screen.) One is simply forbidden to speak the truth about the Jews. No one will dare (or be permitted) to defend the witches. Politicians, historians, journalists, and Christian readers will immediately join the Jews in their unconditional condemnation and castigation of the culprits.

The charge, or allegation, of anti-Semitism can be difficult to handle, partly because it has the nature of a primitive curse, or sheer denunciation, partly because it can be so vague and unspecified, or contradictory. And there may be other reasons also. According to several observers, baseness, vulgarity and meanness are frequently perceived in many Jews, and, of course, in many other fallible mortals as well. Anti-Semitism, if it means rejection of meanness, mendacity and vulgarity must, surely, thereby be considered a virtue. Only pilpul or chutzpah, or sheer failure to distinguish good from bad, would consider virtue to be a vice.

Already in September 1994 the newspapers (in connection with the Kristallnacht in Kvaers) reported that the Commissioner for human rights in the Baltic region, MP, Ole Espersen, a socialist and former Minister of Justice, in May had made contact with the ten countries in the region to see how they could change their laws so as to establish a mutual collaboration to "combat Nazism". The problem, again, was created by those who said they did not find reason to believe in the historicity of the Holocaust. No reasonable human being can, in fact.

The crusade against historical revisionism had by now become a matter of deep and vital concern for the EU. Increasingly, it is becoming a union founded on lies and hypocrisy. Does it, as such, compare favourably with the Neuropa envisaged by the evil genius of Hitler, old and new (if such exist) Nazis might ask? The idea of a European union is, in itself, surely not a bad one. The bad thing is that dangerous parasites have taken abode in the European body.

At the end of 1994, Taslima Nasrin was awarded the Sakharov prize because, as Klaus Hänsch, the German chairman of the European Parliament expressed it, " she had become a symbol of freedom of expression, and she is tireless in her struggle for the right to free expression." Taslima Nasrin, it was reported (Nyt fra Europa, 12 December 1994) risked two years in jail for having called for a revision of the Koran. (Of course, Taslima, who can hardly make herself intelligible in English, is, quite apart from her silly call for a revision of certain passages in an ancient book of barbarism, as we now know, but another stooge for the pretensions of Jewish interests. A glance at the faces and the names of the crowd surrounding her wherever she goes is more than enough to prove the point, that is, needless to add, in fact valid for virtually all writers, intellectuals, artists, etc. promoted by the international press.)

hortly afterwards, the said Klaus Hänsch sponsored a contest arranged by the Simon Wiesenthal Center. European students between the age of 15 and 18 were invited to write about anti-Semitism, the theme being: "50 years after the Holocaust: What has Europe learned?" The winner would be honored with a free trip to Israel, etc. The Europeans themselves would, naturally, have to pay not only the travel expenses but also for the other costs of shameless indoctrination of the youngsters.

And the EU did not fail to appoint an advisory commission on how to fight racism and xenophobia. The final report, addressed to the European Council, appeared in April/May 1995.

The Report, under the chairmanship of a certain French Jew by the name of Jean Kahn, is simply a disgrace. It is an incredible document of hatred and intolerance. No definitions of the key concepts, racism, xenophobia, nazism, etc. are offered. This means that when time is ripe, certain people, you guess who, will be ready to make the final definitions and decisions for themselves. There will be new Nuremberg terror tribunals. Campaigns on a grand scale, special advisers, secret police, local monitors and similar reminiscences of Stalinism should be set in against anti-Semitism. Specifically, the Report recommends "special laws against the denial of the existence of concentration camps etc. ("Holocaust") and the minimizing (sic!) of other crimes against mankind". (p. 49 of the Danish translation, May 23, ref. 6000. I, 5-0.)[12] One asks oneself what the unassuming little "etc." is supposed to mean. The members of the advisory committee failed to notice the trick. Also, Mr. Kahn was there to see the fatal "etc." through, probably prepared to reject any objections as tedious hair-splitting. Presumably, the good Christians had not read Ostrovsky's By Way of Deception.[13]

After the appearance of this appalling Report there could be no doubt that EU is being misused "to stop revisionism, now, before it's too late." — This was in 1995.

"Denmark isolated in action against racism", the papers announced in March 1996. A certain Jew by the name of Serge Cwajgenbaum, General secretary of a so-called Center for Research and Action against Racism and anti-Semitism in Paris, criticized the Danes for not having passed a law against spreading racist propaganda. Gary Lauck was accused by Mr. Cwajgenbaum of distributing Nazi propaganda from Denmark (but this was not true, Mr. Lauck was locked up safely in jail in Hamburg). Jonni Hansen likewise (but Jonni, who hardly even speaks a foreign language, merely plays music, and reads chapters from the Danish translation of Mein Kampf, available from any public library, and, moreover, only a few local people can pick up the waves from his "bunker".) So Mr. Cwajgenbaum has obviously not done the necessary research before going into action. Or perhaps he has. In any case, he should have been dismissed for his devious manners on the spot, had he not been a privileged Jew.

In other words, with the support of the EU, Mr. Cwajgenbaum and other subversive individuals and organisations are, once again, putting the squeeze on the Danes. I need not repeat what the actual motive behind all this is. Mr. Bronfman already said it.

Auschwitz is what it is all about. The unassuming "etc." above.

Thies, in 1944, had heard some nasty rumors, jumped onto his bike, set out to check the source of the rumors. Didn't see any gas chambers. And, in 1973, he had the courage to say that he saw nothing. Seeing nothing, then, is the problem. Numerous revisionists asked themselves why Thies did not see any gas chambers, looked closer into the matter, and finally came to the firm conclusion: Because there were no gas chambers. Without gas chambers no Holocaust, without Holocaust no Israel, and so: with Thies no One World under Jewish rule.

So the Jews, out of an understandable desire to survive as individuals, as a group and as a nation, simply have to say that Thies is a damned liar. They know perfectly well that he is not a liar, but by admitting so they automatically would admit that they themselves are the true liars. They are now getting caught up in an evil circle of lies. So from a Jewish point of view, Thies has also become the scapegoat of their own lies. By extinguishing Thies, by driving him away, as if driving a scapegoat out into the desert, they hope to get absolution from their sins. Judaism is, in more than one respect, a primitive religion, indeed.

I hope, on a purely empirical basis, by reporting the events in their natural and temporal sequence, to have shown, using Denmark as an example, that certain representatives of international Jewry have used all their resources "to stop revisionism, now, before it's too late."

Reviewing the evidence it is not unfair to conclude that they have done so largely by way of deception — they use the motto of the Mossad itself — which was also that of Moses, and of Jahveh, both of whom are also merely Hebrew fabrications.

Through a deliberate and systematic exploitation of the mass media they have persuaded the public into believing that vulgar, violent racism (a very rare thing) is the same as scholarly historical revisionism. The big lie is that it is not! To engage in careful research and conclude that there is no scientific evidence for upholding the historical existence of the Holocaust is a legitimate, scholarly enterprise, like any other, it is not an "incitement to hatred". The masses are largely ignorant, have always been; they do not read scholarly books or journals. They are satisfied by the poison on the nearby newsstand. The books, papers, magazines etc. here offered for sale, are largely controlled by Jewish interests. One only needs to check the names of the publishers, editors, journalists etc. to ascertain this simple fact. In every international airport the same picture emerges. By terror and by propaganda, and by inciting the masses, the likes of Mr. Bronfman et al. have put an enormous pressure on European politicians who again are putting a pressure on the courts.

In March 1996, Denmark, as said before, was isolated. As an Iraq en miniature. All the other Ministers of Justice in the EU signed a document to the effect that Holocaust deniers should be punished. Denmark was apparently the only European country not to sign the act. (Only quite recently it was reported that England seems to share our views. It remains to be seen which steps, if any, the new labour government will take.)

With an all too characteristic display of traditional pilpul and chutzpah, the Jews changed the original meaning of the phrase Die Auschwitz-Lüge. For Thies it meant that it was wrong to say that there were gas chambers in Auschwitz-Birkenau, for the Jews it now means that it was wrong to say that there were no gas chambers in Auschwitz-Birkenau. No matter how serious business all this is there is also an element of Jewish humor not to be overlooked.

But shoah-business remains bloody serious business. It's now horribly clear that at least some of the Jewish leaders are prepared to use " every resource to stop revisionism, now, before it's too late". They obviously do not abhor from exterminating freedom of speech and research in Europe. Of course, they prefer to let the Europeans do the dirty job on their behalf, letting the lousy goyim hang themselves by their own ropes. And to this day they have been very successful indeed.

During WW II it was Germany that had to perish, now it is Europe that has to perish — for a Europe without freedom of speech and research is no longer a European Europe. It will eventually degrade into a union under an alien One World dictatorship. Human decency will be defined in terms of U.S. dollars.

What Europe now needs urgently more than anything else, are men of courage and wisdom — an aristocracy of virtue and talent, as Thomas Jefferson phrased it — men prepared to let the Jews know that the world is fed up with their endless array of lies and deceit. The task of revisionist scholars is to provide such political leaders with the most efficient ammunition of all: historical truth.

At a recent meeting in one of Copenhagen's suburbs, in April 1996, a close and trustworthy friend of mine reports, Bent Melchior made a couple of memorable remarks. Asked what he would respond if scholars were justified in claiming that the story about Moses might after all be but a myth, he replied that he could not care less. What mattered for him as a Jew and as a rabbi (a common way of Jewish expression) was not "academic truth" but "freedom". For him truth and freedom were entirely different matters. Truth, in itself, is not worthy of respect. Asked, then, by a naive Christian contemplating conversion to Judaism, what he, as a Jew, thought of Christianity, Melchior replied that he agreed entirely with his late father, the former chief rabbi, that Jews should be pleased with the Christians, "for Christianity is a mission for Judaism", he laughed. And the ignorant Christians present clapped their hands wildly in joyful approval not realizing the deeper implications of this piece of chutzpah. (Had they, one may assume, read and understood the late Revilo P. Oliver's brilliant essay "Jews love Christianity", the sloppy rabbi would, one fears, have had to run for his life.)

But there is Jewish wisdom in those words — freedom as opposed to academic truth. From the freedom from academic truth to useful and beneficial lies there are not many steps. And the Jewish savants have not always taken those steps with the care and circumspection they frankly ought to have done.

The eminent intellectual historian, Dr. Alexander Jacob, from the University of Toronto, if I remember correctly, once in passing remarked on the criminal nature of the Jews. To the extent that Jewish leaders are prepared to let Germany and Europe perish so as to suppress freedom of speech and research in order for themselves to uphold the lucrative tyranny of their own myths, they are, according to the laws of any land, indeed guilty of a severe crime.

I do not think that we have to apologize for still retaining some old-fashioned European respect for facts. The value of freedom of speech and research depends on the respect for facts. The struggle for freedom is much the same as the struggle for facts and for truth. Freedom without truth is, for us, an absurdity.

Under enormous Jewish pressure countries such as Canada, Germany, France, etc. have now turned it into a "hate crime" to search for and speak out what historical revisionism has found to be the historical truth.[14]

The Jews and their lackeys among the intellectuals — Aryan traitors, you might say — politicians, etc. have turned it into a crime to lie about what they consider, or currently pretend to consider historical truth. So the Jews, at least for the time being, insist that those who deny (certain) historical facts should be punished.

But truth, in the end, will prevail, as has always been the case. This is our faith, this is our trust, this is our hope. And our love, too.

And once truth is out — perhaps by means of the Internet that not even Jewish machinations seem to be able to control — it will be clear that the real liars — not just about the historical truth but also about those who, like Thies, struggled on its behalf — were the Jews.

Should they, then, be punished for falsification of history, and for incitement of hatred, as they themselves now would have it? Aristocrats of virtue and talent, it goes without saying, do not even then entertain any base Jewish desires for revenge.

There will be universal demands from those politicians, etc. who now see — and finally dare to say — that they were deceived by the Jewish lies. Jews — also humble, innocent Jews — will invariably be held responsible. Justice will hold them to account for an endless list of violence, libel, slander, corruption, censorship, arson, murder, etc. etc. — in short for "hate crimes"! Suddenly, the obscure and odd phrase will become more meaningful than ever before.

Will Saul become Paul, will the Jews convert and implore for Christian virtues such as forgiveness? Can they expect their victims to show them the mercy that they themselves were seldom, if ever, prepared to show? Will they, calling upon Thies — as Pressac in the end called upon Leuchter — implore their victims to counter hatred with love? Will they claim that they too, like Thies, fought an honest fight against the Auschwitz-Lüge? That they, too, are its innocent victims?

Like a boomerang the Auschwitz-Lüge, not made in, but made for Germany, and for Europe, yes, even for America, yea, made for the entire mankind by its traditional enemies, will revert upon Mr. Bubis and other suppressors of the freedom and the rights of man.

What Europeans, in the end, are not supposed to use their right to freedom of speech to say is this: Next only to Judeo-Christianity, Holocaust-Judaism has been employing the Great Myth — first the myth of one Jew holocausted "for our sins", then the holocaust of no less than six million Jews — as an instrument of the greatest and most base case of blackmail in recorded history. First the cross, then the gas chamber! To this day the new religion has sucked an estimated 125 billion dollars out of the German sinners and about four times as much out of the American boobs. Currently, the big squeeze is on the Swiss and their bankers. The Norwegians, according to Edgar Bronfman Sr. (Time, November 4, 1996, p. 24) have confessed their sins and promised to pay some 80 million dollars to compensate for Jewish victims.[15] (Norway, of course, never deliberately caused the death of a single Jew.) The president of the World Jewish Congress, according to whom, "This is not about money. This is about justice", (— in the Jewish language justice is often but a euphemism for bucks —) has announced that the WJC will investigate the fate of Jewish property in France, Belgium, Holland and Sweden (Sweden was, of course, never even under German occupation — but, naturally, the average American would hardly even know.)

Predictably, the big squeeze will soon be on France. In November 1996, the "distinguished" pseudo-philosopher and son of an Algerian rabbi, Jacques Derrida, addressed an audience at Oxford University about the "lie of the state, and the state of the lie". The state was France that had let IT — the Nazi Holocaust — happen. And the lie was, according to that most dishonest sophist, that France claimed not to have known.

Here again we face a typical Jewish lie-lie.[16] The real lie is that it is a lie that France has lied about its ignorance about the "Nazi Holocaust". How in the world could "France" before 1945 possibly know that the silly myth would be apotheosized as true history after 1945?

If, in this way, it is possible to blackmail innocent "sinners" for having murdered unknown victims all to the benefit of the WJC which has itself suffered no harm at all (but only caused it) then there is, in principle, nothing to prevent WJC (in competition with numerous other Jewish organisations, making it a bit more difficult for the predators) from putting the next squeeze on the Aborigines of Australia, or on the !Kung San of the Kalahari. These savages, too, "should have known"! Sure, since the rest of the world has already confessed its sins of omission.

But perhaps the Aborigines and the !Kung San are simply too destitute of means to make extortion and blackmail worth the while? And perhaps they never even heard of the true prophecy of the holocaust of 6,000,000 Jews in Europe, although it had been launched as far back as October 1919, in the American Hebrew. And perhaps they don't even subscribe to that journal, the damned !Kung San in the Kalahari?

Surely, if historical revisionism is not holocausted, now, the Jews face very serious problems indeed. Mr. Bronfman is right, the Jews must do all they can to stop revisionism, now.

Or will they, experts in apocalyptic bombing, let Israel send a shower of bombs from the sky so as to condemn the world to a final solution — the one, the only, the true and also the final Holocaust?

Lies create chaos, and the enemies of civilization thrive on it. Their most powerful weapon against truth and science is hatred, against justice it is revenge. For us as for them it is a simple question of survival. Their lies must be opposed. What but the upheld shield of veracity can boomerang the arrow of Hebrew hatred back to its sordid source of discharge?

Footnotes

1. The Israeli columnist Ari Shavit of the Hebrew-language newspaper Haaretz wrote in an article appearing in the May 27, 1996 New York Times, on Jews killing Arabs: "We killed them out of a certain naive hubris. Believing with absolute certitude that now, with the White House, the Senate and much of the American media in our hands, the lives of the others do not count as much a our own." — Source: The Christian News, July 15, 1996, p. 3.

2. Actually, Germany had an "Auschwitzlüge-Gesetz" from 1985. It was now, under the pressure from the Jews, of course, aggravated and in effect from December 1, 1994.

3. In other words, "reality" is created, or made up, by "films and museums", and, of course, by the "memories" of the " survivors" — not to forget the increasing number of reincarnated Jews who claim to recollect "shower heads", etc. Jewish scholarship, then, is religious or mythical, in the sense that it accepts creatio ex nihilo even in history and in science! likewise, when e.g. Time proudly claims that it makes the news. It never just reports them. It is not always fair to say that the Jews are notorious liars, but they invariably "make things up". Even their own fictitious god, called Jahveh, is a celebrated case in point. Like so many other primitive tribes the Jews have simply not yet taken the step from myth to reason. Science they only know second-hand. But unlike other barbarians they insist on imposing their myths upon the rest of mankind. This, essentially, constitutes the Jewish problem, and also accounts for the fact that they have to exterminate "the best among the goyim", not wishing their schemes to be revealed. Moreover, in whatever a Jew does, an element of material profit is present. The Jew is always social and commercial in his doings, and still basically selfish, in his mentality. — For an illuminating recent discussion of the old Jewish problem, see Dr. Alexander Jacob's book Eugen Dühring on the Jews, Brighton, England 1997, which, incidentally, was seized by the Canadian authorities and banned as pornographic! The Reviewing Officer — a Mr. Roskaft.
The standard argument that "we only have the witnesses" (and, based on their testimony, subsequently the museums and the films, etc.) is almost too silly for words or for rational rejection. The statement of a witness in itself proves or refutes absolutely nothing. If it is against reason or experience witness testimony must be rejected. A "witness" may have many reasons for not relating, or being able to relate the truth, even in an imperfect manner. Furthermore, there is a problem when one witness contradicts himself (his earlier statements), or contradicts those of other "witnesses". What, then, are we to believe? Certainly not something contradicted by experience, common sense, or the words of the "witness(es)" themselves. In brief, the testimony of a witness, in itself, proves nothing — not even what the witness really has in mind. Surely, some witnesses are more trustworthy than others, but again, the decision about whom to trust must be based on previous experience, and on reason. (Recently, I remember seeing some "distinguished Jewish scholar" insisting that the testimony of two witnesses — when it comes to the "gas chambers" — would be sufficient. — Only he forgot to explain what happens when these two witnesses disagree, either with other sets of witnesses, or even with one another.)

4. From his radio station Mr. Hansen (who does not have any higher education) has also offered the Royal Danish family, having recently taken to Mongolising, some elementary pieces of advice on racial hygiene. Mr. Hansen is thus, if I am not mistaken, the only Dane to offer the public free and highly unauthorized courses on the genocidal effects of race mixing. As the traditional enemies of mankind are also doing their best to throw the ignorant Danes into the great melting pot of the One World, Mr. Hansen's well-meaning efforts can hardly count on overwhelming success. (The press condemns him as a "failure".) The Danish princess from Hong Kong seems in effect, at present, to be the most popular person in the kingdom.

5. In October 1993 the Danes had, upon orders, naturally celebrated the 50th anniversary of the "rescue of the Jews". So again the press was replete with myths and lies about the innocent Jews who were miraculously rescued from the Holocaust by the righteous Danes. (This is how the holy myth runs which is also part of the reason why the Jewish leaders in Denmark are in a dilemma when they have to tell the "righteous Danes" that it is not right of them not to punish the "Auschwitz-Lie".) The lesson we should learn from history, the Jews, is that any kind of "hatred of strangers" eventually leads to genocide and Holocaust (— problem again: in 1943 it did not lead to any Holocaust of a single Danish Jew). A nasty trick of theirs is to render "hatred of strangers" by the term xenophobia, from the Greek, meaning fear, not hatred, of strangers. But xenophobia in its original sense is a natural virtue found in all healthy species and essential for their survival. Do caring mothers not tell their children to beware of strangers? So, with their usual duplicity, by representing xenophobia as a vice, the Jews criminalize a virtue necessary for one's survival and well-being. For the benefit of who? Themselves, of course. The truth of the matter is that while we may fear the Jews and their lies, they certainly seem to hate us. There is nothing wrong in fearing hatred and lies. It would be madness not to.

6. One of those to hail Mr. Farmand's nonsense as "scholarly", was a certain Jewish "scholar" and journalist, Bent (Benjamin) Blüdnikow. Among many other activities he has contributed to the major recent work of lies, entitled The Führer Has Ordered! The very title of the book nicely tells how the myth-mongers work. One only needs a bit of discrimination (no wonder the Jews are against discrimination!) to ask: What, exactly, has the Führer ordered, to whom, where, when, in what form, and how do you know it, from which documents, sources, etc.? None of these questions is raised or answered in the book. The Holocaust "ordered by the Führer" is, in another sense than the Jews want it to be, unspeakable. It is mere words.

7. As will be recalled, Jean-Claude Pressac, since 1982, has been supported and promoted by the Jews to refute Faurisson, and other serious scholars. But recently poor Pressac, after his show-down in Paris in 1995, was entirely abandoned by his former "friends". See "The Journal of Historical Review, Vol. 16, No. 1, 1996, p. 41, for details and further references to this interesting intermezzo.

8. Again, note how Jewish myths are created by violating the demands of logic and syntactical rules of the Indo-European languages. Some years before that, Arne Melchior, defaming Mr. Riis-Knudsen (with impunity) in public calling him "murderer and terrorist", said he wanted Mr. Riis-Knudsen, as a person, "prohibited". — What does it mean, in the language of the Jews, to "prohibit" another person? To annihilate him? To kill him? To throw him into jail? We are not told. Why not?

9. On August 22, 1996, all the media reported, Mr. Gary Lauck, in Hamburg, was sentenced to four years in jail for his "horrible thesis" (standard phrase by now) that 6,000,000 had not been gassed by Hitler, and for having propagated his opinion for the last twenty years. The barbaric absurdity of German law (130) here becomes manifest. On the one hand there is nothing wrong when the media report that Mr. Lauck does not believe in the magical number 6,000,000 — and so the public knows what Mr. Lauck thinks — but on the other hand it is certainly wrong to share Mr. Lauck's opinion. So it follows that it is really no longer a matter of freedom of speech but rather freedom of opinion that is at stake. The rights of Mr. Lauck have clearly been violated on all counts. Who dares to say that we are not all entitled to the right of holding any opinion we wish? — The Malleus Maleficarum, it will be recalled, defined heresy as an error mentis, a mental error, or sin. In Germany it is now one's mentality that is punishable, it is not what one says but the mental state that one is assumed to be in when saying or when not saying so. Similar inquisitorial laws have recently been passed even in Belgium and Switzerland. This means that Europe is now on its way back to a period very similar to the one so well described e.g. by Henry Charles Lea in his monumental A History of the Inquisition in the Middle Ages, or more recently, by Edward Peters, Inquisition, New York 1988: The Free Press. It all began, as is known, to preserve orthodox religious beliefs from the attacks of heretics. Furthermore, this means that scholars in the future again may fear the persecution of the Church which, as is known, is largely prepared to endorse the myth of the Holocaust (and certainly not so in good faith). It will also be ready to punish the heretics severely and in the best of faith. Recently, in April 1996, for instance, the French bishops unanimously condemned the Abbe Pierre for his revisionist leanings, and signed a declaration to the effect that gas chambers had indeed existed. Once this has become a universal dogma of faith, protected by law, Hollywood (the kingdom, or one of the worldly kingdoms of the Jews) will be able to show public executions of scholarly witches, whose only crime is that they still are in possession of reason and intelligence, learning and courage.

10. To be quite precise, the novel form of the myth about the 6,000,000 having been "conflagrated in an oven", was launched by a Jewish potter by the name of Peter Brandes, as a guest of Mr. Pundik, on Danish TV, February 26, 1996. — Mr. Pundik himself did not object to the fanciful procedure now suggested, though Mr. Pundik in a book on Israel, from 1971, had written: " Six million (Jews) had been shot in the neck by the Nazis, suffocated by gas in the German camps of extinction, starved and slapped to death"... and, " Europe (under Hitler) meant death and devastation, it was one huge graveyard where Jews had buried (sic!) six million dead." Again (cf. note 3 above) the authorities cannot agree about what actually happened, where, when and how. And what the proofs actually are. One author, Kristian Hvidt, claims that, "Hundreds of gas chambers were surrounded by bones from human beings. They provided the proof for a systematic killing of 6,000,000 destitute human beings." One wonders who ever saw these mountains, and who counted the bones? Another author, Stefan T. Norwid, was of the opinion "that no Jews were sent to Oswiecim". (Landet uden Quisling, Copenhagen 1945, p. 86.) How, then, could they have been "gassed" in Auschwitz? Another "survivor" was a certain Helene Weiser. She recalls how she, in Auschwitz, "had to carry a huge stone several kilometers up on a mountain". Since there are no mountains in the area today, one wonders who removed the mountain of her Sisyphus labors? Faith, perhaps? Is this what the distinguished professor, Dr. Porat of Tel Aviv, would have us believe?

11. Mr. Thirslund is a man without fear. As reported in the third issue of his Vestlig samisdat, he has written a letter to the new chief rabbi, Bent Lexner, asking him to reply to some of the paradoxes associated with the Holocaust myth. First Mr. Thirslund's letter "was lost", but in August 1996 the rabbi finally replied that there could be no discussion with anyone who was so anti-Semitic (i.e. truth-seeking, as we would say) as not to accept the 6,000,000 figure, proved by all the museums, etc. So the new rabbi in Denmark shares the view of the great liar, Mr. Wiesel, et al., that there can be no dialogue with revisionists. Reason, common sense and debate are obviously not among the resources recommended by Mr. Bronfman. — What do these people really mean when the speak in favour of "democracy"? — As for Bent Melchior, the "retired rabbi", he now expects to find more time for his struggle for human rights and for "creating opinion". Thus, in Europe, published by the European Commission, August 1996, the president of the Bna Mrith (sic!) sees it as the task of Europe to suppress racism, punish war crimes, prevent individuals such as "this Hansen from Greve" from spewing poison all over Europe (in Danish!). Also, Europe should open its borders to all minorities — and punish all who do not agree with these views. He calumniates the memory of all Europeans who 60 years ago "would not let the Jews leave Germany". This was because they failed to "coordinate their policies", he mendaciously explains. Such, roughly, is his perverted rabbinical vision of Europe.

12. Duplicity again: No revisionist denies the existence of concentration camps (they would be but pitiable fools if they did), and when it comes to "minimizing crimes", this is a derogatory circumlocution for "critical discussion". One recalls the filthy Theodor Adorno (famous for the dictum, "No poetry after Auschwitz"), and his call for a crusade of reason against reason. According to Adorno, it was "the authentic work of art to defend truth". What he really had in mind, one can see in the works of art in Holocaust museums, for instance.

13. Interestingly, Mr. Kahn was more outspoken in the obscure pamphlet, Samspil, No. 7, November 1994: "In Denmark it is legal to deny the persecution of the Jews and the existence of the gas chambers during WW II. This is absolutely unacceptable to us Jews. Here also a harmonizing has to take place." — Jean Kahn, to be sure, is cited as being the chairman of the European Jewish Congress!

14. See, for Canada, Barbara Kulaszka, The Hate Crimes Law in Canada 1970-1994. Effects and Operation. For France there is Eric Delcroix, La Police de la Pensé contre le Révisionnisme (1994: R.H.R). The picture, mutatis mutandis, is exactly the same: It is a crime against humanity (i.e. the Jews) even to think that there were no homicidal gas chambers during WW II. This, naturally, is a terrible thing. Laws can be effective in preventing you from saying or writing what you think, but they cannot prevent you from making your own thoughts. Intimidation and terror can, to a large degree, do so, however. Therefore, the Jews have to take recourse to these barbarian means, as they have always done.

15. Note also the pilpul and the chutzpah on the cover of Time, November 4, 1996, "The Goods of Evil". The "goods" are not really the "gold rings taken from prisoners at Buchenwald" (— are they really even gold rings? —) on the "Photo digitally altered (sic!) by John Blackford", but the goods (goodies) that can be had by telling evil lies about the goyim (for whom Time "makes the news".) A wonderful and fascinating sense of humor that probably escapes the average reader of a jews-magazine that, as was said, "makes the news". Again pilpul and chutzpah — deliberate deception!

16. In a sense, we cannot blame Derrida. He himself describes his pseudo-philosophy as one of "deconstruction". The fault is on our side when we fail to recognize that this is merely pilpul language for destruction. After all, the Algerian Jew is thus quite honest about his intention that he wants to destroy the goyim. In 1993 Cambridge University awarded him an honorary doctorate for his mischief. Without our own stupidity there would be no Jewish problem.

Another Hebrew Talks

by

Guillermo Coletti

It has never been the case, until recent times, that members of the tribe spoke publicly and frankly about their wrongdoings. They are not a people renowned by their acts of conscience. They are, however, a remarkably pragmatic people. We can imagine that if their motto had been "death before dishonor" none of them would have made it beyond the days of Ancient Egypt. Pragmatic they are and examples abound, after all, what else but pragmatism would have made the chief Rabbi in Berlin congratulate Hitler on January 30, 1933. They wanted to get on Hitler's good side hoping some day they could make a "deal" with him. Let's give credit where credit is due: they are good at proposing deals and make people believe their deals are worthy.

Today many Chosenites are beginning to speak against the tribe, many times at the cost of putting their own lives in danger. Victor Ostrovsky is one of those men, he wrote By Way of Deception (and a sequel), a book exposing some of the worst aspects of the Mossad. This trend may signify that some Hebrews are already trying to come to our side with flags waving, perhaps in anticipation of a coming reversal in World Politics.

Ze'ev Chafets has joined the club of disenchanted Chosen Ones, judging by his piece "Real Torah Judaism", published in the January/February 1998 issue of Washington Report on Middle East Affairs. By doing so, Chafets provides us with an unique insider's look at what the Chosen are truly taught by their rabbinical caste. Of course, many of us are sufficiently informed as to find no surprise in any of these topics, but they provide us a virtual confession.

Chafets is an American who moved to Jerusalem in 1967 and while trying to learn Judaism, "studied Talmudic Law at the Hebrew University." There he first learned of Rabbi Meir Kahane's remarks (Kahane was a Jew from New York, founder of the Jewish Defense League). Chafets makes reference to Kahane's preaching that the "penalty for a Muslim man marrying a Jewish woman should be death."

Chafets adds that "then along came Rabbi Yitzhak Peretz, Shas cabinet minister. He said a school bus full of kids was hit by a train because God was angry that the theater in town was open on Friday nights." Despite their effort to appear as modern as Western Europeans, Jews still remain very superstitious.

The article continues: "after that came Rabbi Yitzhak Kadouri, the world's greatest kabbalist. He put a hex on a Jerusalem office because it blocked his view." Superstition again. "Next, former chief rabbi Shlomo Goren put out a death warrant on Yasser Arafat."

"Rabbi Dow Liot, the head of a Kiryat Arba yeshivah, declared it kosher to kill Gentile women and children in wartime."

"Then 20,000 yeshivah boys gathered to stone and threatened Israeli archaeologists. One of their leaders, Rabbi David Batzri, proclaimed that God had sent an earthquake to punish the scientists."

"Rabbi Ovadiah Yosef, universally considered one of the great Torah scholars of the age, was quoted as ruling that the faithful should refuse transfusions from Gentiles and nonobservant Jews because they (we) have dangerously 'treif' blood which might cause all manner of unJewish behavior."

"His colleague, Rabbi Mordechai Eliyahu, took issue with this learned opinion. According to him, Jewish blood is inherently pure and therefore incapable of defiling Jewish recipients."

This information is further proof of the incompatibility between our Western lifestyle and the Jewish outlook on things. The future of this stormy relationship may present Caucasian man with a dilemma: either we will be treated by Jews like Palestinians or, we will treat them as Palestinians. The decision must have consideration for the Aryans yet to be born.

News and Views From Here And There

by

Guillermo Coletti

The following is a compilation of news that received almost no attention, as well as a few brief comments. I believe all of them to be significant and at least worthy of knowledge. They have not been given any particular order that may reflect degree of importance.

Germanophobia 1

The exuberant Whiteness emanating from Irish dancing is already triggering paranoia in the minds of chronic Germanophobes. While reviewing Hollywood's Oscars night (1997), David Aaronovitch, entertainment critic of England's Independent on Sunday, somehow managed to insert the following comment: "...action from the Riverdancers, who—in their black uniforms and black boots, kicking highsteps in drilllike precision—looked like the corps de ballet of the SS ...". Bravo, Riverdancers!

Germanophobia 2

USA Today dedicated extensive coverage to remembering the Holocaust. Holocaust Remembrance is a sort of Germanophobiafest for selfhating Teutons and Semites who engage in extremes in a communion of bigotry and intolerance. USA Today, however, among countless diatribes, published a most interesting statement: "1944, September: The Red Cross visits Auschwitz but says it's unable to prove Nazis are gassing Jews." (Information from*USA Today*, May, 2/97)

Germanophobia 3

Did you know that in 1932, a year before Hitler's coming to power, the President of the World Jewish League, Bernard Lecahe, stated that "Germany is our state enemy number one"?

Judeophilia 1

A Jewish Saint for the neoCatholics! Edith Stein, a Jewess born in Germany who converted to Catholicism and eventually became a nun, is on her way to Sanctification. She was so special! She wasn't only a tribeswoman (of the Chosen kind I mean), but she was also allegedly gassed at Auschwitz in 1942, only one week after arrival. Edith Stein replied, when asked about the reason for her conversion to Catholicism, "this is my secret". The neoCatholics will have now, not only Jews for Cardinals, but also Jewish saints. Is this trend leading to a Jewish Pope? It would certainly make for a grand finale for the end of the Jewish Century. (information from People Magazine, May, 19, 1997 and Los Angeles Times, May, 23,1997)

Judeophilia 2

In 1996 the state of Israel received 6.3 billion American Dollars. This money was given to Israel as a gift, for Israel to keep and under no obligation to ever repay to the American taxpayer. Have you paid your fair share yet? (information from Washington Report on Middle East Affairs, April/May 1997)

Terrorist Jew

Harry Shapiro, a kosher butcher and an Orthodox Jew, pleaded guilty to federal charges that he planted a bomb at a synagogue in Jacksonville, Florida. The bomb had been placed before a scheduled appearance by former Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres. The plea means that the kosher butcher will face a tenyear prison term instead of thirty plus years he could have otherwise received. The authorities will not charge Shapiro for using an explosive during a crime. Food for thought for skeptics of the Judicial system. (The Atlanta Journal, March 20, 1997, supplied by the kind folks of Midwest Information News Service; P.O. Box 431; Novi, MI 48376)

Computerized Bigotry

Interplay Productions, a company based in Irvine, CA, made available to the general public a computer game named "Redneck Rampage". The packaging displays an unflattering drawing of two unclean, toothless White young men and the catchy words: "All the Killin', Twice the Humor, Half the Intelligence". I wouldn't be surprised if the bulk of the consumers of "Redneck Rampage" were themselves White, in further manifestation of the urgent need for a cultural change. This product is distributed by Egghead Software and other computer retailers.

The population of Los Angeles County is of (approximately) 10,000,000 people. The ethnic breakdown is (also in approximate figures):

50% Hispanic

10% Black (there are also some Blacks in the Hispanic category)

10% Asian (this means people of yellow complexion)

30% White (this category also includes Jews, Armenians, Arabs, Pakistanis, Hindus, etc.)

Quite likely the real White population of Los Angeles is below 15%.

I Love L.A. 2

During 1994 600,000 violent crimes were reported in the county. It is estimated that at least an equal number of crimes went unreported. An average of two violent crimes per minute. A success story for multiculturalism?

I Love L.A. 3

Every hour that banks are open to the public in Los Angeles, one is robbed. Everyday, all the time. World capital of bank robberies.

I Love L.A. 4

During the months of AutumnWinter 19971998, 500 people died in Los Angeles (and neighboring counties) afflicted by a type of influenza believed to be of Asiatic origin.

More than 20% of the adult population of Los Angeles have been diagnosed with genital herpes.

Diseases believed long gone, such as Tuberculosis and Rabies, have made a strong comeback in Los Angeles. The re-appearance of Rabies has been attributed to the contraband of pets from Mexico.

The SciFi movie "Starship Troopers" received criticism from the traditional left as well as the John Birch Society (as published in the December 1997 issue of The New American) for its alleged promotion of Fascism. In a futuristic world, it is cadets from the Buenos Aires Academy of Space who save planet Earth from alien invaders. These Argentines sport uniforms tailored after the Leibstandarte SS and the Afrika Korps. No kidding. A very juicy dialog in the movie goes like this:

Professor: "This year we explore the failure of Democracy, how the social scientists brought our world to the brink of chaos. We'll talk about the Veterans, how they took control and imposed stability that lasted for generations since. Why only citizens are allowed to vote?"

Student: "It's a reward, it's what the state gives you for doing federal services."

Professor: "No, no! Something given has no value. When you're voting you're exercising political authority, you're using force, and force, my friends, is violence, the supreme authority from which all other authorities derive."

Pretty Aryan brunette student: "My mother says that violence never resolves anything."

Professor: "Really? I wonder if the victims of Hiroshima think that. Naked force has resolved more issues throughout history than any other factor ... What's the moral difference, if any, between a civilian and a citizen?"

Student: "A citizen accepts personal responsibility for the safety of the body of politics, defending it with his life. The civilians aren't."

"Starship Troopers", a film directed by Paul Verhoeven, is based on the novel of the same title written by Science Fiction meister, Robert Heinlein. Although Heinlein's name may not mean much for the avid reader of racial and political matters, Heinlein is one of the top men in the field of that genre. Heinlein made a reputation for himself as an anti Communist, proWesterner writer who came close to openly manifest racial and antiZionist views. The first edition of "Starship ..." depicts a future world in which the democracies had collapsed under the advance of white masculinity embodied in the form of military discipline. There is a strong suggestion that the only survivors of the world struggle are Caucasians, nevertheless, no reason is given for the disappearance of lower forms of humanity. The Hollywood rendition of this novel is PCapproved, meaning there have been a few compromises.

"Starship ..." has made no friends on the left, and that's understandable. The brief initial dialog gives, in a nutshell, a nonsubjective articulation of some of the principles that many of us share in the movement. Jewish movie critics have not made us wait for their diatribes. Some of their fears are understandable. The film does make Aryan discipline look appealing and logical and the heroes do wear military uniforms clearly inspired by SS outfits. I must say that much of this was to my personal enjoyment and that of a friend who came to the theater with me.

The movie Dark City came and went without great notoriety. I went to see it twice. It is a remarkable film. It tells the story of a race of anthropomorphic parasitic aliens who travel the universe, from planet to planet, usurping what other civilizations have built. They are on planet Earth, and so parasitic are these aliens that all that's left of our beloved planet is New York City, floating by itself in space. The rest has been consumed, there is no longer a globe. These aliens, who have large hooked noses, defeat other civilizations by depriving them of their memories. Thus, peoples have remained without history and consequently, without sense of purpose in life. To do this, the aliens recruit a few human experts in behavior modification, such as the cowardly and selfish doctor interpreted by Kiefer Sutherland. Nevertheless, a few humans do not fall asleep and wonder the streets of NYC in search of their peers. They are aware of the conspiracy perpetrated upon them by these memoryerasing aliens and want to destroy them. Dark City is now available on video. Am I the only one who sees a deeper message in this movie? I mean, the aliens are really hideous looking, perhaps as hideous as the real rats among us.

In a move that defies all constitutionality, the city of Buenos Aires adopted a Constitution of its own. One of the few peculiarities of this radical document is the tolerance of transvestism and the legalization of all forms of prostitution, unchecked and free of medical supervision. Within two weeks of the passing of this mockery of legality, one thousand prostitutes from Santo Domingo arrived in Buenos Aires, according to a high ranking officer of the Federal Police. Also, an army of homosexuals from neighboring countries is moving in at a steady pace. Who knows, one day Buenos Aires may look just like Vancouver or Los Angeles.

During the last days of July 1998 Nelson Mandela visited Argentina. Daily Clarín, the largest circulation Spanishlanguage newspaper in the world, ran a headline that read "A Myth Arrives in Buenos Aires". Mandela is not a myth but a living creature. Mandela also is dispossessed of any quality that could parallel him to a myth. Furthermore, Mandela is a brutal terrorist who should one day see himself tried for crimes against humanity. But, for the Propaganda machine of the New World Order he will remain a hero.

There are 400 citizens of Argentina currently listed in an Interpol record of International Warrants for their arrests. These 400 Argentines are wanted in Germany, France, Spain, Italy and Sweden for their alleged participation in the killings of citizens from those countries in the 1970's in Argentina while fighting Communist terrorism. In those days there was a large presence of foreigners trying to subvert Argentina into a Cubanstyle government. The left was defeated and there were casualties on both sides. Those European countries, instead of apologizing to Argentina for the export of their criminal element, now pretend to exercise overjurisdictional force. The government of Argentina refuses to extradite these men, all of them former members of the Armed Forces. Nevertheless, the pending International Warrants prevent them from leaving the country without getting arrested overseas. With the exception of Uruguay and Chile, all other regional countries have expressed their intentions to enforce those "global" warrants.

Professor Marcos Ghio is to Argentina what Professor Revilo Oliver was to America, at least in my very own personal opinion. He is one of the finest men to be found in academia. He is responsible for introducing the works of Julius Evola (Fascism's foremost philosopher) to the Southern country.

While in class, Prof. Ghio mentioned that during the 1970's war against leftwing terrorism, the leftists had suffered some 10,000 casualties. The left refers to these casualties as "disappeared" people. A Maoist student disputed that figure, putting it at a high of 30,000 slain. In brief: Prof. Ghio had his day in court and a Judge decided that his statement was correct but that the Maoist student had acted in good faith and that thererfore he (the judge) did not want to hurt this Maoist student's feelings any further. What was the decision? Well, Prof. Ghio is in the clear except that he was ordered to pay all legal feeds, some 60,000 US Dollars. For the judge, the feelings of the Maoist are more important than those things even he accepts as true. It's a dangerous trend. Prof. Marcos can be reached by mail at: C.C. 92, Sucursal 25 (1425), Buenos Aires, Argentina, or by email at: grisaceo@pinos.com

Spanishlanguage television news reported that military forces from Argentina arrived in Puerto Rico during the first week of August 1998. The official excuse (everything has an official excuse) was that Argentina was there to perform maneuvers related to UN peace keeping efforts. Forces from Central American and Caribbean countries sent personnel to be placed under the command of Argentina. Puerto Rican independentistas, nevertheless, saw a different purpose behind this alien military presence on their island. They suggested that the forces were there to perform the dirty job for the U.S. in case the islanders staged a revolt for their emancipation. They also added that these maneuvers, at this present moment, signified nothing less than a provocation. Is the idea of a free and independent Puerto Rico such a bad idea? Should we reject it?

European Tourists

A family of French tourists approached me on the streets of Hollywood for assistance on directions to some of the sites most visited by outoftowners. After I had helped with what they needed, I asked the man his opinion on Chirac, France's neoConservative ruler. He replied that they didn't like him because they were Liberals. I made a sarcastic remark, implying that then they must be happy about the proliferation of mosques in Paris and the constant Third World immigration to all of France. The French tourist and his wife seemed offended, as they answered "we are Liberals but above all we love our nation, of course we are not happy with those people." I was happily surprised and a bit embarrassed at my display of political prejudice. Perhaps this explains why some Communist workers in France now vote for La Pen. They are putting nation above politics, a healthy sign of the times.

European Tourists 2

A family of Germans touring California asked me for directions on how to get to Universal City. I politely helped and then I asked what was the situation with free speech in Germany today. They told me it was terrible, that practically nothing could be said that in any way was even slightly not pro Jewish. I told them about Revisionist sites on the Internet and where to consult my book list. Two months later I received a friendly letter from the same people and payment for a copy of Mein Kampf in German. And that was nice.

The Rise of the Aryan Mafia: a SocioRacial Forecast Part One

by

Guillermo Coletti

INTRODUCTION

I started writing this piece with the idea of explaining a phenomenon that I think is going to be an important part of the future of America. I believe that a new institution will rise, at a time not too distant from now. That institution will be violent, racist, and for profit. In order to better depict its nature, I have called it the Aryan Mafia. I believe the Aryan Mafia will take form, as much as I believe that Mexicans will keep coming to the United States; people on welfare will continue having illegitimate babies; Jews will make new movies; and California will have more earthquakes, aftershocks and floodings. I know that many traditional thinking, conservative types and orthodox rightwingers may find this idea abhorrent, and I can not argue with that. This concept of the Aryan Mafia may indeed be abhorrent because it will present us with attitudes and patterns of conduct that we have been programed to reject. Nevertheless, the status quo may be just as abhorrent. Additionally, I believe that the Aryan Mafia will get started by a natural process of its own. I think that nothing can be done to precipitate its formation, as I believe that nothing can be done to prevent it from happening. The Aryan Mafia is, in my observation, a certain thing just as ethnic strife in the Balkans was a certain thing for syndicated columnist Pat Buchanan in the early 1990's when he wrote that the now exYugoslavia was heading toward ethnocivil war. In the old days there were men who forecasted the growth of the Sicilian Mafia in America and its impact upon an already established way of life. The Aryan Mafia will be the natural reaction of a dying racial body as it starts showing strong vital signs. It will be rough and it will be criminal. There will be winners and losers as well as innocent victims. Above all, the Aryan Maffia will be a sign of its times. Like an irregular army, it will have warlords and soldiers, performing tasks in a time of chaos and disregard for authority or any form of government representation. Its members will favor ridiculously overpriced H&Ks, will drive expensive American cars (Vipers, Corvettes, topoftheline Jeeps, etc.) and will embrace White Power Rock'n Roll with as much enthusiasm as some minorities have already embraced Gangsta Rappers. In other words, they will spend a great deal of their resources on selfindulgence like the Ancient Aryan warriors once did, and their female companions will most probably be the most gorgeous women our race has to offer. They will be young, strong, arrogant and they will have an unstoppable desire to take the world by storm and make it theirs, the old fashioned way, with force. My opinion for this crescendo of Aryan crime can be substantiated by current statistics which reflect that White crime is the fastest rising crime in America. This growth will develop according to the nature of the Aryan: at one point it will become orderly.

Putting this forecast in writing has proven to be a greater and more time consuming effort than I have initially thought. Therefore I have decided to release partial chapters, as I approach a conclusion to this socioracial forecast.

AMERICA'S CASTES

America has been a caste society for quite a long time. There is, however, no official document pronouncing America a caste society just as there is no document pronouncing America a democracy. On paper America is a republic and everybody is equal under the law and we are all a big happy family. In reality we are not all equal under the law as we are not all equal in the political arena. Then again, there is no official document pronouncing Ted Turner more influential than a man who earns minimum wage. The lack of a document of that sort may predispose some people to believe that the concept of inequality is false because it has never been stated that way, but the institution of civil equality, however, is documented. To those people I say: keep believing.

American society is formed, or divided, by layers of different degrees of power and influence. The more powerful layers are less crowded than the underclasses. These economic layers hardly ever interact, at least not as much as races do. The sight of a White woman marrying a negro is more frequent than that of a rich woman marrying a guy from skid row; it just doesn't happen. I'm not in the business of advocating that it should happen either. I'm simply stating something I believe is true, that there is no economic interaction in America, and that as society progresses on its current Jewish path, the differences among the wealthy and those regarded as "human resources" will only magnify.

This, along with increasing deAryanization, is turning America into a Third World country. Unavoidably, as much as the system looks more and more like those in place in Mexico and Thailand, and many other places, something will make America different: America still has and will have a large Aryan population.

Very soon we will see that millions of working Whites won't be able to cover their basic needs. Yes, there will always be those who will pursue well paying careers, people who will have the vocation, the inclination and the ability to be nuclear physicists, surgeons, etc., but the masses of White people will suffer the most grotesque of disappointments (many already do) when they will find themselves jobless or working for a Third World wage. We can see today that jobs that a decade or two ago allowed a White man to earn enough money to raise a family, today they are not even sufficient to afford a single man a comfortable living for himself. The increases in wealth of the upper class are in part due to the cheapening of the blue collar labor, in a greater part as a result of the upper class' ability to influence policy making, at all levels of government, to their own convenience. It is becoming more a matter of everyday life that a worker can not achieve a good living. It does not mean that a worker does not aspire to a good life, or to a moderately good life, it means he doesn't get it in spite of a hard fortyhour work week. It must be remembered that the average young White American thinks that he will not enjoy the socalled American Dream as much as his parents did. Does it mean that the younger American is not as capable of producing? No. It means that he may have been born at the wrong time. But this may also mean that many will refuse to accept that concept and that they will challenge it by taking a different, less orthodox route. Are we starting to understand each other? The ghetto negroes who want to enjoy material things resort to a life of crime and perhaps, although delinquent and questionable to many, their expectations may be realistic. How else could they buy the $100.00 tennis shoes they like so much, or 5 compact discs every week, or cocaine, or expensive cars, or take their girlfriends shopping?

The young Aryan is being pushed into a corner at a pace faster than any other race. Soon he will find himself with no more opportunities than the uneducated, lowIQ negro. And this really should not come as a surprise to thinking fellows. Since the 1950's White America has been told, very openly, that the government had a plan to equalize them with the negroes. How can this be done? Either by bringing the negro up or by bringing the Aryan down. And which one of the two is probable? If you thought that the right answer was by bringing the negro up, please do not waste your time any further. Put this article down right now and go watch Dan Rather or Ted Koppel. Thank you.

BIRTH OF THE ARYAN MAFIA

This concept of the Aryan Mafia, the next mighty wave of organized crime, can be grasped better if visualized. Let me give you a few cinematographic hints: "Natural Born Killers" meets "Point Break" meets "Heat" meets "The Boxer". The Aryan gangster will wear tattoos like the Jap "Yazukas" already do and the drawings will also be ethnically oriented. The Aryan Mafia will be more brutal than anything ever seen. It will have to be brutal from the beginning because that will be the only way the other competing mafias (the negroes, the Asians, the mestizos, etc.) will be removed from certain areas of business, the stuff they refer to as "turf". Initially the aspiring Aryan maffiosos will be tough guys with not a whole lot of vision, who will engage in systematic, violent but petty, and not too profitable crimes. From those who will get busted the first lesson will be learned: next time go for the big loot. There's also another reason why the Aryan Mafia will be the most brutal: it is latent in the blood of the Aryan. When push comes to shove, nobody can surpass Aryan man's ability to inflict long and painful deaths. Europe has tons of museums that display instruments of torture dating as far back as the dawn of civilization. Brutality and violence are manifestations of unrestrained Aryan manhood. Every time the system makes a new move towards matriarchy, what it actually tries to do is to protect itself from a force that, once unleashed, can bring the system to its knees. We have witnessed how much the mestizos can accomplish when they go against the system, we have seen the negroes revolting, but the only force that has what is needed to destroy the Iron Heel is to be found in the blood of the Aryan.

ARYAN LOOTING

Will the Aryan Mafia be racist, political, or what? It will be nonpolitical and it will have to be racist because that will be the way to survival. Its racism will not be due to idealism. The Aryan Maffia will be racist because embracing a racist way of life will be a simple necessity. A little history on race and crime may help backing up my point. The Jew American gangsters of the 1940's, almost all of them, had some sort of participation with the creation of the state of Israel, the only surviving racist state. And that's understandable. When the Hebrews needed to smuggle guns out of New York City they were certainly smart enough to know not to go to a "by-the-book" customs broker of Irish descent, they went to see a successful Hebrew gangster. With the creation of the state of Israel came a big reward to all Jewish criminals: safety, a place where they could find refuge when running from other national authorities. Yugoslavs who escaped their country during the days of the Iron Curtain formed a very brutal Maffia in Western Europe that made headline news in the 1970's, but whose formation made date as far back as a decade prior to that. They did not succeed in their attempt to take over Marseille and Sicily, they didn't have a chance in hell to do that, but they did quite well in London, Paris and Rome. Through violent crime the Yugo Maffia obtained money and, consequently, influence. They had enough money to bribe border officials in their own country to get their relatives out. Their relatives now owed them a favor so they became new recruits. There are plenty of Asian Mafiosos: the Chinese Triad, the Japanese "Yazuka", even in Orange and Los Angeles counties (in California) there are a number of lesser Asiatic maffias, such as the Cambodian, the Philipino, the Laotian, etc. Mafia affiliation, in order to succeed, has to have an ethnoracial overtone. I predict that the coming Aryan Mafia will be White without a particular national theme. It will be a society of Whites whose backgrounds will be traceable all over Europe. This society, as any other similar society, will punish treason with death and will hold silence as one of the greatest virtues.

The Aryan Mafia will be both the most feared and the most targeted for persecution. Let's face it, the Iron Heel doesn't fear Afros brandishing guns in South Central or Compton. They couldn't care less about negro crime because, after all, the negroes are not bright enough to become a force to be reckoned with. But imagine a similar situation, a similar attitude of disregard for compliance with the laws others have passed for us to obey, and change negro faces with Aryan faces. Imagine extensive areas of your city that at night become the playground of ruthless Aryan criminals. That is what the Iron Heel will fear most: armed and action oriented Aryans. Are you getting the picture? Although basically nonidealistic the Aryan Maffia will perform, indirectly, idealistic tasks. They will need to be supported by a number of regular people, just like all maffias have always done. You know, a sympathetic grandmother can be more useful than a dressed down gangster, the type of guys who draw all kinds of attention to themselves. This support will come from doing a few simple kinds of things that, done at the right time, mean a lot. A working father who doesn't have the money he needs to take care of a problem at home may find a friendly hand in the Aryan mafiosos. Why not? They will be happy to have someone owing them something and money will be easy anyway. And the other guy will be grateful. A win win situation.

I believe that the coming Aryan Mafia will be initially made up of biker types, unemployed blue collar workers, wanderers and even skinheads. But I also believe that many college graduates will be resentful after a year or two of unsuccessful search for work related to their careers. Many of those college educated young Aryans will hold sufficient disregard and resentment against the system and its moral selfrighteousness, that they will look for alternative ways of making money, while sticking it back to it. I don't want to sound elitist, but those newcomers may be the touch of sophistication that the Aryan Mafiosos will need to bring themselves to a higher level of criminality, a higher level of efficiency and accomplishment.

The Rise of the Aryan Mafia, Part Two: Q&A

The first part of this series of articles on the rise of the Aryan Mafia generated a number of questions and comments worth addressing. I have, therefore, added this chapter before continuing with the rest of the program, since most of these issues are valid and deserving of attention.

Several people have told me that they do not understand how a Mafia can emerge from some of the simplest forms of criminality, such as described in the previous article. They say that although it is true that Aryan crime is on the rise, this alone will not lead to the formation of a mafia. This is, at least to me, a simple issue. I think that the average criminal is motivated first by survival, second by habit, and ultimately by greed. There are, of course, a number of genetic criminals, but they must not be of our concern for they are irrelevant to the matters discussed here. I believe that after Aryan Gangsters have developed expertise at bypassing the rules of the Iron Heel, survival and habit will be things already accomplished and greed will follow in. Greed will bring a desire to grow, to expand, to diversify into new areas to make more money and consequently to be more powerful, as well as more respectful and respected. This greed will make Aryan gangs merge the same way large banking institutions merge: when it is profitable to do so. This will happen because it will be convenient for the parties involved, there can be no other reason. Once a network of gangs will be in place the formation of the Aryan Mafia will be only one step away. The Sicilian Mafia, after all, is formed by "families", which are basically gangs, but they are part of a larger network or entity, the Sicilian Mafia a.k.a. Cosa Nostra.

Other people have suggested that my depiction of the lifestyle of the future Aryan Gangster was too attractive and that I should have made a moral condemnation of future Aryan, as well as current, criminality. First of all, I did not and I do not feel like making a moral condemnation of Aryans breaking the law and I do not feel that I have that kind of obligation to the state, after all, this series of articles was never meant for publication in The Spotlight. The Iron Heel and its publicists (the media) look the other way when the Jewish Mafia perpetrates some of the most hideous crimes of today. The media does not condemn Jewish or negro crime. Why should I take a different attitude towards people of my own blood line? By the way, the Jewish Mafia is what is vulgarly called the Russian Mafia. If I were to criticize a working class disenchanted young Aryan for aspiring to use force to improve his way of life, then I would be under the same moral obligation to criticize England for taking India and China by force, as well as I should criticize Spain for taking America from the natives by force, and the French nation for colonizing large parts of Africa and Indochina by force, and so on. After all, I do not believe that past Aryans colonized faraway lands because they were altruistic. I'm also inclined to believe that it is extremely naive to expect people with power to obey the laws. People with power use their influence to press for the enactment of laws that people with a weaker stand in society will have to obey, not them. A brief observation of history can prove that.

My second point is that if the depiction of the lifestyle of the Aryan Gangster was too attractive it is simply because his lifestyle will be so. I predict that the next Aryan Gangster will be young, healthy, and fit to enjoy all pleasurable things. I foresee him as inclined to practice sports (probably surfing and bodybuilding will be among his favorites), will have the most awesome looking Aryan Überbabes that you can find, will drive the fastest cars and the most overpriced Harleys, will own the most exclusive weaponry (legal or illegal), will have a lot of free time on his hands and he will discriminate. I mean, the Aryan Gangster will find Negroes, mestizos and Jews despicable. His arrogance will be well justified because he will be a better gangster, a more successful one.

As I anticipated, some people thought I sounded elitist when I suggested that the Aryan Mafia will receive a significant boost after it starts attracting college grads and professional types. I have said: "I don't want to sound elitist, but those newcomers may be the touch of sophistication that the Aryan mafiosos will need to bring themselves to a higher level of criminality, a higher level of efficiency and accomplishment". I think that this comment should not hurt anyone's feelings. Every time a criminal succeeds at making a lot of money he has to find a way to launder that money, to bring it safely into action. For that he will need people with knowledge of economics and the law, such as attorneys, accountants, financial advisors, etc. (there are plenty of people in those areas who are pure Aryans). Nobody is born knowing how to introduce illegally acquired money into a foreign country, for example.

A few people asked what areas of crime will be the first to show signs of Aryan Mafia activity. I would guess that it will probably be in areas where there is easy money, just as nightlife, booze, gambling. Also, other areas may include: firearms, steroids, robberies, traffic of stolen merchandise, collection of "fees" for forced security protection, hitmen for hire, etc. I wouldn't be too surprised if those ships of the U.S. Navy which are now under the control of Mestizo and Negro gangs will become in the near future disputed territories of an underground war with Aryan gangs.

Other readers have predicted that the Aryan Mafia will be shortlived, that it will fail simultaneously with the fall of its initial members who, they anticipate, will all end up in jail. To put it briefly, I'm of the opinion that the greatest segregation we see in America is social separation based on personal income. Most low income people never socialize with higher income people and consequently they do not see on a day to day basis what lots of money can afford. But they will start seeing these differences when the next door neighbor will join the Mafia. Some people will look at this modern Aryan warrior and will want to live like him, risks and adrenaline included. I believe the best form of recruitment the Mafia will have will be by the constant action of being themselves, a lot of young people will want to be like them. It will be, for many, a temptation quite hard to resist. Of course, many Aryan Gangsters will end up in jail and even there, with the currently increasing number of white inmates, the Aryan Gangsters will be a force that will displace the negroes and the mestizos, perhaps with the auspices of other Aryan fraternities within the jail system. I foresee a lot of networking between these fraternities and the Mafia. The Aryan Mafia will rise because it will be a need for a large number of people. Ten thousand snitches, informants, and infiltrators can do nothing to stop it. Actually I believe that the best thing cowards and snitches can do is to stay the hell away from the Aryan mafiosos. As I stated before, I also believe that nothing can be done to precipitate its formation, it is a historical moment that will come no matter what.

Finally, I stated and I maintain that the Aryan Mafia will be nonpolitical but that it will be racial. After obtaining a recognizable power, and only after that, Mafia activity for political power may take place, but only as a consequence of a need for expansion. I believe that it is possible that most Aryans will not find the existence of this Mafia to be a detriment to their own lives. A big political body almost always starts developing its power as a mafia of some sort. The early Bolsheviks benefited from Josef Stalin's many train and bank robberies. The Zionists benefited from the Jewish Mafia established in America, as well as the Stern and Irgun gangs from where the political leadership of the Hebrew state emerged. In America, Democracy also benefited from mafias, the socalled "robber barons" who hired armed guards to smash organized labor. Democracy today is a bit more sophisticated in its relationship with mafias: some mafias are called political parties and thus they maintain an aura of respectability and accountability.

Just as other ethnic mafias have proven to be beneficial for their own peoples, the Aryan Mafia will become an asset for most Aryans.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH—FREEDOM OF THOUGHT FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor-publisher of THE LIBERTY BELL does not necessarily agree with each and every article appearing in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers, however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that THE LIBERTY BELL strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately, it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible and not subject to evolution, change or replacement by the will of the people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the people, not only of America, but the entire world.

Three Essays Refuting The 6 Million Myth

By Austin J.App, Ph.D.

In September 1929, a month before the stock market crashed, "optimism was at a peak," so the Washington Star reports (Sept. 16, 1979). Just so in the last year, and especially in the re-run of the NBC-TV "Holocaust," those determined to blackmail billions of more dollars out of the Christian German people are engaged in a last ditch frenzy propagating the hoax of the "Holocaust" and the lie of the six million. This shoring up the Maginot Line of propaganda and perjury to make the lie of the six million stick a while longer with the credulous American and German people has all the symptoms of a death rattle!

With the eighty plus billion D-Marks the "Wiesenthalers" have already blackmailed out of West Germany, they can afford to spew forth such mass deceptions as the TV "Holocaust," and the Anti-Defamation League's The Record: The Holocaust History, a sixteen page publication, reportedly of eleven million copies — and recently a 139-page paperback, Six Million Did Die. This latter is a desperate attempt at a refutation of Richard Harwood's Did Six Million Really Die?, second edition, Six Million Lost and Found. The South African Jewish Board of Deputies' Six Million Did Die! (second edition, Johannesburg, 1978) has been refuted by S.E.D. Brown's (Editor, The South African Observer, P.O. Box 2401, Pretoria, South Africa) Yes, Six Million Did Not Die!, to be presented in this issue of THE LIBERTY BELL.

The Revisionists, who want to set the record straight about World War II and the treatment of the Jews by the Third Reich, cannot hope to compete with the millions thrown around in support of the hoax of the six million by those who have blackmailed twenty billion dollars of indemnities out of the Christian German people. But in place of extorted millions, the Revisionists have the truth and the determination to make it prevail. They feel an inner compulsion, a sense of fairness, to do what little or much they can to make the truth prevail.

In this spirit Liberty Bell publications and its editor, George P. Dietz, are publishing this issue, dedicated to the revisions of the hoax of "Holocaust" and of the six million.

The first section presents my Holocaust: Sneak Attach on Christianity (9 pages, originally by Boniface Press, 8207 Flower Ave., Takoma Park, Md. 20012). This pamphlet is spiked with quotations that confirm the title, namely, that those who promote the lie of the six million and the "Holocaust" do not primarily shoot at DEAD Nazis but at LIVE Christians. In the NBC-TV "Holocaust" the Jewish protagonists are called WEISS (White), i.e. pure, innocent, the Christian protagonists are SCHWARZ (Black), i.e. guilty (incidentally something for the NAACP to look into!). It repeatedly exposes the Talmudic sneack attack on Christianity in statements like that of a director of the Brandeis Institute, "... without Christianity, there would have been no holocaust. Christianity laid the foundation for the holocaust and it may well give us another holocaust." (San Diego Union, April 14, 1977)

The second section presents Auschwitz, an eye-witness report by Thies Christophersen and a foreword by Attorney Manfred Roeder (translated from the German Die Auschwitz Luege, first published in 1973). This has been a smashingly successful Booklet, of which more than 100,000 have been distributed in five languages. Its unique importance lies in the fact that Thies Christopherse spent the whole year of 1944 at Auschwitz, not as an inmate, nor as an administrator or guard, but as a horticulturist, "supervising the planting and cultivation of India rubber-bearing plants." He therefore has no vested interest for or against Auschwitz, but he also had more than normal freedom to watch the goings-on at the camp. He represents what the Anti-Defamation Leaguers never come up with: a disinterested, living witness!

And this witness declares:

"Actually, there was a crematorium in Auschwitz. . . .there were 20,000 people there. . .Of course people died there as they did elsewhere. . . .During all the time I was in Auschwitz I never in the least observed anything that even indicated mass killings in gas chambers." (page 19).

This eye-witness testimony of Christophersen threw a realistic monkey-wrench into the myth of the six million and lashed the "survivors" into a frenzy. When you read this section of THE LIBERTY BELL you will see why: it is the best living testimony we have about Auschwitz, and it makes liars out of those people who speak of millions of inmates gassed or killed there.

The third section presents Ed Brown's Yes, Six Million Did Not Die! Probably the growing avalanche against the myth of the six million was Harwood's Did Six Million Really Die? It provoked a world-wide echo. It also provoked the South African Jewish Board of Deputies to publish the elaborate rejoinder mentioned above, Six Million Did Die! In Harwood's Did 6 Million Really Die? South African Courts required the removal of passages to the effect that parts of the Diary of Anne Frank were plaguarized from Meyer Levin. It was claimed that the plagiarism was not from the DIARY but from the dramatization of it. This technicality was honored in Six Million Lost and Found.

The latest, Yes, 6 Million Did Not Die!, here once again reprinted, challenges and refutes the South African Jewish Board of Deputies' attack on Harwood's first booklet.

The three essays here reproduced explain that the Third Reich had no plan to nor did exterminate Jews, only to resettle them; that it provided disinfection chambers for killing lice, not gas chambers for killing human beings; that the propaganda of a "Holocaust" of Jews and of six million victims is an invention, in fact the most profitable hoax in world history, having blackmailed with it twenty billion dollars in restitution from the German people for Israel and for Jews world wide. This issue of THE LIBERTY BELL is a gratifying confirmation and addition to the growing evidence that the story of the six million is a lie.

'HOLOCAUST'
SNEAK ATTACK ON CHRISTIANITY

*By Prof. Austin J. App, Ph.D.

The survivor of a concentration camp, Josef Burg (Ginsburg), now a printer in Munich, Germany, complains that the Israelis vindictively obstruct all honest research on the fate of the Jews in the Third Reich. All statistics, he writes, will "so long be controversial until World Jewry and Zionism... will be willing to present to the public exact official statistics of losses" (Suendenboecke, 1967, p.238). This roadblock to research, he writes, is due to the fact that "from six million dead, one can extract far more reparations than from, let's say 6,000" (Suendenboecke, p.223).

Josef Burg also writes, "Today nobody believes any longer the six million figure" (p.220). And indeed, in the last year some top-notch scholars have done the research and mounted the courage to explode the myth of the six million. Prof Arthur R. Butz, of the Ivy Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., in The Hoax of the Twentieth Century (Historical Review Press, Richmond, England, 1976, 315 pages, $5.00) states categorically, "The Jews of Europe were not exterminated and there was no German attempt to exterminate them" (p.239). Some months later the renowned British historian David Irving, in his monumental Hitler's War (Viking, 926 pages, $17.50) concludes that Hitler did not order and did not even know of any extermination of the Jews: "...the incontrovertible evidence is that Hitler ordered on November 30, 1941, that there was to be 'no liquidation' of the Jews" (p.xiv).

The writer, born and raised in Wisconsin, holds an M.A. and a Ph.D. degree in English literature from the Catholic University, Washington, D.C., was instructor or professor of English at several colleges including the Catholic University, University of Scranton, LaSalle College, and has written hundreds of articles and reviews and eight books.*

Frenzied Drive to Give Courses on the Phony 'Holocaust'

The objective historical studies of Professor Butz and David Irving, moans the Los Angeles Times, "Shake Jewish Community": "Holocaust Accounts Cause Uproar" (June 11, 1977). But the more honest research is at long last destroying the myth of the 'holocaust,' the 'gassing of six million Jews,' the more Jewry mobilizes a frantic drive to get the lie perpetuated in courses on the 'holocaust' in the public and even in the private Christian schools.

Like poison mushrooms, 'commemorations' of the 'holocaust' are being arranged. One Howard Weinstein, New York Regional ADL Director, reports gleefully how the ADL office arranged "two highly significant programs... at the Church of St. John the Divine, the home church for the Episcopal Diocese of New York, and at Trinity School, one of the major private schools in New York City" (Metropolitan Star, May, 1977).

The Southwest Jewish Press (March 18, 1977), has a picture and headline, "Big Parley on Holocaust." It announces how "nearly 400 Christian and Jewish scholars met in San Jose last month for the first Western Regional Conference on the Holocaust." It boasts how a Catholic layman served as executive director, quotes the Reverend John Pawlikowski from Chicago's Catholic Theological Union as saying, "Our scriptures may be the source of Christian anti-Semitism"; and cites Donald McEvoy, NCCJ vice-president as follows:

"Christians bear so much responsibility for the Holocaust, which fed on the church's centuries-old contempt for Jews."

There McEvoy struck the cord dear to Talmudic hearts and the real motive for the propaganda about the myth of the six million: blaming Christians for it in order to bowdlerize the Christian Gospels.

Jews say, "Without Christianity, No Holocaust"

In the San Diego Union (April 14, 1977), under the headline, "New 'Holocaust' feared by Jews," Dennis Prager, director of the Brandeis Institute, before an audience of 150 at the Jewish Community Center, exposed the Talmudic motive:

"... without Christianity, there would have been no holocaust. Christianity laid the foundation for the holocaust and it may well give us another holocaust."

Let Christian clergymen reflect whether such teaching is not a sneak attack on Christianity, a sly package of poison to destroy it. Did, for example, the Reverend Donald I. McLean, S.J., the president of St. Joseph's College, addressing the Second Philadelphia Conference on the 'Holocaust', on February 18, 1977, realize that he was to bear witness to the sneak Jewish Motif that the Christian Gospels caused the 'holocaust' and must be perverted to something pro-Jewish? One Dr Frederick M. Schweitzer, writing in Viewpoint (April 15, 1977), publication of the respected Catholic Manhattan College, has the impudence to declare:

"... we must not evade our historical responsibility. For the holocaust is unimaginable apart from nearly two millenia of Christian vilification and excoriation of the Jews and of Judaism."

How can one more slyly suggest that if six million Jews were exterminated by the Third Reich, it was in fact but the Catholic and Lutheran Germans and it was a 'holocaust' for which Christians were ultimately to blame. If this is not by itself impudent and outrageous enough, does it not constitute criminal hate-mongering and slander if the 'holocaust' is in fact a myth, an atrocity invention, a calculated swindle to extract reparations for Israel from the Christian German people? And is not the curse of Jesus applicable, first to the Rabbis and secondly to those Christian clergymen who want to appease the Rabbis by forcing the lie of the 'holocaust' on their parishioners and on the students of their schools? Jesus said that those who scandalize the young — who debauch them with lies — should have a millstone hung about their neck and be dropped into the ocean!

School Official Tricked Into Teaching the 'Holocaust'

Yet, forcing this atrocity lie of the 'holocaust' on our children is what the proponents of the swindle of the six million are trying to do. The Philadelphia Bulletin (February 21, 1977) carries the headline, "Philadelphia Students to Study About the Holocaust." Dr I. Ezra Staples, deputy superintendent for instructional services, boasts that a teacher's guide on the 'holocaust' has been "developed by the Philadelphia School District," that 500 guides, costing $1.12 each, have been printed, and 750 copies of a bibliography. The New York Times (Sunday, Sept. 18, 1977) happily confirms, "Philadelphia Schools to Require a Course on Nazi Holocaust." It is to be "part of a required world history course in the ninth grade in the city's 26 senior high schools and 40 junior high schools."

But the boll weavils of the 'holocaust' are not content to debauch only our public school children with a falsehood as unfounded as the lie of World War I that the Germans hacked off the hands of Belgian babies, they have even the impudence to dragoon private Christian schools and universities into debauching their students with the lie of the holocaust, students sent there by their parents to learn the truth, Christian morality and the facts of history, arts, and science. The Sunday Bulletin (Philadelphia, March 2, 1975) gloats, "30 Years After Holocaust, Story Comes Out of Dark":

"Public and parochial school systems. . . have attempted to eliminate inaccuracies or cursory treatment of the Holocaust in textbooks . . . . Often they are aided by Jewish organizations."

Even Nuns Drafted Into the Act — With Jewish Guidebooks

We learn that 'guides' so developed with Jewish cooperation will be used by "Sister Kathleen Thomas' eight grade social studies pupils at Our Lady of Ransom Lower School, Unruh St. and Roosevelt Blvd. in Northeast Philadelphia." Sister Glora Coleman, coordinator of interfaith and ecumenical affairs with the Archdiocese's Cardinal's Commission on Human Relations, announces that the commission is "in the process of beginning to examine texts to see whether or not we do justice to the historical event of the holocaust." Sister Kathleen Thomas, in her zeal to impregnate her children with the lie of the 'holocaust', filled the classroom "with World War II memorabilia — American military uniforms, a Nazi flag, a swastika." A pictorial description of the 'holocaust' "was shown which prompted one thirteen-year-old to comment on Hitler: "He must have been insane to kill all the people."

However, David Irving, possibly the most respected British historian of our day, insists that Hitler did not order any killing of Jews nor killed any! Will parochial schools nevertheless poison the innocent minds of their pupils with the lie and the slander and the hate against the Third Reich and the German people that they 'exterminated' six million Jews?

Loaded Questions Blame Church for Hitler

And where does this monstrous lie lead to? The Philadelphia Bulletin in describing the discussion outline the "Memorial Committee for Six Million Jewish Martyrs" prepared for the courses of the 'holocaust' contains this:

"The outline contains such questions as: 'Adolf Hitler's closest associates remained church members during the whole Nazi regime. Do you think if the church(es) had spoken out against Hitler, it would have made a difference?"

Here now appears the cloven foot of anti-Christianity, the subtle suggestion on impressionable young minds that what they lie about as the "holocaust of the six million" was tolerated, indeed inspired, by the Christian churches! It reveals the so-called courses on the 'holocaust' as a sneak attack on Christianity.

Christian clergymen who keep making themselves transmission belts for the Talmudic atrocity lie of the 'holocaust' do not thereby hurt only Hitler and German National Socialism, both irrevocably dead, nor the living German people. They should realize that the lie of the 'holocaust' consciously and directly is calculated to subvert the Gospel and to destroy Christianity. Teaching the so-called 'holocaust' in our schools is a sneak attack on Christianity.

Drive to Judaize Gospels at Vatican Council

Talmudists mounted a concerted drive at the Second Vatican Council with intent to distort the liturgy and the Gospels so as to whitewash the Pharisees and Jews of the Crucifixion and to transfer the guilt to the Romans (which is the Italians). The chief wirepuller on the Council to Judaize the Gospels was Jules Isaac. At one time he was Inspector-General of Public Education in France. He wrote textbooks on history. In 1946, he wrote Jesus at Israel and in 1956 Genese de l'Antisemitisme. The gist of these, according to Leon de Poncins (Judaism and the Vatican, 1967, p.11), was that "the most dangerous form of anti-Semitism is Christian anti-Semitism .... We must have done with anti-Semitism, the logical outcome of which was the liquidation of European Jews at Auschwitz and other death camps during the Second World War."

The fact that Auschwitz was a work camp, not a death camp, that none of the German concentration camps were death camps, that none of them had gas chambers and that there was no 'liquidation of European Jews" does not keep Jules Isaac from putting the ultimate blame on Christianity for the 'holocaust' which is an invention, not a historical fact. Jules Isaac brazenly perverts the Gospels, which are the most authentic history in the world. He writes, for example, "Pilate did not wash his hands... did not protest his innocence... the Jewish crowd did not cry out: 'His blood be upon us and upon our children . . .' (Jesus at Israel, p.493).

Jules calls anyone who holds the Gospels as reliable "intractable and fanatically prejudiced." This he equates with "a blind belief in a tradition. . .which, as I have said and shall repeat, leads to Auschwitz — Auschwitz and other places. Some six million Jews were liquidated solely because they were Jews and this brought shame not only on the German people but upon the whole of Christianity, because without centuries of Christian teaching, preaching, and vituperation, Hitler's teaching, propaganda and vituperation would have been impossible." (Jules Isaac, Jesus at Israel, p.508. Quoted from Leon dePoncins, Judaism and the Vatican, p.19).

Rabbis of the Holocaust Are Judases of the Crucifixion

In short, the Jewish Inspector-General of Public Education in France tells the Christian clergymen of the world (and the school superintendants) that when they propagandize the myth that the Germans exterminated the Jews they do in fact accuse their own Christianity and its New Testament as ideologically responsible for the 'gassing' of six million Jews. Jules Isaac was a top batteringram for world-wide Talmudic pressure on Pope John XXIII and Vatican Council II to pervert the New Testament to make Judaism sound like Almighty God's blueprint on which Christianity was grafted as a sort of hybrid. Jules Isaac met "several prelates of the Roman Curia, in particular Cardinals Tisserand, Jullie, Ottaviani, and Cardinal Bea; and on the 13th June 1960 was granted an audience by the Pope, whom he asked to condemn the 'Teaching of contempt' " (See de Poncin, p.13). The "teaching of contempt," of course, was the Gospel story of the Crucifixion.

Pope John assigned Cardinal Bea, the German cardinal to whom Jewish ethnicity is commonly attributed, to "set up a special working party to study relations between the Church and Israel, which finally resulted in the Council vote on the 29th November 1964." (See de Poncins, p.13) A text elaborated in 1963 "declared that it is an error and an injustice (injuria) to describe the Jewish people as deicide," and the text of 1964 "practically absolved the Jews of all responsibility for the death of Christ" (see de Poncins, p. 142-3). The 1964 text also "deplored and condemned hatred and maltreatment (vexationem) of Jews" (de Poncins, p.140).

Crucifixion Blamed on Romans in First Council Text

But fortunately the new Pope, Paul VI, opposed the 1964 text and refused to promulgate it and sent it back to the commission to work on. The commission then in 1965 came up with a text the Holy Father did promulgate. This formulation withdrew the question of deicide from discussion, and it does not condemn only "hatred and maltreatment of Jews" but "condemns all persecution of any man" and "deplores manifestations of anti-Semitism." The pertinent text adopted by the Second Vatican Council and promulgated by the Pope reads:

"The Church condemns all persecutions of any men; she remembers her common heritage with the Jews and, acting not from political motives, but rather from a spiritual and evangelical love, deplores all hatred, persecutions and other manifestations of anit-Semitism, whatever the period and whoever was responsible." (See de Poncins, p.140)

Regarding Jewish complicity in the Crucifixion, the Council declared:

"Even if the Jewish authorities, together with their followers, urged the death of Christ (cf. John xix.6) what was done to him in his passion cannot be blamed on all Jews living at that time indiscriminately, or on the Jews of today. Although the Church is the new People of God, the Jews should not be presented as rejected by God or accursed, as though this followed from Scripture. Therefore all must take care that in instruction and in preaching the Word of God, they do not teach anything which is not in complete agreement with the truth or the Gospel and the spirit of Christ." (Quoted in de Poncins, p.144)

Jews Of Course Not Collectively Guilty — But Neither Are the Germans

This pronouncement evidences a frantic determination by the Council Fathers to stretch Bible and Church history to the limit in order to appease Jewish demands, yet even while in dread of smear-terrorism they felt constrained to declare that it was the Jews, not the Italians, who crucified Christ, and that since the First Easter it is not the Jews who are the Chosen People but that the "Church is the new People of God." The Council statement also denies the principle of collective guilt — not all Jews were guilty. But this should be self-evident, if it were not for the tragedy that "The German people was declared collectively responsible at Nuremberg for Hitler's anti-Jewish measures and every taxpayer in Federal Germany...pays considerable sums every year to the State of Israel....it is hard to see why Israel continues to exact heavy tribute from the German people..." (de Poncin's, op.cit., p.148)

Vladimir Jankelevitsch, for example, an important personality in Israel, in Le Monde (Jan. 3, 1965), "speaking of Hitler's Jewish victims" called it "a crime that is truly infinite...of which...only Germanic sadism could be guilty....The methodical, scientific and administrative massacre of six million Jews is not wrong per se, it is a crime for which a whole people is accountable."

Double Jewish Standard, One for Selves, Another for Christians

The same Jews who gnash their teeth when the Gospels and the Oberammergau Passion Play, historically honest, represent the Jewish mob before Pilate screaming, "His blood be upon us and upon our children," vindictively and falsely keep screeching that seventy million German Catholics and Lutherans 'gassed' six million Jews. Our wartime Jewish Secretary of the Treasury, Morgenthau, blueprinted starving the German Christians to death on a potato patch — even Stimson and Hull, though stooges of Roosevelt, complained that the genocidic plan would starve thirty million to death. The Jewish propaganda minister of Stalin, Ilya Ehrenburg, instructed the Soviet soldiers on entering Germany to rape the women and kill their men. And Theodore N. Kaufman, in Germany Must Perish, (1941), even before the U.S. was at war, openly demanded the extermination of the German race. He prescribed sterilizing 48,000,000 German Catholics and Protestants, so that, by sparing only females over 45 and males over 60, too old to procreate, the Christian German race in two generations would be extinct. The Jews of the world and in our media and our government almost unanimously approved in principle this most genocidic plan in world history.

And those who continue to propagate the lie of the six million, of the phony 'holocaust' that never was, in effect still work for the extermination of the Christian German race. And Catholic and Protestant clergymen, and school administrators who want to debauch pupils with courses on the non-existent, imaginary 'holocaust' also in effect, if unconsciously, plot the genocide of the German people — and the perversion of the New Testament and of Christianity.

Phony 'Holocaust' Always Abused as Fulcrum Against Christianity

Unfortunately, though the final draft of the Vatican Council II on Jews avoided any flagrant perversion of Scripture, it did by singling out anti-Semitism as if it were only reprehensible prejudice, create an ambiguity which provides a handle for Jews to call any resistance to Jewish ideas, or any aggressive promotion of Christianity as 'anti-Semitic' and practically as "co-responsible for the Nazi camps." So commented an Italian bishop in Palestra del Clere (Feb. 15, 1965) Msgr. Carli, who wrote:

"But it does seem peculiar to some, to say the least, that in a conciliar document only those wrongs suffered by the Jews 'either in previous times or in our own days' are expressly condemned, as if others had not existed and do not, unfortunately, still exist today no less worthy of explicit condemnation." (See de Poncins, p.152)

This elevating of anti-Semitism to an eminence of special wrong feeds the Jewish hatred of Christianity. To quote Vicompte Leon de Poncin (Judaism and the Vatican, p.150) once again:

"Jules Isaac accuses all the Fathers of the Church of anti-Semitism, St. John Chrysostom, St. Augustin, St. Agobard, the celebrated Pope St. Gregory, etc. He accuses them of having unleashed the savagery of the beast and of being the real people responsible for German anti-Semitism and the gas chambers of Auschwitz. He finds them even worse than Hitler and Streicher and others..."

The influential Jewish leader of our times and country, Dr Dagobert D. Runes, as reported in the Detroit Jewish News (Dec.

6, 1974), "Runes Indicts New Testament — Primary Cause of Anti-Semitism." His indictment reads:

"The New Testament ist the most vicious anti-Semitic play in history, surpassing Mein Kampf or The Protocols of Zion. Of all the anti-Semitic writing the New Testament has been most effective."

Candidates for the Millstone: Those Who Inflict Holocaust on Children

Inasmuch as Jews continuously and raucously call the treatment of Jews by the Third Reich inspired by the New Testament and Christianity, would it not therefore be the better part of wisdom for clergymen to stop propagating the lie of the 'holocaust' of six million Jews? If their sense of historical truth is not strong enough to keep them from teaching the lie of the 'holocaust', their love and respect for Christianity and the Gospels should restrain them. The 'holocaust' is an atrocity-mongering lie of World War II, just as certainly as the propaganda that the German soldiers cut off the hands of Belgian babies was the standard lie of World War I.

The projected courses of the 'holocaust' in our public and parochial schools not only debauch the minds of our students with a lie, a brazen historical falsehood, but it also constitutes a sly, satanic sneak attack on Christianity and our Christian American way of life. Clergymen and school administrators who abet and inflict this historical lie on our children fall under Christ's indictment that those who scandalize the young should have a millstone hung about their necks and be dropped into the ocean!

PREFACE
by Manfred Roeder, Attorney-at-Law

"For God's sake, can't you carry on with your fight against pornography and moral degeneration without getting tied up in politics. Why are you so concerned about the past. Surely, you don't want to justify National Socialism or deny the crimes of the past?" Even very good friends made such imploring appeals to me after I had mentioned the word Auschwitz in connection with horror propaganda for the first time. An honestly concerned priest wrote to me, "I have to tell you that your turning to political right-wing radicalism has frightened me a little, but I will stand behind you also in future, because I know you."

As pleased as I was about the confidence, it was alarming to realize how every effort to find truth and justice for Germany is termed: political right-wing radicalism. Yes, how much I would like to let the past rest if there was a mutual promise from all sides to forgive and forget as it was done in the peace treaty after the Thirty Years War in 1648. Nothing was to be touched upon, no persecutions were to be held. This was indeed a heroic achievement of dignity in the spirit of Christ!

What do we see today? Who is willing to forgive, to forget and heal old wounds? Only the Germans, and especially German refugees, have offered their intentions again and again, supported by deeds. What does the other side do?

The government of the German Reich was illegally removed from office. German officers, who had done nothing but their duty, and whose characters were far superior to those of the Allies passing judgment on them, were sadistically strangled, whilst no single soldier or partisan of the enemy was brought into court for war crimes. German jurisdiction and search for truth was made impossible. Only the victors were to sit in judgment and to write history. The persecution of war crimes in any other country was promptly prohibited. Not only were alleged deeds of Germans prosecuted in a most brutal manner, without consideration for any international legal principle, but it was explicitly ordered to lift the Statute of Limitations for so-called German war crimes or genocide. The Germans, thus being marked as outlaws as a result, can now have revenge taken on them until doomsday. This way, insidious partisans became national heroes; honorable German officers who defended themselves against these scroundrels were called war criminals.

The present government of the German Federal Republic has ordered a 14-volume documentation concerning crimes committed on German prisoners of war and civilians—not to be published, but to be pulped.

Golda Meir, as prime minister of Israel, made it known in unmistakable terms that "completely normal relations between Germany and Israel" would never exist. How can a past be left alone which is stirred up anew daily to be used against our people?

All schools continue to spread the lies about atrocities in concentration camps. There is, for instance, at this very moment an exhibition being shown in Wiesbaden under the patronage of the prime minister of Hesse, which is titled "Concentration Camp Sachsenhausen," where all the long-disproved propaganda lies are brought up again. As class after class is being channeled through the exhibition, the horrified children read that a gas chamber was built in Sachsenhausen in 1943, although it has been proved long since that there have never existed any gas chambers on German territory. It causes one to shudder when you read, "Day and night the sweetish smell of burnt human flesh was hanging over the camp." Such statements are being made in spite of the fact that the International Red Cross regularly inspected the concentration camps up to March 1945, and never reported on any gassing or cremating facilities or the sweetish smell.

It is further maintained that every SS-Man in Sachsenhausen had the 'right' to beat up and even kill a prisoner during roll call. Of course, cruelty occurred occasionally, but almost entirely between inmates themselves or were committed by auxiliary guards, the so-called 'Kapos.' If an SS-Man or any other German official committed any crime against prisoners or touched their property, he was immediately court-martialed.

What possible interest could Prime Minister Osswald of Hesse have in spreading such lies about Germany?

Our entire school youth is being poisoned with these lies about their fathers to deepen the hatred between generations ever more. But this is the recipe of the world conspirators to destroy a people. And we who know better, should we keep silent? One who then still wants to tell us that this is the Christian thing to do, is in my eyes nothing but a worthless coward and scoundrel.

The Minister of Education in Hesse has commissioned the Jewess Hannah Vogt to write a book about Germany's past entitled Guilt or Destiny, which already had its 11th printing, and is distributed to all high school graduates. A Jewess will hardly be qualified to judge Germany's past objectively. This book turned out to be an absolute masterpiece of historical smeer and hate propaganda in a scientific cloak, and can be put on a par with the works of the Komintern agent, Willy Muenzenberg, the unsurpassed master of anti-German agitation and lie propaganda who would shout to his collaborators, when they wrote an article against Germany: "Too weak, too objective! Knock them on the head. Make the world stand aghast with horror. Make them the stench of the world. All men must curse them and shudder with horror!"

There is not one authentic document in existence which places the overall losses of the Jewish population during the last war higher than 200,000. During one single night, in Dresden, more defenseless, innocent Germans perished—children, women, old people and especially wounded men—than Jews have died in all the concentration camps in the years of the National Socialist Regime!!! And in these Jewish total losses even natural deaths are included. Thus the losses, taken as a percentage and absolutely, are much below those of any other power taking part in the war; keeping in mind that the Jewish world organizations had already in 1933 declared a holy war on Germany to be fought to the death

At that time not a single hair on a Jew's head had been touched! Yet, the world resounds with the clamour for the dead Jews. But no outrage is voiced about Dresden and the genuine figure of six million murdered East Germans. No voice is raised about the millions of murdered German and European war prisoners who had fought on the German side. No plaque tells us of the 105,000 Frenchmen who were murdered because they were pro-German. No days of remembrance are held for the Dutch, Danes, Belgians, Norwegians, Rumanians, Russians, Cossacks, Ukrainians, who were slaughtered in a most bestial manner for having worked or fought on the German side. They wanted to save Europe from Bolshevism or, in some cases, German control was probably considered to be the lesser evil.

An employee of the present German Postal Service can be dismissed on the spot if he denies that Jews were gassed. This strange concept of 'justice' was supported by a court in Hesse which agreed that no employer needs to tolerate such utterances against Jews, which "cannot be surpassed in their offensiveness." Every scoundrel though may freely boast today that he committed sabotage and treason against Germany.

One of the concerned readers asked me if I were not perhaps falling victim to a new kind of Anti-Semitism? On the contrary! I like to see the Jews being treated the same as everybody else and not enjoy special privileges. These privileges, and the lies spread by certain Jewish World Domination Cliques are the cause of a new Anti-Semitism. Mr. Wiesenthal promotes more Anti-Semitism than I do. Every decent Jew will welcome our search for truth and therefore agree with this brochure. By publishing this sensational report we do not stir up nationalism or hatred, but merely serve the truth, and only the truth will make us and others free. Only injustice which was really committed can be made good or forgiven. Invented 'atrocity' stories will create new hatred and sow seeds of discontent without fail.

We are not so much interested here in running up and down the scale of losses and crimes, but first of all we are concerned about the spiritual recovery of our people. We have been accused of the worst crimes in the history of mankind: namely to have willingly started a global war, to have murdered millions of innocent people, and if we had had the time and opportunity, we would have eliminated also the rest of all 'subjugated' peoples.

One who can accept such an accusation without protest has neither heart nor brains! Now suddenly there are witnesses who stand up and say: All this is not true! Germany neither wanted nor started this war but has been forced into it by her deadly enemies. Hitler had no intentions to kill Jews and never has he given any orders for their extermination nor for the destruction of any other peoples. There were no gas chambers. All these are the inventions of morbid brains. Nearly all of the so-called war crimes and concentration camp trials have been held with perjured witnesses and falsified documents.

Any person who is accused of a crime will certainly be pleased when he is found not guilty, all the more so if it was proved that the crime in question had not even been commited.

We Germans should, therefore, rejoice when today witnesses do appear who can prove that Auschwitz was no death machinery, but an enormous armament factory and that the inmates of the camp were on the whole treated decently, and that any people from outside could visit the camp at any time. Most of our people react quite differently though. They behave as if one wanted to deprive them of their most precious post-war experience—their guilt complex. With claws and teeth they hang on to a German guilt. This is quite a unique phenomenon in the history of mankind. In any other people such a reaction would be unthinkable and can only be described as a deep mental disturbance, as it is not normal that someone should insist on being guilty.

This is the real problem and the true reason for the publication of this brochure. It is not a question of which side has done more wrong; that is almost common knowledge to everyone who even superficially studied the available sources. It is a plain aquittal for Germany. The book by Colonel Dall, son-in-law of Franklin D. Roosevelt, America's War Policy, was not even necessary to prove that. Nevertheless, this book has uncovered, beyond any doubt, the sole guilt of Roosevelt and Churchill for this war and their criminal conspiracy against peace. Whoever still maintains the opposite is being malicious!

Why are we Germans so in love with the fairy tale of the six million gassed Jews? I can speak here from experience because I, myself, believed in it at one time. We Germans like brooding about a problem. We are God-fearing by nature. Therefore, we had to have a profound religious explanation for the inmeasurable misery our people had been plunged into. To merely except the explanation that the others were stronger and more reckless, is insufficient for the German soul. We believe that nobody has to suffer such misery without a reasonable cause. It is the well-known problem of Job, who was talked into believing—by his 'friends' and re-educators—that every blow from fate is a punishment from God. In that way, many Germans saw in the catastrophe of 1945 a divine judgment for sins and crimes committed. The myth of six million innocent, murdered people actually satisfied the demand for a metaphysical explanation and was therefore so eagerly accepted. It seems to become all the more plausible when based on the Bible: We did not murder just 'any' people, but we murdered the 'chosen' people! As one of the readers wrote to me in these words: "Yes, we have assaulted the apple of God's eye."; what a 'wonderful' explanation! Now we know why. Now we have got something to suffer for, and through subservience to all Jews and by paying collosal sums of money, we can regain at least part of God's favor, or, as repentant sinners look forward to forgiveness. That is the reason why the German clings to the 'murdered Jews' as though it meant the salvation of his soul. Without this explanation our terrible downfall would have had no higher meaning and be all the harder to bear.

We cannot therefore blame the poor citizen for believing in the concentration camp horrors. It would deprive them of their faith in a just God, the basic problem of Martin Luther's reformation, which seems to be still deep-rooted with many people. But Job wrestles with his re-educators and gives them the proper answer: "This affliction comes upon me for no understandable reason. I don't know why. It is beyond me. But I have not sinned against God. I have not gone astray from the right path. I want to reason with Him. I have kept the faith. One day He will justify me in public!" This is the voice of a righteous man. Isn't that the way we ought to speak? We do away with the two great lies on which the whole post-war development rests: There is no chosen people Israel who could claim to be identical with the Jews; and there is certainly no condemned, criminal German people! We shall fight uncompromisingly against anyone who upholds one of these lies or versions thereof and thereby drives our people deeper into its misery. The time has come to stand up and be counted to bring about a change of fortune. We shall conquer fate because we are fulfilling God's commission. Therefore I am so very grateful to Thies Christophersen, who has set a shining example to our people with this courageous work and is a guarantor for the fact that we shall reverse the tide of the time.

Manfred Roeder

Thies Christophersen, born in 1918, was a farmer in northern Germany before the war. As a soldier in the German army he was wounded during the western campaign in 1940, and was thereafter unfit for active military service.

Thies Christophersen

After an agricultural study he was ordered to serve in the Ukraine on India Rubber research. This research department was transferred to Auschwitz in Poland after the re-occupation of the Ukraine by the Soviets.

Thies Christophersen, as a member of the German army with the rank of a second lieutenant (Sonderfuehrer Z), was part of the research team. Having worked with concentration camp inmates, Christophersen is publishing his observations and experiences in the brochure now before you.

Today, Christophersen is active as a writer and journalist on agricultural subjects. He is the publisher of several publications, i.e. the periodicals Kritik and Die Bauernschaft. The author resides at D-2341 Kaelberhagen/Mohrkirch, West Germany.

Manfred Roeder, a successful farmer and an attorney, was born in 1929. His father was a dedicated National Socialist, and Roeder himself faught in the battle of Berlin in 1945 as a member of the Hitler Youth.

His initial involvement in politics goes back ten years, when he led a nationwide fight against pornography. Soon after that he became aware of numerous injustices in West Germany. He is the founder of two patriotic organizations: The German Citizens' Initiative and The Liberation Movement of the German Reich.

MANFRED ROEDER

In particular, Roeder has actively refuted the propaganda put forth by the West German government which seeks to instil a sense of guilt and shame in the German people for the Second World War. Roeder has led mass demonstrations demanding the release of Rudolf Hess, and has been a leading figure in the movement to demolish the hoax that six million Jews were 'gassed' by the Germans during the war.

Manfred Roeder fled West Germany in 1977 to avoid incarceration on charges of "defaming democracy in general and the West German democracy in particular and unconstitutional propaganda."

Roeder had received word that once imprisoned, the Bonn regime planned to file many additional charges against him in order to keep him locked up indefinetely.

Roeder has traveled extensively in North and South America since he left Germany, making friends and contacts for his organizations. He is presently being sought not only by the West German police, but by Interpol as well. While in the United States, the F.B.I. was interested in his movements,

It is to be hoped that someday Manfred Roeder will be able to return to his farm in Germany where his wife and six children now wait for him. For the time being, however, this man who loves his country and his people must remain in exile from them.

Horror propaganda against Germany

Excerpts from Politische Justiz—die Krankheit unserer Zeit, (Political Justice—the Disease of Our Time) by Dr Friedrich Grimm, Verlag Bonner Universitaets Buchdruckerei, Gebr. Scheur, GmbH., Bonn, 1953.

The Disease of Our Time
by Friedrich Grimm

It has become difficult for even well-meaning people to recognize and form an opinion about the true events of history, since the devastating effect of propaganda, which already played its part in the last years of the first World War and afterwards, mislead them.

"I had a remarkable discussion with an important representative of the opposite side in May 1945 a few days after the collapse. He introduced himself to me as a university professor from his country who wished to speak to me about the historical background of the war. The conversation which followed was on a high level. He broke off abruptly and pointed to the pamphlets on my table, dealing with concentration camp horrors. Pamphlets of this kind we had been inundated with in the first days after the capitulation. 'What do you say about that,' he asked me. 'Oradour and Buchenwald,' I replied. 'It would be rather pointless for you to elaborate on this issue as I am a legal man myself and condemn injustice where I meet it, but especially when wrong was done on our side. I am fully aware though of the difference between real facts and the political use which is being made of them. I know what horror propaganda is. Also, I have read all the publications of your experts on this matter after the First World War, the writings of the Northcliffbureau, the book by the French Finance Minister Klotz, From War to Peace, in which he describes how the fairy-tale about the chopped-off childrens' hands was invented and used. Furthermore, I have read the explanatory writings in the periodical, Crapouillot, which compares the horror propaganda of 1870 with that of 1914-18, and finally Ponsonbys' classical book, The Lie in Wartime, which reveals how, already in the last war, depots were in existence where dolls and trick photography were used to compose mountains of corpses. These pictures were distributed with the title left open, which was assigned to them later according to circumstances and then conveyed by telephone through the propaganda centre.'

With that I produced one of those pamphlets allegedly showing mountains of corpses from the concentration camps and showed it to my visitor. He gazed at me rather bewildered. I continued, 'I cannot imagine this poisonous mental weapon, which decided the last war, having been ignored in this war when all other weapons were so well perfected. Actually, I know that it was not ignored. In the last few months before the collapse I have read the foreign press daily and there I came across these reports about German atrocities compiled by one central office. A certain sequence was followed in dealing with one occupied territory after the other, today France, tomorrow Norway, then Belgium, Denmark, Holland, Greece, Jugoslavia and Czecho-Slovakia. First there were hundreds of dead in the concentration camps. Then, when six weeks later the same country had its next turn to be reported about, there were suddenly thousands of dead, then ten-thousands and later hundred-thousands. I thought to myself: Surely this numerical inflation cannot possibly go into the millions!' Now I reached for another pamphlet: 'Her you have the million!'

Now my visitor burst out: 'I can see that I have come across an experienced man. Let me tell you who I am. I am not a university professor. I come from this central office you have just spoken about, where I have been doing, for months, just what you have quite correctly described as making horror propaganda—and the result was a total victory for us.' I answered, 'I know, and now you would have to stop!' He replied, 'No, we are only just starting now! We shall continue this horror propaganda, we shall increase it, until no one will accept one word from the Germans anymore. We shall carry on until all sympathies the Germans have had in other countries are destroyed and until the Germans themselves are so comfused that they won't know what they are doing in the end!' Closing the conversation I said, 'In that case you burden yourself with a great responsibility!' "

THE TRUTH OF AUSCHWITZ

This personal account is written for all people of goodwill

Silence by Blackmail

I was in Autschwitz from January to December 1944. After the war I heard about the alleged mass murders of Jews and I was quite taken aback. Despite all the testimony submitted and all the reports in the media, I know such atrocities were never committed. I have said so repeatedly, everywhere and at all times, but it has always been useless for no one has wanted to believe me. The evidence, I am told, is unequivocal and confirmed without contradiction. Court cases have clearly established that gas chambers existed in Auschwitz and the Camp Commander Höss, has himself said so. Whoever dares to deny this, makes himself suspect of perhaps, having personally participated in the murders of these Jews.

I have been warned to take care because war crimes have not yet come under the Statute of Limitation (as applicable in any civilized nation) and so I can still be tried and be prosecuted and it would be best to keep silent. Friends and acquaintances have said: "What would you serve were you still to try to correct history?" "You cannot change a thing!" "Acknowledgement of our guilt has brought us back into the community of nations." "Remember, you have a family". "No one will believe your reports . . . Keep silent, that's the smartest thing you can do."

Quite honestly, I began to have doubts myself. When one continually hears the same stories from all sides, it is only reasonable that finally one begins to believe them. "But what happened to all those Jews if they were not gassed?" I do not know, but I wonder where so many Jews come from if six million of them are supposed to have been killed during the war. In my area of the country there hardly ever were any Jews even before the war. So-called "cattle-Jews" simply did not exist in rural areas. Spiteful people have remarked that the only reason for this was that the peasants in these northern lands were smarter than the Jews. Very many Jews were able to emigrate before the war, some escaped during the war and many of them have survived the concentration camps . . . and of course many Jews today live in our midst again.

My doubts were first roused when I read a flyer distributed by Einar Aberg of Norrviken (Sweden). He compared official statistics of the Jewish world population before the war with those after the war. He concluded their numbers had increased to the extent where every woman must have given birth to a child every year of her productive life, if the number of 6 million murdered Jews could be judged to be correct. In 1938 there were supposed to be 15,688,259 Jews in the world. This figure is derived from the "World Almanac" of the American Jewish Committee. In 1948, according to an article in the New York Times by W. Baldwin, there were supposed to be 18,700,000 Jews in the world. Baldwin is a well-known population expert, entirely neutral, and even the most far-fetched imagination could not describe him as "anti-Semitic." Thus the story of the 6 million murdered Jews cannot be true, for it is impossible for a nation's population to increase by 50% in just ten years.

The losses of the Jewish people during WW II, certainly regrettable, were not 6 million, but approximately 200,000, according to facts compiled by the UNO, which body surely has no reason to grant special protection to any one nation in particular.

> A book published in Brazil contains the following statement: ". . . These facts were used by the Canadian Anti-Defamation Committee of Christian Laymen in ascertaining that 200,000 Jews died in the twelve years of Hitler's rule (1933-45), regardless of how they died, i.e. whether they were killed, sentenced and shot as guerillas or saboteurs, or in air raids on camps, or through other circumstances due to war, including sickness and old age."

The leading Austrian Social Democrat, Dr. Benedikt Kautsky — himself a Jew — who spent the years from 1938 to 1945 in concentration camps, three of these in Auschwitz, said:

> "I was in the big concentration camps in Germany. I must truthfully state that in no camp have I ever seen anything that might have resembled gas chambers."

Richard Baer, the last commander at Auschwitz (from 1943) and therefore the most important witness, of whom the Parisian weekly "Rivarol" reported that he could not be dissuaded from his insistance that "during all the time he was in Auschwitz, he had never seen gas chambers, nor had he known that any existed." Commander Baer died suddenly on June 17th, 1963 whilst being held under investigation, although two weeks previous to this he had been given a clean bill of health.

I never made a secret of my having been at Auschwitz. When asked about the destruction of Jews, I answered that I'knewn nothing about that. I simply marvelled at how quickly the populace was willing to accept and believe the stories about these mass gassings, without any apparent resistance.

As a result of a war injury in 1940 I developed a severe case of chronic sinus. The slightest cold put me back in hospital. The Autumn of 1942 brought an official medical finding: service on the home front. I filed a request for furlough to attend a higher agricultural school and did so in 1942/43. In the spring of 1943 a commander of Army Headquarters came to our school to solicit agrarians willing to go to the Ukraine to raise india rubber plants. I applied and was accepted.

Kok Sagis

A mobile war needs vehicles, and vehicles need tires, and tires are made from rubber. Of course there is synthetic rubber, made from carbon, lime and sulphur, called "buna." But without the addition of natural india rubber to the mixture, it cannot be produced as there is then no cohesion The Russians, in their attempt to become self-sufficient (in our case this was called preparation for war), had systematically searched their whole flora for plants that contained india rubber . . . and found some — among others, one called Kok Sagis, a close relation of the dandelion. The white latex in its roots contains india rubber. This became very important to carrying on the war. The motorized vehicles branch at HQ had organized departments for the cultivation, utilization and research of plants with india rubber content. After a short training period I was sent to the Ukraine to supervise the planting and cultivation of india rubber bearing plants. I had never seen a Kok Sagis plant, but practical work and assistance from some Russian agrarians soon provided the necessary knowledge.

Kok-Sagis — cultivated in Auschwitz. Found to be high in India rubber content.

In 1943 we lost the Ukraine, and early in 1944 I was transferred to the department of plant cultivation at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institut. This institute had established a branch at Auschwitz, so I went there, and only on my way did I learn that it was a concentration camp.

When relating my experiences at Auschwitz, I have some doubts as to whether I should mention names of former colleagues who today are still alive and with whom I still maintain contact. I know that I myself must be prepared for reprisals for breaking the silence. I am now ready to accept these . . . and in part already have had to do so.

Life in the Camp

It was cold and windy when I arrived at the railroad station of Auschwitz on January 15, 1944. I wondered whether to go by horse and carriage, but decided to walk. Leaving my baggage at the station, I asked my way to the camp. Actually the camp, consisting of barracks, that were ugly but massively built, was very near. The first thing I noticed was the inscription over the gate "ARBEIT MACHT FREI", ("Work will set us Free"). I was surprised to see so many inmates of the camp walk around unguarded. Later I learned that the camp, surrounded with an electrified barbed wire fence was under guard only at night. There were guards posted outside the grounds, however, who were pulled in at night after roll call.

I reported to my superior, Dr. A., a fine-looking man with steel-blue eyes and reddish hair. He greeted me warmly. I was curious about the camp and asked about the inmates. He said, "The Germans who are here belong here . . . apart from that it is the European elite that is here." Later I discovered there was some truth to that statement. I was introduced to his co-workers. There was a former Czarist officer, an exile, who also spoke German and French, and he offered to drive me to my quarters. The officers had no cars but they did have a carriage and a driver at their disposal to travel on the extensive lands that were under cultivation. However, I found this somewhat pompous. I also found it embarrassing, that inmates whom we passed on the way, took off their caps and stood at attention as we went by, but we were officers and the SS-men also gave us the military salute.

My quarters were in Raisko, about 3 km from the main camp. This was where a women's camp, the botany buildings with their hot houses, and the laboratories for our research work were located. I was given a room in an unattached dwelling; I shared the house with a colleague who was the supervisor of the department of plant cultivation. He was a man with a happy disposition. There was something heartwarming about his laughter and he was well liked by the inmates and he still corresponds with some of them today. Later on he had his wife and two young children join him. I then moved to an apartment in a botanic building that had just been completed. This I shared with a scientist whose name I can mention; it was Dr. Boehme. He was shot and killed by Polish civilians who went wild after the capitulation. He had never harmed anyone and had been kindness and courtesy personified.

The first inmate I met was "Agnes." She was a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses and was our cleaning lady. I questioned her about conditions at the camp but she would not speak about them. Not so Mrs. Pohl who was in control of the kitchen. She also was a student of the Bible and made up flyers which she distributed to the inmates. Actually, this was against the regulations, but it wasn't my job to watch the inmates. Apart from that, her publications seemed harmless to me, and I had always been tolerant in matters of religion. Even now I cannot deny Jehovah's Witnesses a certain measure of respect, for they were willing to have themselves locked up and suffer for their faith simply because they wanted to suffer. There was no need to watch them and they were free to move even beyond the line of posted guards.

In our camp about 300 women were housed in three barracks. They were made up of a select type of worker who worked almost exclusively for the department of plants. For the most part they were Jewish and Polish with a sprinkling of French. All spoke German quite well and many had an academic degree. Their work was of a scientific nature and they were quite self-sufficient. In fact, it was not I who was training the inmates, they were training me, and they did so with a certain pride, in fact, I might almost say, with an air of self-importance. At any rate, I had the impression that the inmates performed their research tasks gladly and with enthusiasm.

The cultivation of plants proceeded on a basis of selectivity. The roots of the plants were examined as to their india rubber content and reproduced through seedlings. Their seeds were carefully gathered and re-sown. Sabotage could easily have been committed but we never learned of even a single instance. It must be mentioned, however, that the inmates did not trust each other. There was that ancient feeling of hate between Jews and Poles. Compared to this hate, so-called National Socialist hatred of the Jews was quite harmless.

The results in increased india rubber production were quite satisfactory. One of our superiors went to Russia, and returned with a number of scientists. They came with their families and worked for us as civilians, enjoying their work.

A sort of drama developed with the arrival of one Russian agronomist, J. Sassmoshek. He found a former sweetheart among the inmates and this re-union had its natural effects. Sassmoshek married the woman and she was released from her internment. After the evacuation from Auschwitz, I saw them again at Halle and both were radiantly happy. I myself was not so happy at the time, I had just been through that terrible air raid of February 13th on Dresden, which had been declared an open, undefended city, and from which I had escaped unharmed, as if by some miracle. I believe on this one day in Dresden more people died than had supposedly died in Auschwitz throughout all the years of the war. But the war crimes of the Allies are not debatable, even to this day.

Just what was the daily routine at Auschwitz? Rising at 7 a.m., washing, showering, breakfast and roll call, on the job at 8. Lunch from 12-1, and work again until 5 p.m. Roll call once more at 7 p.m., following which the guards posted outside the camp were pulled in and the camp put under guard. Mail was delivered daily. Packages were opened at roll call and examined by the camp supervisor. Only rarely had some of the contents to be withheld, such as for instance, certain medical preparations, books and pamphlets cameras, radios and technical instruments. These things, however, remained the property of the inmates and were stored in a huge warehouse called "Kanada", where also all possessions of Jews interned at Auschwitz, were kept.

COMITE INTERNATIONAL DE LA CROIX-ROUGE

Visite au Commandant du camp d'Auschwitz d'un délégué du CICR (septembre 1944)

Tout au long des routes, des pistes polonaises pour être plus exact, qui mènent de Teschen à Auschwitz, nous avons rencontré des groupes d'hommes et de femmes, encadrés de SS portant l'habit rayé des camps de concentration et formant de petits Kommandos (détachements de travail). Ces Kommandos travaillent tantôt à l'agriculture, tantôt aux mines. Ces gens, malgré le travail en plein air, ont tous le teint blafard cendré. Tous marchent au pas et en rang de quatre, les gardes, le fusil sous le bras, sont des SS de la Division Totenkopf.

Nous arrivons enfin à Auschwitz et, après avoir eu la patience nécessaire, nous sommes introduits à l'intérieur du camp de concentration. I

1) Les distributions des envois faits par le Comité semblent être admises et même réglées par un ordre général valable pour tous les camps de concentration.

2) Le commandant nous dit que les paquets adressés personnellement à un détenu sont toujours remis intégralement

3) Il existe des hommes de confiance pour chaque nationalité (Français, Belges, pas d'autre nationalité citée mais certainement plusieurs autres)

4) Il existe un « Judenaltester » (doyen des Juifs) responsable pour l'ensemble des internés juifs

5) Les hommes de confiance et le « Judenältester » peuvent recevoir des envois collectifs ; ces envois sont distribués librement par eux. Les paquets personnels arrivant à un homme inconnu au camp sont remis à l'homme de confiance de la nationalité en question.

September, 1944, International Red Cross Committee Report on Auschwitz P. 91 and 92. The Red Cross Delegate states that the inmates could receive parcels. That the officers with whom he came in contact were amicable and reticent, like those at Oranienburg and Ravensbruck. That he saw many groups of men and women in small working commandos. That the British Red Cross "Insider" was a member of the British Commandos and that he mentioned to the Red Cross delegate he had heard rumours of gas chambers. However, the Red Cross delegate after careful inspection, could not verify these rumours.

"Kanada" was kept under guard at all times to prevent looting from the outside. In our weather station we had a female SS-worker who, on one occasion, "organized" a pair of stockings for herself from "Kanada". She was court-martialled for "plundering". However, the inmates themselves, who worked there, stole constantly.

Surprising to me was the elegance of the inmates' wearing apparel. Their outer garments did, of course, consist of uniforms, but all other apparel, including shoes, was of the finest quality, nor was there any lack in beauty care, and make-up was all part of the female dress. Every Saturday our women were sent to the main camp for an exchange of laundry and they brought back alluring bits of booty, which were then distributed among the inmates. It was a type of theft that I think was being quietly tolerated.

Olga

In May my wife, for the first time, came to visit me. She was a teacher in agricultural home economics and was curious about my work at the concentration camp. This fact alone, that we were able to have our relatives visit us at any time, should prove that the camp administration had nothing to hide. Had Auschwitz been the death factory it is reputed to have been, such visits would certainly not have been permitted. Formalities, such as even today are required for a visit to that prison camp, otherwise known as East Germany, were not required at Auschwitz. We were a young married couple and had not seen too much of each other in our marriage. I met my wife at the railway station. She wore wooden sandals without stockings and a kerchief over her hair. It was war time and elegance was a luxury we could not afford.

At that time I had a new cleaning lady — personal maid would have been a more fitting title. Olga! Olga was Polish. She was a factotum. But there was something touching about the solicitous care with which she took my affairs in hand. There were always flowers in my room; always a clean table cloth and clean curtains, and somehow she always managed to have a surprise for me.

She had taken special pains in getting my room ready for my wife's visit. Above my bed she had attached a praying angel to the wall — Lord only knows where she got that! Actually, her care was a bit overpowering, but I had to accept since I didn't want to hurt the concerned soul that she was.

Author on "second honeymoon," celebrated in camp, with table-setting lovingly prepared by Olga.

During my wife's visit, work was commenced on the india rubber fields and I did not have too much time for my visitor, but she had the best possible companion in Olga, who could talk like a waterfall. My wife felt she should compensate Olga for her thoughtfulness and bought her a small gift. The result was that when I took my wife to the railway station for her trip back home, I hardly recognized her. She was dressed in new clothes from head to toe. Olga had "obtained" everything for her, even a brand new suitcase. My wife had brought me a few delicate morsels saved from her own meager rations, among other things, a piece of butter. Olga managed to make fried potatoes for me evenings and strangely enough there was no end to the butter. Care packages arrived daily and Olga felt duty-bound to include me in the distribution of this bounty. The inmates at Raisko never went hungry, and any new arrival looking somewhat undernourished, after only a few days seemed to have a "smooth fur."

The Death Camp

"The death camp was not in Auschwitz, it was at Birkenau." This is what I heard and read after the war. Well, I was also in Birkenau. This camp I did not like. It was overcrowded and the people there did not make a good impression on me. Everything looked neglected and grubby. I also saw families with children. It hurt to see them, but I was told that the authorities felt it kinder not to separate children from their parents when the latter were interned. Some children played ball merrily enough. Still, I felt children did not belong there and the fact that the English had done likewise — in the Boer War, for instance, was a poor excuse, I said so to my superior. His answer: "I agree with you, but I can't change it."

I had been commissoned to pick 100 workers for hoeing the Kok-Sagis plants. At roll call the inmates were asked if they were interested in this kind of work and if they had done it before. Then followed the "selection" of the workers. This "selection" was later completely misinterpreted. The purpose was to give the inmates something to do and they themselves wanted to be occupied. Selecting them meant no more than to inquire about their inclinations, their capabilities, and their physical state of health with regard to the work they were to do.

The fact was, however, that in Auschwitz there were more people than were jobs. Naturally, I was concerned with getting workers who had experience on farms. Jews, of course, were not experienced for any kind of farm work, whilst on the other had, Poles were excellent farm workers. Gypsies were entirely useless. Detachment 11 — that was the name of our female workers from Birkenau — came every day to work in the fields that lay beyond the outer line of posted guards. I dealt with these people almost daily and listened to their complaints. On one occasion I saw an SS-guard kick a woman. I confronted him about this. He claimed that the woman had called him a Nazi pig, but the fact was that he had first insulted her. I reported this case and the SS-guard was sent to "Strafbataillon" in Danzig. From this day on, my favor with the inmates rose significantly, especially with those in Detachment 11. They often came to me with requests or complaints and I did whatever I could for them, because to me they were not enemies, they were simply interned. Often, I did favoursfor them that were against the regulations. Their greatest joy was for me to take them for a walk down to the river Sula, where on those hot summer days of 1944 I allowed them to go bathing.

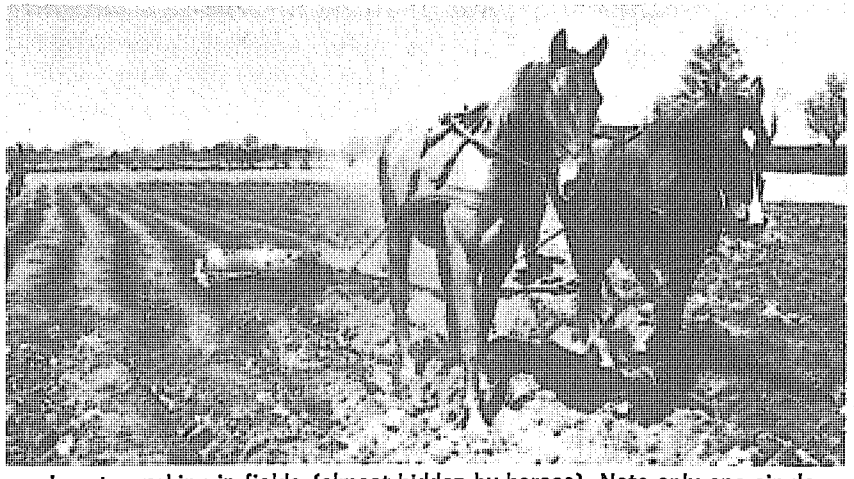
Apart from all else, the hoeing-detachment from Birkenau was a merry bunch. They sang their Polish folk songs while working and the gypsies danced to the melodies. In the beginning, I was quite upset and worried about the undernourished appearance of some of the inmates. Then I learned that they had arrived in rather poor physical shape and it took some time before they had padded themselves with some extra poundage. Often I shared their common noonday meals and fared well doing so.

But Detachment 11 also had a secret supply source. The most wonderful things were found by them in unknown hiding places. In the night these were replenished by friends of the inmates. Sometimes these friends even donned inmate attire and marched into the camp, allowing an inmate to take a few days off. Auschwitz was located in Poland and the populaton helped the inmates as much as possible, though this was officially not permitted.



Inmate working in fields (almost hidden by horses). Note only one single guard at great distance, in far left of photograph.

The occupation troops, but especially the so-called civil administration, often roused the antagonism of the population, as was well-known. One measure I decidedly disapproved of was the expropriation of land from small farmers. They had to give it up for agricultural use by the concentration camp. I was told, however, that they were compensated for their property on the same basis as land expropriated from Germans for the construction of autobahns. I also did not like the re-settlement measures that were carried out, but I was told repeatedly that these were never forced on anyone. Curtailment of freedom is hard, but war is tough and it became increasingly tougher for us too. In the fall of 1944, for the first time, the camp at Auschwitz was bombed by American planes. There were about 20 victims among the inmates. I myself had lost faith in victory after the successful landing at the English Channel. Reports from the front became more and more ominous, and the inmates too were well informed — the devil knows through whom.

In our area the inmates were looked after now just as well as they had been before. Once a week a film was shown. Camp supervisors and inmates jointly saw, among others, the film "Muenchhausen" and the "Golden City." Church services were held in community halls. I attended several myself and found them to be quite solemn, especially those of the Russian Orthodox Community, to which our Russian civilian workers also belonged. A theater group had been organized by the inmates and one evening they invited us to a performance of "Faust." Professional actors could not have produced a better show.

As for myself, I would have liked to take some more time off for studies but the war situation was serious and chances were poor. It was suggested that I take a correspondence course, and I sent away for books. An inmate, a Jewish female doctor from Prague offered to help me cram, and she did so every afternoon. This was possible in Raisko.

The Jews were intelligent and so far as I got to know them in Auschwitz, quite nice too. In the summer my mother came for a visit and stayed several days. Of course, a fat friendship developed between her and Olga. One evening my mother asked about the crematorium where corpses were supposed to be burned. I knew nothing about this, so I asked Olga. She could not tell me anything definite either. She did intimate, however, that around Bielitz there always was what seemed to be a reflection against the sky, as if from a fire.

So I went in the direction of Bielitz and there found a mining camp in which some inmates also worked. I travelled around the entire camp and examined all fire grates and all smoke stacks, but found nothing. I asked my colleagues; the answer . . . a shrug of the shoulder and "don't pay any attention to those rumors." Actually, there was a crematorium in Auschwitz, I was told, for there were 20,000 people there and any city of that size has a crematorium. Of course people died here as they did elsewhere, but not only inmates at the camp. The wife of one of our supervisors had also died here. As far as I was concerned, that was enough of an answer.

During all the time I was in Auschwitz I never in the least observed anything that even indicated mass killings in gas chambers. Also the story of a smell of burned flesh that allegedly hovered over the camp at times was an infamous lie. In the vicinity of the main camp there was a smithy where horses' hooves were shod. The burning of the horses' hooves when fitting them with shoes naturally caused an unpleasant smell. Incidentally, the man who was in charge of this particular smithy at the time, now lives in a neighboring village.

As a matter of fact, camp regulations became more generous all the time. In the main camp there was now a brothel for the men. Love and sex, is something human after all, and was not withheld from those who were interned. Of course there were also love relationships among the inmates. I doubt that the so-called "house of pleasure" was a deterrent. The fact that such houses did exist for the inmates in Auschwitz was completely ignored in all post-war reports. An admission to such a brothel was a kind of reward for good behaviour. There were also some inmates who flung their ticket into the Kapo's face. Hats off to them, I say, for that to me was a special show of good behaviour.

Olga loved to constantly chatter and her continual gossiping, rumouring and wondering as to whether or not corpses were being burned (whilst I knew for sure there was no such happening) finally got on my nerves. This, plus her almost slavish servitude, brought us to a parting of the ways. She was given a new job, one I did not begrudge her. She was made "overseer" in the women's camp and it was her job to keep out men who had no business there. Olga had a gift for "raising hell" and could scold so beautifully that it was a joy to see her eject males from the female camp. Her fellow inmates called her "Zerberus", (hound of hell).

Good old Olga, sometimes I wonder what became of her. She didn't want to return to a Communist Poland — almost none of the inmates wanted that, not even the Jews. Many of them even prayed for a German victory. From a colleague, whom I visited recently, I learned that quite a number of them are in the U.S. He still corresponds with some. Some were also willing to testify on behalf of SS Officers at their trials but were denied this privilege by Allied and especially by West German authorities. These reports were publicized by the "right wing" press at the time.

There were no secrets in Auschwitz. In September 1944 a Commission of the Red Cross came to inspect the camp, but it was more interested in the camp at Birkenau. We also had a great many inspections at Raisko, but the people who came were largely interested in plant cultivation. I was often involved in these tours. Although it was actually not permitted that inmates converse with visitors, they did explain their work to them.

Publishers note:— Having read the 156-page Report put out by the International Red Cross, it seems strange that Auschwitz, one of the largest camps of its kind and much publicized as being a "death camp," should warrant only a few paragraphs in the Red Cross reporting, and this would seem to add verity to the statements of Thies Christophersen.

Visiting delegation.

At the time we experimented with colchezin. This is a poison of the Autumn Crocus (colchium autumnale). With the aid of this poison we developed a plant with twice its number of chromosomes. Such plants tended to grow into giants, but at the cost of fertility. The collection of plant seed therefore still played an important role, but the harvesting of the seed was not exactly simple, because the reproduction device of this plant was similar to that of the dandelion. With the aid of some talented mechanics and Russian agronomists, I had begun to construct a harvesting machine. Some Russian agronomists worked with a so-called "longalvanization" method. For this purpose, the inmates built tools that worked with ultra short waves. The material for these I picked up at a shop where planes that had been brought down were dismembered. The inmates also found material there with which they could build small radios. These of course they could not take into the camp. I myself learned to build radios at Auschwitz. My teachers were the inmates and they supplied me with everything I needed for a small receiving set.

At Auschwitz we did not of course only cultivate plants. Innumerable research tasks were carried out. Because of the availability of workers there, more and more research work was being delegated to Auschwitz. At that time the place was also fairly safe from air attacks. About every two weeks the SS officers met for a casino night. On these occasions, department leaders spoke about their particular field of work. I heard many interesting lectures there and I do not recall anything that might have been offensive. Later on I heard that experiments were supposed to have been carried out on living human beings. I remember having listened to a lecture on the development of the embryo in the womb of the mother under various kinds of diet. Whether these women had to carry and give birth to a child while subjected to starvation diets, I cannot say. We were told, however, that these experiments produced valuable insights into the dietary care of pregnancies. Reports on experiments of newly developed medicines carried out on inmates do not appear plausible to me. A medical doctor at Auschwitz told me that new medicines were given to people only when experiments on animals were concluded. This practise is still carried on in all civilized countries.

After the war I saw a TV film about Auschwitz that showed a building with huge smoke stacks. I am very sorry, but when I left the camp at Auschwitz in December 1944, I did not see this building. I cannot imagine that these smoke stacks were built in the cold winter of 1944/45, but I suspect that these structures were erected after the war. It also seems implausible that, if they should have existed, the SS did not destroy them. During the past few days I have heard a report on the radio according to which 4 million people are supposed to have been shot at Auschwitz. It is an ab-absolute certainty that no people were shot at Auschwitz, because this we would have heard. I do, however, recall one occasion when there was great excitement in the camp. A rumour was being spread that hostages were to be shot. This type of revenge is the most despicable I can think of because it hits innocent people. That it did take place — on either side — is quite likely. If for every bombing victim an inmate should have been killed, none of the 200,000 inmates would have left a concentration camp alive. On this basis, considering that Auschwitz was in operation only four years, one million people a year or 3,000 per day would have had to die. Just what would a crematorium look like in which 3,000 corpses were burned every day? Even mass graves on this order could not be kept secret.

Yet the German people continue to believe in these mass murders. Why? We who know the truth, have we not burdened ourselves with an awful responsibility? Why did we keep silent for so long? I shall try to answer these questions.

1. We have not kept silent at all. There was no one who wanted to hear our reports, no paper wanted to publish them, no publisher print them.

2. Even today there are still enough witnesses alive who could verify my statments and make similar ones of their own. What we need, however, is an unbiased constitutional state. To tell the truth is tantamount to social ostracism and financial suicide.

3. I cannot say that I am tired of life, but my life's task lies behind me; my children are taken care of, and my wife should receive her well-earned pension at 65. At least, I hope it will not be withheld from her if something should happen to me.

4. During the long years that I have worked as a journalist and publisher, I have created a small circle of readers and with the aid of the German Citizenship Initiative I can publish my reports independently.

5. It is being maintained and regretfully also by members and voters of the main German political parties, that "only recognition of our guilt in starting the war and destroying 6 million Jews will make it possible for us to re-enter the community of nations and that whoever denies that, brings great harm to the German people."

6. However, to disprove the mass murders in concentration camps would not only prove the entire thrust of post-war German politics to be a mistake, but the post-war politicians still in power would have to admit their political concepts to be entirely false. This must not be allowed.

7. Of course, there were also cowards, liars and paid witnesses. Some of the accused who must have known that the testimony against them was false, still made a confession because they thought — and of this they were no doubt assured — that they would gain advantages for themselves if they adjusted their statements to the testimony of the accusers. However, it must also be stated here, that confessions were obtained through torture.

What changes will take place when the disclosure of my own personal experience is made public? Most likely none. Some sort of decree may be issued against me and an attempt might be made to confiscate this pamphlet.

Our people, especially our children, must be freed from the feeling of guilt being forced upon them by the victors of the last war — and it is only the truth that will make them free.

I have recorded the memories of my experiences as I recall them. I have stated the truth, so help me God. If these my statements contribute to our youth having more respect for their fathers, who as soldiers fought for Germany, and who were definitely not criminals, then I shall be very happy.

EPILOGUE

The publication of AUSCHWITZ (Die Auschwitz-Luege) in March 1973 hit the pseudo-democratic establishment like a bombshell. For almost 30 years the world has been flooded with the official version of so-called 'Nazi atrocities.' All documents and reports of a different truth had been destroyed or suppressed, all witnesses who dared to give the real story were hanged, imprisoned or intimidated so that the Inquisition of the 15th century looked pale in comparison. All historians who dared to publish different facts, came under attack or ridicule and usually lost their contracts for teaching at universities. Some were even murdered.

The general public therefore had hardly any access to truthful information and—to a large extent—began to believe that the Germans were brutal monsters who had gassed six million innocent Jews, simply because they were Jews, all of them, of course, nice and good-natured people, the crown of humanity. According to general belief, no Jew was ever killed legally for being a criminal or executed rightfully under martial-law. The death of a Jew is always an illegal act—no questions or doubts allowed.

Manfred Roeder, himself having gone through all the methods of re-education, believed for many years that six million Jews had been killed or gassed. He, like so many others, believed that concentration camps were extermination camps. Until he met Thies Christophersen, who told him the real story from his own experience.

Christophersen is one of the very few unbiased witnesses who has no ax to grind. He was neither a guard at Auschwitz who may have reason to hide something, nor was he a prisoner who may be inclined to exaggerate his sufferings. Christophersen was a totally neutral person. He had to work with the inmates of the camp, but had no executive power over them nor the right to guard or punish them.

His report is so simple and convincing, so un-dramatic, so contrary to everything anybody has heard about Auschwitz, that it puts to shame all other 'witnesses' and especially the judges who based their judgments on those dramatic stories of 'professional witnesses' even if these stories had to be changed seven times before the court!

The publication of this report with the introduction by a lawyer caused a sensation. This was incredible! After 30 years the whole edifice of lies and distortions began to crack. There was an outcry of madness by the Jews. In Tel Aviv the Jewish papers attacked this book as ferociously as they did in all the Western countries. The Jewish Weekly in West Germany dedicated a front page article by chief editor Galinski under the banner headline 'Liars at Work,' and he called Christophersen and Roeder the two biggest liars since Goebbels. A flattering compliment because Goebbels was probably the greatest genius of propaganda that ever lived—and his propaganda was based on facts, not lies!

Simon Wiesenthal urged the courts and the bar association to take 'proper action.' "Especially in Mr. Roeder's preface there are remarks worthwhile investigating."

At first, court and bar association refused to do anything. But under growing pressure, finally Roeder was disbarred for his 'improper radical political views and actions,' and another court in Darmstadt sentenced him to seven months imprisonment as well as a $2,000 fine plus court and lawyer costs. Only Roeder was taken to court for his introduction, not Christophersen for his report, because—as the judge sneeringly said to Mr. Roeder—"We have freedom of speech, and anybody can write as he pleases, but your interpretation of Christophersen's report sounds anti-semitic, and for this criminal attitude you are punished."

The court found Roeder guilty of 'wilfully inciting race hatred against a minority' (the Jews). Denying the existence of gas chambers may include the assumption that all Jews, who have testified to the contrary, are liars. (Which indeed it does!) The merits of the case contain the following statement: "Even if there had been no extermination program and no persecution of Jews at all (which means that all Jews are liars), it is anti-Semitism to suggest that the Jews are lying, because it would stir up racial hatred! It would endanger the public peace!"

The Supreme Court of West Germany declared this sentence to be invalid, not because it was ridiculous, arbitrary and contradicting any logic, but because it was too lenient. Another lower court was directed to re-try Mr. Roeder and to increase the punishment to several years, at least, because "a responsible citizen like a lawyer cannot neglect the well-established facts of recent history. Otherwise he would prove his ill-will against a minority and his criminal intentions."

Mr. Roeder is now living in exile since January 1978. Literally dozens of similar 'charges' by kangaroo courts are pending. If he returned to Germany under the present political system and occupation regime he would be immediately arrested and put in jail for 'defaming democracy' (as Plato has done) or for 'unconstitutional propaganda.' By demanding the re-unification of Germany and the withdrawal of all occupation forces, Roeder has become the most ardent regime critic of pseudo-democracy, which he calls mobocracy. For his 'thoughtcrimes,' as described in the classic study of tyranny by George Orwell in 1984, he is now persecuted by Interpol, and several warrants of arrest have been issued.

AUSCHWITZ has become a secret best-seller with youngsters in Germany, as well as the 'proof of dangerous neo-Nazi activity,' which has to be wiped out once and for all. There is hardly any other book that has caused such public controversy and uproar.

Lügner am Werk

Von Heinz Galinski

Reprinted from the Jewish Weekly of West Germany of July 13, 1973, with the banner headline: LIARS AT WORK.

The article by the chief editor points out that this book (The Auschwitz- Lie) is setting a new record by denying the gas chambers, for no one has dared to lie in such a blatant way since 1945. The authors are obvioulsy following the concept of Hitler and Goebbels. He then quotes extensively from the book and concludes "This is typical distorted National Socialist propaganda for which there is no room in our democracy and in our constitution. We demand immediate and proper court action against the authors of this book. It would be a serious fault to regard this poisonous pamphlet as unimportant. With this publication the German reactionaries are testing how far they can go in glorifying the Third Reich. Our democratic state must give them the proper answer."

Dear Mr President:

Enclosed with this letter you will find a brochure called "The Auschwitz Lie", issued by the "German Citizens Initiative" (Deutsche Buergerinitiative), represented by attorney Manfred Roeder, 614-Bensheim, Roonstrasse 8. We assume that he is a member of your bar association.

Apart from the fact that this brochure contains malicious and long disproved statements about the concentration camp Auschwitz and the sufferings of the Jews, there are in Mr Roeder's preface remarks which are worthwhile investigating by the ethics committee of your bar association.

Would you please read this brochure and especially Mr Roeder's preface, and then make your decisions. In any event, I would appreciate hearing from you.

Very truly yours

REPLY BY ATTORNEY MANFRED ROEDER:

Dear Mr Wiesenthal: 30. May 1973

The Bar Association in Frankfurt forwarded to me your letter of May 10 in connection with the brochure "The Auschwitz Lie". It is my desire to reply to you personally.

Are you concerned that a German lawyer does not conform to your new Re-Education Program which was laid down as a rule and guide by your people, and who instead tries to find eyewitnesses and authentic documentation on his own to support the alleged concentration camp atrocities? Your concern is well justified since I had to swear an oath when I was sworn in as an attorney on January 27, 1967, "to preserve the constitutional order, by God the All-knowing and Almighty, and to fulfill the duties of a lawyer faithfully, so help me God".

With that oath I did not obligate myself to respect that version of 'Truth' which is authorized or desired by Mr Wiesenthal and his Documentation Center, or to recognize the 'truth sanctioned in Nuernberg'. Neither am I aware of my colleagues having sworn any additional oaths to this effect.

I was all the more left to my own resources in finding witnesses since your 'Documentation Center' does not seem to be blessed with plenty of documents. As it was, when I made an urgent request to you for documentary material about the alleged murder of Jews, you did not offer me one single piece. Instead, you refered me to some obscure statistics which were of Jewish origin at that.

Since when are statistics proof of murder? According to German law, there has to be an unbroken chain of evidence that a certain human being has murdered someone else, before any accusation can be made or a conviction can be had. But you do not even bother to give the names of the alleged victims, not to speak of the circumstances of their death. You merely compare figures of the Jewish population before and after the war as proof of murder. It would be a similar hypocrisy if I were to say that every human being coming up missing after the war had been killed by the Jews out of revenge. You know only too well what would happen to me in such a case. But you can continue to claim, unchallenged, that every Jew who is missing according to YOUR statistics, was gassed and burnt by the barbaric Germans. You, aa a certified engineer, should realize the error of such claims from a technical point of view.

There would not have been enough fuel to be found during the war in the entire sphere of German influence to burn just a fraction of so many human bodies. Nowhere have mountains of ashes been found, of course. And the huge installations necessary for such an undertaking, have disappeared from the face of the earth without a trace. Nothing, absolutely nothing could be found after the war. It might interest you that I know enough eyewitnesses now who were in Auschwitz after the war who confirm all of the observations made by Mr Christophersen: there have never been such extermination installations! But these witnesses fear reprisals by the Poles and certain Jewish organizations, should they come out in the open with the truth. I can only afford to speak out openly as I am freelancing in my profession. You are now trying to exert pressure through the bar association to insure that lawyers in the future will follow only "your sources of truth". Perhaps you have over-estimated the degree of influence of German lawyers just a little.

I am nevertheless grateful for your very enlightening letter. It is the best document from your center in my possession. It proves after all, that you maintain a tight network of information and espionage over all of Germany. Otherwise it would be inexplicable how you could have obtained a copy of the Auschwitz brochure, which, so far, has been handed only to a very select circle of people and has not been offered or sold publically. I cannot imagine that you count yourself amongst the friends of the German Citizens' Initiative.

Naturally, I hope for the widest circulation of this brochure and would be very grateful to you if you would distribute some of them among your Jewish friends. As I mentioned in the Preface, I am convinced that this brochure only serves the purpose of finding the truth and every decent Jew will welcome it. Only a fool or war monger could desire to have this horror propaganda against Germany continued.

Your letter was remarkable in yet another aspect as well: One gets the impression as though you might be the secret "Gauleiter" of Germany or an agent of some world organization to control and censor public opinion. Who authorized you anyway to watch over the professional acitivities of German lawyers, and to make suggestions to the bar association?

We German lawyers do not appreciate a Jewish or any other form of censorship and domination. Before you snoop around any further in our affairs, maybe it would be more advisable for you to respond to the accusations made by Polish newspapers claiming that you had been a Gestapo agent, lest your hectic Anti-German activities appear to be of the "Hold-the-Thief" kind.

A copy of this letter will be mailed to the bar association. Because of the importance of the matter, I shall publicize our correspondence.

Very truly yours,

TRUTH WILL EVENTUALLY PREVAIL

YES, SIX MILLION DID NOT DIE

The nations of the West mourn their dead, erect monuments to them, and hold commemoration services to cherish their memory. Zionists on the other hand make capital out of their dead and use them as one more step to world domination.

While flowers of remembrance bloom around the graves and memorials of other people's heroes, around the graves of the "Six Million" the loudspeakers of propaganda are even today, thirty-three years later, still roaring at full blast. Hollywood, too, has made good business out of it all.

And while the Gentiles still stand around in shock, confusion and indignation, and continue to ask how it all could have happened, the survivors of the "holocaust" have continued to earn the pity of the world, as well as the right of revenge, and of course the right to Israel and to world domination.

But the unanswered question still remains: "Did Six Million Really Die?"

NOW ACCEPTED AS HISTORY

What most Gentiles don't know, and have never been allowed to know, is that in the matter of the "six million," they have been and are still being brainwashed into accepting a myth as a fact, a lie as truth and now, today, as history; and in the process being caught up in a vast web of global deception.

Using all their resources of radio, press and TV, and all their historic talents, the never-ending propaganda of the Zionists has indelibly impressed on the minds of the British and American publics, and on the world in general, a horrifying picture of six million innocent and defenseless Jews murdered in cold blood by mindless Nazis!

And with this elaborately and artfully devised picture of the "holocaust" being continually waved before our eyes, our attention has long been drawn away from the fact that the "six million" story was invented in New York in 1943, and perfected by the Zionist-Communist propaganda machine, for the sole purpose of preventing, at all costs, any resurgence of the national spirit in the nations of the West.

Their propaganda has also served the purpose of diverting our attention away from the real genocide which has long been taking place—the deliberate murder of millions and millions of our own race—by the bolshevised tools of Communism,* ever since the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia in 1917.

It must be remembered that in the matter of racial and national subversion, the basis on which Marxism has depended all along for its spread is the demoralization, degeneration, and eventually the destruction of the natural racial elite among a people, and the transfer of effective political control to the lowest elements of that people—at least temporarily. In the long run, although the most debased criminal elements of a people may remain as accomplices, the ultimate political control always passes to the same alien, international sect, the originators and purveyors of Marxism everywhere. The most fundamental Marxist tactic, the very essence of bolshevization, always and everywhere is the destruction of the ruling class, or of any potential leadership group—their natural enemies—among a people.

'HOLOCAUST' SERIES IN U.S.

And the same smokescreen of "holocaust" propaganda persists strongly today, whenever there is any Zionist fear of "increasing anti-Semitism," or whenever anyone has the temerity to dispute and deny their "six million" story.

This was the underlying reason for the NBC's (National Broadcasting Corporation's) nine-and-a-half-hour television showing of the "Holocaust" in the U.S. last April; and which newspapers in South Africa, like the Pretoria News and others, described as "The film that shouldn't have been made was seen by 120 million," the film that "dramatized the brutal massacre of the six million Jews."

A massive publicity effort preceded this television production. More than 14 million study guides on the "Holocaust" were distributed throughout the U.S. Jewish and Christian leaders "endorsed" the program after seeing previews arranged by the NBC in February and March. A paperback novel based on the TV series jumped onto the best-seller lists within three weeks of publication; nearly two million copies were printed.

The series cost $6 million to produce. It was interrupted by 140 advertisements, paid for by 50 advertisers.

The story—a documentary drama—was centered on two fictional German families, the Aryan Dorfs and the Jewish Weiss's. The Weiss family members were separated, humiliated, raped, tortured and starved. They committed suicide, were gassed or shot. One out of a family of eight survived.

What was not made clear, however, was that the NBC's production was written solely by Jews, and produced and presented by a television network controlled and owned entirely by Jews.

And the reason for their production? The writer of the script said that the "Holocaust" will "help set the record straight and nail these lies about the myth of the six million."

To this could be added the hope of the chairman of the Anti-Defamation League (ADL), Mr. Burton Joseph, who said; "We are beginning to witness the appearance of revisionist history books that shamefully declare the holocaust a myth—the upcoming NBC television series will dispel the notion of any myth," he said.

'HOLOCAUST' SCHOOL SYLLABUS!

Readers of the South African Observer will also be interested to learn that so concerned are Zionists in the U.S. about the "six million" story that the New York Board of Education has already had a "holocaust studies" syllabus prepared for the schools in America, entitled "The Holocaust: A Study Of Genocide." Needless to say, it was the Jewish Anti-Defamation League (ADL) which furnished most of the "instructional support material."

Funded with tax dollars, the purpose of the ADL's brainwashing effort is clearly to instil a deep sense of guilt, shame, and inferiority in American children who are the particular targets of the ADL because they are America's future. To accomplish this, the ADL is supervising the restructuring of public school (both elementary and secondary) courses to indoctrinate them with its propaganda.

Founded in 1913, the ADL has been the political police of organized Zionism in the U.S. for more than 64 years. Its responsibility is to choke off, by any means, any criticism of or opposition to Zionist influence over the policy, especially the foreign policy, of the federal government. Its leadership has included communists and communist sympathizers.

'GENOCIDE' SERIES IN SOUTH AMERICA

The NBC's "Holocaust"

production will also readily remind readers of the South African Observer about the "Genocide" episode of the "World At War" series, presented by SABC-TV in 1976, which was another example of how easy it has been for Zionist propagandists and their front men, the liberals, to recount and present the "crimes" of Fascists and Nazis to the world, whenever they feel threatened by "anti-Semitism" or when anyone starts to doubt or dispute their "six million" story.

Presented as a "straightforward documentary" of the Second World War, the whole "World At War" series, and its "genocide" episode, proved nothing other than "history" of the last war selected, compiled, and purveyed, not by qualified historians, but by Zionists, for Zionist purposes—just like the latest NBC production in the U.S.

As for the other side of the story, this, as to be expected, was completely blacked out or smothered out in both productions.

But how easy has it been for the past 33 years and more. All the communications media in the U.S., and most of it in the other countries of the West, have been completely in the hands of the Zionists, with none to say them nay—and with any disputant of their "facts" and propaganda being immediately reminded of the "six million" or silenced with the smears of "anti-Semitism" and Nazism.

And not only that. These controllers of the media, with their now perfected blackout and smotherout techniques, are supremely confident that their control of the world's media will continue indefinitely.

If one really wanted to find some of the missing "six million," say some observers, one would have to look no further than New York, Los Angeles, Washington; and other American cities, for it is common knowledge that the actual population of Jews in the U.S. is much closer to fifteen million than the six or seven million claimed.

JEWISH BOARD OF DEPUTIES

The importance of the Six Million story to the Zionist in South Africa could also be gauged from the all-out efforts on the part of the Jewish Board of Deputies in South Africa to get Richard Harwood's small, 28-page booklet, "Did Six Million Really Die?," banned by the Publications Board last year, and then, when we of the South African Observer appealed against the banning, the Jewish Board did its utmost to prevent the repeal of the banning.

This they did by commissioning evidence and material on the "holocaust" which eventually appeared in the form of the book they published last September, entitled "Yes, Six Million Did Die—The Truth Will Prevail."

This book, with an imposing list of Jewish authors, authorities and researchers, was presented as a "reaffirmation of the chapter of world history" when the Nazi regime in Germany "pursued its policy of genocide of six million Jews"—and their book was represented as the final word on the question of the "six million."

Their book has also, needless to say, been highly touted by our English- and Afrikaans-language newspapers alike, during the past eight months, with an elaborate review appearing in the mass-circulation Sunday newspaper, the Johannesburg Sunday Times, as late as a few days ago, on May 28, 1978.

This review in the Sunday Times went out of its way, as have all the other newspapers, to emphasize anew all the "horrors of the Nazi death camps," and, at the same time, to emphasize that we, of the South African Observer, withdrew our appeal against the banning of the Harwood booklet solely because of the "overwhelming" evidence adduced by the Jewish Board of Deputies in their new book!

But nothing could be further from the truth. Our withdrawal from the appeal was entirely due to lack of funds to pursue a court action which the Jewish Board and its publicists were already anticipating was going to become another "Nuremberg Trial" in miniature, presumably as another ready-made propaganda platform for them.

For our part we have never departed from our own firm belief, the result of our own investigations since the end of World War One, that truth will eventually prevail—and that six million did not die!

IRREGULAR AND INVALID

The decision of the Committee of the Publications Board in Cape Town to ban the Harwood booklet was, in our view, irregular and invalid because the censoring committee had been influenced by letters from the Institute of Jewish Affairs and the Board of Deputies of British Jews, which had been submitted by the Jewish Board of Deputies in South Africa.

The Committee, in our view, was firstly not entitled in terms of the Publications Act to take these documents into account; and secondly the committee was not entitled to ban the booklet, because it had not first made itself fully conversant with the facts and implications of all questions surrounding the whole subject of the extermination legend.

For example, the Committee did not explore or study the investigative works of eminent historians such as the American Professor Harry Elmer Barnes and the French Professor Paul Rassinier.

The American Harry Elmer Barnes wrote in the Rampart Journal for summer 1967 that it was "demonstrated that there had been no systematic extermination in those camps—Dachau, Belsen, Buchenwald, Sachenhausen, Auschwitz, Ravensbruck, Treblinka, Dora, etc.

'MACABRE IMPOSTURE'

"An historic lie...the most tragic and most macabre imposture of all time,"was written in 1962 by Paul Rassinier, describing the alleged extermination of Jews in gas chambers by the Nazis.

The value of Rassinier's work lies firstly in the fact that he actually experienced and saw life in German concentration camps, in Buchenwald and Dora; and also that, as a socialist intellectual and an anti-Nazi, nobody could be less inclined to defend Hitler and National Socialism. Yet, for the sake of justice and historical truth, Rassinier spent the remainder of his post-war years, until his death in 1966, pursuing research which utterly refuted the myth of the Six Million.

Of great concern to Professor Rassinier was the way in which the extermination legend was being deliberatly exploited for political and financial advantage to the Zionists, and in this he found Israel and the Soviet Union to be in concert.

He noted how, after 1950, an avalanche of fabricated extermination literature appeared under the stamp of two organizations, so remarkably synchronized in their activities that one might well believe them to have been contrived in partnership.

One is the "Committee for the Investigation of War Crimes and Criminals" established under Communist auspices at Warsaw, and the other, the "World Center of Contemporary Jewish Documentation" at Paris and Tel-Aviv. Their publications seem to appear at favorable moments in the political climate, and for the Soviet Union their purpose is simply to maintain the threat of Nazism as a maneuver to divert attention from their own activities.

HOAX OF TWENTIETH CENTURY

The latest book dealing with the extermination legend, and also not taken into consideration by the Publications Board when banning Harwood's booklet, is The Hoax of the Twentieth Century, by Professor Arthur Butz of the North-Western University, Evanston, Illinois, whose book categorically states that a systematic extermination policy of Jews by the Nazis never took place.

The author conclusively demolishes the legend that the Germans attempted to exterminate the Jews during World War II.

Combining the historians mastery of documents with the technical knowledge of a scientist, Professor Butz's book is the product of massive research. The author takes his theme far beyond all previous work done in this field, and his book may well become a standard volume for many years to come.

Commenting on his task in the book's introduction, Prof. Butz relates:

"Ultimately I spent the entire summer of 1972 working on an expose of the extermination hoax, since by then I had penetrated and demolished the whole sorry mess... I felt an inescapable obligation and an intellectual imperative to put forward, for society's evaluation, what I knew about this most pernicious hoax... If a scholar, regardless of his speciality, perceives that scholarship is acquiescing from whatever motivation, in a monstrous lie then it is his duty to expose the lie."

NATURE OF NUREMBURG TRIALS

One of Prof. Butz's most important contributions is his study of the nature of the post-war trials—cases of torture and thuggery at Nuremberg and the low level of legal integrity. There is a probe into the dubious origins of the Nuremburg Trials, the morality of key prosecution figures like Telford Taylor, and the bias that distinguished such controlling bodies as the U.S. War Crimes Branch, headed by Col. David "Mickey" Marcus, a fanatical Zionist, later killed in the Arab-Israeli war.

Comments Prof. Butz: "It is simply not possible to imagine an appointment that would make these trials more suspect. Under these political conditions xit is simply silly to expect anything but frameup at the 'trials.' The associated 'extermination' hoax will be exposed with complete clarity in these pages."

Prof. Butz's book also combines a survey of miscellaneous problems associated with the extermination hoax. The claim by the Yad Vashem Archives in Jerusalem that they have the names of between 2.5 and 3 million exterminated Jews is swiftly discredited.

The author also analyzes the hypnotic acceptance by Germans of the genocide myth, and an excursion is made into the fantastic Jewish atrocity charges of Antiquity, notably the Talmud's claim that 4 billion (or elsewhere 800 million) Jews were killed by the Romans in Hadrian's siege of Bethar, causing a tidal wave of blood that rolled boulders to the sea.

INCALCULABLE BENEFITS

Our own interest in the legend of the "six million" has been to bring out the truth and the facts, while that of the Zionists is to conceal the exact truth behind a smokescreen of detraction and "anti-Semitism."

We do not—as they should know perfectly well—traffic in myths and untruths. Our interest in the whole matter has stemmed also from the political purposes to which their story of the "six million" has been put.

Three decades of continuous and unrelieved propaganda-conditioning have not been without important results—and there is certainly no mystery about the rationale of their unremitting attacks upon Germany and the West.

The growing mythology of the "six million" has been of incalculable benefit to the Zionists because it quickly aroused, and has kept alive, the sympathy and support of the West for the Jewish "national home" in Palestine, Israel. At the same time, it has effectively prevented any throwing open of the whole question of Palestine and the four million Palestinians cruelly and mercilessly driven out of, and dispossessed of, their homeland.

The colossal fiction of the "six million" has also underlain the equalitarian doctrine and the world-wide campaign against racial discrimination, both invented by the Zionists, and both of which are the inspiration and driving force of the "Social Gospel" which is today undermining and destroying Protestantism, as well as changing the entire thinking of the Roman Catholic Church.

EFFECT ON CHRISTIANITY

Zionist spokesmen are today openly boasting that the "shattering effect of the holocaust on the Christian conscience is responsible for the Pope's encyclical absolving Jews of guilt in the death of Jesus, and for the discarding of the Catholic teaching in the past that the Jewish exile and dispersion was a divine punishment for the denial of the Messiah-ship of Jesus.

In short, say Zionist spokesmen, the wheel of clerical opinion in the Christian world has now "turned full cycle" and "Christianity's indebtedness" to Judaism is now a "dominant theme" in Christian thinking! And how has it all been achieved? With the myth of the "six million," of course.

History has many examples of myths that live a longer and richer life than truth, and become more effective than truth, just like the story of the "six million" is proving to be.

QUESTION OF ZIONISM ITSELF

Nor must we forget that the rationale of the Six Million effectively keeps removed from the realm of rational and open discussion the whole question of Zionism itself.

The Six Million fiction is effectively helping to black out and smother out the fact that the two Asiatic movements which arose in the first war, and which reaped the victory of the second, were Soviet Communism and Political Zionism.

These two revolutionary movements, which sprang from a common root in the ghettos of Russia, are only as separate as the two main branches of the one tree.

There never has been, and there does not now exist any disagreement on ideology, tactics or objectives between these two world revolutionary forces.

Back to the full by International Finance, they aspire to securing eventual control of political, economic and military power over the entire human race.

Their organization and political instrument is the United Nations organization, from its very beginning bore on its brow the mark of Moscow.

MORAL IMPLICATIONS THE SAME

The remarkable fact about this never-ending propaganda, of morbidity, horror and atrocity, is that its Zionist creators and purveyors are simply not interested in atrocities unless they can be attributed to Germany and the German people.

At the same time, they completely ignore and black out and smother out all the atrocities committed by their fellow Zionists in Palestine, the Middle East, and in Eastern Europe during the past sixty years.

We are repeatedly told that we must sympathize with Israel because of the suffering of the Jews in Europe at the hands of the Nazis. But we see in this suggestion no reason to perpetuate any suffering. What Israel is doing today cannot be condoned, and to invoke any horrors of the past to justify those of the present is gross hypocrisy.

Because of this, we believe that the Zionists who continue to grind out their non-stop atrocity propaganda against Germany and the German people—and who are undermining Western man and his nations in the process—should be sharply reminded that the moral implications are the same in all atrocities.

Justice demands that the world be reminded, before it is too late, that those who have been captors, accusers and executioners of others, like the Zionists in Palestine and elsewhere, are themselves stained with the blood of atrocity and mass murder.

QUESTION OF 'ANTI-SEMITISM'

As for the smear of "anti-Semitism," applied by Zionists to anyone daring to question the legend of the "six million," we would now ask them why an opinion as general as "anti-Semitism" has flourished in all countries and in all ages, before and after the Christian era, at Alexandria, Rome, and Antiachia, in Arabia, and in Persia, in medieval and in modern Europe, and in a word, in all parts of the world wherever there are or have been Jews. Such an opinion, could not spring from a mere whim or fancy, but must be the effect of deep and serious causes.

Wherever the Jews have settled during their dispersions the development of "anti-Semitism" is observed. And if this hostility had been shown towards the Jews at one time or in one country only, it would be easy to account for the local causes of this sentiment. But this race has been the object of bitter hostility with all the nations amidst whom it ever settled.

It must needs be, therefore, that the general causes of anti-Semitism have always resided in the Jews themselves and not in those who antagonized it.

The smear of "anti-Semitism," it must be emphasized, has long been one of the most important and effective weapons in the arsenal of World Jewry to prevent any open and rational discussion of the Jewish Question—and of the question of the "six million"—in their long struggle for world domination.

FORMAL BIRTH OF THE MYTH

Any searcher for the real historical truth will find that the extermination legend was manufactured in the United States during the course of the Second World War and that it evolved from the persistant propaganda fabrications of the World Jewish Congress and its agencies, with which a reluctant U.S. Government was bombarded at the time.

On pressures from the Zionist organizations and from Morgenthau's Treasury Department, the U.S. government created a War Refugee Board under Morgenthau's control whose report, entitled German Extermination Camps Auschwitz and Birkenau, by anonymous authors, constituted the formal birth of the gas chamber myth.

The extermination legend, with all the propaganda concoctions of the Allied press, during and after the war, and the growing mythology of the Six Million can all be shown conclusively to be the inventions of the Zionists themselves.

PEOPLE STARTING TO THINK

The legend, however, could never stand up to rational analysis or critical examination or any open discussion.

Its widespread acceptance for so many years has depended entirely on the implicit intellectual terror with which the Zionists have invested and surrounded the whole matter and have succeeded in smearing any doubter of the six million figure as being an "anti-Semite."

But the legend cannot last indefinitely.

Television productions like "Holocaust" in the U.S. and the "Genocide" episode in the "World At War" series in South Africa, both designed specifically to promote and perpetuate the extermination legend, certainly continue to bind so many people to the hoax.

But at the same time they are serving also to get people at last to think about the matter, to question its credibility—and sooner or later they must inevitably want to know the exact truth.

Meanwhile, more and more are doubting the legend, openly saying that it cannot be true and that it in fact is a lie.

IMPORTANT LESSON FOR WEST

The "Holocaust" television production in the U.S. and the "Genocide" episode shown on SABC-TV in South Africa, have one important lesson for the people of South Africa and for all the people of the West. That is, the pressing need for the whole Jewish Question—and its allied questions of Zionism, Judaism, the Talmud, the "Six Million," "anti-Semitism" and the whole matter of Jewish ethnocentrism—to be opened up to free discussion and enquiry in just the same way that Western man's customs, his traditions, his racism, his nationalism and his Christian faith have since the end of the last war been subjected to the fierce and unremitting glare of public scrutiny and subversion by the Zionists themselves.

Their global purpose, just like that of the communists and the men of international finance, it must be emphasized again, is to de-nationalize all races, nations and governments and to erect on the ruins of Western Christian civilization their own collectivist New World Order.

TRUTH WILL PREVAIL

Our purpose in the South African Observer is not to condone, but to investigate and to condemn all atrocities, irrespective of time, place and person.

We agree with the Jewish Board in South Africa that the truth about the "six million" will prevail in the end, but we do so for quite different reasons: Were we to publish a book, as they have done, its title would be, "Yes Six Million Did Not Die!"

Winston Churchill laid bare the facts of the Bolshevik Revolution in speeches in the House of Commons and in London newspaper articles at the time. Here, inter alia, is what he wrote on the birth of Communism:*

"...This world-wide conspiracy for the overthrow of civilization and for the reconstruction of society on the basis of arrested development, of envious malevolence and impossible equality, has been steadily growing...There is no need to exaggerate the part played in the creation of Bolshevism and in the actual bring about of the Russian Revolution by these international, and for the most part, atheistic Jews. It is certainly a very great one: it probably outweighs all others. With the notable exception of Lenin, the majority of the leading figures are Jews. Moreover, the principal inspiration and driving power comes from the Jewish leaders."

The "Holocaust"—fact or fiction?

Were six million Jews really gassed . . . or has a colossal hoax been perpetrated on the world?

Professor Arthur Butz has carefully investigated the alleged extermination of 6,000,000 Jews during World War II and has written a book which thoroughly documents his startling findings. His book strips away the cover of fraud and deceit from this emotion-charged topic and lays bare the full and complete truth.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH—FREEDOM OF THOUGHT FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

The editor-publisher of THE LIBERTY BELL does not necessarily agree with each and every article appearing in this magazine, nor does he subscribe to all conclusions arrived at by various writers, however, he does endeavor to permit the exposure of ideas suppressed by the controlled news media of this country.

It is, therefore, in the best tradition of America and of free men everywhere that THE LIBERTY BELL strives to give free reign to ideas, for ultimately, it is ideas which rule the world and determine both the content and structure of culture.

We believe that we can and will change our society for the better. We declare our long-held view that no institution or government created by men, for men, is inviolable, incorruptible and not subject to evolution, change or replacement by the will of the people.

To this we dedicate our lives and our work. No effort will be spared and no idea will be allowed to go unexpressed if we think it will benefit the people, not only of America, but the entire world.

COURAGEOUS AUTHOR TOURS NORTH AMERICA

Thies Christophersen

Touring the United States and Canada during the month of September, Mr Thies Christophersen of Mohrkirch/West Germany had the opportunity to speak before several groups of American and German/American patriots in key cities of these two countries. Mr Christophersen is the fearless author of his eye-witness report, Auschwitz, which we published in full in the September issue of The Liberty Bell. Mr Christophersen also publishes two German-language magazines, Die Bauernschaft and Kritik, both of which we highly recommend to our german-speaking friends and supporters. Requests for sample copies should be addressed to: Mr Thies Christophersen, D-2341 Mohrkirch, West Germany.

Since Mr Christophersen is not fluent in English, a question and answer sheet was prepared for a meeting in Washington, D.C. which we are happy to present herewith:

"When I was born we still had a Kaiser in Germany. I still celebrate his birthday because mine is on the same day, and I also celebrate the 20th of April [Adolf Hitler's birthday] because on that day I got married. I am a farmer from Schleswig-Holstein [the northern most part of Germany]. My homeland is Anglia, the land of the Angles. The Vikings once ventured forth from this land and conquered a world. They were here in America before Columbus. The English also came from Anglia and for many years were the rulers of the world. They would still be, if it had not been for Prime Minister Churchill. My farm is 40 hectares [approx. 100 US acres] large, with 20 milk cows and 100 hogs. In 1969 I turned over the farm to my son and became an agricultural journalist."

* What induced you to become an agricultural journalist?

The injustice against the farmers. The socialist minister Mansholt wanted to turn the farms of Europe into collective farms. Some farmers would disappear and that is why we went on the barricades. We hoisted the black farmers' flag that has remained our symbol to this day.

* Did you organize the resistance?

Yes. We founded the "Emergency League of German Farmers". The League was founded in opposition against the "German Farmers Union" which was affiliated with the constitutional Christian Democratic Union [CDU — a legal German party].

* Does this Emergency League still exist?

No. It became superflous when Mansholt gave up his plan and the Christian Democratic Union itself became an opposition party.

* Were you among the leaders of the Emergency League?

Yes. I was the secretary and later published the newspaper Deutscher Bauer — German Farmer. In 1968 the newspaper was sold to Dr. Frey, the publisher of the National Zeitung in Munich. I remained the editor for one year after that, and then I founded a new magazine, Die Bauernschaft, which I still publish.

Unabhängige Korrespondenz für Freunde und Förderer des Bauernstandes Organ der „Bauern- und Bürgerinitiative" e. V.
Herausgeber: Thies Christophersen, Agrarjournalist
2341 Mohrkirch, Krämersteen Telefon 0 46 46 / 8 88

* What kind of magazine is it? Is it a periodical for farmers?

I deal with agriculture in its context as a part of the social order. I do not really discuss planting or breeding of animals. However, I do treat agriculture and nutrition from a biological and ecological perspective. Very often, I have to give up articles about planned topics in order to make room for the many letters from readers which I am glad to publish and comment upon.

* How has the magazine's circulation developed?

In 1973 it had a circulation of only 200 copies. The circulation has almost doubled every year since then. (If it continues like that, I will bypass the Axel Springer publishing empire in ten years.) Today we have a circulation of 5,000 copies of which about 1,000 are sent outside of Germany.

* Why have you become so well known?

Certainly through my writings. But also through several actions that got publicity. In 1967 we stopped forced auction of a farm by occupying the district courthouse in Friedrichstadt, and in February 1978 we held a farmers' tribunal in Bad Oldesloe. This demonstration made headlines. In 1971 I met the attorney Manfred Roeder. In protest against the organized degeneracy in art we hauled a load of manure past an exhibition of degenerate art in Kassel [the hometown of yours truly]. That got us the laughter of the whole world on our side.

* Did you work together with Manfred Roeder?

Yes, but I did not give up my magazine, Die Bauernschaft. I have learned a great deal from him. He openly and courageously acknowledged his loyalty to National Socialism and Adolf Hitler. That impressed me. Since then we have both been given jail sentences, although my sentence once again has been suspended. Manfred Roeder had to emigrate.

* Why were you given a jail sentence?

Because of "distribution of propaganda material of an anti-constitutional organization", because of "display of symbols of anti-constitutional organizations", because of "defamation of the federal government", and because of "popular incitement".

* What did you actually do?

Together with Manfred Roeder I published a first-person report from my time at the Auschwitz concentration camp and attempted to prove that there had been no mass gassings in the German concentration camps. Furthermore, on the front cover of my brochure, I displayed a picture of Hitler.

* How can that be against the law?

In Germany that is considered officensive to Jews, who enjoy special rights. If a person does not believe their tales of suffering or attempts to deny them, he will be portrayed as a liar. That is an offense.

* Can you prove your Auschwitz report?

My Auschwitz report is a first-person account that corresponds with the facts. A person can make the accusation that I did not see everything or know everthing that happened. I wanted to show why it was that I did not know about what allegedly took place. This account has now reached a circulation of over 100,000 copies and has been translated in all the major languages. I do not write under a pseudonym. I make public my full address complete with telephon number, and as a result I receive thousands of letters from around the world. Many have confirmed my account but there are a few who claim to know something about gassings. I have written all of these people and asked them for details, and I received from them one unbelievable story after another. Many told me tales about Auschwitz which they had heard from a third person. When I asked for the address of this third person, I was always told "unfortunately, he is dead". There are no eye-witnesses who are able to confirm the alleged atrocities of Auschwitz. The burden to prove guilt lies not with the accused, but with the accuser. To this day we are still waiting for this proof. The "Holocaust" film is no proof.

* Is there other evidence which confirms your account?

Yes, quite a lot. At first, foreign historians were the only ones who dealt with this topic. A French professor, Rassinier, started it all, followed by Richard Harwood in England and Professor Butz in the United States. In Germany, Emil Aretz was the first to take up this theme. I am an eye-witness, not a historian. Still, my account has been very useful to historians. Recently the judge, Dr. Wilhelm Staeglich, examined the NS war crimes trials thoroughly from a legal perspective and came to the same conclusion as had Manfred Roeder before him. The NS war crimes trials have been carried out with the use of perjured witnesses and falsified documents. Many witnesses testified under duress.

* Is your account, The Auschwitz Lie, still available?

In Germany the booklet was confiscated and prohibited. However, I authorized reprints of the brochure before this action was taken. A new expanded and illustrated edition is now being circulated from Switzerland by Courrier du Continent, P.O. Box 2428, Lausanne, Switzerland. [The English edition, Auschwitz, is available for $1.25 from Liberty Bell Publications, or from A.E., Box 11116, Station E., Buffalo, N.Y. 14211. When ordering from the latter address, please make checks payable to Manfred Roeder.]

* Does freedom of the press exist in Germany?

No, before I publish anything I submit it first to an attorney in order to avoid being sentenced again. This is a form of voluntary self-censorship.

* Do the police keep you under surveillance?

Certainly. The house searches have continued without letup. Three Criminal Police officials came back in May and searched through the editorial offices. They found exactly nine copies of the forbidden Auschwitz Lie brochure with which to bring charges against me. That broke the conditions for my suspended sentence. In the fall, there will be a trial. The retired judge, Dr. Wilhelm Staeglich, has also been charged, because he wrote a forword to the new edition of The Auschwitz Lie.

* Do you fill mail orders for the banned brochures?

No, every order is sent back with the notice that this brochure must be ordered from Switzerland. Often, however, I receive banned literature in the mail. The "Juedische Allgemeine Wochenzeitung (Jewish General Weekly Journal)" over and over demands that I be convicted. A few days after I received incriminating material in the mail the Criminal Police, anonymously, paid me a visit. An accident? I do not believe it.

* Are you a National Socialist?

That is actually two questions. Are you "nationalist" and are you "social"? I try to be both of those things. If anyone says about himself, "I am national", or "I am social"; "I am a liberal", or "I am Christian" — that sounds to me like self-praise. If someone ascribes these virtues to me, I consider it a compliment. Should I praise myself?

* Were you a member of the National Socialist Party?

That was hardly possible because I was only fifteen years old in 1938. In 1930, I joined the Hitler Youth. I will never forget that time in my life. It was a time of joy and enthusiasm such as the world had never known. I am not ashamed to have been a part of it. [Nor is yours truly for having been a member from 1938 until 1945!] I think happily back on my youth.

* Were you a soldier?

I took part in the war from the first to the last day. During the campaign in France in 1940 I was wounded with a head injury and had to spend a long time in a military hospital. That is why I only advanced to the rank of corporal. In 1943 I was sent as a special officer (lieutenant) to Russia and in 1944 I was assigned as scientific assistant to Auschwitz where I worked on the cultivation of plants for synthetic rubber. I worked there together with interned Jews. In December 1944 I left Auschwitz, and on the 13th of February 1945 I lived through the terrifying bombing raid against Dresden.

* Were concentration camps necessary at all?

These were detention camps in which people of enemy nationality were interned. The Jews had declared war against us and were therefore detained. As long as there is war, there will be detention camps. Only when we have eliminated war can we do away with detention camps. The Allies, of course, even maintained detention camps after the war and there, the detainees were not as well handled as in Auschwitz. There are many accounts verifying this.

* Why don't you say much more about the atrocities of the Allies?

That is exactly what I do not want. If other people do it, that is their business. Atrocity stories do not serve to bring about understanding between peoples. I want to accentuate the positive and influence things for the best. "He who wants peace must prepare for war", a Roman statesman once said. (I don't remember anymore who it was.) He who wants war must so hate. Atrocity stories encourage feelings of hate. That has been demonstrated once again with the broadcast of the film "Holocaust". The same sort of thing was true of the film "Jud Suess". I will not excuse myself by pointing out that others are guilty. I want to prove our innocence! If the Christians pray "forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us", then they should act accordingly. I want to forgive and forget. If I were to reckon out the atrocities committed by all sides during the war, that would perhaps add up well for us. Should we therefore kill a few thousand more Jews and then call it quits? I want justice, not revenge. Revenge means an eye for an eye — a tooth for a tooth. This Jewish law has no validity for me. The charge of "popular incitement" does not apply to me.

* Even the German television recently broadcast a program about Allied atrocities. What do you say to that?

I don't like it. I don't like German television in general.

* Why not?
It presents too little German culture. We have a culture and a proud history.

* What do you think about the Jews?
What do you mean, "the Jews"? Do you mean the Jewish people? I have nothing against them. Do you mean the Jews as a race? They are different from us. Not merely externally, but also in their mentality. Do you mean the Jewish religion? That is something I do not understand. If you ask me if I have something against people then you must give me names. That is something I can give an answer to. Simon Wiesenthal, Nathan Kaufmann, Henry Morgenthau, and so on, do not get very good marks from me. I am not an enemy of the Jews. But the Jews are hostile to me. They have slandered me. But I make a point of not replying to slander. Or would it be better if I called them names back? Certainly they wait for me to do that in order to bring me before a court once again on a charge of "popular incitement".

* Are you a racist?
I would use the term "racialist". I do not deny the existence of races nor do I deny the differences between human beings. The law of race is a law of Nature — a law of God. The races should be preserved. The instinct of self-preservation is also a law of Nature. Naturally, there are also highly developed races which one should not measure only in terms of intelligence. There are also other features which are racially determined. Races have their areas of settlement which they should be able to keep. Every race defends its own territory even if that was won through conquest.

* Couldn't we overcome racial differences through racial mixing?
Why should we overcome racial differences and eliminate them? There are those who demand just that. But why? These people want to make themselves rulers of the world. They preserve their own racial group and consider themselves the chosen people.

* Do you mean the Jews?
You said it!

* Are you a democrat?
If the system which is offered to us today is supposed to be democracy, then I am certainly no democrat. There is no such thing as rule of the people. A people must be led. Systems of authority have only lasted when they have the trust of the people. A chosen leader of the people is hardly a dictator. (Except in the case of war, when exceptional circumstances are valid.) The Third Reich was no democracy; however, Adolf Hitler allowed all great decisions to be confirmed by the people. (Remilitarization, withdrawal from the League of Nations, reunification with Austria, and so forth.) We voted five times during the six years of peace under Adolf Hitler. Never in world history has there been a time when a people stood so solidly behind its leadership. Today we vote for parties which receive no or only a bare majority of the votes. Before the elections we are unclear about the intentions and goals. Great deicisions (nuclear power plants, membership in the United Nations, recognition of the Oder-Neisse border) were made without any consultation with the people. Under Adolf Hitler we had more democracy than this.

* Do you vote?
No, not any more. I do not know who or what I am supposed to vote for, with the exception of the local elections in our community. There I know the people and party politics hardly plays a role.

* What do you have against party politics?
Parties are interest groups. Policies should be made in the interests of the entire nation. Not majorities, but common sense should be decisive.

* How do you intend to forward your interests if you have no majority supporting you?
No one, including me, should be able to push through his own private interests.

* What do you think of labor unions?
I do not support interest groups at all and I do not think they should exist. There is only one solution and that is called the "Labor Front" — that is, a neutral alliance of employers and employees.

* What do you think about the right to strike?
Strikes would be superflous and unnecessary if there were set prices and set wages.

* Do you support government price supervision?
Yes, absolutely.

* How do you think you can regulate the market when supply and demand determine price?
After the example of the Reichsnaehrstand/National Food Commission: whereby imports would be based upon actual need and surpluses would go to purchasing and supply centers.

* Which institutions from the National Socialist era do you consider especially good?
The Hitler Youth, the National Labor Service, the Reichsnaehrstand/National Food Commission, and the German Labor Front.

* Looking back at the National Socialist era, what would you criticize?
A certain bureaucracy that has always existed and always will exist. There were too many careerists in the Party who scrambled for posts and positions. In part these are the same people who once again hold leading positions. I do not just make this criticism today — I did the same back then as well.

* Was that permitted?
In the National Socialist era criticism was important and very much desired. There were official agencies subordinate to the SS Security Office that regularly conducted public opinion polls to determine the mood among the people in much the same way that private public opinion agencies do today.

* What are your thoughts on the Roehm Putsch?
Roehm wanted to merge the Army into the Stormtroops (SA). Adolf Hitler, however, decided for the Army. They did not thank him for that, as the 20th of July 1944 proved. Instead of being merged into the Stormtroops (SA), the Army should have been merged into the SS. Then we would have won the war, and the world today would be quite a bit different. Those who try to overthrow a government by force have always and everywhere been shot. However, they should have been brought before a court.

* The conspirators of the 20th of July who tried to assassinate Adolf Hitler claimed that because of the Roehm Putsch he was a mass murderer. What is your opinion?

It is precisely the men of the 20th of July who had demanded the head of SA Chief of Staff Roehm. Hitler delivered it to them. Their thanks was the assassination attempt. The people who portray Adolf Hitler as a murderer were themselves murders. The conspirators are co-responsible for the outbreak of war. Otherwise, they would have tried to overthrow the government in 1934. They would have been shot like Ernst Roehm and the world would have been spared much suffering.

* Are you for the death penalty?

I can neither pronounce nor carry out such a sentence. What I can not do I do not demand of others. Punishment is a poor means of education.

* Are you a Christian?

That is not what I would call myself. My love for my fellow man has limits. I am not a church member.

* Do you believe in God?

I do not discuss my belief in God.

* In your opinion, who is responsible for the last war?

First Churchill, second, Roosevelt, third, Stalin.

* Can you explain that?

There are historians, such as Udo Walendy, who can do a better job of that than I can. I agree with his interpretations.

* What does Adolf Hitler mean to you?

For me, ADolf Hitler has always been and still is the greatest personality whom history has brought forth in the last 2000 years, and not only for the Germans. Christ preached love of one's neighbor. He was perhaps a predecessor of Adolf Hitler. The people cried "Hosanna" and then cried "Crucify him" when the end came. What remains of this teaching to love thy neighbor? Adolf Hitler preached the "folk community". He revived and realized the old teaching. Never in history has there been a people who so enthusiastically rejoiced in its leader. For me, Adolf Hitler is a savior. His world view is my religion. The high point of my life came in 1937 when I was able to hold a lenghty conversation with the Fuehrer. Adolf Hitler performed wonders. He was a model in every respect.

"The time will come
When people, especially in Catholic areas
Will put up a bust of Adolf Hitler
Next to the portrait of the Mother Mary
And they will no longer say "Heil Hitler",
But "Saint Hitler"."

The people have already stopped believing the lies about Adolf Hitler and Germany. The truth will be victorious, even if today we are persecuted like the first Christians once were under Nero!

Dear Mr Dietz: 15 July 79

Enclosed please find a bank money order in the amount of $27.70 for the books and pamphlets listed on the order blank enclosed. The amount includes $2.50 for postage.

The material that I received with my first order was very informative. I had not seen any of your pamphlets prior to the ones you sent with order. Thank you much.

The pamphlets by Dr App were especially interesting. I have never believed that the Germans, with all their religious, technical and artistic contributions to the world would be guilty of the so-called 'Holocaust', especially now that American soldiers are being accused of the same things by the Communists and the leftist press....

...Could you please tell me where I can find a recording of "Es zittern die morschen Knochen" and the German words to "Unsere Fahne flattert uns voran", "Jugend wird marschieren", and "Deutschland Erwacht."?

Looking forward to hearing from you, I am

Yours truly
W.T., Ala.

Dear George: 15 July 79

Received the June e Liberty Bell and enjoyed it very much. I was sorry to hear that you had been having health problems. Hope by now you are enjoying a full recovery.

I especially enjoyed "Cmdr. Toner in the Lion's Den". We need more well informed patriots like him. I'd also like to comment on the exchange between Rev. Emery and Reinhold Dunkel. While I am in no way an expert on Identity religion, I have formed a certain interest in them mainly from my contact with Mr Dunkel. The present batch seem to be mainly of no real purpose to anyone just some religious hodge-podge to confuse the Whites. While they do, in some cases, point out who the enemy is, they seem very vague on what action to take against them. Exceptions to this are some of the Identity adherents who are followers of the Rev. Wesley Swift, there are some of them, who not only know who the enemy is, but seem willing to fight the Zionists for the preservation of the White Race. Herbert Armstrong and his like are ripp-off artists and/or communist ploys, no doubt, but when the identity religion first flourished it was a definite ally of National Socialism, and many of its followers today, while misguided, can still be considered our allies. That is only my uneducated opinion and personally, like yourself, I prefer fighters to prayers anyday.

...Well, George, I'll close. Again my wishes for your good health and my best to your family. Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,
J.W.P., Tennessee

George, I am sorry to have heard about your surgery. Don't push yourself to the limit. We don't want to lose a good man. Try to find time for you and your family to relax a little. I know that that is easier said than done.

Enclosed is a moneyorder for $40. Please send me 15 copies of June Liberty Bell, and please keep the rest as a donation.

Again, George, the best of luck to you and your family.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr Dietz: 23 July 79

This evening I turned on the book-tube to listen to the news. One segment covered the voting by our "Representatives" in that cesspool of corruption, Washington, D.C., on a constitutional amendment that would eliminate school busing for the racial balancing of the nation's schools.

Needless to say, considering the lowly character of this motley crew of dictators in liberal clothing, the amendment was overwhelmingly voted down.

An N.B.C. commentator stated that while a great majority of Americans, both black and White, are opposed to busing for racial balancing, the U.S. "Representatives", with a great majority, voted to continue the busing.

This is a perfect example of the rotten kind of government that we now have in Washington, D.C. Fully realizing that most of their constituents are strongly opposed to busing, they defy the will of the people who put them into office and decree that we shall have busing, whether we like it or not. Since they are not truly representatives of the people and are actually dictators over them, the very name "House of Representatives" is a farce, for on most issues, they don't represent us at all, and the U.S. Senate isn't any better.

One has only to recall the Senate's defiance of the public will in its treasonable give-away of our Panama Canal, with many billions of U.S. taxpayers' dollars additionally, to a petty communist dictator, to realize the arrogance and the insolence these despots are capable of, and the contempt they have for the American people. Are we really a government of the people, by the people,and for the people?

The grim fact is that during the past 50 years of their reign, the so-called "liberal establishment" has shackled the American nation in a dictatorship as cruel as Josef Stalin's over the Russian people, and the sooner the American people realize this, the sooner we can undertake the task of restoring control of government to the people.

Sincerely,
Veritas, Mass.

Editor's Note: Sorry, Veritas, but did you really expect our shabbas goy 'Representatives' in Washington to vote any measure that would benefit the White majority and which wasn't approved by our Jewish overseers? Frankly, we should be happy that this measure was voted down, lest our kinfolk would be conned into believing that these scoundrels were about to look after the majority's interest for a change, instead of pandering to the will of the behind-the-scene manipulators - the eternal Jew.

As for the Panama Canal give-away, why would red-blooded Americans really get so hot about that issue, when they permitted their WHOLE COUNTRY to be given away in 1913, when — under the able guidance of a German Jew — the Federal Reserve Act was put over on the American people and Congress abdicated its responsibility and exclusive right "to coin and issue the nation's money". Wasn't it another German Jew who said, "Give me the right to issue the money, and I care not who makes the laws"? Abraham Lincoln(As well as some other American statesmen) and Adolf Hitler realized that whoever exercised the sovereign right to issue a nation's money, has de facto control over its laws and people — that's why both of them had to go!

The moral of the story : let's stop fighting each other about peripheral issues that are being thrown into our faces by the Jew-Controllers of this country and the world, and let's concentrate on those who are the real charge d'affairs in Washington and most other capitols of the world — and you should know by now who they are!

* * * * *

Dear George: 31 July 79

Hope you're sound and well, after the recovery period following the surgery you have undergone. Let's hope it has just been a transient, unpleasant inconvenience.

I was very pleased with the books and other literature you've sent me. It arrived in good order; so let's stick to this system of dispatch for a while.

Let me also congratulate you on the splendid work you are doing. It is indeed crucial to see that our people here and across the ocean are tearing up this curtain of lies and make-believe, which has been hung over the minds of these generations by the most sinister enemies of our race, culture, morals and way of life.

As I said before, this sort of literature should get through to more and more people. In Europe, the younger generation is liable to read English better than German. This kind of literature is not adequately available in Dutch. Therefore attempts should be made to introduce this English literature in certain circles (i.E. students) and make it more easy for them to subscribe or to buy books. In "Alarm" [monthly publication of the VMO - Vlaamse Militante Orden, Belgium] I noticed a recommendation for several American publications without mentioning the manner or amount of payment, nor a local place or address to order from. In my opinion, this does not encourage people to enter the domain of foreign literature....

Enclosed find another order for more books.

Kind regards
P.R., Belgium

Dear George: 4 Aug 79

Greetings from Sweden. Under separate cover I am sending you "Sieh auf zu den Sternen" by C.E. Carlberg and an article by an especially obnoxious Jew-paper. I believe another version of this article has appeared in an issue of The Liberty Bell, but anyway, I am sending this along to you.

You were mentioned on the radio here two days ago. A hysterical kike denounced you (and some other overseas racists) as an "international hatemonger". He also said that your father was a former SS Officer [which he wasn't, but would be just as proud of him had he been!] who had been at the Eastern Front. According to this kike, "he served in a unit that was especially feared by Jews because of its brutality" (was your father THAT good?). Furthermore, you are supplying anti-Semites all over the world with "hatematerial" and are stirring up trouble in the U.S. etc., etc.

Talking of hatematerial, please send me a copy of "The French Revolution" by Nesta Webster. By the way, thanks for the copy of "Das Buch vom Schulchan-aruch"; N. and I really rejoiced at the thought of what kikes will think about this book being spread to patriots all over the world!

Best regards,
B.B., Sweden

* * * * *

Dear George: 22 Aug 79

George, you bad boy!Do you know that thanks to you and your abominable work on behalf of the Gentiles, a lot of kikes are suffering from serious insomnia? In both Europe and the USA, people are warning for you and as for my country, you are considered something of a chainrattling bogeyman, looming at the horizon, tirelessly working to stir up people against the poor, persecuted Jews.

Until the time of this writing, you have been attacked so often and so prominently that you have become something of an international figure here. Reader's pages in Jew-papers are sometimes full of readers' questions about you, especially after the publication of the book "Fascism today", which is dealing extensively with you. In addition to this, you have been smeared in "Expressen", Scandinavia's biggest newspaper, as well as in dozens of other, smaller papers, parroting the Big Boys. Some of these papers have described you as "one of the most dangerous anti-Semites in the world", and one paper carried such a scurrilous attack on you that several readers wrote to the American Embassy, demanding that you'd be railroaded into an insane asylum! Furthermore, you have been attacked on the Swedish Radio twice, and there will be more!

By the way, there will most likely be a police investigation and eventual prosecution (if they catch the culprit, that is) of an so far anonymous employee at the Main Postoffice in Stockholm, who put one of your "Alles Gute zum 90. Geburtstag" stickers on a letter to a famous holocaust survivor here. The hysterical kike notified her lawyer, who contacted the police and the Postmaster General, the latter writing a personal letter of apology to her. Furthermore, there will be a "thorough investigation" and, once and if the guilty person is exposed, an immediate dismissal of her or him..

George, what misery you are causing these poor, persecuted Jews! Surely you must be aware of the fact that the Jews have been persecuted since time immerorial by bigots and ignorant people. The only thing they want is to live in peace and quiet, minding their own business. Actually, Jews are nobler than most of us, because due to their long oppression, they have a fine sense of justice and always try to see things from the underdog's point of view. How else can one explain, for example, the Jewish predominance in physics and medicine? Their humanitarian instincts drive them in droves to professions where they'll be able to help others. Jews and Gentiles alike. How wonderful if the world would be filled up with Jews! We must join the rabbis and encourage the Jews to have more children and fill up the earth.

Under separate cover I am sending you photocopies of an article from the October-December 1941 issue of "Weltkampf" about that vicious creep Wendell Wilkie. This article is so interesting that, I believe, many Americans would be interested in an English translation. The article tells us, in effect, that Wendell Wilkie's forefather immigrated from Germany, not because he was "persecuted by the Prussian militarists" as Wendell Wilkie said, BUT BECAUSE HE WAS FLEEING FROM A KIKE USURER!

My Best,
B.B., Sweden

Gentlemen: 9 June 79

Please send me 500 copies Reprint on "Hoax of the 20th Century".

If the so and so's are going to keep on spreading the big lie, I am going to keep on spreading the truth about it.

According to an article in the NY Times about 1947 on info from or by the Jewish Registry in NY and also in World Almanac, which is Jewish owned, there were about 15 million Jews in the world in 1939. And the same sources stated that in 1946 there were about 15½ million Jews in the world.

Assuming that there were deaths at normal rate among the Jews in the rest of the world during that time, added to the supposed 6 million would total at least 6½ to 7 million. So, how could it be bilogically possible to lose that number from the base and end up with a population increase? Just impossible and plain common sense proof that the story is a one big lie.

Thank you
E.G., California

Dear George 10 June 79

How's this for an example of Jewish produced literary garbage? Having just read "The Odessa File" by Frederick Forsyth (maybe Freddy Forwitzky?) and seeing the movie, I thought I would pass on a gentle word to you and perhaps your readers. What follows is so typical of the Jewish controlled publication process, and especially their harping on the so-called 'Holocaust'. "The Odessa File" is of course fiction, but the imagination is left to perpetual wandering after the outset of this hysterical opening. Solomon Tauber, the Jew who survived the concentration camps of Riga and Dachau, left a one hundred and fifty page diary to its recipient, Pete Miller. The substance of the diary was taken from records Tauber made while an inmate of that camp. It just so happens to be that this diary of 150 pages was taken from an original manuscript which, amazingly, Tauber tattooed to his feet and legs. An actual quote from page 46 of his book says, " Shortly after returning to work I made two decisions. One was to keep a secret diary, nightly tattooing words and dates with a pin and black ink into the skin of my feet and legs, so that one day I would be able to transcribe all that had happened in Riga and give precise evidence against those responsible."

My! How much ink that would take? But, then a Jew can make a great deal out of nothing, just like their creator God, Jahweh. In this case, Tauber, who worked excessively hard each day, had time to stay awake longer hours at night to finish his skin diary. How much ~~the~~ room the human skin has when one was as skinny as Tauber was supposed to be, we can only guess. He was about half his normal weight. His skin was tight and drawn. I wonder how he could have gotten more than two sentences on one side of a leg. But, then if he had written the equal of 150 pages, I guess he would be a black man after the job was completed, and this of course would have made him discoverable to the camp guards, who would have taken measures against him, to terminate his literary activities.

All this of course proves a much needed point, namely that the "Holy Cause" didn't really happen. Maybe it should have, then we Germans would have something to really feel ashamed about. But, as far as I am concerned, if we are charged with a crime, we may as well commit one. Think of 6 million Jews that must die in the future so as to balance out the sheet!

One other ironic thing in the book which I took note of is the fact that while Capt. Rauschmann (Hebrew Rosh-man means head man, which shows Forsyth to have been a Jew himself) was torturing a Jew woman for sadistic pleasure, the other Jews merely looked on in pity and fear. The irony is in the fact that Jews just don't act that way at all. Normal Jewish behavior is to rant and rave over anything they consider to be an injustice — to them! So the passive idle and benevolent kosher onlookers just repeated a prayer to Adonai at the woman's last dying gasp. And as can always be expected, the God of the Chozzen Pipple failed to rescue them. Perhaps He ordained it that way. In any case, I thank my God Odin for not choosing me for such a fate. I hope that other persons have made observations like I have. Maybe they can compare the mania of the Jews during a death by terrorist activity, with the other propagandistic media accounts of Jewish passivity and dejection. It is quite a contrast.

Sincerely,
R.H., Indiana

Dear Mr Dietz: 16 June 79

Enclosed find my check for $12 to renew my subscription to Liberty Bell. I do not use much of its data against the Jews because I see no value in challenging the Jew menace while remaining silent to the real menace: the British Israelites and masons who are the tools of the Jews, who would have lost their political power long ago had it not been for the British Israelites' and masons' loyal service to the Jews.

Enclosed is a copy of "Unholy Alliance" which tells it like it was and is; as you know Ecumenism and milleniumism is used by the Jews to establish world control with its seat of government in Jerusalem. I have been writing to BI clergy presenting them with proof of the New World Order Judaeo-masonic British Israelite conspiracy as America's and the world's only enemy, since they do not reply it is to be assumed they prefer serving the Jews to the preservation of Christianity and the U.S. Republic.

Yours truly,
M.R., New York

Dear Mr Dietz: 20 June 79

I am finally getting around to carrying out my pledge of sending 10 cents for each of my family member, in support of the maligned German Americans within our Jew terrorized midst.

The ecnlosed news clipping will reveal just how violent and brazen this has become. I believe this is a noteworthy item that bears reprinting. Every American should be made aware of this 6-man group who called themselves "Jewish Executioners With Silence" and of their insidiuos and cowardly threat to kill all American Nazis and Neo-Nazis alike. Isn't that a great commentary on our peace loving president? Please comment.

What are your views on M.R.'s suggestion that Liberty Bell institute a program to bring exposure of the Myth of the Six Million? Something must be done about the frenzied Jew fanatics and the dumb so-called Christians who defend them. The letter from Mrs Naomi Miller, April Liberty Bell, is a classic exemple of Judaeo-Christian brainwashing. And her accusation of you twisting fact into senseless emotion has got to be the height of ignorance and pelf.

Enclosed $5. One dollar for the German/American Fund. Please send 40 copies of 'Bloodbrother in Crime' and 40 copies of 'Unwinding the Jewish Mysteries'.

You are a great and courageous man — and millions of Americans will eventually rally to our cause.

Sincerely,
Mrs M.H., Texas

Dear George: 30 June 79

Have not received my June Liberty Bell. Have the Yiddles taken over? Never!

Bavaria Gardens is Houston's most popular German meeting place. It is adjacent to the 'Saengerbund'. Maybe some appropriate literature might get them stirred into action — somebody has to start the ball rolling. They must be awakened to the fact that the Jews are grinding them into the ground.

I am one Frenchman who loves his German friends, even though our ancestors had a Hatfield & McCoy feud going for a few hundred years.

M.L.H. is still giving them hell, but she has moved to another place in Texas.

Best regards
M.R., Texas

Dear George: 6 Aug 79

A lot of religious groups and the Jews are all worked up about these 'boat people' and want to bring the poor diseased things to the United States. We should conduct a country wide poll to find out who wants them and who doesn't. You know and I know that the Jews all over the country would be highly in favor of flooding the country with them so the proper thing to do is to place a hundred thousand of them in these particular places: the Jewish section of New York City, Skokie, Ill., Hollywood, Miami and Washington, D.C.; and to the religious groups, run a few families into their districts and give them the job of taking care of them. The ones who are so ambitious to bring them to this country should be the ones to be shouldered with them.

Yours very truly,
A.H., Ohio

Dear George: 9 Aug 79

The other day I was talking with a fellow out at the golf course. He seems to be an intelligent person, has traveled extensively and seems to be pretty well heeled. I brought up the subject of the Jews and the blacks but didn't get very far until he told me that he had nothing against people of other races, that he had known Jews, blacks, Japanese and Chinese and that they were all nice people. I said, "Well, to look at it from that point of view, I will have to agree with you one hundred percent. Never has a Jew, a black, a Japanese, a Chinese, an Eskimo or Indian ever done me a dirty trick. All the dirty tricks that have been played on me have been done by white people. The rottenest, dirtiest and lowest people I have ever contacted have been white people and since I don't go for any religion, and since the Jews are dedicated to wiping the Christian religion and the white race from the face of the earth, I should join them and help them to do the job, but I am looking at this thing from an absolutely different point of view."

Races, like individuals, have certain characteristics. Each race is different, in many ways, from other races. The blacks had Africa for 3000 years. Africa has all kinds of natural resources, fertile land and a multitude of animals — but they did nothing with all of this. They sat by the ocean and watched the wind blow, but not one of them ever dreamed up a sail. None of them ever dreamed up a harness to make the animals do the work. They made their wives do the work while the men murdered and ate one another.

Did you ever hear of the Africans sending any food or money to help the starving and diseased people in India or China? Did you ever hear of the Chinese sending food or money to the diseased or starving people any place in the world? The Jews are the richest race of people in the world. Did you ever hear of them helping anyone besides their own people, unless they were sure the rewards would be greater than the outlay?

You will find that the white people are a different breed. Billions and billions of dollars and billions of tons of food has been sent to suffering people all over the world. Doctors and nurses have been sent to relieve the suffering of diseased people in all parts of the world and nothing was expected in return. Different white countries have felt compassion for the Jews and allowed them to enter their lands, but every time it has turned out the same way. The Jews took over the businesses, industry, news media and monetary system and ground the people under their heels. This has happened to 27 countries in Europe and the people had to rise up and throw them out. Several times the people have relented and allowed the Jews to return, and every time it turned out the same as before, The Jews brought Germany to it's knees. Hitler rose up and chased them out. Benjamin Franklin warned the American people not to let the Jews come in or they would take our country from us in 200 years. They ignored Franklin and now they have taken our country away from us. They own our monetary system, our news media and most of our industry. All three TV networks are owned and controlled by Jews. Hollywood is Jew-owned and controlled. All of the main newspapers are either owned or controlled through advertising by Jews. They have taken all books that didn't suit them from our libraries and schools. They are mixing our little white children with niggers. They send their children to school to learn to be businessmen, lawyers, school teachers and doctors. The businessmen rob us blind, the lawyers turn into judges and force Jewish laws upon us, the school teachers become presidents of our schools and feed our children what they want them to know.

Briton and the United States helped the Jews to take the land from the Palestinians who had lived there for centuries and didn't pay them a cent for it. We are giving this bandit state two and a half billion dollars every year (which is the equivalent of fifteen hundred dollars for every man, woman and child in Israel) which comes from the taxpayers' money. For what?

We give them our most sophisticated war machinery to help them to hold onto their loot. We have made the Arabs mad and they have raised the price of oil to us. What good is this doing for us? We give Israel and Egypt five billion dollars to sign a peace treaty which the Jews have no intention of keeping, unless they can benefit by it.

The Jews say they are three percent of our population. Carter has appointed Jews to eighty percent of the top jobs in Washington. Does that mean that we don't have any white people in this country that are capable of handling these jobs?

The Jews are flooding this country with Bolshevik Jews from Russia, Haitian niggers, Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Vietnamese and Chinese. The hard working Europeans aren't allowed to come here any more, yet they are the people who made this country what it is.

Within another twenty years the white people are going to become a minority race in their own country. By that time, if the white people don't wake up, they will have taken our guns away from us and we will be helpless before these hordes of blacks, yellows and browns.

Before long the Jews are going to bring up the 'Genocide Treaty'. This treaty is under the United Nations and it will not allow us to say anything against any minority group. If we should hurt the feelings of a Jew, they could arrest us and take us to Israel for trial and they could sentence us to death if they wished. Every Jew in the United States will know when this treaty is to be brought up before Congress and Senate, and they will flood the law-makers with letters, urging them to pass this treaty. There will be nothing the newspapers or on TV about it so the whites will know nothing about it and say nothing. The Congress and Senate are looking for votes, so they will vote for what they feel will get them the most votes — and we will be sunk! Once these new laws get in, it is almost impossible to get rid of them.

Supreme Court Justice Frankfurter, a Jew, came up with this integration thing. Where did he find a thing like that in the Constitution? The writers of the Constitution didn't know what a bus was. To get rid of this thing, it has to pass both the Congress and the Senate and it must be ratified by 36 states. Why didn't it take the same procedure to put it in there in the first place? There must be something wrong in doing a thing like that. Why are these people placed on that job for life? They shouldn't be allowed to stay in office more than four years. They can form a clique and become more powerful than the Congress, the Senate and the President.

The white people are up against the wall in this country and the only thing that will ever get them out of the place they are in are guns, fire, knives, explosives and poison — Jews don't listen to words, but they do understand the things mentioned for they had to come up against them many times before. White people are peaceful people and will put up with an awful lot before they will act, but once they start, nothing is going to stop them! The Jew has been a cancer in the guts of the white race for 2500 years. They have been the cause of most all wars and have caused millions and millions of white people to be murdered. It is about time the whole world rose up and stomped them in the dust. There will never be any peace in the world as long as there are two Jews left. They are like rats. There is no use to run them out. They will either come back or go and pester someone else. They have to be wiped out. Let's hope the world rises up and does the job. The movement is on all over the world at the present time, so let's keep things moving.

Yours,

A.H., Ohio

Dear George: 9 Aug 79

The A.J. Jones reprint on the Carter appointments was an excellent job. If I may add a few names and thoughts, among Carter's top advisors is Gerald Rafshoon, Arthur Ginzburg is the Fed. Communications Commission Chief, Complaints and Compliance Division. In the Defense Dept., Jones mentioned Maj. Gen. H. Aaron as Chief of Army Intelligence, but neglected Admiral Shapiro, Chief of Naval Intelligence, and I forgot who the USAF intelligence chief is, but he's also one of the chozzzen pipple.

When Carter first took office, he tried to slip in Theodore C. Sorenson as head of the CIA. When it was brought out that Sorenson was a draft dodger way back in the KOREAN War, the nomination was withdrawn. He's the same guy that made up the speech for Ted Kennedy after the Chappaquiddick affair. His middle initial "C" stands for Chaiken, his mother's maiden name. She was a Jewess and born in Russia at that. We had a close one here!

I also enjoyed the scathing yet eloquent letter of "D.D." from N.C.

Very respectfully,
E.J.T., New Jersey

P.S.: I also believe Mrs Patricia Harris on the Cabinet is a Jewess. I listen to her speak, look at her, and recall her NY origins and she just seems Jewish to me. Also, Harris is a name frequently taken by Jews. Maybe someone could check on this?

Dear Mr Dietz: 14 Aug 79

In the July issue of The Liberty Bell, we noted in the compilation of minority individuals holding important government positions, that you only named Irving Pollack as a minority group commissioner of the Securities & Exchange Commission (p.25).

Your editor should know that some other individuals would be deeply offended if they find out that they were not named among the VIPs at the SEC. The compilation should show that President Carter named Harold Williams (Jewish) to be Chairman of the SEC and that he named Roberta Karmel (Jewish) to be a Commissioner. These are in addition to Irving Pollack, hence out of five commissioners, three are from the 3% Jewish minority group.

Of course, as you know, the three at the top represent only the tip of the iceberg. Each important Dicivision has a minority group director and such minority group persons comprise, in most cases, over 50% of the supervisory staff —GS14s (over $30,000 per year) and in some cases it is close to 100%.

Sincerely Yours,
A Trusted Friend, D.C.

Dear Sir: 10 July 79

Well folks, here we go again; another "free election" by the Jew dominated communications media.

If you don't like the way your President and other politicians of high rank (elected by the favorable propaganda of the Jew press and TV) are doing things, don't worry. You are free to "vote them out of office" and replace them with other candidates of THEIR choice. Who, for example, will you permitted to vote for in the up-coming Presidential election?

As anyone who has been paying attention can tell you, in the Democratic ranks, "Edward Kennedy is the man to beat." You have heard it on all of the 100 percent Jew-owned TV networks and read it in all of the Jew-dominated and Jew-owned newspapers for many months already, and the election is still a long way off, but as Jew singer (?) Al Jolson used to say, "You ain't heard nuthin yet." At this point they are just warming up. So, you ask, what's so special about Ted Kennedy that appeals to the Jews? After all, he was expelled from Harvard for exams cheating, he was involved in the Chappaquiddick shack-up and booze fiasco, which resulted in the death of the Kopechne girl, he has had a long bout with the bottle, his marriage is a disaster, his politics veer sharply to the extreme left (the main reason for America's sorry state of affairs), and he displays the same arrogance, insolence, and smug self-assuredness as his brothers, now deceased from communist bullets (which makes it hard to understand why 'Ted' is such an ardent leftist).

What, you ask, gives this man the qualities that would make a great president for America? Nothing, is the correct answer.

But Ted, as president, would be the ideal man to serve all of the radical leftist Jewish causes (the only kind they have) better than any of the other candidates in the running.

For example, he is for forced race mixing programs that the Jews and their 'Cosa Nostra' press and TV have been promoting from the beginning; he's a fanatical supporter of all Zionist causes and the gangster 'state' of Israel; he's an ultra leftist liberal (as are 99.99% of the Jews), and in national and international politics and policies, he would be responsive to any and all leftist causes and programs

Gentlemen and Ladies:

Since you are illiterate (can't spell and have absurd documentation for your Hitler lies and propaganda) I will waste no time trying to set you straight and educate your sick and cancerous minds.

The JDL met last week and decided to eliminate you from the face of the earth. We will NOT go to the gas chambers again. Your filth can only lead straight to death for the Jewish people.

People have been assigned to each of you and you are already under personal surveillance (observation). We fully intend to break each of your spines (leaders of each of the above organizations) and let you suffer for years for your crimes against the Jewish people.

Breaking spines is preferable to a quick death. You will be hospitalized for life. Maybe even Jewish doctors will be tinkering with your spinal column.

We are dedicated and committed people who swear that Hitler will NEVER AGAIN (even in American people who have other names) come back to poison the minds of Gentiles (Christians) against us.

Your days are numbered.

"GOD HELP US!

that the Jews — the real rulers of America — were promoting.

Since the Jews Media is and always has been on the wrong side of virtually every national and international issue, like Jews in general and their proteges, the blacks, Mexicans and negroidal Hispanics, Ted ranks very high with them all, for he has always been on their side and against the White Gentile majority.

So, fellow patriots, whether we, the great American majority like it or not, we will be bombarded by the Yiddish media with "Kennedy for President" propaganda from now to election time, and there isn't a damn thing we can do about it.

If you think America is the Jewnited States of America under the Carter Administration, and a nation of, by and for Jews and other minorities, just wait until the Jews get Ted in.

If this should happen, I'll volunteer for a one way trip to the moon to establish a new civilization there, and I'll wager that lots of other people will want to come with me.

I commend your forthright reply to Pastor Emry. Christians stretch their necks for the axe while on their knees. Philosophy is much more rewarding than religion which was intended for moral guidelines to the victims of the Dark Ages.

Ed. Note: The following letter written in German was recently received by us. We are printing the German version as well as the English Translation without comment:

Greetings, 7 Oct 79

Jetzt weiss ich auch warum Du Dich mit der Spotlight nicht verstehst — da arbeiten Juden — ich bin von einem Zimmer ins andere und habe drei Stueck gezaehlt — weiss der Kuckuck wieviel sich verkrochen haben. Mir ist verschiedenes spanisch vorgekommen, deshalb bin ich hin —— das ist nicht spanisch, das ist juedisch!

Mrs H.H., Mo.

Greetings,

Now I know why you don't get along with the SPOTLIGHT — Jews are working there. I went from one room to the other and have counted three — only God knows how many crawled away. Different things appeared 'spanish' to me, that's why I went there. That's not 'spanish', that's Jewish.

Good luck,
Mrs H.H., Mo.

POPE RUINS HIS CREDIBILITY AT AUSCHWITZ

By Austin J. App, Ph.D.
Asso. Prof. (Ret.), LaSalle College, Philadelphia

As a precaution the Church from the beginning stressed that the Pope is not regularly infallible, only when he speaks ex cathedra on Faith and morals. That is fortunate, for otherwise at Auschwitz Pope John Paul II would have exploded Papal infallibility for good and all. On his visit to Auschwitz—he might also have visited Katyn, or Vannitze, or Nemmersdorf, but he did not—the Holy Father, addressing a hundred thousand, is reported to have bemoaned four million murdered there. This is the figure of mostly Jews said to have been gassed which originated from the Soviet Russians after the war, the same perjurers who at the Nuremberg Trials swore that it was the Germans, not they themselves, who had cold-bloodedly murdred. 4150 Polish POW's at Katyn.

For the Holy Father to use the Bolshevik liars as his text is about as tragic and shameful a promotion of racial defamation as any Pope has ever been guilty of. Auschwitz was in operation five years. For four million to have been exterminated there, 800,000 would have had to be gassed every year. That means 2,200 every day. (See "Kann der Papst rechnen?," Deutsche Wochenzeitung, July 6, 1979).

Where would the alleged executioner get 2,200 Jews every day (for the world is in real fact interested only in what happened to Jews, not Christians)? Where would they have been buried? Have any mass graves been discovered (as at Katyn)? But supposing the corpses were to have been cremated. This would have required crematoria larger than those in the largest cities. What happened to them? And where is the enormous personnel that was needed to operate these? And what became of the mountain of ashes?
